Preface

This volume cumulates and replaces the 2010 edition of Volume 16 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, as supplemented by the 2014 Cumulative Supplement. The 2010 Volume 16 and its 2014 Supplement may be recycled or, if so desired, retained for historical purposes. This volume contains all laws specifically codified in Titles 18 and 19 by the General Assembly through the 2015 Session. This volume also contains case annotations reflecting decisions posted to LexisNexis® through April 3, 2015. These annotations will appear in the following traditional reporter sources: Georgia Supreme Court Opinions; Georgia Appeals Court Opinions; Southeastern Reporter, Second Series; Supreme Court Reporter; Federal Reporter, Third Series; Federal Supplement, Second Series; Federal Rules Decisions; and Bankruptcy Reporter. As official and traditional citations become available, substitutions for the LexisNexis® citations will be made.

Additionally, LexisNexis® has prepared annotations and references to Attorney General Opinions, law reviews, and other research sources that we hope will be beneficial as you utilize this product. A complete listing of those sources is as follows: Official and Unofficial Attorney General Opinions; Opinions of the Judicial Qualifications Commission; Advisory Opinions of the State Disciplinary Board of the State Bar; Formal Advisory Opinions of the State Disciplinary Board of the State Bar, issued by the Supreme Court of Georgia; Emory Law Journal; Georgia Law Review; Georgia State University Law Review; John Marshall Law Review; Mercer Law Review; Georgia State Bar Journal; American Law Reports; American Jurisprudence 2d; American Jurisprudence Pleading and Practice; American Jurisprudence Proof of Facts; American Jurisprudence Trials; Corpus Juris Secundum; and Uniform Laws Annotated. Also included, where appropriate, are cross references to the Official Code of Georgia Annotated.

This volume retains amendment notes and effective date notes for Acts passed during the 2013, 2014, and 2015 Sessions of the General Assembly. In order to determine the changes which were made or the effective date applied to a Code section by an Act passed prior to the 2013 Session of the General Assembly, the user should consult the Georgia Laws.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

BANK DEPOSITS

ALIMONY

General Consideration

O.C.G.A. § 18-2-1 gives generic meaning of term "creditor." — While generic meaning of term "creditor," was defined by former Civil Code 1910, § 3215 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-2-1), it was used in former Civil Code 1910, § 2220 (see now O.C.G.A. § 14-4-63) in its more circumscribed and ordinary meaning as denoting a holder of an obligation arising ex contractu. Howard v. Long, 142 Ga. 789, 83 S.E. 852 (1914).

Liability for conversion included. — Relationship of debtor and creditor is defined broader than is generally supposed, and would seem to include liability for wrongful conversion of property for which trover would lie. Banks v. McCandless, 119 Ga. 793, 47 S.E. 332 (1904).

Liability for trespass. — Words "liable and bound by law to pay another an amount of money, certain or uncertain," certainly were broad enough to embrace a person liable to pay for trespass, and that before amount of trespass, or extent of damage, was ascertained; for the words were, "an amount of money, certain or uncertain." Powell v. Westmoreland, 60 Ga. 572 (1878).

Relation between stock certificate holder and issuing association. — True relation between holder of certificate of stock in loan and building association and association is neither more nor less than that of debtor and creditor. Cook v. Equitable Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 104 Ga. 814, 30 S.E. 911 (1898); Cashen v. South- ern Mut. Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 114 Ga. 983, 41 S.E. 51 (1902).

Right to set aside fraudulent transfers. — Former Civil Code 1933, §§ 28-101, 28-102, 28-201, and 28-202 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-2-1, 18-2-20, 18-2-22 and 18-2-23 [see now, also, O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70]) provide creditors with the right to set aside fraudulent transfers, and this remedy was available to any creditor at time of transfer who thereafter reduces the creditor's claim to judgment lien. United States v. Hickox, 356 F.2d 969 (5th Cir. 1966).

Renunciation of lien privileges. — Judgment creditor may lose, surrender, or waive benefit of creditor's lien by renunciation of privileges secured by such lien. Law v. Coleman, 173 Ga. 68, 159 S.E. 679 (1931).

Principal of dissolved corporate business still subject to unliquidated claim. — Unliquidated tort claims by a customer against a car dealership survived as a debt owed to the customer by the principal of the dealership, to whom the dealership had conveyed the dealership's assets while insolvent; furthermore, the principal's responses to and filing of summary judgment motions, and participation in the lawsuit in other ways, waived any objections to the trial court's exercise of personal jurisdiction. Hodge v. Howes, 260 Ga. App. 107, 578 S.E.2d 904 (2003).

Cited in Watson v. Whatley, 218 Ga. 86, 126 S.E.2d 621 (1962); First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v. Kunes, 230 Ga. 888, 199

S.E.2d 776 (1973); Redman Indus., Inc. v. Tower Properties, Inc., 517 F. Supp. 144 (N.D. Ga. 1981); Threatt v. Forsyth County, 262 Ga. App. 186, 585 S.E.2d 159 (2003).

Bank Deposits

Debtor/creditor relationship between bank and depositor. — When money is placed in bank on general deposit, title passes immediately to the bank, and the relation of the debtor and creditor is thereby created between the bank and the depositor. Foster v. People's Bank, 42 Ga. App. 102, 155 S.E. 62 (1930).

Ordinarily, when checks or drafts are endorsed and deposited in a bank, the presumption is that the title does not pass and the relation of debtor and creditor does not exist until the collection has been made. Foster v. People's Bank, 42 Ga. App. 102, 155 S.E. 62 (1930).

When checks or drafts are received on deposit by the bank with the intention that the checks or drafts be treated as cash, title passes immediately to the bank and the relationship of the debtor and the creditor is established between the bank and the depositor. Foster v. People's Bank, 42 Ga. App. 102, 155 S.E. 62 (1930).

Alimony

Spouse owed alimony is "creditor." — Willful failure to provide for maintenance and support of spouse and children creates a lawful demand which, when legally enforced, was called alimony, and spouse to whom alimony was due is a creditor within the meaning of this section. Carter v. Bush, 216 Ga. 429, 116 S.E.2d 568 (1960) (see O.C.G.A. § 18-2-1).

Proceeding by spouse to set aside conveyance. — Under former Code 1933, §§ 28-101 and 28-201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-1 and 18-2-22 (repealed)), wife may bring equitable proceeding to cancel and set aside conveyance of property made by her husband with intent to defeat recovery by her of alimony, and such proceeding will lie against grantee of husband, who took with knowledge of such intention or with reasonable grounds to suspect such intent. A different result is not required by Ga. L. 1950, p. 365, § (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-5-7), relating to filing of lis pendens notice, since the grantee was not an innocent purchaser. Wood v. McGahee, 211 Ga. 913, 89 S.E.2d 634 (1955).

18-2-2. Compulsory election of remedy least likely to jeopardize rights of other creditors.

As among themselves, creditors shall so prosecute their own rights as not to jeopardize unnecessarily the rights of others; hence, a creditor having a lien on two funds of the debtor, equally accessible to him, will be compelled to pursue the one on which other creditors have no lien. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1951; Code 1868, § 1939; Code 1873, § 1949; Code 1882, § 1949; Civil Code 1895, § 2691; Civil Code 1910, § 3220; Code 1933, § 28-106.)

ANALYSIS

LIMITATION ON COMPULSORY ELECTION

For illustration of application of statute, see Richardson v. Conn, 100 Ga. 39, 27 S.E. 978 (1896), overruled insofar as inconsistent with Love v. Goodson, 150 Ga. 46, 102 S.E. 429 (1920).

Doctrine of two funds applies only when contending creditors have a common debtor. Carter v. Neal, 24 Ga. 346, 71 Am. Dec. 136 (1858).

Rule of this statute does not apply between debtor and creditor. Union Point Ginnery & Co. v. Harriman Nat'l Bank, 142 Ga. 727, 83 S.E. 657 (1914).

Mortgagees cannot charge other mortgagees of equal rank with solvent collaterals unless those mortgagees have collected the collateral. Vance & Kirby v. Roberts, 86 Ga. 457, 12 S.E. 653 (1890).

Limit on mortgage creditor's rights as against transferee of tax execution. — In equity, mortgage creditor as against transferee of tax execution is not entitled to have satisfaction of mortgage debt with property the value of which exceeds indebtedness. Thompson v. Harris, 177 Ga. 53, 169 S.E. 349 (1933).

When one creditor abandons claim against one fund. — When one creditor, in order to bring fund into court, abandons claim on other property, equity will not permit another creditor, who has claim on the money and also on the property relinquished, to take money, but will remand the creditor to the property, it being accessible to the creditor; especially so, when the creditor stood by, and took no part in a fight which resulted in a compromise verdict under which the fund was brought into court. Sims v. Albea, 72 Ga. 751 (1884).

Impact on other lien holders and debtor considered. — When a creditor held a second priority security interest in real estate while a bank held a first priority security interest in promissory notes and the real estate, marshaling under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-2 was enforced by subrogation in favor of the creditor after consideration of the impact on other lienholders and on the Chapter 11 debtor. Customized Distrib., LLC v. Coastal Bank & Trust Co. (In re Lee's Famous Recipes, Inc.), No. 11-5482-BEM, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 480 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Jan. 24, 2013).

Limitation on Compulsory Election

Holder of mortgage, who purchased property in good faith. — Equity will not compel election by holder of mortgage, who purchased property in good faith, to protect the holder's title. Georgia Chem. Works v. Cartledge, 77 Ga. 547, 4 Am. St. R. 96 (1886).

Mortgagees holding defeasible deed without power to sell judgment lien. — Fact that mortgagees sought to be postponed had defeasible deed to certain realty from the debtor, would not compel the mortgagees to relinquish the mortgagees' lien upon money in hands of the sheriff to be distributed, and to proceed against the land, when the mortgagees had no judgment lien against the land, and it did not appear that the deed to them contained power authorizing them to sell the land for purpose of paying the debt. Vance & Kirby v. Roberts, 86 Ga. 457, 12 S.E. 653 (1890).

When second fund located out of state. — Creditor having two securities, one within this state, and one beyond the state, will not, at instance of a competing creditor holding junior lien on former security, be driven out of state to exhaust the creditor's security there before being allowed to proceed here. Denham v. Williams, 39 Ga. 312 (1869); Calloway v. People's Bank, 54 Ga. 572 (1875).

Limit on compulsory election. — Principles stated in former Code 1933, §§ 28-106 and 37-501 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-2 and 23-1-24) did not mean that a creditor having priority against fund in court can be required to relinquish the creditor's direct claim thereon, and proceed at the creditor's own additional expense with delay in an independent suit upon an indemnifying bond from the debtor, which does not by its terms protect the creditor seeking to compel such election. Savannah Bank & Trust Co. v. Meldrim, 195 Ga. 765, 25 S.E.2d 567 (1943).

Limit on scope of law in certain circumstances. — Equitable remedy of marshaling securities will not be so extended as to delay or inconvenience the creditor in collection of a debt secured by collateral notes by confining the creditor to particular collaterals at instance of one whose note is included among collaterals and who claims equitable set-off against the payee of the note. Hanesley v. National Park Bank, 147 Ga. 96, 92 S.E. 879 (1917).

When two creditors, not two funds of one creditor, are involved. — When one creditor holds a claim against two persons, and another creditor holds a claim against one of those two, equity will not compel the former creditor to proceed against that one of joint debtors against whom the latter creditor has no claim, in order that the funds of the debtor may be applied exclusively to the payment of the debtor's claim. Equity will never do this for the sake of the creditor who has a single claim, but will do it when it is equitable as between the two debtors that it should be done. Love v. Goodson, 150 Ga. 46, 102 S.E. 429 (1920).

Applicability to detriment of third person with equity equivalent to that of invoking creditor. — This section was subject to limitation that such marshaling must not be applied to detriment of third person with an equity equal to or greater than that of creditor seeking to invoke the rule. Beneficiaries of homestead have such equity and interest in homestead estate as to be within protection of this limitation. Mulherin v. Porter, 1 Ga. App. 153, 58 S.E. 60 (1907).

Doctrine of compulsory election style was inapplicable when sought to be applied to the detriment of a third person with an equity equal to or greater than that of the creditor seeking to invoke the rule. Northwest Atlanta Bank v. Manning, 193 Ga. 186, 17 S.E.2d 547 (1941).

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION INTERESTS IN ESTATES

General Consideration

Injunctive relief to protect rights in endangered fund. — Judgment creditor was granted injunction and receiver in state court when only fund out of which the creditor could get the creditor's rights was in danger. Merchants' & Planters' Nat'l Bank v. Trustees of Masonic Hall, 63 Ga. 549 (1879).

Action by corporate creditor to hold one liable as trustee ex maleficio. — Petition in equity against corporation and individual states cause of action when it is alleged that the plaintiff is the creditor of a now insolvent corporation, and that the individual has converted to the individual's own use assets of the corporation in excess of the amount of the plaintiff's claim, leaving no other assets sufficient in amount with which to pay the corporate debt, and which suit seeks to hold liable individual as trustee ex maleficio. Turner v. Tyson, 211 Ga. 53, 84 S.E.2d 86 (1954).

Creditor can reach beneficiary's interest in trust unless exempt. — Creditors can bring a bill in equity to reach interest of beneficiary under a trust unless beneficiary's interest is exempt by terms of trust or by statute. The creditor must exhaust legal remedies before proceeding in equity, but this requirement does not apply if it appears that an attempt to exhaust legal remedies would be futile. Henderson v. Collins, 245 Ga. 776, 267 S.E.2d 202 (1980).

Irrevocable trust. — Trust income from husband's irrevocable trust was subject to the wife's claims to the same extent any income of a spouse would be subject to the claims of the other spouse for alimony and distribution of property. Speed v. Speed, 263 Ga. 166, 430 S.E.2d 348 (1993).

Equity available in satisfaction of alimony debt. — Willful failure to provide for maintenance and support of spouse and children creates lawful demand which, when legally enforced, is called alimony, and is a debtor/creditor relation. Thus, the wife was a creditor at the time of the conveyances which are alleged to have been made to defeat her claim for alimony, although no alimony judgment had been rendered at the time and it would be inequitable and unjust not to allow her to maintain an action for judgment in rem against the husband's property when she was unable to obtain personal service due to the husband's willful avoidance of service. Carter v. Bush, 216 Ga. 429, 116 S.E.2d 568 (1960).

Judgment creditor's right to appointment of receiver when prior judgment creditor holds deed to secure debt. — When debt secured by deed to secure debt was interest bearing and not due, and redemption under former Code 1933, §§ 39-201 and 39-202 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-13-60) would cause the judgment creditor to lose substantial sum approximating an amount of unearned interest, the debtor having no other property from which to satisfy the judgment, the subsequent judgment creditor may proceed in equity for an appointment of the receiver for purpose of selling property subject to principal of debt and accrued interest. Cook v. Securities Inv. Co., 184 Ga. 544, 192 S.E. 179 (1937).

Availability of cash surrender or loan value of life insurance. — Cash surrender and cash loan value of policy of life insurance accruing at end of specified tontine period is not subject to garnishment by creditors of insured; nor will such value be made available to judgment creditor of insured by court of equity in proceedings instituted for purpose of obtaining equitable relief analogous to process of garnishment at law. F & M Bank v. National Life Ins. Co., 161 Ga. 793, 131 S.E. 902, 44 A.L.R. 1184 (1926).

Interests in Estates

Reaching distributive share of estate to which insolvent debtor is entitled. — Court of equity will aid judgment creditor who has pursued the creditor's legal remedies to every available extent, to reach distributive share of estate to which insolvent debtor is entitled in debtor's own right, in hands of administrator held in trust for such judgment debtor. Dukes v. Cairo Banking Co., 220 Ga. 507, 140 S.E.2d 182 (1964).

Devisee of vested remainder entitled to equitable interference in suit by creditors. — To refuse equitable interference by appointment of receiver for devisee's interest in vested remainder, in suit by creditors against executor would "jeopard the collections" of debts, within meaning of former Civil Code 1910, § 3217. Bank of Statesboro v. Waters, 165 Ga. 848, 142 S.E. 156 (1928).

Equitable procedure for reaching assets after exhaustion of legal remedies. — Generally, if creditor exhausts the creditor's legal remedies against estate so as to entitle oneself to reach assets through court of equity, the creditor should obtain judgment and fieri facias which can be levied on goods of testator or intestate, and procure a return of nulla bona. Lemon v. Thaxton, 59 Ga. 706 (1877).

Effect of contingent interest of legatee. — When under will only bare contingency or possibility rather than present right or interest, legal or equitable, devolved upon "ultimate" legatee upon probate, judgment creditor of latter was not entitled to appointment of a receiver to sell interest of legatee and apply proceeds thereof to satisfaction of judgment. Yancy v. Grafton, 197 Ga. 117, 27 S.E.2d 857 (1943).

Statutory provisions for spouse's one year support (see now O.C.G.A. § 53-5-2) may not be used to defraud judgment creditors of widow's debtor son by attempting to assign as year's support the son's share of the estate, when this amount was far above the widow's legitimate needs for one year. Dukes v. Cairo Banking Co., 220 Ga. 507, 140 S.E.2d 182 (1964).

GENERAL CONSIDERATION ACTIONS

Rights to set aside fraudulent transfers. — Former Code 1933, §§ 28-101, 28-102, 28-201 and 28-202 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-1, 18-2-20 and 18-2-70) provided the creditors with the right to set aside fraudulent transfers, and this remedy was available to any creditor at the time of transfer who thereafter reduced the creditor's claim to a judgment lien. United States v. Hickox, 356 F.2d 969 (5th Cir. 1966).

Intervention by former partner was authorized by former Code 1933 §§ 28-102 and 28-103 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-20 and § 18-2-3, respectively) to wind up affairs since the partner's allegations were sufficient. Sheppard v. Bridges, 137 Ga. 615, 74 S.E. 245 (1912).

Interlocutory appointment of receiver under creditor's bill attacking voluntary assignment for fraud was not error. Oliver & Co. v. Victor & Co., 74 Ga. 543 (1885).

Debtors cannot shift assets at will, giving creditors mere notice. — If not a violation of the letter of former Civil Code 1910, §§ 3216 and 3217 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-20 and § 18-2-3, respectively) it would certainly not accord with their spirit and purpose to hold that a firm of debtors could shift their assets at will, and impose on their creditors duties by mere notice, but could prevent a creditor from accepting for the creditor's benefit the status which they had thrust upon the creditor for their own. Sheppard v.

Bridges, 137 Ga. 615, 74 S.E. 245 (1912).

One to whom alimony is due is creditor. — Willful failure to provide for the maintenance and support of spouse and children creates a lawful demand which, when legally enforced, is called alimony, and is a debtor/creditor relation. Carter v. Bush, 216 Ga. 429, 116 S.E.2d 568 (1960).

Actions

It is essential that creditors' pleadings set forth facts entitling each to maintain an action. Fouche v. Brower, 74 Ga. 251 (1884).

Creditor bringing suit to prevent fraudulent conveyances acquires lien at commencement of suit. — Creditor, who brings suit to prevent the debtor from carrying into effect a threat to convey away all of the debtor's property for purpose of defeating claims of such creditor, acquires a lien from commencement of the suit to prevent such fraudulent conveyance, and after service of process. Law v. Coleman, 173 Ga. 68, 159 S.E. 679 (1931).

ANALYSIS

JUDGMENTS

ACTIONS

Insolvent's acquisition of property in name of third party. — If insolvent debtor, for purpose of hindering, delaying, and defrauding creditors, uses the debtor's assets in the purchase of property, taking title in the name of a third person who has full knowledge of the purpose of the transaction, such transaction is fraudulent as to existing creditors. Harper v. Atlanta Milling Co., 203 Ga. 608, 48 S.E.2d 89 (1948).

One to whom alimony is due is creditor. — Willful failure to provide for the maintenance and support of spouse and children creates a lawful demand which, when legally enforced, is called alimony, and is debtor/creditor relationship. Thus, wife was creditor at time of conveyances which are alleged to have been made to defeat her claim for alimony, although no alimony judgment had been rendered at time of conveyances, and it would be inequitable and unjust not to allow her to maintain an action for judgment in rem against the husband's property when she was unable to obtain personal service due to his willful avoidance of service. Carter v. Bush, 216 Ga. 429, 116 S.E.2d 568 (1960).

Statutory provisions for spouse's one year support (see now O.C.G.A. § 53-5-2) may not be used to defraud judgment creditors of widow's debtor son by attempting to assign as year's support the son's share of the estate, when this amount was far above widow's legitimate needs for one year. Dukes v. Cairo Banking Co., 220 Ga. 507, 140 S.E.2d 182 (1964).

Reaching distributive share of estate to which insolvent debtor is entitled. — Court of equity will aid judgment creditor who has pursued the creditor's legal remedies to every available extent, to reach distributive share of estate to which insolvent debtor is entitled in the debtor's own right, in hands of the administrator held in trust for such judgment debtor. Dukes v. Cairo Banking Co., 220 Ga. 507, 140 S.E.2d 182 (1964).

App. 283, 316 S.E.2d 769 (1984); Howell v. Bank of Fitzgerald, 181 Ga. App. 57, 351 S.E.2d 258 (1986).

Judgments

Collateral attack. — Unreversed judgment of competent court cannot be collaterally attacked absent fraud or collusion. Smith v. Cuyler, 78 Ga. 654, 3 S.E. 406 (1887); Williams v. Lancaster, 113 Ga. 1020, 39 S.E. 471 (1901).

Setting judgment aside by another creditor. — Judgment of foreclosure in favor of one creditor may not be set aside by another, except for fraud. Mahan v. Cavender, 77 Ga. 118 (1886).

Setting aside judgment foreclosing liens. — When judgment foreclosing liens was on the judgment's face valid and regular, the plaintiffs were not, so long as the judgment remained of force, entitled to an injunction for which the plaintiffs prayed. Dixon, Mitchell & Co. v. Baxter & Co., 106 Ga. 180, 32 S.E. 24 (1898); Suwannee Turpentine Co. v. Baxter & Co., 109 Ga. 597, 35 S.E. 142 (1900).

Judgment on petition consolidating four liens on separate parcels of land not void. — When in suit for foreclosure of four different liens for different amounts, each on land different and distinct from that affected by other liens, were consolidated in one petition and judgment prayed setting up and establishing liens for aggregate sum of all liens on all the land, and such judgment was rendered by the court, the judgment was irregular but not void. Suwannee Turpentine Co. v. Baxter & Co., 109 Ga. 597, 35 S.E. 142 (1900).

Collateral attack against default judgment against debtor known to be insane. — When attorney for plaintiff-creditor knew that the defendant had been judged insane at the time of obtaining a default judgment, this knowledge did not constitute such fraud or collusion as would open a judgment to collateral attack by another creditor, in proceeding in nature of a money rule.

Actions

Single suit seeking both judgment on debt and setting aside fraudulent conveyance. — Since Uniform Procedure Act of 1887, Ga. L. 1887, p. 64, a creditor may in one suit proceed for judgment on the debt and to set aside fraudulent conveyance made by a debtor. Harper v. Atlanta Milling Co., 203 Ga. 608, 48 S.E.2d 89 (1948).

Creditor may in one action in superior court proceed against a debtor for judgment on creditor's demand and to set aside fraudulent conveyance joining debtor and grantee. Hyde v. Atlanta Woolen Mills Corp., 204 Ga. 450, 50 S.E.2d 52 (1948).

Third party to fraudulent transaction is necessary party. — Defrauded creditor may, in court of equity, have fraudulent transaction set aside; and, for this purpose, third party to transaction would be proper and necessary party. Harper v. Atlanta Milling Co., 203 Ga. 608, 48 S.E.2d 89 (1948).

Actions at law. — O.C.G.A. § 18-2-21 provided a viable cause of action at law for fraudulent conveyance because, when the legislature repealed O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22, the common law reemerged as an appropriate remedy for fraudulent conveyance. O.C.G.A. § 18-2-21 referred plaintiffs to the Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (UFTA) (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., or, in the case of those claims that could not be brought under UFTA, to the common law cause of action. Wessinger v. Spivey (In re Galbreath), 475 B.R. 749 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2003).

Judgment creditor did not have an equitable right to have a testamentary trust declared null and void when the creditor had failed to make a claim against the trust during the time between the trust's establishment and the enactment of the Georgia Trust Act, the act applied to the trust and, since it gives a creditor having a tort judgment a statutory right to proceed against distributions from the trust, the creditor was not entitled to equitable relief. Jordan v.

Partial assignment of single debt. — Creditor cannot divide obligation to pay creditor a stated sum of money into fragments, and assign them to a number of different persons, thereby subjecting debtor to more than one claim, and in order to enforce such partial assignment of a single debt, acceptance by debtor must be shown. *Graham v. Partial assignment of a debt due is enforceable in equity, although debtor may not assent, if all parties at interest are before the court, so that the right of each in the fund may be determined in one suit and settled by one decree. Graham v. Southern Ry., 173 Ga. 573, 161 S.E. 125 (1931).

General Consideration

Legislative intent behind this section and former § 18-2-22. — Construing former Code 1868, §§ 1942 and 1943 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-22 (repealed) and 18-2-40) together, as being in pari materia, the intention of the legislature was that an insolvent debtor may assign property in trust, for the benefit of one or more of the debtor's creditors, to the exclusion of others, if it was done bona fide, and no trust or benefit was reserved to the assignor, or any person for the assignor. Embry & Fisher v. Clapp, 38 Ga. 245 (1868).

Discussion of effect of Ga. L. 1865-66, p. 29 on former Code 1882, § 1953. — See Powell, Brother & Co. v. Kelly Brothers & Porter, 82 Ga. 1, 9 S.E. 278, 3 L.R.A. 139 (1889).

Even an insolvent debtor may prefer one creditor to another, and to this end the debtor may transfer choses in action as collateral security for preexisting debt, surplus in such case not being reserved for the debtor's own benefit. Suttles v. Vickery, 179 Ga. 751, 177 S.E. 714 (1934).

Effect of pendency of suit. — Mere pendency of suit against debtor does not extinguish debtor's right to prefer one creditor over another, and in such case, controlling question is "existence or non-existence of fraud in the transfer." Suttles v. Vickery, 179 Ga. 751, 177 S.E. 714 (1934).

Transfer to be made in good faith and not benefit debtor. — Debtor is permitted to prefer one creditor over another and to make assignments to that end so long as the transfer is made in good faith and does not benefit the debtor. Bank of Cave Spring v. Gold Kist, Inc., 173 Ga. App. 679, 327 S.E.2d 800 (1985).

Means of accomplishing preference of one creditor over others. — Insolvent debtor may give preference in a great variety of ways to one creditor to the exclusion of others, provided it be done with good faith. McWhorter v. Wright, Nichols & Co., 5 Ga. 555 (1848).

Insolvent debtor cannot assign all property for benefit of part of creditors. — Assignment made by insolvent debtor of all debtor's property for benefit of part of creditors is not allowed by laws of this state, but one in debt may sell part of the debtor's property to pay one of the debtor's creditors. Bones v. Printup Bros. & Co., 64 Ga. 753 (1880).

Prerequisites to valid preferential conveyance. — Debtor may in good faith prefer one creditor to others by conveying property, even while insolvent, in total or partial payment of a debt, and without additional consideration, provided that such payment or credit represents the fair market value of the property or is not unreasonably disproportionate to such value; and provided that no secret trust or covert benefit, prohibited by former Code 1933, § 28-301, was reserved to the debtor; and provided further that the intent of the debtor, known to the creditor, shall not be to hinder, delay, or defraud other creditors. Moncrief Furnace Co. v. Northwest Atlanta Bank, 193 Ga. 440, 19 S.E.2d 155 (1942).

Intent as key in judging validity of preferential conveyance. — Husband who is indebted to his wife may convey property to her in preference to other creditors; but this rule is subject to qualification that conveyance must be made only for purpose of paying or securing his wife as creditor, and not be tainted with any intention to hinder, delay, or defraud others, such conveyance being judged by intention with which it is made and accepted, and not by its consideration or effect. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934).

While it is true that "a debtor may prefer one creditor to another," and may convey property for this purpose, such right is subject to qualification that conveyance must be made only for purpose of paying or securing creditor so preferred, and not be tainted with any intentions to hinder, delay, or defraud others; such conveyance being judged by intention with which it is made and accepted, and not by its consideration or effect. Dickson v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 184 Ga. 398, 191 S.E. 379 (1937).

Good faith conveyance for consideration to creditor before another creditor obtains judgment. — Creditor may in good faith and for valuable consideration take from the creditor's debtor a deed to property before another creditor obtains judgment, and such a valid deed, even though improperly recorded or not recorded until after judgment, will not be subordinate thereto. Moncrief Furnace Co. v. Northwest Atlanta Bank, 193 Ga. 440, 19 S.E.2d 155 (1942).

Preference enabling one creditor to obtain advantageous judgment. — Insolvent debtor may prefer one creditor to others by dividing debt which the debtor owes to that creditor into smaller debts so that they shall be within jurisdiction of court in which judgment may be obtained on them that shall be such as to give that creditor an advantage over others. Bank of Savannah v. Planters Bank, 22 Ga. 466 (1857); Andrews & Co. v. Kaufmans, 60 Ga. 669 (1878).

Mortgage by insolvent debtor to secure payment of preexisting debt. — Mortgage, executed by insolvent debtor to secure payment of bona fide preexisting debt, is not per se fraudulent as against creditors. Davis v. Anderson, 1 Ga. 176 (1846); Lee v. Brown, 7 Ga. 275 (1849).

Partner's sale of share of partnership assets to pay individual indebtedness. — Under this section and the law generally, each partnership member has the right, with consent of a partner, to sell the partner's share in firm assets in payment of the partner's individual indebtedness. Ellison & Son v. Lucas & McDuffie, 87 Ga. 223, 13 S.E. 445, 27 Am. St. R. 242 (1891).

Sale of stock of goods to extinguish debt. — Former Civil Code 1895, § 2697 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-2-40) was not repealed by the former Bulk Sales Act (see now O.C.G.A. § 11-6-101 et seq.), but the sale of a stock of goods in extinguishment of a debt, in whole or in part, was permissible, if the Bulk Sales Act was complied with. Sampson v. Brandon Grocery Co., 127 Ga. 454, 56 S.E. 488, 9 Ann. Cas. 331 (1907).

No distinction as to kind of creditor preferred or property used. — No distinction is made as to kind of creditors who may be preferred or as to kind of property which may be used for this purpose. Ellison & Son v. Lucas & McDuffie, 87 Ga. 223, 13 S.E. 445, 27 Am. St. R. 242 (1891).

Debtor cannot discriminate in trust deed among creditors. — Debtor may prefer creditors by direct sale to them, in extinguishment of the creditor's claims, or the debtor may bona fide sell the debtor's property to a stranger, and apply the proceeds to debts of favored creditors; but the debtor cannot discriminate, in trust deed, between creditors. Brown v. Lee, 7 Ga. 267 (1849); Hobbs v. Davis, 50 Ga. 213 (1873); McLendon v. Reynolds Grocery Co., 160 Ga. 763, 129 S.E. 65 (1925).

Recording agreement to prefer certain creditor in event of insolvency. — Fact that agreement by debtor to prefer certain creditor in case of insolvency is not recorded does not render the agreement fraudulent since such agreement is not required by law to be recorded, and its record would therefore not constitute notice. Fechheimer v. Baum, 43 F. 719 (S.D. Ga. 1890).

Extinguishment of right to prefer. — Right of the debtor to prefer one creditor to another in a bona fide transaction continues up to the date when a judgment or lien is obtained against the debtor. The mere pendency of a suit does not extinguish that right to prefer. Bank of Waynesboro v. Ellison, 162 Ga. 657, 134 S.E. 751 (1926).

Mortgage not ground for equitable relief. — That insolvent firm seeks to prefer certain creditors by mortgage constitutes no ground for equitable relief. Heidingsfelder v. Slade & Etheridge, 60 Ga. 396 (1878).

Cited in Lamkin v. Clary, 103 Ga. 631, 30 S.E. 596 (1898); Mobley v. Merchants &

Planters Bank, 157 Ga. 658, 122 S.E. 233 (1924); Durden v. Royster Guano Co., 158 Ga. 234, 123 S.E. 603 (1924); Cowan v. Bank of Rockdale, 159 Ga. 123, 125 S.E. 194 (1924); Walker v. Martin, 170 Ga. 447, 153 S.E. 41 (1930); Johnson v. Sherrer, 185 Ga. 340, 195 S.E. 149 (1938); Anderson v. Chambers, 59 Ga. App. 115, 200 S.E. 478 (1938); First Nat'l Bank v. Kelly, 190 Ga. 603, 10 S.E.2d 66 (1940); Williams v. Russell, 82 Ga. App. 529, 61 S.E.2d 567 (1950); Threlkeld v. Whitehead, 95 Ga. App. 378, 98 S.E.2d 76 (1957).

Conveyances Between Spouses

Burden of proof. — When transaction between husband and wife is attacked for fraud by creditors of either, burden is on husband and wife to show that the transaction was fair. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934).

Conveyance by husband to wife holding equitable title. — When wife's money is used with her consent to purchase a tract of land, the title to which was intended to be in her but unknown to her at the time, was taken in the name of the husband, the wife had equitable title and it was perfectly proper and lawful for the husband to convey such land to her. Rowe v. Cole, 183 Ga. 477, 188 Ga. 668 (1936).

Failure of wife to make claim known does not deprive her of rights as creditor, even as against one of husband's creditors who gave credit to him in ignorance of her claim, there being no inquiry made of her by such creditor. Rowe v. Cole, 183 Ga. 477, 188 S.E. 668 (1936).

Preferences by Corporate Officers

Officers' scheme to indemnify selves against loss. — Officers and directors of insolvent corporation may not use position to prefer themselves over creditors, and any scheme or device, the purpose of which is to indemnify themselves against loss, whether as creditors or as endorsers of notes given by the corporation or otherwise, constitutes legal fraud. Ware v. Rankin, 97 Ga. App. 837, 104 S.E.2d 555 (1958).

Preference by officers of insolvent corporation. — Officers and directors of insolvent corporation may prefer one creditor over another, and may pay a debt which is due and payment of which is being demanded, even though the effect of payment is to reduce assets available to other creditors, and even though such action by directors or officers may result in some incidental benefit, such as extinguishment of liability they may have previously incurred as endorsers or sureties on commercial paper in hands of a preferred creditor. Ware v. Rankin, 97 Ga. App. 837, 104 S.E.2d 555 (1958).

Intent key in determining whether preference fraudulent. — Test for determining whether or not a creditor preference by directors of insolvent corporation is fraudulent is intent or purpose which induced the making of payment or giving of security. Ware v. Rankin, 97 Ga. App. 837, 104 S.E.2d 555 (1958).

Assignments

Accounts may be transferred as collateral security. Boykin v. Epstein, 94 Ga. 750, 22 S.E. 218 (1894).

Right of heir to interest in estate of ancestor is a chose in action and is assignable. Greenwood v. Greenwood, 178 Ga. 605, 173 S.E. 858 (1934).

Choses in action. — Choses in action are not subject to seizure and sale under executions based upon ordinary judgments and can only be reached by judgment creditor through garnishment or some other collateral proceedings; and, inasmuch as such garnishment or collateral proceeding is necessary to fix lien of judgment so as to make it effective, an assignment of the chose in action by the debtor before institution of such collateral proceeding passes to assignee property of the debtor in the chose in action assigned, freed from lien of general judgment previously rendered against assignor. Greenwood v. Greenwood, 178 Ga. 605, 173 S.E. 858 (1934).

Assignable interest of voluntary bankrupt. — Voluntary bankrupt has an assignable interest in property claimed in the bankrupt's petition as exempt under the constitution and homestead laws of this state; and the bankrupt may assign property in good faith to an existing creditor before it is set apart by a trustee in bankruptcy, and therefore before exemption is confirmed by a referee in bankruptcy. Strickland Hdwe. Co. v. Fletcher, 152 Ga. 445, 110 S.E. 229 (1921).

Voluntary bankrupt has an assignable interest in the property claimed by the bankrupt in the bankrupt petition as exempt under the constitution and homestead laws of this state and can transfer this interest in good faith to the bankrupt's creditor either in extinguishment of, or to secure, a preexisting debt, before the property is set aside by the trustee in bankruptcy, and before the proceeding is confirmed by the bankrupt court. Silver & Goldstein v. Chapman, 163 Ga. 604, 136 S.E. 914 (1927).

Assignment prior to service of summons of garnishment. — If assignment is made before service of summons of garnishment upon the drawee, the garnishing creditor will be postponed to the assignee, and this is so whether or not the garnishee was notified of the assignment. Suttles v. Vickery, 179 Ga. 751, 177 S.E. 714 (1934).

Assignment of life insurance policy to secure debt. — Life insurance policy was a chose in action and may be assigned by an insured as security for a debt under former Code 1933, §§ 28-301 and 85-1803 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-40 and 44-12-22), and generally the effect of such assignment was to vest legal title to the policy in the assignee to the amount of debt secured. Parramore v. Williams, 215 Ga. 179, 109 S.E.2d 745 (1959).

Since rights of beneficiary and debtor were subjected by assignment of insurance policy to full amount of debt secured by such assignment which debt exceeded the value of the policies, the beneficiary had no further interest in such policies, and no rights to assert as to the policies in receivership proceedings. Parramore v. Williams, 215 Ga. 179, 109 S.E.2d 745 (1959).

Mortgage to creditor on all property followed by general assignment for creditors. — When mortgage is given by insolvent debtor to one of the debtor's creditors on all the debtor's property, and is followed immediately by other mortgages which in effect constitute a general assignment for creditors, the first mortgage does not constitute part of the assignment. Fechheimer v. Baum, 43 F. 719 (S.D. Ga. 1890).

Sufficient consideration to support equitable and legal assignments to secure preexisting indebtedness, see Suttles v. Vickery, 179 Ga. 751, 177 S.E. 714 (1934).

Actions

18-2-41. Right of nonmunicipal corporation to assign for benefit of creditors and prefer creditors.

Any corporation, not municipal, may make an assignment for the benefit of creditors; but no such corporation shall be allowed in such assignment to prefer any creditor or class of creditors, except creditors who have debts entitled to priority by law. (Ga. L. 1894, p. 90, § 1; Civil Code 1895, § 2698; Civil Code 1910, § 3231; Code 1933, § 28-302.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Comparison of corporate rights to those of individual. — Corporation has an equal right with an individual allowing preference, but clearly under the law a corporation “shall not be allowed to prefer any creditor or class of creditors, except such as have debts entitled to priority by the laws of this State.” Milledgeville Banking Co. v. McIntyre Alliance Store, 98 Ga. 503, 25 S.E. 567 (1896).

Assignments with or without preferences. — Insolvent corporation is capable of making a general assignment for benefit of creditors, either with or without giving preference and priority of payment to certain of the creditors. Albany & Rensselaer Iron & Steel Co. v. Southern Agric. Works, 76 Ga. 135, 2 Am. St. R. 26 (1886).

Preference of creditor even though incidental benefit accrues to directors. — Right of debtor corporation to prefer a creditor, and right of creditor to be preferred, cannot be lost simply because, as a mere incident to the transaction by which preference is effected, the directors may themselves gain some benefit. Milledgeville Banking Co. v. McIntyre Alliance Store, 98 Ga. 503, 25 S.E. 567 (1896); Atlas Tack Co. v. Macon Hdwe. Co., 101 Ga. 391, 29 S.E. 27 (1897).

Sole owner of insolvent corporation preferring self as creditor. — Sole owner and president of defendant corporation may not, after corporation becomes insolvent, seize all the corporation's remaining assets and apply those assets to the debt owed by the corporation to the owner personally, thereby rendering the corporation incapable of paying its other business debts. Fountain v. Burke, 160 Ga. App. 262, 287 S.E.2d 39 (1981).

Even an insolvent debtor may prefer one creditor to another, and to this end the debtor may transfer choses in action as collateral security for preexisting debt, surplus in such case not being reserved for the debtor's own benefit. Suttles v. Vickery, 179 Ga. 751, 177 S.E. 714 (1934).

Mere pendency of suit against debtor does not extinguish the debtor's right to prefer one creditor over another, and in such case, controlling question is "existence or nonexistence of fraud in the transfer." Suttles v. Vickery, 179 Ga. 751, 177 S.E. 714 (1934).

Assignment to be made in good faith and not benefit debtor. — Debtor is permitted to prefer one creditor over another and to make assignments to that end, so long as the transfer is made in good faith and does not benefit the debtor. Bank of Cave Spring v. Gold Kist, Inc., 173 Ga. App. 679, 327 S.E.2d 800 (1985).

Effect of assignment prior to service of summons of garnishment. — If assignment is made before service of summons of garnishment upon drawee, garnishing creditor will be postponed to assignee, and this is so whether or not garnishee was notified of assignment. *Suttles v. (a) All assignments referred to in Code Section 18-2-42 shall convey all of the property of every sort which is claimed or owned by the assignor at the time of the execution thereof. Such assignments shall:

(1) Identify any lands owned or any interest in lands;

(2) Identify goods, wares, and merchandise by general words of description, indicating the location, kind, and quality thereof, with a statement as accurate as possible, containing the purchase price and selling price of the lot as a whole; and

(3) Describe in general terms any shares of capital stock, livestock, or personal property which are not connected with any mercantile or manufacturing business.

(b) The assignor shall attach a list of all creditors with their post office addresses and amounts due to each. (Ga. L. 1894, p. 90, § 4; Civil Code 1895, § 2701; Civil Code 1910, § 3234; Code 1933, § 28-305.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Description of nature of debts in schedule. — Assignors' schedule of creditors need not describe nature and character of debts; if the schedule sets forth in detail the name of, amount due to, and residence of each of the creditors of assignors, no further description of the debts is required. Stultz & Blair v. Fleming & Bussey, 83 Ga. 14, 9 S.E. 1067 (1889).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, annotations decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174 and Ga. L. 1884-85, p. 100 have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

Construction of Act. — Former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174 was remedial in nature and should be strictly construed against the assignor and assignee, and liberally in favor of the creditors. Turnipseed v. Schaefer, 76 Ga. 109, 2 Am. St. R. 15 (1886) (decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174).

Effect of noncompliance. — Former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174 was mandatory and assignment by an insolvent debtor for the benefit of creditors is void and conveyed no title when no schedule or inventory was attached to the deed of assignment. Crittenden Bros. v. Coleman & Co., 70 Ga. 293 (1883); Crittenden Bros. v. Coleman & Co., 74 Ga. 331 (1884) (decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174).

Annexed schedules are not part of the contract. Birdseye v. Underhill, 82 Ga. 142, 7 S.E. 863, 14 Am. St. R. 142, 2 L.R.A. 99 (1888) (decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174).

Specificity of schedules. — It is essential to rights of creditors that schedule of property assigned be made out specifically, so that it may be seen if assignment covers property sold by them, and whether, by reason of fraud in debtor, they can claim title thereto. Crittenden Bros. v. Coleman & Co., 70 Ga. 293 (1883) (decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174).

Inventory and schedule need not state values of property listed. — It is not essential to validity of deed of assignment that values should be affixed to items of property included in inventory and schedule thereto attached. Anthony v. Price & Maas, 92 Ga. 170, 17 S.E. 1024 (1893) (decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174).

Intention to defraud by material omissions from schedule. — See Wood & Lovingood v. Haynes, Henson & Co., 92 Ga. 180, 18 S.E. 47 (1893) (decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174).

Omission from schedule of property assigned of a right of redemption. — When one who made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of creditors omitted from schedule attached thereto the right of redemption which that person had in certain premises which the person conveyed for security of a debt, such omission was fatal to the assignment. McMillan v. Knapp, 76 Ga. 171, 2 Am. St. R. 29 (1886) (decided under former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 174).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1863, §§ 1952 and 1954, former Code 1873, §§ 1944 and 1952, former Civil Code 1895, §§ 2687, 2726, 2727, and 2695, former Civil Code 1910, §§ 3220, 3223, 3224, 3225 and 3230, former Code 1933, §§ 28-101, 28-102, 28-103, 28-104, 28-201, 28-202 and 28-203, and former Code Sections §§ 18-2-20 through 18-2-25 are included in the annotations for this article.

Fraudulent Conveyance Act was based on the statute of Elizabeth (13 Eliz. Chap. 5). Chattanooga Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Northwest Recreational Activities, Inc., 4 Bankr. 36 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

For discussion of history of former Code 1868, § 1944, see Westmoreland v. Powell, 59 Ga. 256 (1877) (decided under former Code 1868, § 1944); McDowell v. McMurria, 107 Ga. 812, 33 S.E. 709, 73 Am. St. R. 155 (1899) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695); Boswell v. Boswell, 147 Ga. 734, 95 S.E. 247 (1918) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Former Civil Code 1910, § 3224 referred to creditors at time of conveyance. Mitchell v. Langley, 148 Ga. 244, 96 S.E. 430 (1918) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224); Gormley v. Askew, 177 Ga. 554, 170 S.E. 674 (1933) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Applicability. — Fraudulent Conveyance Act applied to conveyance of own property intended to delay or defraud, known to taker. Jones v. Foster, 150 Ga. 277, 103 S.E. 491 (1920) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Before conveyance by insolvent debtor can be attacked by debtor's creditor, it must appear that the insolvent debtor actually parted with some valuable asset which belonged to the debtor, and which, if title had been retained, might have been subjected to debts. S.T. & W.A. Dewees Co. v. Paul B. Carter & Co., 190 Ga. 68, 8 S.E.2d 376 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

This rule applies with equal force in determining character and the purpose of the transaction between an individual and a corporation controlled by the individual. S.T. & W.A. Dewees Co. v. Paul B. Carter & Co., 190 Ga. 68, 8 S.E.2d 376 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

As to claims against one corporation whose property has been purchased by another, the general law would apply, prohibiting any transaction in fraud of creditors, and preventing an assignment by an insolvent wherein it or stockholders reserved any benefit or trust. Hawkins v. Central of Ga. Ry., 119 Ga. 159, 46 S.E. 82 (1903) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695); White v. Atlanta, B. & A.R.R., 5 Ga. App. 308, 63 S.E. 234 (1908) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Former § 18-2-22 did not apply to an assent to probate of a will since such assent did not operate as an assignment or conveyance of any property interest subject to execution or levy by the plaintiff because the plaintiff's judgment was not entered until several months after the assent was given. Moody v. Davis, 234 Ga. App. 146, 505 S.E.2d 844 (1998) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Word "others" as used in the phrase "creditors and others" includes plaintiffs with claims against debtors "liable as tortfeasors, or otherwise . . . for an unascertained damage to person or property, so far as fraudulent conveyances are concerned." Rolleston v. Cherry, 237 Ga. App. 733, 521 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1046, 120 S. Ct. 580, 145 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1999) (decided under former § 18-2-22); Bonner v. Smith, 247 Ga. App. 419, 543 S.E.2d 457 (2000) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Plaintiff in trover is protected. Banks v. McCandless, 119 Ga. 793, 47 S.E. 332 (1904) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2687).

Conditions for transfer invalid. — Transfer is invalid against creditors, and therefore a trustee in bankruptcy if: (1) debtor conveys property with intent to delay or defraud debtor's creditors; and (2) recipient of property knows of debtor's intention to defraud. Loeb v. Dante, 1

Bankr. 547 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1979) (decided under former Code 1933, 28-201).

Invalidation. — Invalidation is permitted whenever: (1) bona fide creditor of debtor exists at time of transfer; (2) debtor and transferee intended conveyance as a gift rather than a sale; and (3) debtor is insolvent at time of transfer or rendered insolvent as a result of transfer. Loeb v. Dante, 1 Bankr. 547 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Meaning of "delay." — "Delay" cannot be construed to include situations in which debtor files reorganization petition in bankruptcy and obtains protection of automatic stay to suspend creditors from recovering possession of collateral; the automatic stay of an otherwise proper petition is not a delay prohibited or contemplated. Chattanooga Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Northwest Recreational Activities, Inc., 4 Bankr. 36 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Distinction between equitable and legal remedies. — Equitable remedy of setting aside the conveyance for satisfaction of the original debt is completely different from the right at law to recover damages for the fraud of the conveyance itself, and judgment creditors are not required to give up their right to satisfy the judgment debt by getting the conveyance set aside, in order to get damages for the fraud. Kesler v. Veal, 182 Ga. App. 444, 356 S.E.2d 254, modified on other grounds, 257 Ga. 677, 362 S.E.2d 214 (1987) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Remedy available to one reducing claim to judgment lien. — Former Code 1933, §§ 28-101, 28-102, 28-201, and 28-202 provided creditors with the right to set aside fraudulent transfers, and this remedy was available to any creditor at the time of transfer who thereafter reduces the creditor's claim to a judgment lien. United States v. Hickox, 356 F.2d 969 (5th Cir. 1966) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 28-101, 28-102, 28-201, and 28-202).

Time of acquisition of lien. — Creditor, who brings suit to prevent a debtor from carrying into effect a threat to convey away all of the debtor's property for purpose of defeating claims of such creditor, acquires a lien from commencement of suit to prevent such fraudulent conveyance, and after service of process. Law v. Coleman, 173 Ga. 68, 159 S.E. 679 (1931) (decided under former Civil Code 1910).

Status of trustee in bankruptcy. — Condition precedent to filing action was that only judgment creditors can void certain acts: Section 544(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides trustee with status of a hypothetical judgment creditor. Therefore, this condition precedent is satisfied in suit by trustee alleging fraudulent conveyance of real property by debtor to debtor's spouse. Pettigrew v. Graham, 16 Bankr. 606 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Remedy under bankruptcy law. — When a creditor has been injured by fraudulent or other willful misconduct by the debtor, the appropriate remedy under bankruptcy law as to the debtor is an exception to or a denial of a discharge. As to another creditor which may have willfully participated in the misconduct, the appropriate remedy under bankruptcy law is an adjudication of the relative priorities between the wrongdoer and the other innocent creditors. Sandersville Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Douthit, 47 Bankr. 428 (M.D. Ga. 1985) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Denial of discharge in bankruptcy. — Determination that bankruptcy debtor made the subject transfers to the debtor's wife in an intentional effort to perpetrate fraud and conceal assets may constitute a sufficient legal basis for denying the debtor's discharge pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)(A). Sikes v. Norton, 185 Bankr. 945 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Right of trustee in bankruptcy to avoid transfer. — Trustee in bankruptcy may avoid any transfer of property by bankrupt which any creditor of bankrupt might have avoided; and this right of trustee extends to all transfers made and accepted in fraud of creditors, regardless of whether transactions occurred within four months prior to bankruptcy or not.

Sullivan v. Ginsberg, 180 Ga. 840, 181 S.E. 163 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

When an insolvent debtor did not receive equivalent value in exchange for a transfer, the transfer could be avoided. Ragsdale v. South Fulton Mach. Works, Inc. (In re Whitacre Sunbelt, Inc.), 200 Bankr. 422 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1996) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

In spite of fraudulence of conveyance, subsequent creditor who sustains no harm is denied relief. — One may make a conveyance with actual intent to defraud future creditor or to defeat debt which, though contemplated, is not yet in actual existence; and, unless creditor is hurt by such conveyance, relief will be denied. Roach v. Roach, 212 Ga. 40, 90 S.E.2d 423 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933).

Tort claim against vendor. — One having tort claim against vendor may, in proper case, attack a conveyance as fraudulent. Foremost Dairies, Inc. v. Kelley, 51 Ga. App. 722, 181 S.E. 204 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-203).

Alimony claims. — Words “and others” appearing in former Code 1933, § 28-201 bring a claim for alimony within the statute’s provisions. McGahee v. McGahee, 204 Ga. 91, 48 S.E.2d 675 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

One suing for alimony may obtain relief against fraudulent conveyance by spouse, as such person, if not a creditor in the ordinary sense, is within phrase “and others.” Von Kamp v. Gary, 204 Ga. 875, 52 S.E.2d 591 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyances in pursuance of common scheme. — Fact that value of property covered by several conveyances was largely in excess of debt due petitioner did not afford ground for demurrer as all of the conveyances were executed in pursuance of a common scheme and could be attacked without reference to the amount of the judgment creditor’s debt as compared to the value of property conveyed. Peoples Loan Co. v. Allen, 199 Ga. 537, 34 S.E.2d 811 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Deed to secure debt also subject to attack. — Conveyance of property for present valuable consideration may be void as to creditors and a deed to secure debt is as much open to attack for fraud as an absolute conveyance. Burkhalter v. Glennville Bank, 184 Ga. 147, 190 S.E. 644 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Peoples Loan Co. v. Allen, 199 Ga. 537, 34 S.E.2d 811 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Plaintiff claiming equitable title and contending defendant’s conveyance was fraudulent. — Plaintiff suing for land on equitable title, and contending that defendant’s conveyance was fraudulent and voluntary, held not to be within the statutes. Wommack v. Wommack, 150 Ga. 401, 104 S.E. 421 (1920) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Sale under power of land set aside as year’s support. — Former Civil Code 1910, § 3220 was inapplicable to restrain sale under power in security deeds, when equity in lands was set apart as year’s support. Redman v. Thaxton, 167 Ga. 646, 146 S.E. 445 (1929) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3220).

Effect on parties of deed void as to creditors. — Deed void as to creditors may, nevertheless, be good between the parties. Jones v. Dougherty, 10 Ga. 273 (1851) (decided under former law).

Deed made to defraud creditors, though void as to creditors was good between grantor and grantee, and former after executing such deed has no title to property thereby conveyed, and therefore cannot have title set apart and exempted as a homestead under the laws of this state. McDowell v. McMurria, 107 Ga. 812, 33 S.E. 709, 73 Am. St. R. 155 (1899) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Conveyances, though void as to creditors and other persons designated, are good between parties to the conveyances and all persons other than creditors or persons having rightful claims against the grantor for which those people are entitled to judgment. Gunn v. Chapman, 166 Ga. 279, 142 S.E. 873 (1928) (decided under former law).

Under the 1882 provisions, the law was designed solely to protect rights of creditors, and consequently rendered a fraudulent transfer void only as against them, and make no provision whatever in regard to its effect between the parties to the transfer. McCranie v. Cobb, 174 Ga. 370, 162 S.E. 692 (1932) (decided under former law).

Though deed be made to defraud creditors, neither vendor nor those in privity with vendor will be allowed to set up this fact to defeat action of ejectment brought by vendee as the deed is good as between parties thereto and those in privity with them, though void as to creditors. McCranie v. Cobb, 174 Ga. 370, 162 S.E. 692 (1932) (decided under former law).

When deed is made to defraud creditors, it is good as between parties thereto and those in privity with them, though void as to creditors. Fuller v. Fuller, 213 Ga. 103, 97 S.E.2d 306 (1957) (decided under former law).

Grantor of fraudulent conveyance may not have it set aside. — Courts will not set aside a conveyance to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors at instance of grantor. Watkins v. Nugen, 118 Ga. 375, 45 S.E. 260 (1903) (decided under former law). Tune v. Beeland, 131 Ga. 528, 62 S.E. 976 (1908) (decided under former law);.

Action by administrator of grantor of fraudulent conveyance. — When a debtor, to defraud creditors conveys the debtor's property to another, the debtor's administrator cannot maintain an equitable action against such grantee to recover the property for the purpose of paying the creditors of the decedent. Crosby v. De Graffenreid, 19 Ga. 290 (1856) (decided under former law); Boswell v. Boswell, 147 Ga. 734, 95 S.E. 247 (1918) (decided under former law).

Applicability of doctrine that grantor in fraudulent deed cannot question deed's validity. — Doctrine that grantor in deed made for purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding the debtor's creditors, or one claiming in the debtor's right, cannot be heard to question the validity of such deed, does not apply when the deed was not in fact delivered. Allen v. Bemis, 193 Ga. 556, 19 S.E.2d 516 (1942) (decided under former law); Fuller v. Fuller, 211 Ga. 201, 84 S.E.2d 665 (1954) (decided under former law).

Construction

Liberal construction. — Though this provision is strict, courts will give liberal construction to the statute's provisions. Duncan v. Freeman, 152 Ga. 332, 110 S.E. 5 (1921) (decided under former Code 1863, § 1954).

Construction in pari materia with § 18-2-23. — Former Civil Code 1910, §§ 3224 and 3225 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-23 and 18-2-59), the innocent subsequent purchaser statute, being in pari materia, were to be construed together. Warren v. Citizens Nat'l Bank, 145 Ga. 503, 89 S.E. 520 (1916); FDIC v. United States, 654 F. Supp. 794 (N.D. Ga. 1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-23).

Direct cause of action against transferee. — Former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 does not, either by the statute's terms or by implication, create a direct cause of action in tort against the transferee for the transferor's negligence in a completely separate transaction. Brown Transp. Corp. v. Street, 194 Ga. App. 717, 391 S.E.2d 699 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22).

Basis for general and punitive damages. — If there is evidence of bad faith, actual fraud, or conspiracy on the part of the taking party or transferee in receiving assets fraudulently conveyed to the transferee by the debtor, an award of general and punitive damages against the transferee may be upheld. Lawson v. Athens Auto Supply & Elec., Inc., 200 Ga. App. 609, 409 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 895, 409 S.E.2d 60 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22).

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors

Creditor refusing to accept assignment as satisfaction. — Assignment by insolvent debtor for the benefit of the debtor's creditors, provided they would take property thereby conveyed in full satisfaction of their claims, is not binding on a creditor who refuses to accept the property. McBride & Co. v. Bohanan, 50 Ga. 527 (1874) (decided under former law); Miller v. Conklin & Co., 17 Ga. 430,

63 Am. Dec. 248 (1855) (decided under former law).

Assignment for benefit of some creditors to exclusion of others. — Insolvent debtor may make assignment of the debtor's property in trust, bona fide, for benefit of one or more creditors to exclusion of others, provided no trust or benefit is reserved to assignor, or any person for the debtor. Embry & Fisher v. Clapp, 38 Ga. 245 (1868) (decided under former law).

Insolvent debtor may make assignment of property in trust, for benefit of one or more creditors, to exclusion of others, so long as no trust or benefit is reserved for the assignor, or any person for the debtor. Embry & Fisher v. Clapp, 38 Ga. 245 (1868) (decided under former law).

Validity of out-of-state assignment of property located within state. — Assignment by debtor for equal benefit of all debtor's creditors was valid and violated no law or public policy of this state. Therefore, such assignment lawfully made in South Carolina by a resident thereof will pass personal assets found in Georgia. Miller v. Kernaghan, 56 Ga. 155 (1876) (decided under former law).

Reservation of Benefit or Trust

Subject to attack by interested party in direct or collateral proceeding. — Assignment or transfer by insolvent debtor of any kind or character of property, when any trust or benefit is reserved to an assignor, is fraudulent and void. Being void, such transfer or assignment may be attacked by a party interested, in either a direct or collateral legal proceeding, when the proceeding is sought to be set up. Coleman & Burden Co. v. Rice, 115 Ga. 510, 42 S.E. 5 (1902) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Retention of life estate in conveyed property invalidates conveyance. — If it be agreed between an insolvent debtor and purchaser of property from a debtor, that the debtor shall remain in possession thereof during the debtor's life, it is such a reservation of benefit to the debtor as may avoid conveyance. Barber v. Terrell, 54 Ga. 146 (1875) (decided under the Act of 1818).

Agreement to return grantor's property if debt paid. — Fact that grantor may have executed deed to claimant with understanding that if grantor paid the indebtedness to claimant "he could get his land back" was not such a reservation of benefit in grantor as would invalidate the conveyance. Johnson v. Sherrer, 185 Ga. 340, 195 S.E. 149 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Deed to creditor containing reversionary clause. — Stipulation in deed by debtor to creditor stating: "It is understood that should said grantee depart this life before grantor, then above-described property is to revert back to said grantor and become his property as if this deed had not been made," did not render the deed void as being repugnant. Davie v. Tanner, 150 Ga. 770, 105 S.E. 355 (1920) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Assignment with provision requiring return of surplus is valid. — Assignment by insolvent bank to pay existing debt to creditor is not void because the amount of effects assigned is larger than would be reasonably sufficient to pay the debt and because there is a stipulation that the excess shall be returned to the bank. Carey v. Giles, 10 Ga. 9 (1851) (decided under the Act of 1818).

Deed to land given by insolvent debtor to creditor in trust to secure payment of debt, which deed provides that if debt is not paid in four months creditor may sell land at public outcry, and reimburse the creditor out of proceeds for the debtor's debt, cost, and expenses, and that the debtor is to pay balance, if any, to grantor, is not, on account of such provision for payment of balance, void. The law would give that direction to the balance without the provision. Lay v. Seago, 47 Ga. 82 (1872) (decided under the Act of 1818).

Loan with pledged collateral when collateral value exceeded debt. — When transaction was in nature of a loan and pledge of collateral to secure the loan, although amount of collateral exceeded amount of debt it was intended to secure, no such prohibited trust was thereby created. Booth v. Atlanta Clearing-House Ass'n, 132 Ga. 100, 63 S.E. 907 (1909) (decided under the Act of 1818).

Transaction purporting to secure creditor for money advanced to named person. — When security deed involved was not in trust or for benefit of or on behalf of creditors, but was a transaction purporting to secure a creditor for money stated to have been advanced or loaned to a named person, it was not such a transaction as is declared to be void. Jones v. Edwards, 177 Ga. 723, 171 S.E. 285 (1933) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3223).

Execution of release of retained benefits and acceptance by assignee. — Even if assignment, as originally executed, was violative of provisions it would not be so after the execution of endorsement releasing benefit and its acceptance by assignee. John J. Cohen & Sons v. Summers, 54 Ga. 501 (1875) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Transfer of a mortgage to an alimony trust for the benefit of assignor's wife who was seeking a divorce was a fraudulent transfer under the circumstances of the case. FDIC v. United States, 654 F. Supp. 794 (N.D. Ga. 1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-23).

Bona Fide Purchasers

Must be without notice or grounds for reasonable suspicion. — To be protected, purchaser must be without notice or grounds for reasonable suspicion — not simply without knowledge. Nicol & Davidson v. Crittenden, 55 Ga. 497 (1875) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Bona fide purchaser holding under fraudulent conveyance. — Law protects bona fide purchasers even when those purchasers hold under fraudulent conveyance, when those purchasers have purchased for a valuable consideration and without notice or reasonable grounds for suspicion. Thornton v. Carver, 80 Ga. 397, 6 S.E. 915 (1888) (decided under former law).

Bona fide purchaser, without notice of promissory note and mortgage to secure the note, who buys before the debt becomes due, is protected against defense that mortgage was made by the debtor in anticipation of bankruptcy and to defraud the debtor's creditors. Murray & Co. v. Jones, 50 Ga. 109 (1873) (decided under former law).

Innocent purchaser at sale intended to defraud creditors not affected by fraud of seller, though property be attached in purchaser's hands before it is paid for, and before negotiable notes given for price have passed to innocent holders. Nicol & Davidson v. Crittenden, 55 Ga. 497 (1875) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Bona fide sale without fraudulent intent not invalid. — Bona fide sale of property, not made to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, is not rendered invalid because vendor may have been insolvent at time. Burkhalter v. Glennville Bank, 184 Ga. 147, 190 S.E. 644 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Bona fide conveyance by debtor is not void because made when insolvent, and this is so with respect to conveyances by corporations and artificial persons as well. Thornton v. Lane, 11 Ga. 459 (1852) (decided under former law); Hadden v. McQueen, 138 Ga. 406, 75 S.E. 333 (1912) (decided under former law).

Purchaser of very inconsiderable portion of insolvent debtor's property. — Rule that sale of all of insolvent debtor's property is a badge of fraud does not apply in contest between creditors and one who has purchased a very inconsiderable portion thereof, especially when enough was left, at the time, to pay debts. Scott v. Winship, 20 Ga. 429 (1856) (decided under former law).

Fraudulent Intent — Generally

Party relying on former Code 1933, § 28-201)(2) must establish two elements: (1) the requisite intent of the grantor; and (2) grantee's knowledge of grantor's intent; the second element may be established either by proof of actual knowledge or by proof of circumstances sufficient to put grantee on inquiry. Stokes v. McRae, 247 Ga. 658, 278 S.E.2d 393 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Fraudulent Intent — Generally (Cont'd)

Proof of bad faith, actual fraud, or conspiracy required. — Legislature did not intend the taking party to be liable for general and punitive damages based solely upon the fraudulent conveyance without proof of bad faith, actual fraud, or conspiracy on the party's part. Kesler v. Veal, 257 Ga. 677, 362 S.E.2d 214 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22).

Act done by debtor merely to delay creditor may amount to fraud. Von Kamp v. Gary, 204 Ga. 875, 52 S.E.2d 591 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-101).

Badges of fraud do not in themselves constitute fraud; but are only signs or indicia from which it may be inferred as a matter of evidence; and they are subject to explanation. Burkhalter v. Glennville Bank, 184 Ga. 147, 190 S.E. 644 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Fraudulent intent to be inferred from facts. — It is impossible that a sale can defraud creditors, unless the sale was made with fraudulent intent; and the nature of intent will not be presumed as a matter of law, but must be inferred by the jury from the facts in evidence. Nicol & Davidson v. Crittenden, 55 Ga. 497 (1875) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952); Almand v. Thomas, 148 Ga. 369, 96 S.E. 962 (1918) (decided under former law).

Inference or presumption of fraud. — That a given act was followed necessarily by delay to creditors, however strong a circumstance to be weighed by the jury, is not ground for presuming as a matter of law that it was intended to have that effect. Nicol & Davidson v. Crittenden, 55 Ga. 497 (1875) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Fraud may be inferred from sale pending litigation and from vendor's retention of property. Bozikis v. Anestos, 33 Ga. App. 422, 126 S.E. 555 (1925) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Insolvency of the debtor is determined by ascertaining whether the debtor retained sufficient assets to satisfy the debtor's obligations after the transfers. Rolleston v. Cherry, 237 Ga. App. 733, 521 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1046, 120 S. Ct. 580, 145 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22).

Insolvency of debtor need not be shown. Anderson Oil Co. v. Benton Oil Co., 246 Ga. 304, 271 S.E.2d 207 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Applicability of paragraph (2). — Former Code 1933, § 28-201(2) may be applied in a proper case either to a deed based on valuable consideration or to a voluntary conveyance, regardless of whether the grantor was solvent or insolvent. Von Kamp v. Gary, 204 Ga. 875, 52 S.E.2d 591 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance by insolvent intended to defraud creditors. — Creditor, or third person, may pay full and fair price to insolvent debtor for property, yet if transaction was made with intention to delay or defraud creditors of the creditors' rights, it is void as to those creditors. Peck v. Land, 2 Ga. 1 (1847) (decided under the Act of 1818).

Circumstances sufficient to set aside fraudulent conveyance. — To invalidate conveyance of property as one made with intent to delay or defraud creditors, it is essential that it was made with such intention on the part of the debtor and that such intention be known to the party to whom conveyance is made. Pekor-Cook Jewelry Co. v. Schwartz, 67 Ga. App. 738, 21 S.E.2d 440 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

When a sale, other than between husband and wife, is attacked as having been made to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, it is necessary to show that the grantor had such intention in making the sale, and that the intention was known to the grantee or circumstances were sufficient to put the grantee on inquiry. Avary v. Avary, 202 Ga. 22, 41 S.E.2d 314 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

In case wherein plaintiff seeks cancellation of deed as having been made in fraud of creditor, it is ordinarily not necessary for the plaintiff to show more than that there is a liability to the plaintiff for which judgment is prayed, and that conveyance was made with intent to defraud the plaintiff with reference to such liability, and that such intention was known to the parties taking or that the parties had reasonable cause to suspect that intention. Von Kamp v. Gary, 204 Ga. 875, 52 S.E.2d 591 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Insolvency irrelevant in determining validity. — Deed may be set aside when the deed was made with design and intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, which intent may be found to have existed whether or not the grantor was or is insolvent. Keeter v. Bank of Ellijay, 190 Ga. 525, 9 S.E.2d 761 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance with fraudulent intent made for valuable consideration. — When a conveyance is made with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor, and this fact is known to a grantee, or a grantee has a reasonable ground to suspect that such was the intention of the grantor, the conveyance is void as against the creditor, even though it is given on a valuable consideration. Durham Iron Co. v. Durham, 62 Ga. App. 361, 7 S.E.2d 804 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Intention to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors may exist, though debtor is not insolvent. — Deed may be set aside when the deed was made with design and intention to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, and such intention may be found to have existed even though the grantor was not and is not insolvent. Mercantile Nat'l Bank v. Aldridge, 233 Ga. 318, 210 S.E.2d 791 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Claim denied for failure to show intent. — Given the undisputed testimony of the former property owner and the owner's spouse that a house was conveyed to an irrevocable trust for estate planning purposes, there were no circumstances from which a jury could infer that they acted with an intent to defraud creditors based on this transaction; therefore, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the owner and the owner's spouse as to a fraudulent conveyance claim. Albee v. Krasnoff, 255 Ga. App. 738, 566 S.E.2d 455 (2002) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Acquisition of property in name of third party fraudulent as to existing creditors. — If an insolvent debtor, for purpose of hindering, delaying, and defrauding creditors, uses the debtor's assets in purchase of property, taking title in name of third person, who has full knowledge of purpose of transaction, such transaction is fraudulent as to existing creditors. Harper v. Atlanta Milling Co., 203 Ga. 608, 48 S.E.2d 89 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Mortgage fraudulently withheld from record to protect mortgagor's credit. — Mortgage given for valuable consideration more than four months before the petition was filed was held fraudulent and void as to creditors because the mortgage was fraudulently withheld from the record until the day the petition was filed. National Bank v. Shackelford, 239 U.S. 81, 36 S. Ct. 17, 60 L. Ed. 158 (1915) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

When mortgage is made and accepted with understanding between parties that the mortgage will be withheld from record for purpose of protecting financial credit of mortgagor, such agreement may amount to fraud as against subsequent creditors, depending upon intention of parties to be determined as an issue of fact. Sullivan v. Ginsberg, 180 Ga. 840, 181 S.E. 163 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Mortgages withheld from record, by secret agreement between bankrupt and creditor, inducing other creditors to sell goods to bankrupt is a fraudulent conveyance. Clayton v. Exchange Bank, 121 F. 630 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 191 U.S. 567, 24 S. Ct. 840, 48 L. Ed. 305 (1903) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 2726 and 2727).

Mortgage given for loan to pay some creditors and defraud others. — When bankrupt, with knowledge of insolvency, mortgaged bankrupt's entire stock of goods and pledged bankrupt's choses in action for large loan secured by demand note, and used proceeds to pay three creditors, leaving considerable number unprotected, and lender had reasonable grounds for suspicion that transfer was made with intent to delay bankrupt's other creditors, it was invalid. In re Walden Bros. Clothing Co., 199 F. 315 (N.D. Ga. 1912), aff'd, 204 F. 372 (5th Cir. 1913) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

One extending credit subsequent to and with notice of conveyance. — When undisputed evidence produced by creditor showed that creditor had knowledge of defendant's conveyance of real estate to spouse, prior to time creditor renewed defendant's loan, creditor clearly did not rely on defendant's ownership of such real estate when it subsequently extended defendant credit, and as subsequent creditor with notice, could not void conveyance as fraudulent. Peachtree Bank & Trust Co. v. Atha, 151 Ga. App. 565, 260 S.E.2d 559 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Transaction between parent and child. — Mere fact that transaction occurred between parent and child does not of itself establish fraud; there must be some other badge of fraud in connection therewith. Martin v. Martin, 180 Ga. 782, 180 S.E. 851 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Party seeking to set aside transfer of house from parent to daughter did not meet the party's burden of proving intent to delay or defraud creditors. Nelson v. United States, 821 F. Supp. 1496 (M.D. Ga. 1993) (decided under former § 18-2-33).

Reacquisition of conveyed property by corporation controlled by debtor. — When insolvent debtor executed deed to secure indebtedness, which indebtedness at all times greatly exceeded value of security given, and lien was foreclosed by grantee, and at sale the property was bought by grantee, fact that such grantee purchaser may have subsequently conveyed property to corporation of which debtor was president and treasurer would not render such subsequent sale void as against creditors of debtor, where no attack is made upon validity of foreclosure sale, and when it appears that consideration of purchase by corporation was furnished wholly by corporation, and not by debtor. S.T. & W.A. Dewees Co. v. Paul B. Carter & Co., 190 Ga. 68, 8 S.E.2d 376 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance to creditor and immediate reconveyance to debtor's spouse. — See Curtis v. Wortsman, 25 F. 893 (S.D. Ga. 1885) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Purchase by attorney from client of judgment or execution. — Purchase by attorney at law, from client or client's agent, of a judgment or execution belonging to client in hands of attorney for collection, is presumptively invalid as against client's creditors. Stubinger v. Frey, 116 Ga. 396, 42 S.E. 713 (1902) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Agreement by purchaser of insolvent partnership's assets to employ partner. — Mere fact that in a sale by insolvent partnership of all the partnership's assets there is an agreement by purchasers to employ one partner at stipulated compensation per month to manage business, will not per se render sale void as against creditors. If there was no intention to defraud, delay, or hinder the creditors, and if sale was for full value above and beyond agreement for employment, the transaction was valid. Cribb & Co. v. Bagley & Rivers, 83 Ga. 105, 10 S.E. 194 (1889) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952); McKenzie v. Thomas, 118 Ga. 728, 45 S.E. 610 (1903) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Conveyance of property of value larger than debt to be paid. — Conveyance of effects in amount larger than debt to be paid does not make assignment void; but it is a badge of fraud to be considered by jury. Banks v. Clapp, 12 Ga. 514 (1853) (decided under the Act of 1818).

Conveyance to oneself as trustee. — Making of deed by one as an individual to oneself in that person's representative capacity, the deed being for land in which the person has a contingent remainder, is, on insolvency, sufficient evidence on which to base a verdict that the deed was executed with the intent to hinder and delay collection of the grantor's other debts.

Eberhardt v. Bennett, 163 Ga. 796, 137 S.E. 64 (1927) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Deed by trustee with power of sale created in fraudulent transfer. — If assignment or transfer was prohibited and is made to named trustee with power of sale, an execution of power conveys no title to purchaser, and a deed purporting to convey to the purchaser any part of property so transferred is likewise void. Coleman & Burden Co. v. Rice, 115 Ga. 510, 42 S.E. 5 (1902) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Conveyance made with fraudulent intent, known to grantee. — Absolute deed made with intent to delay or defraud creditors, though made also to secure debt, is void as against creditors if grantee takes the deed with notice of fraudulent intention. Palmour & Smith v. Johnson, 84 Ga. 91, 10 S.E. 500 (1889) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952); McLendon v. Reynolds Grocery Co., 160 Ga. 763, 129 S.E. 65 (1925) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Under former Code 1933, § 28-320 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-2-59), a conveyance of real estate had or made with intent to delay or defraud creditors, with such intent known to party taking, is invalid as to existing creditors. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Kontz, 185 Ga. 131, 194 S.E. 536 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Every conveyance of property made with intent to delay or defraud creditors of grantor is void against such creditors when the grantee has knowledge of such intention or reasonable ground to suspect that intention. Hilburn v. Hightower, 178 Ga. 534, 173 S.E. 389 (1934); Cunningham v. Avakian, 187 Ga. 575, 1 S.E.2d 433 (1939) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Deed is void as to creditors when made for purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding creditors in collection of the creditors' debts, and when grantee in taking the deed has knowledge of such fraudulent intent or reasonable ground to suspect it. Taylor v. Gates, 206 Ga. 880, 59 S.E.2d 365 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Transaction upheld. — The kind of transaction, based upon valuable consideration, which will be upheld is "a bona fide transaction on valuable consideration, and without notice or grounds for reasonable suspicion." Conley v. Buck, 100 Ga. 187, 28 S.E. 97 (1897) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Charge requiring finding of intent to "delay, hinder, and defraud." — In trial of action by creditor to set aside and cancel a fraudulent conveyance, it was inaccurate and therefore erroneous to charge that if debtor made conveyance with intention to "delay, hinder, and defraud" the creditors, it would be void. The acts voiding the conveyance should have been stated disjunctively as stating the acts conjunctively imposed upon creditor a greater burden than the law does. Evans v. Coleman, 101 Ga. 152, 28 S.E. 645 (1897) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Verdict finding no intent to defraud, but an intent to delay creditors, is not void for inconsistency and uncertainty; debtor who attempts to postpone time of payment endeavors to deprive the debtor's creditors of a valuable right, and it matters not what the debtor's motive may be. Monroe Mercantile Co. v. Arnold & McCord, 108 Ga. 449, 34 S.E. 176 (1899) (decided under former Civil Code 1933, § 2695).

Inadequate Consideration

Inference of fraud in transfer. — Great inadequacy of consideration in transfer of property creates strong inference that the transfer was fraudulent. United States v. McMahan, 392 F. Supp. 1159 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 556 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd in part on other grounds, 569 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance for inadequate consideration, when insolvent or causing insolvency. — If at time of conveyance, for greatly inadequate consideration, defendant was insolvent, or if such transfer rendered defendant insolvent as to defendant's creditors, such conveyance was fraudulent within meaning of former Code 1933, § 28-320 (see O.C.G.A. § 18-2-59), and, as such, may be set aside. United States v. McMahan, 392 F. Supp. 1159

(N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 556 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd in part on other grounds, 569 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Inadequate price, accompanied by other doubtful and suspicious circumstances. — While inadequacy of price alone is not sufficient grounds to set aside a conveyance in a court of equity, that circumstance, taken in consideration and in connection with others of a doubtful and suspicious nature, may afford such a strong presumption of fraud so as to authorize a court to set it aside. United States v. McMahan, 392 F. Supp. 1159 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 556 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd in part on other grounds, 569 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Inadequacy of consideration in otherwise good faith conveyance. — When one honestly and in good faith purchases property from another, the mere fact that the consideration paid was inadequate will not authorize creditor of grantor, who afterwards obtains judgment against latter, to subject property to satisfaction of creditor's judgment. Childers v. Ackerman Constr. Co., 211 Ga. 350, 86 S.E.2d 227 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Consideration deemed adequate. — Severance payments to corporate officers did not lack consideration when the corporation was assured that the officers would not leave without providing the corporation recourse in the event their leaving frustrated its plans to sell its stock. Munford v. Valuation Research Corp., 98 F.3d 604 (11th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1068, 118 S. Ct. 738, 139 L. Ed. 2d 675 (1998) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Retention of Possession by Debtor

Possession retained by vendor after absolute sale of real property is prima facie evidence of fraud, although it may be explained and rebutted. Hilburn v. Hightower, 178 Ga. 534, 173 S.E. 389 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Possession of property, real or personal, remaining with vendor after an absolute conveyance is evidence of fraud. Peck v. Land, 2 Ga. 1, 46 Am. Dec. 368 (1847) (decided under the Act of 1818); Fleming v. Townsend, 6 Ga. 103, 50 Am. Dec. 318 (1849) (decided under former law); Perkins, Hopkins & White v. Patten, 10 Ga. 241 (1851) (decided under former law); Smith v. McDonald, 25 Ga. 377 (1858) (decided under former law); Stephens v. Southern Cotton Oil Co., 147 Ga. 410, 94 S.E. 245 (1917) (decided under former law); Virginia-Carolina Chem. Co. v. Hollis, 23 Ga. App. 634, 99 S.E. 154 (1919) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224); Greene v. Matthews, 31 Ga. App. 265, 120 S.E. 434 (1923) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Possession of personal property remaining with vendor after absolute conveyance is evidence of fraud, when such possession is not satisfactorily explained. Scruggs v. Blackshear Mfg. Co., 45 Ga. App. 855, 166 S.E. 249 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

If debtor, shortly after conveying to claimant absolutely, is in possession of premises, and so continues until levy is made, debtor's possession, in absence of evidence to show when or how it commenced, may be presumed to have existed at date of conveyance; and such continuous possession, unexplained, is a badge of fraud. Collins v. Taggart, 57 Ga. 355 (1876) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Possession retained by grantor in security deed. — Possession remaining with grantor after absolute conveyance is evidence of fraud; but the same is not true of possession retained by grantor in security deed. Burkhalter v. Glennville Bank, 184 Ga. 147, 190 S.E. 644 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Delivery delayed for several months after sale to allow clearing up mortgage. — Fact that it was a few months after execution and delivery of bill of sale before the defendant delivered possession of property sold to the claimant, property being under mortgage and it taking some time to clear property up before delivery to the claimant, did not tend to render bill of sale void on account of fraud or show any fraudulent intent upon the part of parties thereto. Foremost Dairies, Inc. v. Kelley, 51 Ga. App. 722, 181 S.E. 204 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-203).

Retention of possession by grantor after conveyance in trust for spouse and children. — When personal property is conveyed by spouse to trustee for benefit of the other spouse and children, subsequent possession by spouse being consistent with object of deed is not evidence of fraud. Clayton v. Brown, 17 Ga. 217 (1855) (decided under former law).

When mortgagee purchasing at foreclosure sale allows mortgagor to retain possession. — When creditor forecloses a mortgage and purchases mortgaged property at sheriff's sale and suffers property so purchased to remain in possession of mortgagor after sale, such retention of possession, by mortgagor, is a badge of fraud as against other judgment creditors. Williams v. C. & G.H. Kelsey & Halsted, 6 Ga. 365 (1849) (decided under former law).

Grantee's Notice of Fraud

Transaction carried out so as to excite suspicion of its fairness. — See Hoffer v. Gladden, 75 Ga. 532 (1885) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Suspicion alone insufficient. — Contrary to trial court's conclusion, reasonable grounds for suspicion alone do not suffice to render a subsequent purchaser's title void, and when buyer acquired automobile for value, and had no notice that seller's title was obtained through fraud, the buyer received good title. Hall v. Hidy, 263 Ga. 422, 435 S.E.2d 215 (1993) (decided under former § 18-2-23).

Fraudulent conveyance void as to grantor and grantee having notice. — If a defendant sells property in order to prevent defendant's creditors from making their claims out of it, the sale will be void as to defendant; and if at time of sale the purchaser has reasonable ground to suspect that such is the defendant's object, the sale will be void also as to the purchaser. Smith v. Wellborn, 75 Ga. 799 (1885) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952); Virginia-Carolina Chem. Co. v. Hollis, 23 Ga. App. 634, 99 S.E. 154

(1919) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224); Greene v. Matthews, 31 Ga. App. 265, 120 S.E. 434 (1923) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Fraudulent intent of grantor of which grantee had no notice. — Fraudulent intent in execution of a deed, upon part of grantor, which was unknown to grantee and which grantee had no reasonable ground to suspect, will not vitiate grantee's title. Hollis v. Sales, 103 Ga. 75, 29 S.E. 482 (1897) (decided under former law).

Child, who testified, uncontradicted, did not know why the child's parent gave the child the house, had no actual knowledge of the parent's intent to delay or defraud the parent's creditors. Nelson v. United States, 821 F. Supp. 1496 (M.D. Ga. 1993) (decided under former § 18-2-33).

Grantee having reasonable ground to suspect spouse's fraudulent intent. — It is not necessary to prove that both husband and wife joined to hinder, delay, and defraud other creditors in collection of their debts, if it can be shown that wife had reasonable ground to suspect that her husband's purpose was to hinder, delay, and defraud other creditors in collection of their debts. United States v. McMahan, 392 F. Supp. 1159 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 556 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd in part on other grounds, 569 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance for consideration, but with known fraudulent intent. — Fact that transaction is based upon valuable consideration does not save the transaction from attack on ground of fraud when party taking has knowledge of such fraud or ground for reasonable suspicion. Sullivan v. Ginsberg, 180 Ga. 840, 181 S.E. 163 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance of property, made with intention of hindering, delaying, or defrauding creditors, is void as against creditors; if transaction is bona fide and for valuable consideration, and party taking has no notice or ground for reasonable suspicion of intention to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, it is valid, but if party taking has notice of intention of maker to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, or has ground for reasonable suspicion of such intention, the conveyance is void as against creditors of maker. Gardner v. Day, 182 Ga. 113, 184 S.E. 710 (1936) (decided under former law).

Conveyance intended to defeat recovery of alimony. — Under former Code 1933, §§ 28-101 and 28-201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-1 and 18-2-59), one may bring equitable proceeding to cancel and set aside a conveyance of property made by spouse with intent to defeat recovery of alimony, and such proceeding will lie against grantee of spouse who took with knowledge of such intention or with reasonable grounds to suspect such intent. A different result was not required by former Code 1933, § 30-112 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-5-7), as relating to filing of lis pendens notice, since the grantee is not an innocent purchaser. Wood v. McGahee, 211 Ga. 913, 89 S.E.2d 634 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Under provisions of former Code 1933, § 28-320 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-2-59), a deed executed by husband living separate and apart from his wife, conveying certain of his property to another with intent and purpose of defeating wife's right to alimony, is invalid as to wife if grantee knew or had grounds for reasonable suspicion that such was the purpose of grantor, even though deed was made to secure or in payment of valid preexisting debt due by husband to grantee. McCallie v. McCallie, 192 Ga. 699, 16 S.E.2d 562 (1941) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Action to set aside conveyance of grantee's notice of fraudulent intent. — See Webb-Crawford Co. v. Bozeman, 178 Ga. 328, 173 S.E. 144 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Charge requiring that grantee take "with no suspicion even" of fraudulent intent was error. Norton v. Neely Co., 148 Ga. 652, 98 S.E. 76 (1919) (decided under former law).

Insolvency of Debtor

Test for insolvency. — Test for determining whether a debtor was insolvent, within the meaning of paragraph (3) of former Code 1933, § 28-201, was whether the value of the debtor's remaining property was sufficient to pay in full all of the debtor's debts, and the value of the debtor's remaining property must be determined as of the date the conveyance sought to be set aside was made. Goodman v. Lewis, 247 Ga. 605, 277 S.E.2d 908 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Evidence of insolvency. — Defendant's solvency at time of allegedly fraudulent conveyance is relevant, but evidence should be restricted to defendant's financial condition at time of conveyance. Warren v. Citizens Nat'l Bank, 145 Ga. 503, 89 S.E. 520 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 3224 and 3225).

Plaintiff may prove insolvency of debtor. — On trial of issue whether conveyance is fraudulent against creditors, plaintiff may prove insolvency of debtor at time of sale. Tillman v. Fontaine, 98 Ga. 672, 27 S.E. 149 (1896) (decided under former law).

Insolvency means inability to pay debts as the debts fall due. Loeb v. Dante, 1 Bankr. 547 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Solvency determined by sufficiency of property to discharge all debts. — Unless one's property, whether real or personal, tangible or intangible, leviable or nonleviable, is insufficient in value to discharge all one's debts, one can in no proper sense be termed insolvent. Keeter v. Bank of Ellijay, 190 Ga. 525, 9 S.E.2d 761 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Debtor is insolvent, if after voluntary deed or conveyance, property left or retained by the debtor is not ample to pay the debtor's existing debts. Chambers v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 242 Ga. 498, 249 S.E.2d 214 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Barclay v. First Nat'l Bank, 265 Ga. 744, 462 S.E.2d 374 (1995) (decided under former § 18-2-22); Cavin v. Brown, 246 Ga. App. 40, 538 S.E.2d 802 (2000) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Under paragraph (3) of former Code 1933, § 28-201, a debtor was insolvent when property left or retained by the debtor after voluntary conveyance is insufficient to pay the debtor's existing debts. Moister v. Waters, 8 Bankr. 163 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Time of insolvency. — Solvency is to be tested by value of property at time of making of voluntary deed, rather than at time of transferor's death. Wallace v. Williams, 212 Ga. 692, 95 S.E.2d 369 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Deduction of exempt property or homestead. — In determining whether property left or retained by debtor making conveyance to spouse is sufficient to pay existing debts and liabilities, property in which debtor is entitled to exemption or homestead, but which had not been exempted, is not to be deducted, unless jury should find as a fact that debtor, at time of conveyance, intended to exempt that property. Mitchell v. Weekes, 179 Ga. 886, 177 S.E. 737 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Suretyship obligations on debts not matured at time of conveyance. — In testing the solvency of one who has made a voluntary conveyance of property, one's endorsements or suretyship on obligations of others, not matured at time of conveyance, should not be counted as one's debts when it does not appear that one's contingent liability was at that time likely to become absolute or in fact became so. Moister v. Waters, 8 Bankr. 163 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Insolvency of debtor is conclusively shown by the fact that debtor is in the process of obtaining a discharge in bankruptcy at the time of the fraudulent conveyance. Brown v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 168 Ga. App. 385, 308 S.E.2d 850 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 253 Ga. 119, 317 S.E.2d 180 (1984) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Insolvency of debtor not conclusive of fraudulence of conveyance. — While insolvency of grantor is a pertinent matter for consideration in determining whether transfer or conveyance is fraudulent, it is only a circumstance, and is not conclusive. Burkhalter v. Glennville Bank, 184 Ga. 147, 190 S.E. 644 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyances Between Relatives and Spouses

Spouses bear burden of showing fairness of transaction. — For transactions between spouses which are attacked for fraud by the creditors of either, a burden to show fairness of the transactions is placed on the spouses; in other relationships such as business and social relationships this rule does not apply and the burden is on the party seeking to set aside the deed. However, regardless of the placing of the burden, the relationship between the parties is a circumstance to be considered in actions attacking transactions for fraud. Stokes v. McRae, 247 Ga. 658, 278 S.E.2d 393 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Transactions between near relatives. — Transactions between near relatives, as brothers-in-law, are to be scanned with care and scrutinized closely, and slight evidence of fraud between the relatives may be sufficient to set aside the transaction. Hilburn v. Hightower, 178 Ga. 534, 173 S.E. 389 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Transactions between relatives are to be scanned with care and scrutinized closely, and slight evidence of fraud shown between the relatives may be sufficient to set aside the transaction. McLendon v. Reynolds Grocery Co., 160 Ga. 763, 129 S.E. 65 (1925) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224); Scruggs v. Blackshear Mfg. Co., 45 Ga. App. 855, 166 S.E. 249 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Mere fact of close relationship, unless marital, unsupported by other circumstances. — While transactions between near relatives are to be scrupulously inspected, and the law permits evidence of relationship to give additional weight to other circumstances, and thus to bear heavily upon transactions between them; mere fact of relationship, unsupported by other circumstances, will not authorize finding that transaction even between persons closely related, unless husband and wife, are fraudulent. Webb-Crawford Co. v. Bozeman, 178 Ga. 328, 173 S.E. 144 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

When sale is attacked as in contravention statute and as having been made to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, burden was on plaintiff to establish plaintiff's contentions under same rules as were applicable to all other civil cases; and proof of near relationship other than that of husband and wife, without more, is not sufficient to constitute a badge of fraud. Webb-Crawford Co. v. Bozeman, 178 Ga. 328, 173 S.E. 144 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Proof of near relationship between parties to deed, other than that of husband and wife, without more, is not sufficient to show fraud. McCallie v. McCallie, 192 Ga. 699, 16 S.E.2d 562 (1941) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance by husband to wife. — In conveyance from husband and wife, the utmost good faith must be made to appear, and wife must show with great clearness that she was a bona fide purchaser, and that she had no reason to believe that transfer was made to delay or defraud creditors of her husband. Curtis v. Wortsman, 25 F. 893 (S.D. Ga. 1885) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Voluntary conveyance to spouse not void if grantor retains ample property to pay existing debts and liabilities. Mitchell v. Weekes, 179 Ga. 886, 177 S.E. 737 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Husband's transfer of 100% interest in the marital residence to his wife less than one year before he filed a bankruptcy petition was a fraudulent transfer. Ellenberg v. Bouldin, 196 Bankr. 202 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1996) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Conveyance by husband to wife will not be set aside as fraudulent unless the conveyance was shown to have been made with intent to defraud creditors and the wife was shown to have had knowledge or some reasonable notice or suspicion of such intent. United States v. McMahan, 392 F. Supp. 1159 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 556 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd in part on other grounds, 569 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Transfer of funds from husband to wife. — Evidence showed that taxpayer fraudulently transferred funds to his wife, when he deposited receipts from his legal practice into bank accounts and wrote checks on the accounts payable to his wife, who then deposited the checks into her own account and wrote checks on that account to pay mortgage and other "household" expenses. United States v. Tranakos, 778 F. Supp. 1220 (N.D. Ga. 1991) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Conveyance to wife and children. — Settlement in favor of wife and children, or either, will be supported, if made in good faith and with no intent to defraud creditors; but one by debtor in greatly embarrassed circumstances of the bulk of the debtor's estate, leaving but a pittance, insufficient for debts, cannot be supported. Clayton v. Brown, 30 Ga. 490 (1860) (decided under former law); Reese v. Shell, 95 Ga. 749, 22 S.E. 580 (1895) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Facts subjecting conveyance by husband to wife to attack. — See Mattox v. West, 194 Ga. 310, 21 S.E.2d 428 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Fraudulent conveyance to wife who insures for own benefit. — See St. Paul Fire Ins. & Co. v. Brunswick Grocery Co., 113 Ga. 786, 39 S.E. 483 (1901) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Burden of proof. — While absolute conveyance from husband to wife for valuable consideration will not be set aside at instance of creditor upon ground of fraud unless wife knew of fraud or had "ground for reasonable suspicion" thereof, burden is not upon creditor, as in other cases, to prove fraudulent scheme. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3230).

Whenever transaction between husband and wife is attacked by husband's creditors for fraud, if wife claims the property purchased or received, onus is upon her to make fair showing about whole transaction, particularly where conveyance was a gift. Spiegel v. Ross, 188 F. Supp. 812 (N.D. Ga. 1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

In case where wife sets up title to property levied upon under deed from her husband, and his creditor attacks same upon ground that it was a fraudulent conveyance, intended to hinder, delay, and defraud such creditor, the law does not put upon creditor the burden of establishing fraud in the conveyance. On the contrary, it puts burden upon husband and wife, who must show that transaction as a whole is free from fraud. Moore v. Loganville Mercantile Co., 184 Ga. 351, 191 S.E. 121 (1937) (decided under former law).

Spouse preferring payment to spouse who has loaned money. — Since wife, having loaned money to her husband, is a general creditor, husband may prefer payment to his wife over any other unsecured creditor, paying her in property or money without such payment being fraudulent, provided the property so conveyed be reasonably proportioned to amount of the debt. United States v. McMahan, 392 F. Supp. 1159 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 556 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd in part on other grounds, 569 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

While husband has right to prefer his wife to other unsecured creditors and pay her with property or money, provided property conveyed in satisfaction of her debt is reasonably proportioned to amount of debt, a conveyance by him to her of property in a sum grossly in excess of amount due her, amounts to conveyance made with intent to delay and defraud creditors notwithstanding both husband's and wife's claims to have acted in good faith in the transaction. United States v. McMahan, 392 F. Supp. 1159 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 556 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd in part on other grounds, 569 F.2d 889 (5th Cir. 1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Jury charges relating to spousal conveyances. — See Almond v. Gairdner & Arnold, 76 Ga. 699 (1886) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

When there was some evidence that defendant's wife paid part of purchase price of property conveyed to her by her husband, trial court, in charging on setting aside of conveyances made with intention of defrauding creditors, should add phrase, "and such intention known to party taking." Baker v. Goddard, 205 Ga. 477, 53 S.E.2d 754 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

For proper jury charge on validity of conveyance to creditor-spouse, see Pharr v. Pharr, 206 Ga. 354, 57 S.E.2d 177 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Husband conveyed automobile to wife for valuable consideration when wife advanced $2000 toward car purchase and made payments to creditor's credit union. Brown v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 253 Ga. 119, 317 S.E.2d 180 (1984) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Constructive trust finding not valid when transferor's intent fraudulent. — In divorce action, jury decision that transfer of real property from husband to wife created a constructive trust in favor of husband should have been excluded by judgment notwithstanding the verdict when transfer was made with the intent and purpose of defrauding husband's creditors, and there was no issue of fact as to the intent and purpose of the husband at the time of the transfer. Carden v. Carden, 253 Ga. 546, 322 S.E.2d 226 (1984) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Conveyance to son with knowledge of impending bankruptcy. — Evidence of an intent to defraud creditors is shown by circumstantial evidence that son, who knew that his family members were soon to declare bankruptcy, had their valuable assets transferred to the son with the intent to keep such assets within the family at the expense of the creditors. Gower v. Cohn, 643 F.2d 1146 (5th Cir. 1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Transfer of property from Chapter 7 debtor to spouse. — Settlement of a bona fide family controversy and waiver of further claims for alimony or property division was a valuable consideration for post-nuptial agreements between a Chapter 7 debtor and the debtor's spouse, and the transfer of property to the spouse was not a fraudulent conveyance. Tidwell v. Galbreath, 207 Bankr. 309 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1997) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Conveyances Between Relatives and Spouses (Cont'd)

Conveyance challenge estopped. — Chapter 7 trustee was estopped from challenging conveyance of collateral as fraudulent under state law because of secured creditor's prepetition agreement with debtor, in which it agreed not to contest debtor's conveyance of debtor's home to debtor's parent. Harris v. Huff, 160 Bankr. 256 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1993) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Voluntary Conveyances

Voluntary deed is one totally without consideration. — Voluntary conveyance or deed is one without any valuable consideration, and a valuable consideration is founded on money, or something convertible into money, or having a value in money. Stokes v. McRae, 247 Ga. 658, 278 S.E.2d 393 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Paragraph (3) was mandatory and admits of no exception. King v. Poole, 61 Ga. 373 (1878) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Transfers not for valuable consideration. — Statute allows creditors to avoid certain transfers made by debtor which were not for valuable consideration. Moister v. Eidson, 10 Bankr. 432 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981) (decided under former law).

Test for satisfaction of paragraph (3). — There were two elements which must be established in order to meet the test of paragraph (3) of former Code 1933, § 28-201: the debtor must: (1) convey by a voluntary deed, not for a valuable consideration; and (2) be insolvent at the time of the conveyance. Stokes v. McRae, 247 Ga. 658, 278 S.E.2d 393 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Ambase Int'l Corp. v. Bank S., N.A., 196 Ga. App. 336, 395 S.E.2d 904 (1990) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Intention of parties. — Whether conveyance is in fact voluntary depends upon intention of parties as ascertained from facts and circumstances at time of the conveyance's execution. Pharr v. Pharr, 206 Ga. 354, 57 S.E.2d 177 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Showing of fraudulent intent not prerequisite. — While under paragraph (1) of former Code 1933, § 28-201, fraudulent intent of debtor was necessary to cancellation, it need not be shown when a voluntary conveyance was rendered void under paragraph (3) of that section. Neal v. Stapleton, 203 Ga. 236, 46 S.E.2d 130 (1948) superseded by statute, Citizens Bank of Mass. V. Grand Street Parkway, LLC et al, 21 Mass. L. Rep. 594 (2006) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Mercantile Nat'l Bank v. Aldridge, 233 Ga. 318, 210 S.E.2d 791 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Drake v. Dennis, 209 Bankr. 20 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Retention of sufficient property to pay debts. — Good faith voluntary conveyance is valid if debtor retains sufficient property to pay debts. Weed v. Davis, 25 Ga. 684 (1858) (decided under former law).

Nonfraudulent conveyance, before bankruptcy, of small part of estate. — Voluntary conveyance by bankrupt to children before adjudication of bankruptcy is not void when there was no intent to defraud and property conveyed formed inconsiderable part of grantor's estate. Adams v. Collier, 122 U.S. 382, 7 S. Ct. 1208, 30 L. Ed. 1207 (1887) (decided under former law).

Voluntary deed executed when insolvent or rendering debtor insolvent. — Voluntary deed by debtor may be set aside by debtor's creditor if debtor was insolvent when deed was executed, or was thereby rendered insolvent. Downs v. Powell, 215 Ga. 62, 108 S.E.2d 715 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Voluntary conveyance from insolvent debtor to wife. — If husband, insolvent at time and having no property subject to demands of judgment creditors, makes gift of property to his wife, such gift would be void as against creditors, whether or not wife had knowledge or notice of husband's fraudulent intent. Garner v. State Banking Co., 150 Ga. 6, 102 S.E. 442 (1920) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224); Oxford v. Hasty, 213 Ga. App. 539, 445 S.E.2d 276 (1994) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Voluntary conveyance by insolvent debtor not binding on creditors. — Voluntary conveyance by insolvent debtor, based on no consideration either by payment of debt or otherwise, will not bind other creditors, and this is true irrespective of any fraudulent purpose on part of debtor, or any knowledge on part of creditor as to such purpose. Moncrief Furnace Co. v. Northwest Atlanta Bank, 193 Ga. 440, 19 S.E.2d 155 (1942) (decided under former law).

Voluntary conveyance with intent to defraud creditors. — When tort-feasor made voluntary conveyance with intent to delay or defraud party damaged, such conveyance is void as to that party whether or not volunteer grantee had notice of fraudulent intent. Westmoreland v. Powell, 59 Ga. 256 (1877) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Voluntary conveyance by solvent or insolvent debtor, made with intent to delay or defraud the debtor's creditor in collection of the debt, is void as to the creditor, irrespective of notice or grounds of suspicion to party taking conveyance. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Kontz, 185 Ga. 131, 194 S.E. 536 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Voluntary deed was void as to creditors, though grantor was not insolvent at time of execution, if the grantor's purpose in so doing is to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, whether donee knew of fraudulent intention or not. Peoples Loan Co. v. Allen, 199 Ga. 537, 34 S.E.2d 811 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Hyde v. Atlanta Woolen Mills Corp., 204 Ga. 450, 50 S.E.2d 52 (1948) (decided under former law).

Applicability of statute to conveyance by insolvent shareholder of insolvent national bank. — See Duncan v. Freeman, 152 Ga. 332, 110 S.E. 5 (1921) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance in consideration of promise to care for grantor for life is not voluntary, but is for valuable consideration. Avary v. Avary, 202 Ga. 22, 41 S.E.2d 314 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Conveyance in consideration of love, affection, and $5.00. — Deed by father to the father's children, reciting as consideration love, affection, and $5.00, is not on its face a voluntary conveyance; whether such conveyance is in fact voluntary depends upon intention of parties as ascertained from facts and circumstances at time of execution. Glenn v. Tankersley, 187 Ga. 129, 200 S.E. 709 (1938), later appeal sub nom. Bussell v. Glenn, 197 Ga. 816, 30 S.E.2d 617 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Deed reciting consideration of "$5.00 and love and affection" is not, on the deed's face, a voluntary conveyance. Avary v. Avary, 202 Ga. 22, 41 S.E.2d 314 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Husband's deed to wife reciting consideration of love and affection for grantee and $5.00, was not upon the deed's face a voluntary conveyance, but was prima facie a deed based on valuable consideration. Pharr v. Pharr, 206 Ga. 354, 57 S.E.2d 177 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Deed to daughters in consideration of love and affection. — When deed by defendant in fieri facias to defendant's three daughters was without consideration other than natural love and affection, it was a voluntary conveyance, regardless of fact that this property came to him from his wife's father, and that he and his wife had long planned to convey it to his three daughters (claimants); while under appropriate facts, a resulting trust may be declared, no such facts or contention were involved as so far as the evidence showed title to property was vested unconditionally in the defendant without any obligation or agreement to convey it to his daughters. Bussell v. Glenn, 197 Ga. 816, 30 S.E.2d 617 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Marriage is valuable consideration, and sufficient to support deed; and if the woman is guilty of no fraud, and enters into settlement without notice of debt due from man to third person, she will be protected in property conveyed by settlement against that debt. Marshall v. Morris, 16 Ga. 368 (1854) (decided under the Act of 1818).

Voluntary conveyances to family at a time when grantor is solvent. — When one executed voluntary conveyances of realty to his wife and two daughters and at time of execution he was indebted to creditor in a sum much less than the value of realty and personalty which he still owned, unencumbered so far as the record shows, he was not insolvent, and conveyances to wife and daughters should not be set aside. Mitchell v. Weekes, 179 Ga. 886, 177 S.E. 737 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Purchase of land in trust for daughter as voluntary conveyance to latter. — See Cohen v. Parish, 105 Ga. 339, 31 S.E. 205 (1898) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Good faith conveyance for purpose of preferring one creditor over another. — Conveyance made in good faith for purpose of preferring one creditor over another is not a "voluntary deed or conveyance". Johnson v. Sherrer, 185 Ga. 340, 195 S.E. 149 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Promise to provide grantor with necessities of life. — Conveyance of property for sole consideration of promise by grantee to provide for and furnish to grantor, for remainder of her life, necessities of life such as lodging, food, clothing, and medical expenses, is not voluntary conveyance, but is one for valuable consideration. Ayer v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 182 Ga. 765, 187 S.E. 27 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Interest payments made to a party by a debtor corporation were in return for the valuable consideration of a bona fide antecedent debt of the corporation incurred as a result of the party's loan to it. Consequently, these payments were not "fraudulent conveyances" under paragraph (3) of former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22. Estes v. Cranshaw (In re N & D Properties, Inc.), 54 Bankr. 590 (N.D. Ga. 1985), modified on other grounds, 799 F.2d 726 (11th Cir. 1986) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Actions

Judgment for debt and cancellation of fraudulent conveyance sought in same action. — Since the Uniform Procedure Act of 1887, a creditor may in one suit proceed for judgment on debt and to set aside fraudulent conveyance made by debtor. Harper v. Atlanta Milling Co., 203 Ga. 608, 48 S.E.2d 89 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 28-104 and 28-201).

Creditor may in one action in superior court proceed against a debtor for judgment on the creditor's demand and to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, joining the debtor and grantee. Hyde v. Atlanta Woolen Mills Corp., 204 Ga. 450, 50 S.E.2d 52 (1948) (decided under former law).

Action for both alimony and cancellation of fraudulent conveyance. See McCallie v. McCallie, 192 Ga. 699, 16 S.E.2d 562 (1941) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Action against both tortfeasor and grantee of conveyance with fraudulent purpose. — Parent of minor child killed by negligent tortious acts of another was within protection of former Code 1933, § 28-320 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-2-59), and may proceed in one action against tortfeasor and grantee named in conveyances executed by tortfeasor to obtain: (1) judgment for damages against tortfeasor for negligent tortious homicide of the parent's child; and (2) decree adjudging null and void as to the conveyances of real and personal property, executed by the defendant tortfeasor subsequent to commission of tort, for purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding the plaintiff in collection of the plaintiff's claim for damages. McVeigh v. Harrison, 185 Ga. 121, 194 S.E. 208 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Downs v. Powell, 215 Ga. 62, 108 S.E.2d 715 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Action in rem by alimony obligee against fraudulently conveyed property. — Willful failure to provide for maintenance and support of spouse and children creates lawful demand which, when legally enforced, is called alimony, and is a debtor/creditor relationship. Thus, when spouse was creditor at time of conveyances which are alleged to have been made to defeat her claim for alimony, although no alimony judgment had been rendered at time of conveyances, it would be inequitable and unjust not to allow her to maintain action because she elected to obtain judgment in rem against husband's property when she was unable to obtain personal service because of his willful avoidance of service. Carter v. Bush, 216 Ga. 429, 116 S.E.2d 568 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 28-101 — 28-104, and 28-201).

Action by creditor against transferee. — Creditor can obtain a personal money judgment against a transferee. United States v. Tranakos, 778 F. Supp. 1220 (N.D. Ga. 1991) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Equitable relief to judgment creditor proving fraudulent conveyance. — See Peoples Loan Co. v. Allen, 199 Ga. 537, 34 S.E.2d 811 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Showing of actual damage. — In action to cancel fraudulent conveyance, the plaintiff need not show that actual damage has accrued. Von Kamp v. Gary, 204 Ga. 875, 52 S.E.2d 591 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Judgment for damages may be appropriate. — When plaintiff alleges that the defendant transferred and conveyed property to parties unknown, and that the property is now beyond the defendant's control, it would not be inappropriate to allow judgment for such damages as creditors may have sustained, not exceeding value of property. Sullivan v. Ginsberg, 180 Ga. 840, 181 S.E. 163 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Jury charge upheld. — In suit based on paragraphs (2) and (3) of statute, giving statute in its entirety in charge to jury was not grounds for new trial. Thompson v. Shellman Banking Co., 180 Ga. 495, 179 S.E. 75 (1935) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Parties and Pleadings

Third party to fraudulent conveyance as necessary party. — Defrauded creditor may, in court of equity, have fraudulent transaction set aside; and, for this purpose, third party to the transaction would be a proper and necessary party. Harper v. Atlanta Milling Co., 203 Ga. 608, 48 S.E.2d 89 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 28-104 and 28-201).

Grantor and first taker of stock not indispensable parties. — In a fraudulent conveyance action against the grantee of stock brought by a divorced wife who was awarded the stock in the divorce proceeding, the grantor, husband, and first taker, a corporation, were not indispensable parties since neither was necessary for a just adjudication of the merits of the action, and neither was required for complete relief. Halta v. Bailey, 219 Ga. App. 178, 464 S.E.2d 614 (1995) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Special pleadings to show fraud. — In trial of statutory claim to land, it is not necessary to have special pleadings to show fraud. Mattox v. West, 194 Ga. 310, 21 S.E.2d 428 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Plea failing to allege intent or notice. — Plea to action of ejectment, to effect that a certain deed, constituting one link in plaintiff's chain of title, was made in fraud of rights of creditors under whom defendants hold, and is fraudulent and void, but which did not allege intent to defraud or notice to grantee should, on motion, be stricken. Baird v. Evans, 58 Ga. 350 (1877) (decided under former law).

Allegation that assignee of insolvent debtor had notice of debtor's insolvency. — In action to set aside as fraudulent an assignment or transfer of property alleged to have been made by insolvent debtor in trust or for benefit of one of the creditors, when a benefit was reserved to the debtor, the petition need not allege that the assignee or transferee had notice of the debtor's insolvency at the time of transfer. McKenzie v. Thomas, 118 Ga. 728, 45 S.E. 610 (1903) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Subsequent transferee of the debtor who sought to set aside the original transfer on the grounds of fraud had no argument that the transfer was invalid as to the original transferee because its claim to the property was based on its purchase from the debtor, it was the debtor's privy and stood in the debtor's shoes in challenging the validity of the debtor's contract with the original transferee. Thomas Mote Trucking, Inc. v. PCL Civil Constructors, Inc., 246 Ga. App. 306, 540 S.E.2d 261 (2000) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Identity of specific conveyance required. — In a fraudulent conveyances claim asserted under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22, the requirement that fraud be pled with particularity mandates that the claimant identify a specific conveyance with sufficient definiteness to advise the adversary of the conveyance which it must explain. Gwinnett Property v. G & H Montage, 215 Ga. App. 889, 453 S.E.2d 52 (1994) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Petition stating cause of action authorizing injunctive relief. — See Moncrief Furnace Co. v. Northwest Atlanta Bank, 193 Ga. 440, 19 S.E.2d 155 (1942) (decided under former law).

Setting aside transfer as fraudulent. — Paragraph (3) of former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 was not available to the party seeking to set aside the transfer as fraudulent when the amended answer and pre-trial order only tracked the language of paragraph (2) of former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22. Nelson v. United States, 821 F. Supp. 1496 (M.D. Ga. 1993) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Evidentiary Issues

Circumstantial evidence may be of high importance. — When a conveyance, a security deed, or a mortgage is attacked as having been made to hinder, delay, or defraud the creditors of the maker of such instrument, circumstantial evidence is of the highest importance in determining the good faith or bad faith — the real intent — of the grantor in the execution of the instrument; direct testimony as to the real intent of the grantor and grantee whose motives are under attack can only be obtained from these interested persons, and consequently necessarily any circumstance that may throw light on their conduct and motive is admissible for the jury's consideration. Gower v. Cohn, 643 F.2d 1146 (5th Cir. 1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Failure to produce testimony is badge of fraud, when bona fides of transaction in issue, and witnesses who ought to be able to explain the transaction are in reach. Eberhardt v. Bennett, 163 Ga. 796, 137 S.E. 64 (1927) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Facts necessary for conclusive presumption of fraud. — Only facts necessary to render deed from husband to wife fraudulent in law are indebtedness, insolvency of debtor, and voluntariness of deed. When these facts are proved, the law conclusively presumes fraudulent intent and declares instrument void so far as creditors who held demands against the debtor at the time of conveyance are concerned. Chambers v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 242 Ga. 498, 249 S.E.2d 214 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201); Barclay v. First Nat'l Bank, 265 Ga. 744, 462 S.E.2d 374 (1995) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Evidence of general character of alleged fraud perpetrator. — When conveyance between near relatives is attacked upon ground of fraud, the law requires jury to examine every circumstance with care and caution, and one who is charged with defrauding honest creditors should be allowed to introduce evidence concerning one's general character. Wimberly v. Toney, 175 Ga. 416, 165 S.E. 257 (1932) (decided under former law).

Evidence of indebtedness. — Testamentary trust created by a wife in favor of her husband was not a fraudulent transfer against a judgment creditor since the wife had been released from liability on the judgment by virtue of a settlement agreement executed in bankruptcy court and, thus, creation of the trust was not a debtor's act that could be deemed fraudulent against the creditor under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22. Jordan v. Caswell, 264 Ga. 638, 450 S.E.2d 818 (1994) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Proof of suits against defendant at time of allegedly fraudulent conveyance. — On trial of issue whether conveyance is fraudulent against creditors, the plaintiff may prove pendency of suits against the debtor at the time of execution of the deed. Barber v. Terrell, 54 Ga. 146 (1875) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Unexplained agreement that grantor retain possession. — Agreement between a grantor and grantee that property shall remain in possession of vendor, if not satisfactorily explained, is a badge of fraud; and when such continued possession in vendor is shown, the burden of proof shifts to grantee. State Housecraft, Inc. v. Jones, 96 Ga. App. 182, 99 S.E.2d 701 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Proof required to overcome prima facie case. — If after conveyance of property grantor was allowed to retain and remain in possession, this was sufficient prima facie evidence to establish fraud under paragraphs (2) and (3) of former Code 1933, § 28-201, and it was then incumbent upon grantee claiming under conveyance to establish that grantor's possession was not by any right of ownership or that grantor was not insolvent at time of such conveyance, and that, even if solvent, any intention of grantor to delay or defraud grantor's creditors was unknown to the grantee at the time of conveyance. Glenn v. Tankersley, 187 Ga. 129, 200 S.E. 709 (1938), later appeal sub nom. Bussell v. Glenn, 197 Ga. 816, 30 S.E.2d 617 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Rebuttal of presumption of fraud arising from seller's continued possession. — Proof of payment of valuable consideration rebuts presumption of fraud arising from seller's continued possession. Scott v. Winship, 20 Ga. 429 (1856) (decided under former law); Scruggs v. Blackshear Mfg. Co., 45 Ga. App. 855, 166 S.E. 249 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Admissibility of writs of fieri facias against defendant. — See Buttram v. Jackson, 32 Ga. 409 (1861) (decided under former law).

When question of defendant's solvency is involved, fieri facias against defendant with entry of nulla bona thereon is admissible in evidence. Lawson v. Wright, 21 Ga. 242 (1857) (decided under former law).

Proof required by plaintiff in fieri facias to invalidate conveyance. — See Glenn v. Tankersley, 187 Ga. 129, 200 S.E. 709 (1938), later appeal sub nom. Bussell v. Glenn, 197 Ga. 816, 30 S.E.2d 617 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Without standing to allege fraud. — When plaintiffs were not creditors of the creator of a trust, plaintiffs could not argue that the plaintiffs were defrauded by the plaintiffs transfer of patents to the trust. Beeson v. Crouch, 227 Ga. App. 578, 490 S.E.2d 118 (1997).

Jury/Court Issues

Whether deed was made with intent to delay or defraud creditors is question of fact for jury to decide from all of the circumstances of the case, and whether the debtor is so solvent or insolvent is a question of fact for the jury. Goodman v. Lewis, 247 Ga. 605, 277 S.E.2d 908 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Questions of fraud and bad faith are ordinarily for jury. Mercantile Nat'l Bank v. Aldridge, 233 Ga. 318, 210 S.E.2d 791 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Issues of good faith and grantee's notice. — Whether there has been sufficient proof of good faith of transaction or of spouse's lack of knowledge of the other spouse's business affairs or debts is a question for determination by jury. Cotton v. John W. Eshelman & Sons, 137 Ga. App. 360, 223 S.E.2d 757 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Issues of fraudulent intent of grantor and notice of grantee. — Whether conveyance to spouse was made with intent to delay or defraud creditors, and whether such intent was known to party taking, were all questions for jury, under the evidence and a proper charge. Primrose v. Browning, 59 Ga. 69 (1877) (decided under former Civil Code 1863, § 1952).

Whether deed was executed by grantor with intention to delay or defraud grantor's spouse in collection of alimony and such intention was known to grantee or whether transaction was bona fide and for valuable consideration and without notice or ground for reasonable suspicion is ordinarily question for determination by jury. Lewis v. Lewis, 210 Ga. 330, 80 S.E.2d 312 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Whether grantee chargeable with notice of grantor's fraudulent intention. — It is a jury question whether grantee is chargeable with notice or ground for reasonable suspicion of grantor's intention to delay or defraud creditors. Mercantile Nat'l Bank v. Aldridge, 233 Ga. 318, 210 S.E.2d 791 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

When circumstances, if not satisfactorily explained, indicate fraud. — When transaction between brothers-in-law is attacked by creditor as fraudulent and there are other circumstances besides relationship which, if not satisfactorily explained, may be regarded as badges of fraud, issues are matters to be determined by jury. Hilburn v. Hightower, 178 Ga. 534, 173 S.E. 389 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Allegations of fraudulent intent and notice to grantee. — Petition of wife against husband which alleges that husband executed deed to his attorney, conveying property occupied by wife and children, for purpose of hindering, delaying, or defrauding her in collection of alimony for support of herself and children, and raises question as to whether defendant attorney knew or had reasonable ground to suspect such intention, was sufficient to raise an issue for determination by jury, and it was error for court to grant nonsuit. Lewis v. Lewis, 210 Ga. 330, 80 S.E.2d 312 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Issues regarding execution of release. — When the exclusion in a liability policy for injuries or death caused by assault or battery applied to a claim against the insured arising from an assault and battery caused by its employee, there was no coverage under the policy, and a release by the insured of any claims it might have against the insurer did not transfer a valuable asset to the insurer in violation of this statute. Jefferson Ins. Co. v. Dunn, 269 Ga. 213, 496 S.E.2d 696 (1998) (decided under former § 18-2-22).

Whether tortfeasor was solvent at time of voluntary conveyance. — If tortfeasor was insolvent, or left insolvent, when tortfeasor made voluntary conveyance, it was void as against party damaged; and whether insolvent or not, was question for jury. Westmoreland v. Powell, 59 Ga. 256 (1877) (decided under former Code 1873, §§ 1944 and 1952). See also Primrose v. Browning, 59 Ga. 69 (1877) (decided under former Code 1873, §§ 1944 and 1952).

Evidence that deed was voluntary and intended to defeat claim for alimony. — Evidence that deed executed by the debtor to the testatrix was fraudulent and void because the deed was without consideration and based on a collusive transaction between them, for the sole purpose of defeating the claim of the debtor's spouse for support and alimony, was sufficient to carry the case upon this question to the jury. Blevins v. Pittman, 189 Ga. 789, 7 S.E.2d 662 (1940) (decided under former law).

Nature and adequacy of consideration for mortgage. — Whether the consideration for which a mortgage is alleged to have been executed is bona fide, or merely colorable to defraud creditors or so inadequate as to constitute a badge of fraud, is a question of fact for the jury. Williams v. C. & G.H. Kelsey & Halsted, 6 Ga. 365 (1849) (decided under former law).

Inconsistent jury findings. — When a jury's finding of fraudulent conveyance constituted a finding that the defendant's capital was impaired by a stock redemption, that there was a specific intent to cause harm to the plaintiff, the defendant's vendor, and that punitive damages should be awarded against the directors and shareholders, these findings were wholly inconsistent and irreconcilable with the jury's finding against the defendant on its cross-claim, which required a finding either that no unlawful stock redemption occurred or that the stockholders lacked knowledge of its unlawfulness, and the trial court erred in denying the parties' motions for new trial. Docutronics, Inc. v. Reitman, 235 Ga. App.

Effect of Invalidating Conveyance

Title to property fraudulently conveyed. — Fraudulent conveyances are declared void, and title to property so conveyed remains in judgment debtors subject to judgments subsequently obtained. Coleman v. Law, 170 Ga. 906, 154 S.E. 445 (1930) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Duty of grantee of fraudulently conveyed property to hold in trust. — When a debtor makes a fraudulent transfer of property or chases in action, which is voidable as to creditors, property in hands of a fraudulent grantee is held by a debtor in trust for creditors of a fraudulent grantor; and if it has been converted into money, the money is impressed with same trust, and the fraudulent grantee will be compelled in equity to account for the money. Edwards v. United Food Brokers, Inc., 195 Ga. 1, 22 S.E.2d 812 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Judgment of creditor rendered after conveyance. — If a debtor conveys the debtor's property with intent to delay or defraud the debtor's creditors, and grantee takes with knowledge of such intent, the land can be subjected to judgment of one of such creditors rendered after conveyance. Horton v. Black, 137 Ga. 577, 73 S.E. 833 (1912) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3224).

Effect of setting aside fraudulent transfer. — Edwards v. United Food Brokers, Inc., 195 Ga. 1, 22 S.E.2d 812 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-201).

Effect of fraudulent conveyance on rights of subsequent creditors. — Roach v. Roach, 212 Ga. 40, 90 S.E.2d 423 (1955) (decided under former law).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Claims under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 not extinguished. — O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 was repealed on July 1, 2002, when Georgia enacted the Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., but this repeal does not extinguish causes of action that arose under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 before that date. Gerschick v. Pounds, 281 Ga. App. 531, 636 S.E.2d 663 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 95 (Ga. 2007).

Conveyance at issue took place in September 2001 and needed to be construed under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 (repealed) even though the statute was repealed when the legislature adopted the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq. Flatau v. Smith (In re Smith), No. 07-50410-JDW, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 3825 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. Oct. 30, 2007).

Defendant did not have to be indebted to plaintiff. — Read and considered as a whole, a jury charge was an accurate statement of the law and was authorized by the evidence in an action in which the jury was instructed that it was not necessary for a defendant to be indebted to a plaintiff at the time of a transfer for former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 to apply and there was evidence that an attorney made a conveyance with actual intent to defraud a future creditor, a client; moreover, the trial court fully and completely charged the law on fraudulent conveyances, including former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22(2). Gerschick v. Pounds, 281 Ga. App. 531, 636 S.E.2d 663 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 95 (Ga. 2007).

Aiding and abetting. — Although Georgia courts had not yet had an opportunity to address the issue of whether there was a cause of action for aiding and abetting a fraudulent transfer when the alleged aider-abetter was not a debtor or a transferee, the instant court concluded that Georgia courts were not likely to recognize such an action; the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (UFTA) (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., did not refer to parties other than debtors, creditors, and transferees, and further there was no language in UFTA that suggested the creation of a distinct cause of action for aiding and abetting claims against non-transferees. Hays v. Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker LLP, No. 1:06-CV-754-CAP, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 95849 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 14, 2006).

No-action clause. — Claims by noteholders under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., against a corporation and the corporate directors and officers should have been dismissed by the district court because a no-action clause in trust indentures that governed the notes barred the noteholders’ claims since the noteholders did not fall within any exception to the rule that no-action clauses barred fraudulent conveyance claims; the appellate court had jurisdiction to grant permission to appeal to all appellants because both prongs of 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) had been satisfied, which was that the district court had stated the required language in the court’s order and the appellants had then filed an application for interlocutory appeal within ten days of that statement. Akanthos Capital Mgmt., LLC v. CompuCredit Holdings Corp., 677 F.3d 1286 (11th Cir. 2012).

Motion for summary judgment denied. — Summary judgment motion filed by an insurer in response to a Chapter 7 trustee's complaint charging that certain premiums paid to the insurer by a debtor were fraudulent conveyances that were recoverable under 11 U.S.C. § 548 and/or under Georgia's Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., was denied because the case presented significant factual issues concerning the legal relationships between the debtor and the entities on behalf of which the debtor had paid the premiums and the presence of such issues foreclosed summary judgment. Coleman v. Zurich Am. Ins. Co. (In re Darrow Auto. Group, Inc.), No. 09-11228, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 5253 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. Mar. 29, 2011).

Trial court erred by denying an insurance company's motion for summary judgment on a claim that the company engaged in a conspiracy which violated the Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., by a conspiracy to settle a bad faith/negligence claim possessed by an estate for less than the claim's true value because the insurer was found not to have engaged in fraudulent conduct. Baker v. Huff, 323 Ga. App. 357, 747 S.E.2d 1 (2013).

Motion for directed verdict properly denied. — Attorney and a wife's motion for a directed verdict was properly denied as a party bringing a fraudulent conveyance action under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 did not have to be a creditor; the circumstances and the timing of the transfer showed the attorney's intent to defraud as a quitclaim deed from the attorney to the wife was "rush recorded" two days after the attorney received a draft order for the underlying judgment, no valuable consideration was given for the transfer, and the attorney was an expert in estate planning, including the protection of assets from the claims of creditors. Gerschick v. Pounds, 281 Ga. App. 531, 636 S.E.2d 663 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 95 (Ga. 2007).

Transfer to avoid bankruptcy ramifications. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22 (repealed), a wife's motion to dismiss a claim brought by a Chapter 7 trustee to avoid a transfer made to her by a debtor husband was denied because the trustee, through the complaint and use of a quitclaim deed, provided a factual basis sufficient to state a claim including some evidence that the transfer was made for no consideration, that the transfer was voluntary, and that the wife knew of the debtor's insolvency at the time the transfer was made. Flatau v. Smith (In re Smith), No. 07-50410-JDW, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 3825 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. Oct. 30, 2007).

Transfer was not fraudulent. — When a corporation paid a dividend to a shareholder pursuant to a shareholders agreement after designating itself an S corporation, it was not a fraudulent transfer because it was not error to find that the transfer was made in exchange for reasonably equivalent value since the shareholders agreement provided the corporation with valuable benefits by virtue of its S-corporation election. Crumpton v. McGarrity (In re Northlake Foods, Inc.), No. 12-15604, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 7578 (11th Cir. Apr. 16, 2013) (Unpublished).

No fraud shown by developer. — In an action brought by the purchasers of a lot seeking to cancel the developer's security deed based upon alleged fraud, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the developer as, even if the developer knew of the sale of the lot to the purchasers, such sale did not estop the developer from the developer's claim against the lot pursuant to the developer's security deed; however, the trial court did err by denying the equitable subrogation claim asserted by the purchasers' lender since exercising subrogation did not prejudice the developer in any manner. Byers v. McGuire Props., 285 Ga. 530, 679 S.E.2d 1 (2009).

Fraudulent conveyance claim not stated. — Administrator failed to state a claim under the Georgia Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, O.C.G.A. (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act). § 18-2-70 et seq., against group three when the administrator alleged that defendant one held title to the property when the suit was filed, and claimed that the administrator was entitled to recover the property from defendant one and to set aside the lien to defendant two; the administrator acknowledge that defendants three, four, and five denied any knowledge of the administrator's lien on the property when they purchased the property, and that therefore no one disclosed the lien to the closing attorney or defendants three, four, and five, despite certain parties' knowledge and affirmative duty to disclose the existence of the writ as constituting a lien on the property. Huggins v. Powell, 315 Ga. App. 599, 726 S.E.2d 730 (2012).

Choice of law. — In a fraudulent conveyance action transferred from the Northern District of Texas, Georgia's former fraudulent conveyance law, former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22, which was in force at the time the actions in question occurred, was the applicable state law under Texas choice of law principles because Georgia had the most significant relationship to the issues raised in the lawsuit. MC Asset Recovery v. Southern Co., No. 1:06-CV-0417-BBM, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 123609 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 1, 2008).

(ii) A relative of a general partner in, or a general partner of, or a person in control of the debtor;

(iii) Another partnership in which the debtor is a general partner;

(iv) A general partner in a partnership described in division (iii) of this subparagraph; or

(v) A person in control of the debtor;

(D) An affiliate, or an insider of an affiliate as if the affiliate were the debtor; and

(E) A managing agent of the debtor.

(9) "Lien" means a charge against or an interest in property to secure payment of a debt or performance of an obligation and includes a security interest created by agreement, a judicial lien obtained by legal or equitable process or proceedings, a common-law lien, or a statutory lien.

(10) "Organization" means a person other than an individual.

(11) "Person" means an individual, public corporation, government or governmental subdivision agency or instrumentality, business or nonprofit entity, estate, or other legal entity.

(12) "Property" means anything that may be the subject of ownership.

(13) "Record" means information that is inscribed on a tangible medium or that is stored in an electronic or other medium and is retrievable in perceivable form.

(14) "Relative" means an individual related by consanguinity within the third degree as determined by the common law, a spouse, or an individual related to a spouse within the third degree as so determined and includes an individual in an adoptive relationship within the third degree.

(15) "Sign" means, with present intent to authenticate or adopt a record:

(A) To execute or adopt a tangible symbol; or

(B) To attach to or logically associate with the record an electronic symbol, sound, or process.

(16) “Transfer” means every mode, direct or indirect, absolute or conditional, voluntary or involuntary, of disposing of or parting with an asset or an interest in an asset and includes payment of money, release, lease, and creation of a lien or other encumbrance.

(17) “Valid lien” means a lien that is effective against the holder of a judicial lien subsequently obtained by legal or equitable process or proceedings. (Code 1981, § 18-2-71, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2003, p. 140, § 18; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, rewrote this Code section. See editor’s note under this article for applicability.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Transfer. — Definition of a “transfer” is broad enough to encompass a co-owner’s withdrawal of funds from a joint bank account. Bishop v. Patton, 288 Ga. 600, 706 S.E.2d 634, overruled on other grounds by SRB Inv. Servs., LLLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

Property. — Defendants’ transferring of corporate goodwill, or “book of business,” to another entity was transfer of property under the broad definition of property in Georgia’s fraudulent transfer law. Jones v. Tauber & Balser, P.C., 503 B.R. 162 (N.D. Ga. 2013).

Summary judgment improper. — Trial court erred by granting summary judgment to a creditor because under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75(b), the questioned real estate transfer involved the debtor purchasing the property for the debtor’s mother because the debtor had the right to purchase the property and it was only deeded to the debtor briefly the same day, which transfer was not to satisfy an antecedent debt, thus, no fraudulent transfer

Transferees were not entitled to summary judgment on a Chapter 7 trustee’s claim to avoid transfers as actually fraudulent under the Bankruptcy Code and Georgia law as the transferees failed to demonstrate by either affirmative evidence or by pointing to lack of evidence that the trustee could not carry the trustee’s burden at trial regarding the debtor’s intent to transfer the debtor’s assets. Rather, several badges of fraud existed, including that the debtor made the transfer to an insider (a company wholly owned by a director of the debtor who owned more than 20 percent of the stock of the debtor) and that the transfer was made for the purpose of satisfying an antecedent debt owed to an insider. Howell v. Fulford (In re Southern Home & Ranch Supply, Inc.), 515 B.R. 699 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2014).

18-2-72. Determining insolvency.

(a) A debtor is insolvent if, at a fair valuation, the sum of the debtor's debts is greater than the sum of the debtor's assets.

(b) A debtor who is generally not paying his or her debts as they become due other than as a result of a bona fide dispute is presumed to be insolvent. The presumption imposes on the party against which the presumption is directed the burden of proving that the nonexistence of insolvency is more probable than its existence.

(c) Assets under this Code section do not include property that has been transferred, concealed, or removed with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors or that has been transferred in a manner making the transfer voidable under this article.

(d) Debts under this Code section do not include an obligation to the extent it is secured by a valid lien on property of the debtor not included as an asset. (Code 1981, § 18-2-72, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, substituted “if, at a fair valuation, the sum of the debtor's debts is greater than the sum of the debtor's assets” for “if the sum of the debtor's debts is greater than all of the debtor's assets, at a fair valuation” in subsection (a); in subsection (b), inserted “other than as a result of a bona fide dispute” in the first sentence and added the second sentence; deleted former subsection (c), which read: “A partnership is insolvent under subsection (a) of this Code section if the sum of the partnership's debts is greater than the aggregate of all of the partnership's assets, at a fair valuation, and the sum of the excess of the value of each general partner's nonpartnership assets over the partner's nonpartnership debts.”; and redesignated former subsections (d) and (e) as present subsections (c) and (d), respectively. See editor's note under this article for applicability.

Insolvency resulting in constructive fraud pled. — Actual fraud was adequately pled by alleging badges of fraud sufficient to infer the fraudulent nature of transfers to insiders; moreover, insolvency resulting in constructive fraud also was adequately pled. Ralls Corp. v. Huerfano River Wind, LLC, 27 F. Supp. 3d 1303 (N.D. Ga. 2014).

Judgment against debtor. — Debtor's transfer of real property to the debtor's spouse, a default judgment in a lawsuit, which the trustee claimed rendered the debtor insolvent, in which the spouse did not participate and which was filed after the transfer did not prove the debtor's insolvency at the time of the transfer for purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22(3); the spouse's status as the debtor's spouse, standing alone, did not establish privity with the debtor, and the judgment against the debtor did not bind the spouse. Thurmond v. Turner (In re Turner), No. 00-72597-PWB, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 2745 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 19, 2006).

18-2-73. Value given for transfer.

(a) Value is given for a transfer or an obligation if, in exchange for the transfer or obligation, property is transferred or an antecedent debt is secured or satisfied, but value does not include an unperformed promise made otherwise than in the ordinary course of the promisor's business to furnish support to the debtor or another person.

(b) For the purposes of paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 18-2-74 and Code Section 18-2-75, a person gives a reasonably equivalent value if the person acquires an interest of the debtor in an asset pursuant to a regularly conducted, noncollusive foreclosure sale or execution of a power of sale for the acquisition or disposition of the interest of the debtor upon default under a mortgage, deed of trust, or security agreement.

(c) A transfer is made for present value if the exchange between the debtor and the transferee is intended by them to be contemporaneous and is in fact substantially contemporaneous. (Code 1981, § 18-2-73, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

18-2-74. Voidable transfer; determination of actual intent.

(a) A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is voidable as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation:

(1) With actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any creditor of the debtor; or

(2) Without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor:

(A) Was engaged or was about to engage in a business or a transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction; or

(B) Intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that he or she would incur, debts beyond his or her ability to pay as they became due.

(b) In determining actual intent under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section, consideration may be given, among other factors, to whether:

(1) The transfer or obligation was to an insider;

(2) The debtor retained possession or control of the property transferred after the transfer;

(3) The transfer or obligation was disclosed or concealed;

(4) Before the transfer was made or obligation was incurred, the debtor had been sued or threatened with suit;

(5) The transfer was of substantially all the debtor's assets;

(6) The debtor absconded;

(7) The debtor removed or concealed assets;

(8) The value of the consideration received by the debtor was reasonably equivalent to the value of the asset transferred or the amount of the obligation incurred;

(9) The debtor was insolvent or became insolvent shortly after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred;

(10) The transfer occurred shortly before or shortly after a substantial debt was incurred; and

(11) The debtor transferred the essential assets of the business to a lienor who transferred the assets to an insider of the debtor.

(c) If a creditor is a successor or assignee, a right of action under subsection (a) of this Code section is automatically assigned to such successor or assignee.

(d) A creditor making a claim for relief under subsection (a) of this Code section has the burden of proving the elements of the claim for relief by a preponderance of the evidence. (Code 1981, § 18-2-74, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, substituted "voidable" for "fraudulent" near the beginning of subsection (a); and added subsections (c) and (d). See editor's note under this article for applicability.

Transfers of assets before death. — Before decedent died, a decedent's gifts to the decedent's spouse, the decedent's subsequent purchase of land and deeding of the land in a corporate entity's name without documented consideration from the entity, and the decedent's involvement in the capitalization of the entity with purported funds from the spouse could all be found to constitute transfers made with the intent to fraudulently defeat claims of the decedent's ex-spouse under the terms of a settlement agreement the decedent had with the decedent's ex-spouse, and could constitute fraud under the statute. Miller v. Lomax, 266 Ga. App. 93, 596 S.E.2d 232 (2004).

Badges of fraud identified by federal court applicable. — O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74 permits the trustee to avoid a transfer made with the actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud any creditor of the debtor. Subsection (b) states that, in determining actual intent, the court could consider a specified list of factors among other factors, which track the badges of fraud identified by the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. Scarver v. M. Abuhab Participacoes S.A. (In re Moskowitz), No. 10-6650-WLH, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4800 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Nov. 28, 2011).

Intentional fraud. — Plaintiff established prima facie case of intentional fraud sufficient to trigger Georgia's fraudulent transfer law because the plaintiff provided evidence showing that the transaction resulted in transfer of substantially all assets, transferring company became insolvent shortly after transfer, transfer occurred just before potential lawsuit against transferring company became known, shareholders of transferring company simply switched over to company to whom assets transferred, and some evidence existed that efforts were made to conceal the nature of the transfer. Jones v. Tauber & Balser, P.C., 503 B.R. 162 (N.D. Ga. 2013).

Insider. — Certain individuals and entities were insiders of the debtor, including officers and persons in control of the debtor, their spouses, the owner of 66 percent of the debtor, and indirect owners of 20 percent or more of the debtor. Watts v. MTC Dev., LLC (In re Palisades at W. Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), 501 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013).

Pleading requirements. — Special pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) did not apply to an action for fraudulent conveyance under Georgia Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq. Nesco, Inc. v. Fairley Cisco, NO. CV205-142, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36189 (S.D. Ga. Oct. 7, 2005).

Trustee's pleadings that alleged that the investors used the debtors as part of a Ponzi scheme and that the money transferred to the limited liability company amounted to a fraudulent transfer was sufficient to meet the pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 8, Fed. R. Bankr. 7008, the heightened pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b), and to state a claim under 11 U.S.C. § 548 and O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75(a). Perkins v. Crown Fin., LLC (In re Int'l Mgmt. Assocs. LLC), No. A06-62966-PWB, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1566 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Mar. 6, 2007).

Defendant LLC did not establish that a more definite statement was required for the trustee's allegations under 11 U.S.C. § 548 and O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74 because the trustee's complaint was not unintelligible and provided sufficient information to the LLC so it could frame a response; the complaint named only the LLC as a defendant and alleged that the transfer made pursuant to a settlement agreement was fraudulent. Perkins v. Crown Fin., LLC (In re Int'l Mgmt. Assocs. LLC), No. A06-62966-PWB, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1566 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Mar. 6, 2007).

Chapter 7 trustee's allegations were sufficient to survive a creditor's motion to dismiss the trustee's complaint seeking to avoid and recover transfers pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 544(b)(1) and 550 when the trustee alleged sufficient facts to suggest that, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(b), the creditor received avoidable fraudulent transfers from the debtor. The trustee alleged that all of the transfers were made within four years of the petition date, that the transfers were from the debtors' bank account, and that several badges of fraud indicated the debtors' actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud including the fact that the transfers occurred when the debtors were insolvent, the creditor was an insider of the debtors at the time of the transfers, and the creditor knew or should have known that the debtors were involved in an unlawful scheme to defraud investors. Gordon v. Graybeal (In re CM Vaughn, LLC), No. 10-06105-MGD, 2010 Bankr. LEXIS 2547 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. June 21, 2010).

Court rejected transferees' argument that a Chapter 7 trustee could not plausibly assert the existence of a creditor with an allowed claim that gave the creditor standing under 11 U.S.C. § 544(b)(1) to assert a constructively fraudulent transfer claim under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74 and Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 1304 because the assertion that only an unsecured creditor with a claim arising prior to the transfers could seek their avoidance was legally flawed. Under the state statutes, a transfer for less than reasonably equivalent value was constructively fraudulent as to creditors whose claims arose after the transfers when the debtor was engaged or was about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction. Watson v. Powell (In re Atlantis Plastics, Inc.), No. 10-06349, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 1147 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Mar. 31, 2011) (Unpublished).

When an investor asserted a fraudulent transfer claim against a bank to which a consultant who allegedly defrauded the investor made a down payment on a house, it was error to dismiss the claim based on the bank's assertion that the bank, under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a)(1), took the consultant's funds in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value because: (1) the investor's complaint did not admit or otherwise demonstrate such an affirmative defense; and (2) the investor had no obligation to anticipate the affirmative defense. Furthermore, the claims could survive a motion to dismiss because the investor: (1) stated viable claims; (2) did not have to anticipate affirmative defenses; and (3) did not admit such defenses. Speedway Motorsports, Inc. v. Pinnacle Bank, 315 Ga. App. 320, 727 S.E.2d 151 (2012).

Trustee could not prevail under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74 because the trustee was not a "creditor" who was able to utilize § 18-2-74. Here, the trustee did not plead that the trustee was moving under 11 U.S.C. § 544; rather, the trustee simply asserted a state law cause of action. Cooper v. Bullock (In re Bullock), No. 10-04111-MGD, 2012 Bankr. LEXIS 3268 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. June 12, 2012).

Actual fraud was adequately pled by alleging badges of fraud sufficient to infer the fraudulent nature of transfers to insiders; moreover, insolvency resulting in constructive fraud also was adequately pled. Ralls Corp. v. Huerfano River Wind, LLC, 27 F. Supp. 3d 1303 (N.D. Ga. 2014).

Transferees were not entitled to summary judgment on a Chapter 7 trustee's claim to avoid transfers as actually fraudulent under the Bankruptcy Code and Georgia law as the transferees failed to demonstrate by either affirmative evidence or by pointing to lack of evidence that the trustee could not carry the trustee's burden at trial regarding the debtor's intent to transfer the debtor's assets. Rather, several badges of fraud existed, including that the debtor made the transfer to an insider (a company wholly owned by a director of debtor who owned more than 20 percent of the stock of debtor) and that the transfer was made for the purpose of satisfying an antecedent debt owed to an insider. Howell v. Fulford (In re Southern Home & Ranch Supply, Inc.), 515 B.R. 699 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2014).

Colorable claim in bankruptcy. — When a Chapter 7 debtor failed to list a creditor's claim, the claim was non-dischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3). Pursuant to the fraudulent transfer elements of O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74, the creditor made the required showing of a colorable claim of non-dischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6). D.A.N. Joint Venture III, L.P. v. Wier (In re Wier), No. 10-6076, 2012 Bankr. LEXIS 5064 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 30, 2012).

Property was transferred. — Defendants' argument that transfer of corporate goodwill, or “book of business,” could not as a matter of law constitute transfer under Georgia’s fraudulent transfer law because goodwill had no value was rejected because the plaintiff produced evidence that the goodwill transferred had substantial value. Jones v. Tauber & Balser, P.C., 503 B.R. 162 (N.D. Ga. 2013).

Fraudulent transfer shown. — Checks payable from a Chapter 7 debtor that were deposited in an insider’s account were avoidable as made with actual intent to defraud a creditor because the deposited checks were not fully disclosed, the debtor received no consideration for the transfer, the debtor was insolvent at the time, and the checks, and any invoices which allegedly supported them, were created in order to defraud a creditor into making advances for expenses not validly incurred. Watts v. MTC Dev., LLC (In re Palisades at W. Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), 501 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013).

Father who admitted he caused property to be transferred to his son to shield the property from the father’s creditors was not entitled to judgment against the son because he had unclean hands, under O.C.G.A. § 23-1-10. Under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a)(1), the transfer was fraudulent because the transfer was made with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud the father’s creditors. Roach v. Roach, 327 Ga. App. 513, 759 S.E.2d 587 (2014).

Chapter 7 debtor’s discharge was denied based on transfer of funds for no consideration shortly after the debtor had been sued from a joint bank account to an account purportedly controlled by the debtor’s spouse because the debtor testified that the funds were transferred to the spouse so that money would not be garnished. McAfee v. Harman (In re Harman), No. 11-5534, 2014 Bankr. LEXIS 4457 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 10, 2014).

No fraudulent transfer shown. — When a debtor received valuable consideration or reasonably equivalent value as a result of a creditor bank’s release of the bank’s lien against the debtor’s assets in exchange for the payment of another’s obligation guaranteed by the debtor, no fraudulent transfer occurred under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(B) or O.C.G.A.

§ 18-2-74(a). Hays v. Farmers and Merchants Bank (In re Stewart Fin. Co.), 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 2029 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. June 8, 2007).

Transfers from bankruptcy debtors were avoidable as fraudulent under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a)(1) since the transfers made in the course of a Ponzi scheme were deemed to be made with fraudulent intent, and the lack of information from the debtors, the refusal of the debtors to allow transferees to conduct due diligence, and the usurious interest paid by the debtors clearly indicated that the transactions were fraudulent. Kerr v. Audio Answers, Inc. (In re Christou), No. 06-68251-MHM, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 3291 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 28, 2009).

Chapter 7 trustee was not entitled to the recovery of property from the debtor’s property under 11 U.S.C. § 544. Under the fraudulent transfer elements of O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74, the debtor received reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the privilege of living in the property without the payment of rent, taxes, or insurance and in exchange for enjoying the benefit of property improvements. Pettigrew v. Rollins (In re Rollins), No. 09-6054, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 3742 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 29, 2011).

Distributions to the members of a limited liability company did not constitute a fraudulent transfer in violation of O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a) because insolvency on the part of the company and an actual intent to hinder, defraud, or delay the creditor’s collection of the creditor’s debt was not shown. Sun Nurseries, Inc. v. Lake Erma, LLC, 316 Ga. App. 832, 730 S.E.2d 556 (2012).

No fraudulent transfer when work performed. — Debtor’s twice monthly $1833 payments to the defendant in exchange for regular, hotel managerial services did not constitute avoidable fraudulent transfers under O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74(a)(2)(B) and 18-2-75 because the defendant’s work for the debtor constituted reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the payments. Anderson v. Patel (In re Diplomat Constr., Inc.), No. 11-5611, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 4297 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Aug. 6, 2013).

Transfer before a crime was committed. — Although the transfer of a house was accompanied by some badges of fraud, the trial court abused the court's discretion in enjoining further disposition of the house, pending adjudication of the merits of wrongful death and fraudulent transfer claims, since the transferor gave the house to the transferor's three minor grandchildren in Florida three months before the transferor murdered the decedent. Bishop v. Patton, 288 Ga. 600, 706 S.E.2d 634, overruled on other grounds by SRB Inv. Servs., LLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

Fraudulent transfer by individual accused of murder. — Court did not abuse the court's discretion in entering an interlocutory injunction barring further disposition of the proceeds from joint bank accounts pending final disposition of fraudulent transfer and wrongful death lawsuits because badges of fraud indicated an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a decedent's estate and heirs of a full recovery. The transferor's adult child came up from Florida to withdraw the funds from joint bank accounts in Georgia three days after the transferor was arrested for the murder of the decedent. Bishop v. Patton, 288 Ga. 600, 706 S.E.2d 634, overruled on other grounds by SRB Inv. Servs., LLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

Accrual of action for fraudulent conveyance. — In determining when a cause of action accrued for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-32 it was necessary to ascertain the time when the plaintiff could first have maintained plaintiff's action to a successful result. The relevant date for determining the statute of limitations on a fraudulent conveyance claim, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74, 18-2-75, and 18-2-76, was the date that the debtor incurred the obligation to make the transfer. Kipperman v. Onex Corp., 411 B.R. 805 (N.D. Ga. 2009).

Fraudulent conveyance claim time-barred. — Administrator's fraudulent conveyance claims against group one were time-barred under O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74(a)(1) and 18-2-79(1), even though the claim was not time-barred under the limitations period in effect when the claim accrued, as application of § 18-2-79, a procedural law in effect at the time the suit was filed, did not violate the constitutional prohibition against retroactive laws under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X; the administrator also failed to utilize the one-year statute of limitation effective upon discovery of the alleged fraud. Huggins v. Powell, 315 Ga. App. 599, 726 S.E.2d 730 (2012).

Since an administrator's fraudulent conveyance claims were time-barred under O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74(a)(1) and 18-2-79(1), a limited liability company's (LLC) failure to respond to the administrator's requests for admissions was of no consequence and the trial court's denial of summary judgment to the LLC was improper. Huggins v. Powell, 315 Ga. App. 599, 726 S.E.2d 730 (2012).

Margin or settlement payments. — Federal statute, 11 U.S.C. § 546(e), was a defense to the counts of a trustee's avoidance action brought against an investment company under 11 U.S.C. § 544, which incorporated O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-22(3) and 18-2-74(a)(2), and to the count brought pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A). Hayes v. Morgan Stanley DW Inc. (In re Stewart Fin. Co.), 367 B.R. 909 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 2007).

Discovery of attorney-client communications. — Judgment creditor could inquire into attorney-client communications only as the communications were related to the planning or execution of the transition from the limited liability company (LLC) to the other entities. The creditor could not inquire into communications made after these transactions were carried out, even if those communications concern the possible legal implications of the transactions. Tindall v. H & S Homes, LLC, No. 5:10-cv-044(CAR), 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2299 (M.D. Ga. Jan. 10, 2011).

Crime fraud exception to attorney-client privilege triggered. — With respect to documents claimed to be protected by attorney-client privilege, because the plaintiff successfully established a prima facie case of intentional fraud and violation of Georgia's fraudulent transfer law, that was enough to trigger the crime-fraud exception and require the defendants to produce documents related to the transfer at issue. Jones v. Tauber & Balser, P.C., 503 B.R. 162 (N.D. Ga. 2013).

Interlocutory injunction proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in entering an interlocutory injunction to preserve the status quo pending adjudication of the merits of the creditor's action against the debtors alleging breach of contract and fraudulent transfers because the debtors presented no evidence of harm from the creditor's delay in amending the creditor's complaint to seek an interlocutory injunction, and the delay resulted primarily from the debtors' concealment of the debtors' actions and obstruction of the creditor's efforts to discover the details; vague assertions of harm supported by no citation to evidence in the record are insufficient to sustain a defense of laches, and there is a balance between a plaintiff's knowing that a cause of action exists and that interim injunctive relief may be needed and sitting on the plaintiff's rights to the prejudice of the defendant. SRB Inv. Servs., LLLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in entering an interlocutory injunction to preserve the status quo pending adjudication of the merits of the creditor's action against the debtors alleging breach of contract and fraudulent transfers in violation of the Georgia Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (UFTA) (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., because foreclosing on collateral of uncertain remaining value, going through confirmation proceedings, and suing the insolvent debtors to reclaim the deficiency and then having to recover the fraudulently transferred assets to collect on the ensuing judgment was not an adequate remedy at law since it was not nearly as practical and as efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity enjoining further transfers temporarily so that the creditor could collect a final judgment; when a money judgment is likely to be uncollectible because a debtor has fraudulently moved the debtor's assets in an attempt to dissipate or conceal the assets from a creditor, Georgia law, both before and under the Georgia UFTA, gives the creditor the right to seek interlocutory relief by freezing the assets where the assets are. SRB Inv. Servs., LLLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in entering an interlocutory injunction to preserve the status quo pending adjudication of the merits of the creditor's action against the debtors alleging breach of contract and fraudulent transfers in violation of the Georgia Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (UFTA) (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., because at least seven statutory badges of fraud listed in the UFTA, O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(b), were implicated, and the creditor also presented evidence as a non-statutory badge of fraud of the debtors' pattern of maintaining just enough funds in certain accounts to satisfy the debtors' financial covenants at the end of each quarter and then transferring the funds away shortly thereafter; under the UFTA, O.C.G.A. § 18-22-77(a)(3)(A), the trial court was authorized to enter an interlocutory injunction against further disposition by the debtor or a transferee, or both, of the asset transferred or of other property. SRB Inv. Servs., LLLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

Summary judgment improper. — On a fraudulent transfer claim brought by the buyers of the assets of a fitness center, it was error to grant summary judgment to the sellers. There was evidence that about seven days after the closing, the sellers' corporation distributed the sales proceeds to the corporation's four shareholders and that this left the corporation with essentially no assets; furthermore, the buyers presented sufficient evidence on each of the elements of fraud so as to survive summary judgment on the buyer's fraud claim. Kilroy v. Alpharetta Fitness, Inc., 295 Ga. App. 274, 671 S.E.2d 312 (2008), cert. denied, Alpharetta Fitness, Inc., v. Kilroy, No. S09C0645, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 216 (Ga. 2009).

Based on evidence of the sale of judgment debtors' business to their long-time close friends and evidence that the friends were aware that the business owed money, a genuine issue of material fact remained as to whether the debtors transferred their assets with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud their creditor under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a)(1). Therefore, the trial court's grant of summary judgment was reversed. Abbott Oil Co. v. Rogers, 302 Ga. App. 439, 691 S.E.2d 561 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C1026, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 583 (Ga. 2010).

Bankruptcy court denied a Chapter 7 trustee's motion for summary judgment on the trustee's claim that transfers that were made by a mortgage company to an investor were avoidable under 11 U.S.C. § 544 and the Georgia Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74 et seq., because a person who owned the company used the company to operate a Ponzi scheme. The trustee had the burden of showing that there was no genuine issue of material fact, and there was a genuine dispute regarding whether the investor took the transfers in good faith, or gave reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfers; although a significant portion of the uncertainty in the evidence arose from the fact that the investor refused to respond to the trustee's requests for discovery, the trustee had done nothing more than highlight the investor's use of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Kerr v. Hart (In re Christou), No. 08-6420, 2010 Bankr. LEXIS 3432 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 23, 2010).

O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74 allows the avoidance of a transfer made without receiving reasonably equivalent value when the debtor was either engaged or about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction, or the debtor intended to incur or believed or reasonably should have believed that he or she would incur debts beyond his or her ability to pay as the debts became due. Scarver v. M. Abuhab Participacoes S.A. (In re Moskowitz), No. 10-6650-WLH, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 4800 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Nov. 28, 2011).

Trial court erred by granting summary judgment to a creditor because, under

O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75(b), the questioned real estate transfer involved the debtor purchasing the property for the debtor's mother because the debtor had the right to purchase the property and it was only deeded to the debtor briefly the same day, which transfer was not to satisfy an antecedent debt, thus, no fraudulent transfer occurred. Truelove v. Buckley, 318 Ga. App. 207, 733 S.E.2d 499 (2012).

Summary judgment was inappropriate as to a lender's claims under Georgia's Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., because the evidence was not undisputed, particularly given the evidence of the guarantor's optimistic efforts to secure additional investors and shore up the financials of the guarantor's businesses during the same approximate time frame. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp. v. Sowega Motors, Inc., No. (CDL), 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128854 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 11, 2012).

Trustee's avoidance action alleging fraudulent conveyance could not be resolved on summary judgment because, despite existence of several badges of fraud, the mere fact that the debtor thought the debtor was returning property that was not the debtors was sufficient to preclude avoiding transfers, and what the debtor believed or reasonably should have believed was genuine issues of material fact. Kelley v. Speciale (In re Gregg), No. 11-4047, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 3285 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. July 2, 2013).

Insufficient basis for actual fraud to go before jury. — Trustee's assertion of seven badges of fraud drawn from O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(b) and fraudulent transfer case law provided insufficient factual detail to give the court a sufficient basis in the record to allow the issue of actual fraud to go before a jury. Kipperman v. Onex Corp., 411 B.R. 805 (N.D. Ga. 2009).

Defenses. — Bankruptcy court rejected a Chapter 11 trustee's argument that investors who received payments from affiliated businesses that were accused of operating a Ponzi scheme did not give value for the payments and could not assert a defense under 11 U.S.C. § 548(c) or Georgia law against the trustee's action seeking recovery of those payments under 11 U.S.C. §§ 544(b) and 548(a)(1)(A) and (a)(1)(B), and Georgia law, as fraudulent transfers. The investors had a claim for the return of principal the investors invested, based on fraud, the investors gave value for payments the investors received up to the amount of the principal the investors invested because the payments satisfied their claim, and their right to keep the payments did not depend on whether the investments the investors made were characterized as debt or equity. In re Int'l Mgmt. Assocs., LLC, No. A06-62966-PWB, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 4240 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Dec. 1, 2009), aff'd 661 F.3d 623 (11th Cir. 2011) (Unpublished).

Statute mirrors Bankruptcy Code. — As with actual fraud under Georgia law, both O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74(a)(2)(B) and 18-2-75 substantially mirror the constructive fraud claims under the Bankruptcy Code. Pettie v. Bonertz (In re LendXFinancial, LLC), No. 11-05330-MGD, 2012 Bankr. LEXIS 1993 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Mar. 16, 2012).

Analysis same as under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(a). — O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a)(1) substantially mirrors 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code. The Georgia statutes are different in that a creditor may recover property up to four years after the transfer occurred under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-79. Pettie v. Bonertz (In re LendXFinancial, LLC), No. 11-05330-MGD, 2012 Bankr. LEXIS 1993 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Mar. 16, 2012).

18-2-75. Transfer or obligation voidable if incurred without receiving reasonably equivalent value.

(a) A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is voidable as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation and the debtor was insolvent at that time or the debtor became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation.

(b) A transfer made by a debtor is voidable as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made if the transfer was made to an insider for an antecedent debt, the debtor was insolvent at that time, and the insider had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent.

(c) If a creditor is a successor or assignee, a right of action under subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section is automatically assigned to such successor or assignee.

(d) Subject to subsection (b) of Code Section 18-2-72, a creditor making a claim for relief under subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section has the burden of proving the elements of the claim for relief by a preponderance of the evidence. (Code 1981, § 18-2-75, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, substituted “voidable” for “fraudulent” near the beginning of subsections

(a) and (b); and added subsections (c) and (d). See editor’s note under this article for applicability.

Transfer of property set aside. — Debtor’s transfer of property to the debtor’s daughter, without consideration, was properly set aside since the deed was recorded nearly 18 months after the deed was signed, recorded the day after the appellate court entered judgment on the case, the debtor continued to occupy the property without paying rent, and the debtor disposed of assets worth at least $500,000 in the seven months after the deed was recorded, leading to the debtor’s insolvency. Kent v. A.O. White, Jr., Consulting Eng’r, Inc., 279 Ga. App. 563, 631 S.E.2d 782 (2006).

After the debtor transferred funds to the debtor’s sister, who had ownership, dominion and control over the funds, the sister was a transferee under 11 U.S.C. § 550, and the funds were recoverable as a fraudulent conveyance under 11 U.S.C. § 544 and O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75. Ogier v. Braswell (In re Clark), 435 B.R. 753 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2009).

When an investor asserted fraudulent transfer and related claims against accounts in the names of the former wife and widow of a consultant who allegedly defrauded the investor, the claims survived a motion to dismiss because the investor: (1) stated viable claims; (2) did not have to anticipate affirmative defenses; and (3) did not admit such defenses. Speedway Motorsports, Inc. v. Pinnacle Bank, 315 Ga. App. 320, 727 S.E.2d 151 (2012).

Evidence that a corporation was insolvent at the time the corporation made payments in the amount of $248,367 to each of two principals, and that the corporation did not receive reasonably equivalent value for the payments, was sufficient to show that the payments were constructively fraudulent and could be recovered for the corporation’s bankruptcy estate under 11 U.S.C. § 544 and O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75; although the principals claimed that the payments were due on a loan the principals made to the corporation and that the principals returned some payments to the corporation’s accounts, there was no evidence supporting the principal’s claims. Anderson v. Patel (In re Diplomat Constr., Inc.), No. 11-5610, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 4303 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Aug. 26, 2013).

Reasonably equivalent value. — Debtor’s twice monthly $1833 payments to the defendant in exchange for regular, hotel managerial services did not constitute avoidable fraudulent transfers under O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74(a)(2)(B) and 18-2-75 because the defendant’s work for the debtor constituted reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the payments. Anderson v. Patel (In re Diplomat Constr., Inc.), No. 11-5611, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 4297 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Aug. 6, 2013).

Failure to offer evidence of value. — Transferees were not entitled to summary judgment on a Chapter 7 trustee’s constructive fraud claims under the Bankruptcy Code and Georgia law as the transferees failed to offer any evidence of the value of the collateral at issue and, thus, the trustee’s evidence created a question of fact. Howell v. Fulford (In re Southern Home & Ranch Supply, Inc.), 515 B.R. 699 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2014).

Accrual of action for fraudulent conveyance. — In determining when a cause of action accrued for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-32, it was necessary to ascertain the time when the plaintiff could first have maintained the plaintiff’s action to a successful result. The relevant date for determining the statute of limitations on a fraudulent conveyance claim, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74, 18-2-75, and 18-2-76, was the date that the debtor incurred the obligation to make the transfer. Kipperman v. Onex Corp., 411 B.R. 805 (N.D. Ga. 2009).

Claims not subject to arbitration. — When a trustee of a creditor trust under bankruptcy debtors’ confirmed plan alleged that providers of financial services to the debtors were the transferees of fraudulent transfers from the debtors under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75(a), the claims were not subject to arbitration under arbitration clauses in contracts between the providers and the debtors; the claims were not derived from the rights of the debtors under the contracts since the debtors were the transferors, and the trustee asserted the claims on behalf of the creditors. Cohen v. Ernst & Young, LLP (In re Friedman's, Inc.), 372 B.R. 530 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2007).

Summary judgment improper. — Trial court erred by granting summary judgment to a creditor because under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75(b), the questioned real estate transfer involved the debtor purchasing the property for the debtor's mother because the debtor had the right to purchase the property and the property was only deeded to the debtor briefly the same day, which transfer was not to satisfy an antecedent debt, thus, no fraudulent transfer occurred. Truelove v. Buckley, 318 Ga. App. 207, 733 S.E.2d 499 (2012).

Summary judgment was inappropriate as to a lender's claims under Georgia's Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., because the evidence was not undisputed, particularly given the evidence of the guarantor's optimistic efforts to secure additional investors and shore up the financials of the guarantor's businesses during the same approximate time frame. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp. v. Sowega Motors, Inc., No. (CDL), 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 128854 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 11, 2012).

Trustee's avoidance action alleging fraudulent conveyance could not be resolved on summary judgment because genuine issue of material fact existed with respect to the debtor's insolvency. Kelley v. Speciale (In re Gregg), No. 11-4047, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 3285 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. July 2, 2013).

Dispute over law firm's fees payable by debtor. — In a complaint seeking to recover pre-petition transfers made by a Chapter 11 debtor to a law firm, the law firm's motion for summary judgment was denied as there was a genuine dispute of material fact regarding whether the debtor failed to receive reasonably equivalent value for the transfers as required by either 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(B)(I) or O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75(a). The law firm contended that the firm's invoices demonstrated that the firm provided substantial legal services to the debtor in exchange for the payments the firm received, while the debtor's responsible officer contended that the descriptions of work in the invoices were too vague and cursory to evaluate whether the services constituted reasonably equivalent value. Davis v. McDermott Will & Emery LLP (In re Tom's Foods, Inc.), No. 07-4012, 2010 Bankr. LEXIS 3720 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. Oct. 20, 2010).

Obligation and payments thereon evaluated separately. — In a fraudulent conveyance action, the need to evaluate a debt separately from the payments thereon was evidenced by 11 U.S.C. § 548 and O.C.G.A. § 18-2-75(a), which permitted the obligation and the payments to be avoided separately or together. Watts v. Peachtree Tech. Partners, LLC (In re Palisades at West Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), No. 11-5183, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 3576 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 13, 2011).

Fraudulent transfer shown. — One million three hundred forty thousand dollars ($1,340,000) in payments made by the debtor to an insider, allegedly for a construction management fee, were avoidable because there was no evidence to support any reasonably equivalent value in excess of the $175,000 contract price since there was no evidence as to what the "extras" were, the cost of the "extras", or even a contractual basis for the extra charges. Watts v. MTC Dev., LLC (In re Palisades at W. Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), 501 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013).

Payments made by Chapter 7 debtor to an insider, allegedly for a construction management fee, were avoidable as a transfer made to an insider for an antecedent debt because the insider had reasonable cause to believe the debtor was insolvent at the time the payments were made, and, even under the insider's version of the facts, the payments were for antecedent debt. Watts v. MTC Dev., LLC (In re Palisades at W. Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), 501 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013).

Checks payable from a Chapter 7 debtor that were deposited in an insider's account were avoidable because there was no evidence that the debtor, which was insolvent at the time of the transfers, received any value as a result of the checks, nor any evidence that the insider used the funds to pay any valid expenses of the debtor. Watts v. MTC Dev., LLC (In re Palisades at W. Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), 501 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013).

Checks payable from a Chapter 7 debtor that were deposited in an insider's account were avoidable because the checks were on account of antecedent debt. Watts v. MTC Dev., LLC (In re Palisades at W. Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), 501 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013).

Although transfers by a Chapter 7 debtor to insiders could not be avoided because the debtor received reasonably equivalent value, the transfers were nonetheless avoidable because they were made on account of antecedent debt at a time when the debtor was insolvent. Watts v. MTC Dev., LLC (In re Palisades at W. Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), 501 B.R. 896 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013).

Actual fraud was adequately pled by alleging badges of fraud sufficient to infer the fraudulent nature of transfers to insiders; moreover, insolvency resulting in constructive fraud also was adequately pled. Ralls Corp. v. Huerfano River Wind, LLC, 27 F. Supp. 3d 1303 (N.D. Ga. 2014).

18-2-76. When transfer made.

For the purposes of this article:

(1) A transfer is made:

(A) With respect to an asset that is real property other than a fixture, but including the interest of a seller or purchaser under a contract for the sale of the asset, when the transfer is so far perfected that a good faith purchaser of the asset from the debtor against whom applicable law permits the transfer to be perfected cannot acquire an interest in the asset that is superior to the interest of the transferee; and

(B) With respect to an asset that is not real property or that is a fixture, when the transfer is so far perfected that a creditor on a simple contract cannot acquire a judicial lien otherwise than under this article that is superior to the interest of the transferee;

(2) If applicable law permits the transfer to be perfected as provided in paragraph (1) of this Code section and the transfer is not so perfected before the commencement of an action for relief under this article, the transfer is deemed made immediately before the commencement of the action;

(3) If applicable law does not permit the transfer to be perfected as provided in paragraph (1) of this Code section, the transfer is made when it becomes effective between the debtor and the transferee;

(4) A transfer is not made until the debtor has acquired rights in the asset transferred; and

(5) An obligation is incurred:

(A) If oral, when it becomes effective between the parties; or

(B) If evidenced by a record, when the record signed by the obligor is delivered to or for the benefit of the obligee. (Code 1981, § 18-2-76, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, substituted “record, when the record signed” for “writing, when the writing executed” in subparagraph (5)(B). See editor’s note under this article for applicability.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Accrual of action for fraudulent conveyance. — In determining when a cause of action accrued for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-32, it was necessary to ascertain the time when the plaintiff could first have maintained the plaintiff’s action to a successful result. The relevant date for determining the statute of limitations on a fraudulent conveyance claim, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74, 18-2-75, and 18-2-76, was the date that the debtor incurred the obligation to make the transfer. Kipperman v. Onex Corp., 411 B.R. 805 (N.D. Ga. 2009).

18-2-77. Relief for creditor against fraudulent transfer or obligation.

(a) In an action for relief against a transfer or obligation under this article, a creditor, subject to the limitations in Code Section 18-2-78, may obtain:

(1) Avoidance of the transfer or obligation to the extent necessary to satisfy the creditor’s claim;

(2) An attachment or other provisional remedy against the asset transferred or other property of the transferee in accordance with the procedure prescribed by Chapter 3 of this title; and

(3) Subject to applicable principles of equity and in accordance with applicable rules of civil procedure:

(A) An injunction against further disposition by the debtor or a transferee, or both, of the asset transferred or of other property;

(B) Appointment of a receiver to take charge of the asset transferred or of other property of the transferee; or

(C) Any other relief the circumstances may require.

(b) If a creditor has obtained a judgment on a claim against the debtor, the creditor, if the court so orders, may levy execution on the asset transferred or its proceeds. (Code 1981, § 18-2-77, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, added “and” at the end of paragraph (a)(2). See editor’s note under this article for applicability.

Pleadings adequate for fraud. — Actual fraud was adequately pled by alleging badges of fraud sufficient to infer the fraudulent nature of transfers to insiders; moreover, insolvency resulting in constructive fraud also was adequately pled. Ralls Corp. v. Huerfano River Wind, LLC, 27 F. Supp. 3d 1303 (N.D. Ga. 2014).

Claims survived motion to dismiss. — When an investor asserted fraudulent transfer and related claims against accounts in the names of the former wife and widow of a consultant who allegedly defrauded the investor, the claims survived a motion to dismiss because the investor: (1) stated viable claims; (2) did not have to anticipate affirmative defenses; and (3) did not admit such defenses. Speedway Motorsports, Inc. v. Pinnacle Bank, 315 Ga. App. 320, 727 S.E.2d 151 (2012).

Transfer prior to death. — Although the transfer of a house was accompanied by some badges of fraud, the trial court abused the court’s discretion in enjoining further disposition of the house, pending adjudication of the merits of wrongful death and fraudulent transfer claims since the transferor gave the house to the transferor’s three minor grandchildren in Florida three months before the transferor murdered the decedent. Bishop

v. Patton, 288 Ga. 600, 706 S.E.2d 634, overruled on other grounds by SRB Inv. Servs., LLLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

Interlocutory injunction proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in entering an interlocutory injunction to preserve the status quo pending adjudication of the merits of the creditor’s action against the debtors alleging breach of contract and fraudulent transfers in violation of the Georgia Uniform Fraudulent Transfers Act (UFTA), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-70 et seq., because at least seven statutory badges of fraud listed in the UFTA (now Uniform Voidable Transactions Act), O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(b), were implicated, and the creditor also presented evidence as a non-statutory badge of fraud of the debtors’ pattern of maintaining just enough funds in certain accounts to satisfy the debtors’ financial covenants at the end of each quarter and then transferring the funds away shortly thereafter; under the UFTA, O.C.G.A. § 18-22-77(a)(3)(A), the trial court was authorized to enter an interlocutory injunction against further disposition by the debtor or a transferee, or both, of the asset transferred or of other property. SRB Inv. Servs., LLLP v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 289 Ga. 1, 709 S.E.2d 267 (2011).

18-2-78. Conditions for voidability of transfer or obligation; judgment.

(a) A transfer or obligation is not voidable under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 18-2-74 against a person who took in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value or against any subsequent transferee or obligee.

(b) To the extent a transfer is avoidable in an action by a creditor under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 18-2-77, the following rules apply:

(1) Except as otherwise provided in this Code section, the creditor may recover judgment for the value of the asset transferred, as adjusted under subsection (c) of this Code section, or the amount necessary to satisfy the creditor's claim, whichever is less. The judgment may be entered against:

(A) The first transferee of the asset or the person for whose benefit the transfer was made; or

(B) An immediate or mediate transferee of the first transferee, other than:

(i) A good faith transferee who took for value; or

(ii) An immediate or mediate good faith transferee of a person described in division (i) of this subparagraph.

(2) Recovery pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) or subsection (b) of Code Section 18-2-77 of or from the asset transferred or its proceeds, by levy or otherwise, is available only against a person described in paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(c) If the judgment under subsection (b) of this Code section is based upon the value of the asset transferred, the judgment must be for an amount equal to the value of the asset at the time of the transfer, subject to adjustment as the equities may require.

(d) Notwithstanding voidability of a transfer or an obligation under this article, a good faith transferee or obligee is entitled, to the extent of the value given the debtor for the transfer or obligation, to:

(1) A lien on or a right to retain any interest in the asset transferred;

(2) Enforcement of any obligation incurred; or

(3) A reduction in the amount of the liability on the judgment.

(e) A transfer is not voidable under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 18-2-74 or Code Section 18-2-75 if the transfer results from:

(1) Termination of a lease upon default by the debtor when the termination is pursuant to the lease and applicable law; or

(2) Enforcement of a security interest in compliance with Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code, other than acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures.

(f) A transfer is not voidable under subsection (b) of Code Section 18-2-75:

(1) To the extent the insider gave new value to or for the benefit of the debtor after the transfer was made unless the new value was secured by a valid lien;

(2) If made in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the insider; or

(3) If made pursuant to a good faith effort to rehabilitate the debtor and the transfer secured the present value given for that purpose as well as an antecedent debt of the debtor.

(g) The following rules determine the burden of proving matters referred to in this Code section:

(1) A party that seeks to invoke subsection (a), (d), (e), or (f) of this Code section has the burden of proving the applicability of that subsection;

(2) Except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (3) and (4) of this subsection, the creditor has the burden of proving each applicable element of subsection (b) or (c) of this Code section;

(3) The transferee has the burden of proving the applicability to the transferee of subparagraph (b) (1) (B) of this Code section; and

(4) A party that seeks adjustment under subsection (c) of this Code section has the burden of proving the adjustment.

(h) The standard of proof required to establish matters referred to in this Code section is preponderance of the evidence. (Code 1981, § 18-2-78, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, rewrote subsection (b); added “, other than acceptance of collateral in full or partial satisfaction of the obligation it secures” to the end of paragraph (e)(2); and added subsections (g) and (h). See editor’s note under this article for applicability.

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions decisions under former Code 1933, § 28-202 and former § 18-2-23 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Basis of right to set aside fraudulent transfers. — Former Code 1933, §§ 28-101, 28-102, 28-201 and 28-202 provided creditors with a right to set aside fraudulent transfers, and this remedy was available to any creditor at time of transfer who thereafter reduced their claim to a judgment lien. United States v. Hickox, 356 F.2d 969 (5th Cir. 1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 28-202).

Construction in pari materia with other statutes. — Former Civil Code 1910, §§ 3224 and 3225, being in pari materia, were to be construed together. Warren v. Citizens Nat'l Bank, 145 Ga. 503, 89 S.E. 520 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3225).

Fraudulent conveyance statute, former §§ 18-2-22 and 18-2-23 should be considered in pari materia. FDIC v. United States, 654 F. Supp. 794 (N.D. Ga. 1986) (decided under former § 18-2-23).

One induced to sell goods to a bankrupt by fraud cannot reclaim from trustee. In re Whatley Bros., 199 F. 326 (N.D. Ga. 1912) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3225).

Impoundment of unpaid purchase money from sale. — If the fraudulent grantee sells to an innocent purchaser, any unpaid purchase money due on such sale will be impounded as an equitable asset of the debtor for the distribution to the debtor's creditors. Beasley v. Smith, 144 Ga. 377, 87 S.E. 293 (1915) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 3225).

Suspicion alone insufficient. — Contrary to the trial court's conclusion, reasonable grounds for suspicion alone do not suffice to render a subsequent purchaser's title void, and when the buyer acquired the automobile for value, and had no notice that the seller's title was obtained through fraud, the buyer received good title. Hall v. Hidy, 263 Ga. 422, 435 S.E.2d 215 (1993) (decided under former § 18-2-23).

Charge that grounds to suspect fraud in grantor's acquisition vitiates conveyance. — It was error to charge that purchaser from one who is fraudulent grantee takes no title as against creditors if the individual has grounds to reasonably suspect fraud in conveyance to the grantor. Hinkle v. James Smith & Son, 133 Ga. 255, 65 S.E. 427 (1909) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 2695).

Protection of trustee and contingent beneficiary. — When it was clearly evident that both the trustee and the contingent beneficiary of a trust had reasonable grounds to suspect that the purpose of the second security deed against certain property and the assignment thereof to the trust, at least in part, was done with the intent of the assignor to delay or defraud creditors in violation of former § 18-2-22(2), neither the trustee nor the beneficiary was a subsequent purchaser entitled to the protections of former § 18-2-23. FDIC v. United States, 654 F. Supp. 794 (N.D. Ga. 1986) (decided under former § 18-2-23).

Reasonably equivalent value. — Bankruptcy court rejected a Chapter 11 trustee's argument that investors who received payments from affiliated businesses that were accused of operating a Ponzi scheme did not give value for the payments and could not assert a defense under 11 U.S.C. § 548(c) or Georgia law against the trustee's action seeking recovery of those payments under 11 U.S.C. §§ 544(b) and 548(a)(1)(A) and (a)(1)(B), and Georgia law, as fraudulent transfers. The investors had a claim for the return of principal the investors invested, based on fraud, the investors gave value for payments the investors received up to the amount of the principal the investors invested because the payments satisfied their claim, and their right to keep the payments did not depend on whether the investments the investors made were characterized as debt or equity. In re Int'l Mgmt. Assocs., LLC, No. A06-62966-PWB, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 4240 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Dec. 1, 2009), aff'd 661 F.3d 623 (11th Cir. 2011) (Unpublished).

When an investor asserted a fraudulent transfer claim against a bank to which a consultant who allegedly defrauded the investor made a down payment on a house, it was error to dismiss the claim based on the bank's assertion that the bank, under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a)(1), took the consultant's funds in good faith and for a reasonably equivalent value because: (1) the investor's complaint did not admit or otherwise demonstrate such an affirmative defense; and (2) the investor had no obligation to anticipate the affirmative defense. Speedway Motorsports, Inc. v. Pinnacle Bank, 315 Ga. App. 320, 727 S.E.2d 151 (2012).

Transfers were avoidable. — There was no showing of transferees' good faith in fraudulent transfers from bankruptcy debtors since the lack of information from the debtors, the refusal of the debtors to allow transferees to conduct due diligence, and the usurious interest paid by the debtors clearly indicated that the transactions were fraudulent; thus, the transfers from bankruptcy debtors were avoidable. Kerr v. Audio Answers, Inc. (In re Christou), No. 06-68251-MHM, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 3291 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 28, 2009).

Summary judgment improper. — Based on evidence of the sale of judgment debtors' business to their long-time close friends and evidence that the friends were aware that the business owed money, a genuine issue of material fact remained as to whether the debtors transferred their assets with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud their creditor under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-74(a)(1). Therefore, the trial court's grant of summary judgment was reversed. Abbott Oil Co. v. Rogers, 302 Ga.

App. 439, 691 S.E.2d 561 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C1026, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 583 (Ga. 2010).

Creditor failed to show good faith under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-78 in receiving fraudulent transfers from a bankruptcy debtor as returns on the creditor's investments in the debtor's Ponzi scheme, and thus the creditor was not entitled to summary judgment; the creditor was an educated and sophisticated businessman and, despite the creditor's assertion that the creditor had no reason to doubt the debtor who previously brokered mortgages for the creditor, the facts that the creditor invested substantial funds, received no promissory notes, and was paid no interest were sufficient to indicate that the creditor should have been suspicious of the nature of the transactions. 18-2-79. Time for commencement of action.

A cause of action with respect to a fraudulent transfer or obligation under this article is extinguished unless action is brought:

(1) Under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 18-2-74, within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred or, if later, within one year after the transfer or obligation was or could reasonably have been discovered by the claimant;

(2) Under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of Code Section 18-2-74 or subsection (a) of Code Section 18-2-75, within four years after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred; or

(3) Under subsection (b) of Code Section 18-2-75, within one year after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred. (Code 1981, § 18-2-79, enacted by Ga. L. 2002, p. 141, § 3; Ga. L. 2015, p. 996, § 4A-1/SB 65.)

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former § 18-2-22 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Limitations on actions. — U.S. Bankruptcy Court determined appropriate limitations periods for claims for alleged fraudulent conveyances of real property (seven years) and personal property (four years) by analogy to adverse possession and conversion, respectively, in the absence of an express limitations period in former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22. Broadfoot v. Hunerwadel (In re Dulock), 282 B.R. 54 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22).

Trial court improperly granted summary judgment to judgment debtors on a judgment creditor's claim under O.C.G.A. § 14-8-28 upon finding that the limitations period under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-79 barred the claim as there was no legal basis to conclude that the limitation period in § 18-2-79 was applicable to the creditor's claim. Morris v. Nexus Real Estate Mortg. & Inv. Co., 296 Ga. App. 477, 675 S.E.2d 511 (2009).

Chapter 7 trustee was not barred by the statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 18-2-79 or under 11 U.S.C. § 546 from pursuing a cause of action under 11 U.S.C. § 544 because the debtor filed the debtor's petition before the state statute of limitations expired, but was barred from pursuing avoidance under 11 U.S.C. § 548 of any transfer occurring prior to two years before the petition was filed. Watts v. Peachtree Tech. Partners, LLC (In re Palisades at West Paces Imaging Ctr., LLC), No. 11-5183, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 3576 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 13, 2011).

As an administrator's fraudulent conveyance claims were time-barred under O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74(a)(1) and 18-2-79(1), a limited liability company's (LLC) failure to respond to the administrator's requests for admissions was of no consequence and the trial court's denial of summary judgment to the LLC was improper. Huggins v. Powell, 315 Ga. App. 599, 726 S.E.2d 730 (2012).

Administrator's fraudulent conveyance claims against group one were time-barred under O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-74(a)(1) and 18-2-79(1), even though the claim was not time-barred under the limitations period in effect when the claim accrued, as application of § 18-2-79, a procedural law in effect at the time the suit was filed, did not violate the constitutional prohibition against retroactive laws under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X; the administrator also failed to avail the administrator of the one-year statute of limitation effective upon discovery of the alleged fraud. Huggins v. Powell, 315 Ga. App. 599, 726 S.E.2d 730 (2012).

Action to set aside fraudulent transfer timely filed. — Fraudulent transfer occurred on the date the deed was recorded, even though the deed was signed nearly 18 months earlier, and the creditor timely filed the creditor's complaint and action to set aside the fraudulent transfer approximately six months before the four-year statute of limitation would have run. Kent v. A.O. White, Jr., Consulting Eng'r, Inc., 279 Ga. App. 563, 631 S.E.2d 782 (2006).

Fraudulent transfer claim was time-barred. — Former director's puta-tive transferee met the transferee's burden for summary judgment purposes of asserting that a fraudulent transfer claim was time-barred, but the creditor failed to point to specific evidence that gave rise to a triable issue with respect to whether the limitation period did not bar the claim. Am. Nat'l Holding Corp. v. EMM Credit, LLC, 323 Ga. App. 655, 748 S.E.2d 683 (2013).

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, redesignated former Code Section 18-2-80 as present Code Section 18-2-82; deleted the subsection (a) designation; and deleted former subsection (b), which read: “The provisions of this article do not create a cause of action for a governmental entity or its agent or assignee with respect to a transaction which may otherwise constitute a fraudulent transfer or obligation under this article if the transaction complies with the applicable state and federal laws concerning transfers of property in the determination of eligibility for public benefits.” See editor’s note under this article for applicability.

18-2-85. Transfers to charitable organizations; statute of limitations.

(b) A transfer made to a charitable organization shall be considered voidable only if it is established that a voidable transfer has occurred as described in Code Section 18-2-74 or 18-2-75, and such charitable organization had actual or constructive knowledge of the voidable nature of the transfer.

fraudulent transfer has occurred as described in Code Section 18-2-74 or 18-2-75, and such charitable organization had knowledge of the fraudulent nature of the transfer.”; and inserted “voidable” near the beginning of subsection (c). See editor’s note under this article for applicability.

ANALYSIS

- GENERAL CONSIDERATION
- NONRESIDENT DEBTORS
- REMOVAL OF DOMICILE
- DEBTOR’S CONCEALMENT
- REMOVAL OF PROPERTY

General Consideration

Construction of attachment law. — Attachment proceedings were unknown at common law and are to be strictly construed, especially as to nonresident debtors. Mills v. Findlay, 14 Ga. 230 (1853).

Rights of out-of-state creditors. — In absence of statute or decision, the right to proceed by attachment is not limited to citizens or residents of the state, and “it is generally immaterial that the attaching creditor is a nonresident.” Harmon v. Wiggins, 48 Ga. App. 469, 172 S.E. 847 (1934).

Debtor removing property out of state. — Creditor’s rights under paragraph (6) of former Civil Code 1910, § 5055 were not affected by the fact that the debtor has other property which might be subjected to the payment of the debtor’s debts. Bush v. Dean, 17 Ga. App. 364, 86 S.E. 1075 (1915).

Absent allegations of property in Georgia, there was no basis for the issuance of a writ of attachment, although the defendants resided outside of Georgia. Ralls Corp. v. Huerfano River Wind, LLC, 27 F. Supp. 3d 1303 (N.D. Ga. 2014).

Plaintiff in attachment must prove demand before taking a judgment against attached property, although declaration in attachment sets forth demand in orderly and distinct paragraphs, consecutively numbered. Walden v. Barwick, 72 Ga. App. 508, 34 S.E.2d 551 (1945).

Remedy when in personam jurisdiction unavailable. — When no jurisdiction is obtained over the debtor’s person, the remedy is a proceeding in rem, in that it proceeds against property in custody of court and the judgment binds such property only; but when jurisdiction of debtor's person is obtained, either by personal service or appearance, proceeding is ordinarily in personam, and a personal judgment is rendered without regard to the attachment. Harmon v. Wiggins, 48 Ga. App. 469, 172 S.E. 847 (1934).

Applicability to corporate debtors.

— Corporation is an artificial person, and provisions of former Code 1933, § 8-101 were applicable to corporate debtor as well as to individual debtors. Lawrence v. Lee's Dep't Store, 48 Ga. App. 271, 172 S.E. 471 (1934).

Effect of codefendant. — Defendant in attachment can be garnished as to a codefendant's property or money in the codefendant's hands. Kibbler v. James, 75 Ga. App. 852, 44 S.E.2d 910 (1947).

Applicability of § 18-3-4. — Provisions of former Code 1933, § 8-104 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-3-4) were applicable to attachments under former Code 1933, § 8-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-3-1). Threlkeld v. Whitehead, 95 Ga. App. 378, 98 S.E.2d 76 (1957).

Invocation of equitable remedies.

— Declaration in attachment may invoke equitable remedies and relief under former Civil Code 1910, § 5406 (see now O.C.G.A. § 23-3-1). Coral Gables Corp. v. Hamilton, 168 Ga. 182, 147 S.E. 494 (1929).

S.E. 727 (1934); Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga. 461, 192 S.E. 191 (1937); Lawrence v. Lawrence, 196 Ga. 204, 26 S.E.2d 283 (1943); Irwin v. Griffin, 202 Ga. 456, 43 S.E.2d 687 (1947); Smith v. R.F. Brodegaard & Co., 77 Ga. App. 661, 49 S.E.2d 500 (1948); Tennessee-Virginia Constr. Co. v. Willingham, 115 Ga. App. 90, 153 S.E.2d 627 (1967); Multiple Realty, Inc. v. Walker, 119 Ga. American Credit Co.*, 581 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1978); Renfro Corp. v. McLarty Indus., Inc., 2 Bankr. 68 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1979).

Nonresident DebtorsEffect of nature of money demand.

— Attachment may issue when debtor resides out of state in all cases of money demands, whether arising ex contractu or ex delicto. Benefield v. Radiator Specialty Co., 116 Ga. App. 588, 158 S.E.2d 423 (1967).

Fact of nonresidence. — Mere fact of nonresidence subjects one to attachment for one's debts under former Code 1873, § 3264. Charles v. Foster, 56 Ga. 612 (1876).

Fact of nonresidence subjects one to attachment, provided nonresidence is distinctly averred. DeLeon v. Heller, Hirsch & Co., 77 Ga. 740 (1886); Wilson v. Park View Sanitarium, 135 Ga. 471, 69 S.E. 741 (1910).

Applicability of paragraph (2).

— Paragraph (2) of former Code 1873, § 3264 was applicable to nonresident debtor passing through county with the debtor's goods. Johnson v. Lowry, 47 Ga. 560, 15 Am. R. 655 (1873).

Paragraph (2) of former Civil Code 1855, § 4510 was applicable to member of partnership failing to pay that partner's share of debts in dissolution; thus, other partner may institute attachment proceeding. Tucker v. Murphey, 114 Ga. 662, 40 S.E. 836 (1902).

Nonresident lessee of domestic corporation is subject to attachment. Breed v. Mitchell, 48 Ga. 533 (1873).

Proof under paragraph (2). — Acts and intentions of defendant at time of attachment under paragraph (2) of former Code 1863, § 3188 must be shown. Louis Stix & Co. v. S. Pump & Co., 36 Ga. 526 (1867); Nicols v. Ward, 27 Ga. App. 501, 108 S.E. 832 (1921).

When intent to remove exists, chattel mortgage may be foreclosed prior to maturity. Perryman v. Pope, 102 Ga. 502, 31 S.E. 37 (1897).

Recitation as to joint indebtedness in affidavit. — When both joint-debtors are nonresidents, affidavit of attachment need not recite that indebtedness is joint. Dobbs v. Justices of Inferior Court, 17 Ga. 624 (1855).

Attachment against nonresident, executed by levy. — In case of attachment against nonresident debtor executed by levy, jurisdiction of a court of this state attaches by virtue of the seizure of property of such nonresident, and when the officer executing the levy seizes certain property as property of such nonresident debtor, and so makes the debtor's return to the court, it acquires such jurisdiction as will enable the court to proceed to judgment subjecting the debtor's interest in the property to the payment of the debt. Harmon v. Wiggins, 48 Ga. App. 469, 172 S.E. 847 (1934).

Only lien foreclosed in attachment against nonresident is that created by seizure of the property. Owens v. Atlanta Trust & Banking Co., 119 Ga. 924, 47 S.E. 215 (1904).

Plaintiff without perfect right to sue cannot proceed in attachment against nonresident but must resort to equity. Tennessee Fertilizer Co. v. Hand, 147 Ga. 588, 95 S.E. 81 (1918).

Removal of Domicile

When debtor is about to move beyond limits of county, attachment may issue against the debtor. Lawrence v. Lee's Dep't Store, 48 Ga. App. 271, 172 S.E. 471 (1934).

Paragraph (2) referred to removal of domicile of debtor, and not merely removal of debtor property from county of debtor domicile. This ground differs from that set forth in paragraph (6) which contemplated removal of property "beyond the limits" of the state. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Lawrence, 184 Ga. 83, 190 S.E. 346 (1937).

Whether one is about to remove must be shown by acts and conduct. — Whether one is about to remove is a matter of intent, but it must be shown by acts and conduct. Patne v. Oliver, 96 Ga. App. 644, 101 S.E.2d 154 (1957).

Defendants commencing removal pending bill in equity. — When, pending a bill in equity to collect indebtedness, defendants removed out of state and were proceeding to remove all of the defendants' property, attachment would lie in favor of the complainant. Epping v. Aiken, 71 Ga. 600 (1883).

Debtor's Concealment

Affidavit to obtain attachment against partnership, alleging that the partnership "conceal themselves" is sufficient. Guckenheimer & Son v. Day & Higgs, 74 Ga. 1 (1884).

Removal of Property

Executor de son tort, removing assets of deceased from county, is liable to be attached, and the assets levied on. Cox v. Felder, 36 Ga. 597 (1867).

Proof of removal under paragraph (6). — Fact that one was causing something to be done under paragraph (6) was more than a matter of intent and some overt preparatory act at least should be taken to carry burden of proving this fact. Patne v. Oliver, 96 Ga. App. 644, 101 S.E.2d 154 (1957).

Burden of proving debtor removing "his property." — Sixth ground enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 18-3-1 requires a showing that the defendant "is causing his property" to be removed, which places the burden upon the plaintiff to show the alleged debtor was removing "his property." Trax, Inc. v. Pentagon Aero-Marine Corp., 162 Ga. App. 276, 290 S.E.2d 196 (1982).

18-3-2. Right to seek attachment on money demands generally.

In all cases of money demands, whether arising ex contractu or ex delicto, the plaintiff shall have the right to seek attachment when the defendant places himself in such situation as will authorize a plaintiff to seek attachment. (Ga. L. 1857, p. 23, § 1; Code 1863, § 3199; Code 1868, § 3210; Code 1873, § 3278; Code 1882, § 3278; Civil Code 1895, § 4524; Civil Code 1910, § 5069; Code 1933, § 8-102.)

Extent of judgment creditor's lien. — Lien of judgment creditor is not a lien acquired by contract, but is given by law;

consequently, a lienor is not in the position of a bona fide purchaser, and a lien extends only to property levied upon which actually belongs to the defendant in attachment. Parker v. Boyd, 208 Ga. 829, 69 S.E.2d 760 (1952).

18-3-4. Issuance of attachment after action has been commenced; effect of judgment on action still pending.

In all cases where the plaintiff has commenced an action for the recovery of a debt and the defendant, during the pendency of such action, shall become subject to attachment, the plaintiff may have an attachment against the defendant; and all the proceedings in relation to the same shall be as prescribed in relation to attachments where no action is pending. A satisfaction of the judgment in the common-law action shall satisfy the judgment in attachment, and a satisfaction of the judgment in attachment shall satisfy the judgment in the common-law action. ing Georgia's long arm statute, prejudgment attachment and habeas corpus, with respect to judicial developments in practice and procedure in the fifth circuit, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 925 (1979).

Suit in attachment is separate and distinct from a common law action; and failure to number and document them separately is error on part of clerk. Dollar v. Fred W. Amend Co., 184 Ga. 432, 191 S.E. 696 (1937).

Former Code 1933, § 8-104 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-3-4) was applicable to attachments under former Code 1933, § 8-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-3-1). Threlkeld v. Whitehead, 95 Ga. App. 378, 98 S.E.2d 76 (1957).

Pending action with bail in superior court, plaintiff may take out attachment on same demand returnable to inferior court. Wood v. Carter, 29 Ga. 580 (1859).

Filing of declaration claiming damages was commencement of action for purposes of former Code 1863, § 3201 (see now O.C.G.A. § 18-3-4), though the defendant was not yet served. Graves v. Strozier, 37 Ga. 32 (1867).

Effect upon pending action of payment of costs of attachment. — When attachment is sued out against the defendant in a pending common-law action, payment by the defendant to the sheriff of the principal, interest, and costs upon the attachment in order to relieve the defendant's property from seizure does not discharge the defendant from any additional liability to which the defendant might have been subject in the original action. Johnson & Son v. Friedman-Shelby Shoe Co., 15 Ga. App. 561, 83 S.E. 969 (1914).

18-3-5. Issuance against administrator or executor removing or about to remove property of deceased person; entry of final judgment against administrator or executor.

Process of attachment may issue against an administrator of an estate or the executor of the last will and testament of any deceased person, as in other cases, when the administrator or executor actually removes or is about to remove the property of the deceased person outside the limits of any county, provided that final judgment shall not be entered against such administrator or executor until after the expiration of two years from the granting of letters of administration or letters testamentary, as the case may be. (Ga. L. 1857, p. 24, § 1; Code 1863, § 3199; Code 1868, § 3210; Code 1873, § 3277; Code 1882, § 3277; Civil Code 1895, § 4523; Civil Code 1910, § 5068; Code 1933, § 8-105.)

Nature of removal for which attachment authorized. — Former Code 1868, § 3210 did not authorize attachment on ground that the executor or administrator was personally removing, but rather on ground that the executor or administrator is actually removing or about to remove property of the estate. Holloway v. Chiles, 40 Ga. 346 (1869).

Twelve-month exemption from suit allowed executors and administrators does not prevent levy of attachment against property of estate in hands of administrator or executor. Hartley v. Hartley, 173 Ga. 710, 161 S.E. 358 (1931).

Proviso that final judgment not be entered for two years from commencement of administration. — Proviso in former Civil Code 1910, § 5068 that final judgment shall not be entered until expiration of two years from granting of letters of administration serves as a quasi-injunction to restrain administration of property upon which attachment has been levied until determination of issues which may be raised in attachment case. Hartley v. Hartley, 173 Ga. 710, 161 S.E. 358 (1931).

Judgment in attachment will not raise priority of debt owed creditor of intestate in proceeding to marshal assets. Wooten v. Hartley, 186 Ga. 639, 198 S.E. 750 (1838).

18-3-6. Issuance against joint contractors or partners.

In cases of joint contractors and partners, where any one of them shall render himself liable to attachment according to law, an attachment may issue against him, upon the plaintiff, his agent, or his attorney at law complying with this article. The proceeding against such joint contractor or partner shall be in all respects as in other cases of attachment, except that such attachment shall be levied only upon the separate property of such joint contractor or partner. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Exception to rule that joint obligors are necessary parties. — Former Civil Code 1910, § 5067 provided an exception to rule that joint obligors are all necessary parties to suit on the obligation if within the jurisdiction of the court. Clark v. Maddox, 41 Ga. App. 807, 154 S.E. 728 (1930).

In attachment against one member of partnership, the declaration need not be against all partners. Connon v. Dunlap, 64 Ga. 680 (1880).

Interest of one partner in partnership property was not subject to levy and sale under attachment; it could only be reached at law by process of gar-nishment. J.A. Holifield & Co. v. White, 52 Ga. 567 (1874) (decided prior to repeal of § 14-8-74 by Ga. L. 1984, p. 1439).

18-3-7. Issuance against nonresident corporations.

Attachments may issue against nonresident corporations transacting business within the state under the same rules and regulations as are prescribed in relation to issuing attachments and garnishments in other cases. (Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 25, § 33; Code 1863, § 3202; Code 1868, § 3213; Code 1873, § 3281; Code 1882, § 3281; Civil Code 1895, § 4527; Civil Code 1910, § 5072; Code 1933, § 8-108.)

This statute was cumulative and not restrictive of other attachment statutes; and nonresident corporation having property in this state is subject to attachment whether or not the corporation transacts business here. Pacific Selling Co. v. Albright-Prior Co., 3 Ga. App. 143, 59 S.E. 468 (1907).

Construction of attachment law. — Attachment was unknown at common law, and should be strictly construed, especially as to nonresident debtors. Mitchell v. Union Bag & Paper Corp., 75 Ga. App. 15, 42 S.E.2d 137 (1947).

Attachment against foreign corporation, also being sued in this state. — Fact that Georgia court may have personal jurisdiction over a corporation does not mean it is not subject also to attachment, for this statute was intended to authorize attachment against a foreign corporation, even though the corporation might be sued in Georgia. Image Mills, Inc. v. Vora, 146 Ga. App. 196, 245 S.E.2d 882 (1978) (see O.C.G.A. § 18-3-7).

18-3-9. Requirement of application for order authorizing issuance of writ of attachment prior to entry of judgment; contents of application for writ; procedure for granting or denial of issuance of writ.

(a) When the plaintiff contends one or more of the grounds set forth in Code Section 18-3-1 exist, prior to obtaining judgment against the defendant, the plaintiff may make application to a judge of any court of record, other than the probate court, in the county of the residence of the defendant, if known, and, if not known, in the county wherein the property sought to be attached is located, for an order authorizing issuance of a writ of attachment. The application shall be made in writing, under oath, and shall set forth the specific facts that show the existence of one or more of such grounds, the basis and nature of the claim, and the amount of indebtedness claimed therein by the plaintiff.

(b) Upon presentation of plaintiff's sworn application for a writ of attachment, it shall be the duty of the judge to inquire into the facts alleged, going beyond mere conclusions of fact alleged by the plaintiff and clearly setting forth the facts entitling the creditor to a writ of attachment as set forth in Code Section 18-3-1. Upon consideration of the inquiry, the judge shall have the discretion to grant or deny the issuance of a writ of attachment. Any order by a judge granting the issuance of a writ of attachment shall be subject to approval of a bond by the clerk of the court, pursuant to Code Section 18-3-10, prior to filing of the writ of attachment. 18-3-10. Bond requirements generally.

No writ of attachment shall issue unless accompanied by a bond with good security, conditioned to pay the defendant all costs and damages that he may sustain in consequence of the issuance of the writ of attachment in the event that the amount claimed to be due was not due, that no lawful ground for issuance of the attachment existed, or that the property sought to be attached was not subject to attachment. The bond shall be in a sum equal to twice the amount claimed due in the plaintiff's application. The bond shall be presented to the clerk of the court where the application provided for in Code Section 18-3-9 is sought to be filed for approval by such clerk prior to filing of the writ of attachment. ANALYSIS

FAILURE TO GIVE ATTACHMENT BOND

LIABILITY ON ATTACHMENT BOND

RECOVERY ON ATTACHMENT BOND

Requirements of former Code 1933, § 8-111 were mandatory and prerequisite to issuance of attachment. Powell v. Stinson's Garage, Inc., 97 Ga. App. 613, 103 S.E.2d 580 (1958).

Principal cannot be surety to the principal's own bond. Bonds v. Powl, 140 Ga. App. 140, 230 S.E.2d 133 (1976).

President of corporation may be surety for the corporation. Levin v. American Furn. Co., 133 Ga. 670, 66 S.E. 888 (1909).

Notary public, who was attorney for plaintiff, cannot take bond required by former Code 1868, § 3201. Wilkowski v. Halle, 37 Ga. 678, 95 Am. Dec. 374 (1868).

Security must also be of twice the value of the debt. Lockett v. DeNeufville, 55 Ga. 454 (1875).

Amount of interest due on debt may be disregarded. Saulter v. Butler, 10 Ga. 510 (1851).

136 Ga. App. 92, 220 S.E.2d 28 (1975); Johnson v. American Credit Co., 581 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1978); Solomon Refrigeration, Inc. v. Osburn, 148 Ga. App. 772, 252 S.E.2d 686 (1979).

Bond requirement of this statute was jurisdictional and noncompliance rendered attachment null and void. Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga. 461, 192 S.E. 191 (1937).

Requirement that plaintiff in attachment give specified bond is jurisdictional, and its absence renders proceeding fatally defective. Tapley v. Proctor, 150 Ga. App. 337, 258 S.E.2d 25 (1979).

Financial inability to give attachment bond renders proceeding seeking attachment fatally defective. Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga. 461, 192 S.E. 191 (1937).

Mere financial inability to furnish bond required affords no lawful basis for equitable interference. Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga. 461, 192 S.E. 191 (1937).

Liability of surety on statutory bond. — See United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Luttrell, 110 Ga. App. 325, 138 S.E.2d 457 (1964).

Extent of liability. — Under statutory bond required of the plaintiff in attachment, the defendant cannot recover from the principal and surety thereon for damage other than such as proximately results from seizure of the defendant's property under such attachment. Dunn & McCarthy, Inc. v. Pinkston, 54 Ga. App. 92, 187 S.E. 175 (1936).

Liability for wrongful attachment. — Fact that attachment is irregular or void will not screen the plaintiff in attachment or surety on attachment bond from liability for damages resulting from wrongful attachment, levy, and sale of the defendant's property thereunder. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Luttrell, 110 Ga. App. 325, 138 S.E.2d 457 (1964).

Recovery on Attachment Bond

Conditions necessary to recovery on attachment bond. — Only conditions necessary to recovery on bond are failure on the part of the plaintiff to recover in the case and sustaining by defendant of damages or costs in consequence of the suing out of attachment. No question of malicious use or abuse of legal process or other additional element necessary for a recovery in tort is involved. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Luttrell, 110 Ga. App. 325, 138 S.E.2d 457 (1964).

Seizure of defendant's property is a prerequisite to action on attachment bond. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. United States Conservation Co., 31 Ga. App. 716, 122 S.E. 728 (1924).

Recovery on statutory bond permitted if any property wrongfully seized belongs to defendant in attachment, although some of the property does not.

United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Luttrell, 110 Ga. App. 325, 138 S.E.2d 457 (1964).

Plaintiff's failure as condition precedent. — Failure of the plaintiff to recover in attachment is condition precedent to recovery on statutory bond. M & M Transf. Co. v. Auto Rental & Leasing, Inc., 313 F. Supp. 907 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Action on attachment bond will lie without preliminary recovery against plaintiff. Fourth Nat'l Bank v. Mayer, 96 Ga. 728, 24 S.E. 453 (1895).

Compensatory damages, including attorney's fees, interest, and expenses are recoverable in action on attachment bond, but not exemplary damages, which can only be recovered by common-law action. Fourth Nat'l Bank v. Mayer, 96 Ga. 728, 24 S.E. 453 (1895).

Recovery unavailable against surety for attorney's fees for prosecuting suit on attachment bond against the surety. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Luttrell, 108 Ga. App. 606, 134 S.E.2d 77 (1963).

18-3-13. Procedure for contesting sufficiency of bond; review of sufficiency of bond; requirement of additional security or new bond; failure to give additional security or new bond.

When any attachment shall be issued and levied upon the property of the defendant, the defendant, his agent, or his attorney may file an affidavit stating that he has a good defense to the action, that the bond given in the action is not a good bond, and stating the ground of its insufficiency. When the affidavit is made and delivered to the levying officer, the officer shall return such attachment together with the affidavit forthwith to the judge issuing the attachment. The judge issuing the attachment shall without delay hear testimony as to the sufficiency of the bond and may in his discretion require additional security or a new bond to be given within such time as he may prescribe. If the plaintiff fails to provide such additional security or new bond, the judge shall dismiss the levy made under the attachment. (Ga. L. 1873, p. 29, § 2; Code 1873, § 3271; Code 1882, § 3271; Ga. L. 1892, p. 56, § 2; Civil Code 1895, § 4517; Ga. L. 1899, p. 37, § 1; Civil Code 1910, § 5062; Code 1933, § 8-113; Ga. L. 1980, p. 1065, § 3.)

No question of amendment can be entertained, except amendment of bond, and of that only insofar as may be necessary to make the bond conform to law as a bond in support of attachment as originally issued and levied. Lockett v. DeNeufville, 55 Ga. 454 (1875).

Amendment of bond. — Plaintiff in attachment may amend the plaintiff's bond, "as in other cases at common law." Collins v. Southern Fin. Corp., 51 Ga. App. 400, 180 S.E. 744 (1935).

Amendment of bond which was absolutely void was not authorized by this statute. Copeland & Co. v. Monroe, 16 Ga. App. 586, 85 S.E. 789 (1915).

Filing of attachment bond for first time at trial term was not authorized by statute. Copeland & Co. v. Monroe, 16 Ga. App. 586, 85 S.E. 789 (1915).

Burden of proof is on defendant to show insufficiency of bond. Reid v. Armour Packing Co., 93 Ga. 696, 21 S.E. 131 (1894); Stephens v. Woodson, 8 Ga. App. 639, 70 S.E. 55 (1911).

Time for raising objection. — Judgment on attachment not void for insufficiency of bond when question not raised in proceeding. Collins v. Southern Fin. Corp., 51 Ga. App. 400, 180 S.E. 744 (1935).

Surety on bond as a minor whose contracts are voidable. — Contract made by minor not void, but is voidable only; it is therefore no ground for dismissal of attachment that surety upon attachment bond executed by plaintiff in attachment was a minor. Benjamin v. Pardue, 44 Ga. App. 587, 162 S.E. 291 (1932).

18-3-14. Service of copy of writ of attachment on defendant; notification of defendant of issuance of attachment.

(a) The defendant shall be given notice of the attachment issued against his property by any one or more of the following methods:

(1) The plaintiff, at the time the attachment is filed with the clerk, shall commence procedures to effectuate the service of a copy of the writ of attachment on the defendant; and service thereafter shall be made on the defendant as soon as is reasonably practicable. Service pursuant to this paragraph shall be made pursuant to Code Section 9-11-4;

(2) The plaintiff, after issuance of the writ of attachment and not more than three business days after levy upon the property of the defendant, shall cause a written notice to be sent to the defendant at defendant's last known address by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested. Either the return receipt indicating receipt by the defendant or the envelope bearing the official notification from the United States Postal Service of the defendant's refusal to accept delivery or failure to claim such registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery shall be filed with the clerk of the court in which the attachment is pending. The defendant's refusal to accept or failure to claim such registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery addressed to defendant shall be deemed notice to defendant;

(3) The plaintiff, after the issuance of the writ of attachment and not more than three business days after levy upon the property of the defendant, shall cause a written notice to be delivered personally to the defendant by the plaintiff or by plaintiff's attorney at law or other agent. A certification by the person making the delivery shall be filed with the clerk;

(4) When the defendant resides out of the state or has departed the state or cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state or conceals his place of residence from the plaintiff and the fact shall appear, by affidavit, to the satisfaction of the judge or clerk of the court, the levy and attachment shall constitute sufficient notice to the defendant, provided such levy and attachment without more shall constitute sufficient notice, unless the plaintiff has actual knowledge of the defendant's address, in which case, to provide sufficient notice, the plaintiff shall also mail a written notice of attachment to the defendant at said address or, not having actual knowledge of the defendant's address but the address at which the defendant was last known to reside, to provide sufficient notice, the plaintiff shall also mail a written notice of attachment to the defendant at said address. A mailing of the written notice provided in this paragraph shall be made after the issuance of the writ of attachment and not more than three business days after levy upon the property of the defendant, and a certificate of such mailing shall be filed with the clerk by the person mailing the notice;

(5) Where it shall appear by affidavit that a defendant in the attachment action is not a resident of this state or has departed from this state or, after due diligence, cannot be found in this state or that the defendant conceals his place of residence from the plaintiff, notice may be given by causing two publications of the written notice in the paper in which advertisements are printed by the sheriff in each county in which a writ of attachment is served. Such publications must be at least six days apart and the second publication must be made not more than 21 days after levy upon the property of the defendant. A certification by the person causing the notice to be published shall be filed with the clerk, provided such publication shall constitute sufficient notice alone, unless the plaintiff has actual knowledge of the defendant's address, in which case, to provide sufficient notice, the plaintiff shall also mail a written notice of attachment to the defendant at said address. A mailing of the written notice provided in this paragraph shall be made after the issuance of the writ of attachment and not more than three business days after levy upon the property of the defendant, and a certificate of such mailing shall be filed with the clerk by the person mailing the notice; or

(6) Where the defendant's address is known, the plaintiff, after issuance of the attachment and not more than three business days after levy upon the property of the defendant, shall send a written notice of the attachment to the defendant at such known address by ordinary mail. A certification by the person mailing the notice shall be filed with the clerk.

(b) The receiving by the defendant of actual timely notice of the attachment and levy shall constitute notice.

(c) "Written notice," as referred to in paragraphs (2) through (6) of subsection (a) of this Code section, shall consist of a copy of the affidavit and bond for attachment or of a document which includes the names of the plaintiff and the defendant, the amount claimed in the affidavit for attachment, and the court wherein the proceeding is filed.

(d) The methods of notification specified in subsection (a) of this Code section are cumulative and may be used in any sequence or combination. Where it appears that a plaintiff has reasonably, diligently, and in good faith attempted to use one method, another method thereafter may be utilized and, for the time during which the attempt was being made, the time limit shall be tolled for the subsequent method. (Laws 1799, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 70; Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 25, § 5; Code 1863, § 3192; Code 1868, § 3203; Code 1873, § 3269; Code 1882, § 3269; Civil Code 1895, § 4515; Civil Code 1910, § 5060; Code 1933, § 8-114; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Code 1868, § 3233, former Code 1873, § 3309, former Code 1882, § 3309, and former Code 1933, § 8-602, dealing with notice to the defendant, have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

Absent personal service, appearance, or replevy, in personam judgment is void. — When the defendants were not personally served with notice of pendency of attachment, did not appear and defend, and did not give bond and security to replevy property attached, an in personam judgment against the defendants was accordingly erroneous. Broome v. Graham, 99 Ga. App. 682, 109 S.E.2d 824 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 8-602).

Contents of notice. — Written notice to the defendant that attachment was pending against the defendant stating the court to which attachment was returnable, and the time, and stating on what property attachment had been levied, was sufficient compliance with former Code 1868, § 3233 to authorize proceedings as in ordinary suit, especially if the defendant appeared and pleaded to the merits. Pool v. Perdue, 44 Ga. 454 (1871) (decided under former Code 1868, § 3233).

Administrator of defendant who dies pending attachment. — If, pending attachment, the defendant dies, and the defendant's administrator was made party to the proceeding, and no notice was given, as provided by former Code 1873, § 3309, the administrator stood precisely as did the deceased defendant. The administrator may attack the validity of the attachment, and if the administrator's objection was good the whole proceeding fell. Ross v. Edwards, 52 Ga. 24 (1874) (decided under former Code 1873, § 3309).

When defendant receives sufficient notice and fails to defend. — When nonresident defendants in attachment were given sufficient notice to put the defendants upon inquiry in time to have defended, but failed to do so, the supreme court will not control decision of presiding judge in refusing to allow the defendants to open judgment rendered in an attachment case for purpose of pleading to merits. Steers & Co. v. Morgan & Armstrong, 66 Ga. 552 (1881) (decided under former Code 1873, § 3309).

Plaintiff may entitle self to general judgment against defendant by giving prescribed notice. Sutton v. Gunn, 86 Ga. 652, 12 S.E. 979 (1891) (decided under former Code 1882, § 3309).

Effect on third persons of judgment by court without jurisdiction. — General judgment of court without jurisdiction of particular class of attachments will not be valid against third persons although the judgment might be good against a defendant. First Nat'l Bank v. Ragan, 92 Ga. 333, 18 S.E. 295 (1893) (decided under former Code 1882, § 3309).

Absence of signature on notice of attachment. — Although notices of attachment were not signed by the plaintiff, plaintiff's attorney, or anyone as agent for the plaintiff, when the notices conveyed information required by statute and defendants were in no manner prejudiced by absence of a signature, the notice was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to judgment on the declaration filed as at common law. Stalvey v. Varn Motors & Fin. Co., 56 Ga. App. 696, 193 S.E. 627 (1937).

Cited in Cox v. Felder, 36 Ga. 597 (1867); Tharpe v. Foster, 52 Ga. 79 (1874); Bennett v. Wheatley, 154 Ga. 591, 115 S.E. 83 (1922); Gaston v. Jackson Nat'l Bank, 45 Ga. App. 106, 163 S.E. 265 (1932); Higgins v. Gosden, 53 Ga. App. 313, 185 S.E. 574 (1936); Stalvey v. Varn Motors & Fin. Co., 56 Ga. App. 696, 193 S.E. 627 (1937); Sassoon v. State, 138 Ga. App. 172, 225 S.E.2d 732 (1976); Johnson v. American Credit Co., 581 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1978).

18-3-15. Right of defendant to postseizure hearing.

When a writ of attachment is issued against the property of the defendant, the defendant may at any time traverse the plaintiff's affidavit upon which the attachment was obtained, stating that the affidavit is untrue or legally insufficient. Upon filing of the traverse, the court shall issue a show cause order to the plaintiff requiring him to appear at a specified time, which shall not be more than ten days from the filing of the traverse, to prove the grounds for the issuance of the attachment. If the plaintiff shall fail to carry the burden of proof, the order authorizing the attachment shall be revoked. (Code 1933, § 8-114.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1065, § 5.)

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1868, § 3236, former Code 1873, § 3312, former Code 1882, § 3312, former Civil Code 1895, § 4560, and former Civil Code 1910, § 5107 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Traverse need not be sworn to. Ouzts v. Seabrook, 47 Ga. 359 (1872) (decided under former Code 1868, § 3236).

Demurrer (now motion to dismiss) may be filed for lack of affidavit and attachment dismissed. DeLeon v. Heller, Hirsch & Co., 77 Ga. 740 (1886) (decided under former provisions).

Denial of truth of ground for attachment may be treated as traverse. Cooley v. Abbey, 111 Ga. 439, 36 S.E. 786 (1900) (decided under former Code 1893, § 4560).

Third-party claimant to property levied upon. — Claimant of property levied on by execution issued on judgment founded on attachment cannot, on trial of claim, traverse grounds on which attachment issued. Foster v. Higginbotham, 49 Ga. 263 (1873) (decided under former Code 1882, § 3312).

Burden of proof. — On trial of traverse, burden of proof is on plaintiff in attachment. Oliver v. Wilson, 29 Ga. 642 (1859) (decided prior to codification of this principle).

Admissibility of evidence to sustain traverse after replevy of attached property. — When ground of attachment is duly traversed, defendant is entitled to introduce evidence to sustain the defendant's traverse, and presiding justice errs in holding that it is too late to do this after the defendant has replevied property attached. Brumby v. Rickoff, 94 Ga. 429, 21 S.E. 232 (1894) (decided under former Code 1873, § 3312).

Plaintiff is competent witness as to traverse by administrator regarding contract entered with intestate. — When the plaintiff makes an affidavit for purpose of obtaining attachment against an administrator, and the administrator files traverse to affidavit, the plaintiff is a competent witness upon trial of issue formed, even though the contract, which is the foundation of the plaintiff's claim, was made with intestate. Effect of verdict for the defendant, upon such issue, is a dismissal of attachment. Ouzts v. Seabrook, 47 Ga. 359 (1872) (decided under former Code 1868, § 3236).

vit are waived by appearance of the defendant, and pleading to the merits. Pool v. Perdue, 44 Ga. 454 (1871) (decided under former Code 1868, § 3236).

Defendant in attachment does not waive traverse to the plaintiff's affidavit by afterwards pleading to the merits of the action. The two defenses are perfectly consistent, the former going to the writ and the latter to the declaration. Parker v. Brady, 56 Ga. 372 (1876) (decided under former Code 1868, § 3236).

Effect of finding issue in defendant's favor. — When issue on traverse is found in favor of the defendant, all defendant gains is that levy falls, and if judgment is obtained on merits the judgment does not date from time of levy, but the judgment would take lien on property attached as well as on other property from date of judgment only. Blakely Milling & Trading Co. v. Thompson, 34 Ga. App. 129, 128 S.E. 688 (1924) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5107).

Intervenor's right to traverse affidavit of attachment. — Construing O.C.G.A. §§ 18-3-15 and 18-3-50 in pari materia, in light of the due process requirements, the intervenor has the same right to traverse the plaintiff's affidavit of attachment as the defendant, and once the affidavit of attachment is traversed, the procedure to follow is the same as that accorded the defendant. Trax, Inc. v. Pentagon Aero-Marine Corp., 162 Ga. App. 276, 290 S.E.2d 196 (1982).

Affidavit may be sufficient in form though it does not show that debt is due. Askew v. Melvin, 144 Ga. 348, 87 S.E. 278 (1915).

Variance in defendant's name in required documents. — Variance between affidavit and bond on one hand and attachment on the other, in the name of party against whom proceedings are brought is fatal to the attachment. Leffler & Son v. Union Compress Co., 126 Ga. 662, 55 S.E. 927 (1906).

Bill of particulars not annexed to papers. — Attachment not necessarily void because no bill of particulars is annexed to original attachment papers. Pharr v. Estey Piano & Organ Co., 7 Ga. App. 262, 66 S.E. 618 (1909).

Absent levy or seizure of property under attachment there can be no recovery on bond. Hinton-Bellah, Inc. v. Thebit, 62 Ga. App. 672, 9 S.E.2d 779 (1940).

Effect of release on recovery of attachment expenses. — Fact that plaintiff's property had been released did not preclude the plaintiff from recovering expense sustained in consequence of the attachment. Hinton-Bellah, Inc. v. Thebit, 62 Ga. App. 672, 9 S.E.2d 779 (1940).

Levy failing to state that property was levied on as property of the defendant was amendable and such defect was not ground for arresting judgment. Flegal v. Loveless, 93 Ga. App. 41, 90 S.E.2d 606 (1955).

Absence of signature on notice of attachment. — Although notices of attachment were not signed by the plaintiff, the plaintiff's attorney, or anyone as agent for the plaintiff, where the notices conveyed information required by statute and defendants were in no manner prejudiced by absence of a signature, the notice was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to judgment on the declaration filed as at com-

duty of any one of the officers to whom an attachment is directed, where the defendant has removed his property beyond the limits of the county in which the attachment is issued and returnable, to follow the property into any county of the state, levy the attachment upon such property of the defendant which is necessary to satisfy the claim of the plaintiff, and return the property to the county in which the attachment is returnable. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Omission of description of property on attachment docket. — Though entry on attachment docket respecting attachment upon land does not contain description of the property, it may not be taken advantage of by a claimant to the property who acquired the property under fraudulent circumstances. Deveney, Hood & Co. v. Burton, 110 Ga. 56, 35 S.E. 268 (1900).

Nature of lien of judgment creditor; limitation of judgment's scope. — Lien of a judgment creditor is not a lien acquired by contract; but is given by law. The judgment creditor is not, therefore, in the position of a bona fide purchaser, and the judgment creditor's lien extends only to property levied upon which actually belongs to the defendant in attachment. Parker v. Boyd, 208 Ga. 829, 69 S.E.2d 760 (1952).

18-3-32. Levy on property in a different county.

When the plaintiff in attachment wishes to levy his attachment upon property in a different county from that in which the same is returnable, it shall be the duty of the judge issuing the attachment, upon the request of the plaintiff, his agent, or his attorney at law, to make out a copy or copies of the original attachment, bond, and affidavit and certify the same officially to be true copies. Upon delivery of the copies of the attachment, bond, and affidavit, as directed, to any officer of the county in which the property of the defendant is located, it shall be the duty of the officer forthwith to levy the attachment upon the property of the defendant located in that county and to return the attachment, with his actings and doings entered thereon, to the court to which the original attachment is returnable. (Laws 1799, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 73; Ga. 18-3-33. Replevy of property by defendant generally upon payment of bond; amount of bond; return of property by officer taking bond; right of plaintiff to entry of judgment upon bond.

(a) When an attachment has been levied upon the property of a defendant, it shall be the duty of the officer levying the attachment to deliver the property levied upon to the defendant upon his giving bond, with good security, payable to the plaintiff in attachment, obligating himself to pay the plaintiff the amount of the judgment and costs that he may recover in the case.

(b) Where the value of the property levied upon, as appraised by the levying officer, is equal to or exceeds the claim of the plaintiff, the bond shall be fixed in an amount equal to the amount claimed to be due. Where the value of the property levied upon, as appraised by the levying officer, is less than the claim of the plaintiff, the bond shall be fixed in an amount equal to twice the value of the property levied upon.

(c) The officer taking the bond shall return the bond with the attachment to the court to which the attachment is returnable, and the plaintiff shall be entitled to entry of judgment against the defendant and his sureties upon the bond for the amount of the judgment and costs entered against the defendant in the case. ANALYSIS

EFFECT OF REPLEVY BOND
LIABILITY OF SURETY

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, annotations decided under former Code 1933, § 8-901 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Purpose of section. — Principal of this statute was the same as in garnishment proceedings. Light v. Hunt, 17 Ga. App. 491, 87 S.E. 763 (1916).

Bond required only after levy. — Bond provided for in this statute was required only after levy of attachment, and not after judgment on attachment against the property. Lafferty Lumber Co. v. Thomas, 37 Ga. App. 226, 139 S.E. 587 (1927) (see O.C.G.A. § 18-3-33).

Section not applicable when parties agree otherwise. — Since no replevy bond was given by the defendant, an agreement between parties that the constable should sell the property on a given date and deliver proceeds of the sale to the sheriff, to be held by the sheriff until final disposition of the case, controls rights of parties, and the provision, allowing the defendant in attachment to replevy the property, did not apply. Hill v. Hixon, 151 Ga. 333, 106 S.E. 551 (1921).

Bond with condition to produce property on day of sale was not within statute. Moody v. Morgan, 25 Ga. 381 (1858).

When defendant gives bond, a general judgment was authorized. Mitchell v. Perry, 145 Ga. 233, 88 S.E. 930 (1916).

One bond given when three attachments are levied will cover judgment in each case. Irvin v. Howard, 37 Ga. 18 (1867).

Failure to state name of firm. — After giving replevy bond, firm cannot request dismissal for failure to state name of firm. DeLeon v. Heller, Hirsch & Co., 77 Ga. 740 (1886).

Liability of officer for noncompliance with duties. — Ford & Booth v. Perkerson, 59 Ga. 359 (1877).

Lumpkin*, 48 Ga. 521 (1873); Moore, Jenkins & Co. v. Allen, 55 Ga. 67 (1875); Chittenden v. Darden, 5 F. Cas. 642 (N.D. Ga. 1875); Reeves v. Chattahoochee Brick Co., 85 Ga. 477, 11 S.E. 837 (1890); Henry v. Lennox-Haldeman Co., 116 Ga. 9, 42 S.E. 383 (1902); Rutland v. Hill, 19 Ga. App. 528, 91 S.E. 922 (1917); Blakely Milling & Trading Co. v. Thompson, 34 Ga. App. 129, 128 S.E. 688 (1925); Courson v. Manufacturers' Fin. Acceptance Corp., 41 Ga. App. 551, 153 S.E. 624 (1930); Henley v. Colonial Stages S., Inc., 56 Ga. App. 722, 193 S.E. 905 (1937); Johnson v. American Credit Co., 581 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1978).

Effect of Replevy Bond

Effect of replevy bond. — When property attached has been replevied, attachment is dissolved, bond is substituted for property, and the case stands as if the case had been founded on ordinary principles. Thompson v. Wright, 22 Ga. 607 (1857); Camp v. Cahn, 53 Ga. 558 (1875); Walter v. Kierstead, 74 Ga. 18 (1884); Woodbridge v. Drought, 118 Ga. 671, 45 S.E. 266 (1903); Watters v. Southern Fixture & Cabinet Co., 13 Ga. App. 468, 79 S.E. 360 (1913).

Action is in personam. — Replevy bond converts suit from action in rem to action in personam authorizing a common-law judgment. Middlebrooks v. Carson, 23 Ga. App. 665, 99 S.E. 151 (1919).

Replevy bond, in converting action in rem to one in personam, is equivalent to appearance. Ubico Milling Co. v. Poythress, 29 Ga. App. 134, 113 S.E. 815 (1922).

When defendant in attachment personally appears, replevies property attached, and defends action on its merits, the case proceeds in all respects as an ordinary action in personam and, accordingly, when there was no evidence to support single ground of attachment alleged, and traverse to attachment was well taken, this was not ground for a new trial or for setting aside judgment entered against defendant on the merits. Patne v. Oliver, 96 Ga. App. 644, 101 S.E.2d 154 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 8-901).

Replevy bond binds defendant not only to appear, but to pay judgment, if rendered against the defendant. Cole v. Reilly, 28 Ga. 431 (1859).

When grounds of attachment fail, replevy bond fails in the bond's binding effect upon sureties. Oliver v. Beasley, 109 Ga. App. 558, 136 S.E.2d 530 (1964).

When grounds of attachment fail, replevy bond, insofar as it is sought to bind sureties thereon, fails also; in such event there is no liability of sureties on the bond, but their remedy is by affidavit of illegality or, perhaps, by some collateral motion. Patne v. Oliver, 96 Ga. App. 644, 101 S.E.2d 154 (1957).

Validity of replevy bond is dependent upon validity of attachment; and if attachment has been dismissed, no liability attaches against surety on the replevy bond, notwithstanding the plaintiff in attachment may, after obtaining jurisdiction in personam over the defendant, have proceeded with the suit and obtained a common-law judgment thereon against the defendant. Burnette v. Johnson, 38 Ga. App. 396, 144 S.E. 36 (1928).

Dismissal as to principal on ground of bankruptcy or death. — Since liability of sureties depends upon that of principal, if principal is discharged on ground of bankruptcy or death, case should be dismissed as a whole. Langston v. Watts, 142 Ga. 439, 83 S.E. 92 (1914).

If, upon levy of attachment for purchase-money, defendant replevies property by giving bond and security as provided in former Civil Code 1910, § 5113, and if within four months after levy of such attachment, the defendant is adjudicated a bankrupt, the lien of attachment is void, and the principal debtor and surety on replevy bond are both discharged. Longshore v. Collier, 37 Ga. App. 450, 140 S.E. 636 (1927).

Rights of plaintiff against sureties on replevy bond are generally the same as against the defendant. McDonald v. W.W. Kimball Co., 144 Ga. 105, 86 S.E. 234 (1915).

When no objection was made to sufficiency of bond sureties not liable for more than amount named in bond. Jones v. Fayette Fertilizer Co., 141 Ga. 32, 80 S.E. 306 (1913).

Bond taken for double the amount levied on sets limit. — When bond is taken for double the amount of property levied on, and judgment in attachment case is for an amount greater than the bond, judgment should be entered on the bond to the extent of the bond, no more and no less. Wilson & Co. v. Sims, 144 Ga. 685, 87 S.E. 890 (1916).

Surety on replevy bond not necessary party to defendant's appeal of judgment. — Surety on replevy bond executed by defendant in attachment, where the obligation, which is joint and several, is to pay whatever judgment plaintiff in attachment may obtain against the defendant in attachment, including court costs, is not a necessary and essential party to an appeal by the defendant in attachment from the judgment rendered. Bunn v. Gamble, 54 Ga. App. 417, 188 S.E. 257 (1936).

Sureties on replevy bond posted by the defendant upon attachment of the defendant's property are not necessary or essential parties to appeal following judgment against the defendant and the defendant's sureties. Patne v. Oliver, 96 Ga. App. 644, 101 S.E.2d 154 (1957).

Liability of sureties on appeal. — Sureties are liable as security upon appeals, notwithstanding loss or destruction of property. Irvin v. Howard, 37 Ga. 18 (1867).

Sureties cannot urge after judgment against the sureties that attachment would not lie against property attached. Craig v. Herring & Turner ex rel. McCandless, 80 Ga. 709, 6 S.E. 283 (1888).

When sheriff, unknown to plaintiff, fraudulently induced sureties to sign, legality of the bond was not affected; redress of sureties is against sheriff. Craig v. Herring & Turner ex rel. McCandless, 80 Ga. 709, 6 S.E. 283 (1888).

Sureties making claim contrary to replevy bond. — When replevy bond executed by sureties recited that the property levied on was levied on as property of the defendant, the sureties are estopped to deny a valid levy on ground that levy failed to state that property was levied on as property of the defendant. Flegal v. Loveless, 93 Ga. App. 41, 90 S.E.2d 606 (1955).

18-3-34. Replevy of property of foreign corporation upon payment of bond; return of bond by levying officer; right of plaintiff to entry of judgment on bond.

When an attachment is levied on the property of a foreign corporation, any agent of the corporation may recover the property levied upon by giving a bond, with good security, conditioned to pay the amount of judgment and costs that the plaintiff in attachment may recover in the case. The officer taking the bond shall return the bond with the attachment to the court to which the attachment is made returnable; and the plaintiff shall be entitled to entry of judgment against the corporation and its sureties upon the bond for the amount of the judgment and costs entered against the corporation in the case. 18-3-50. Procedure generally.

(a) When property is levied on by virtue of an attachment and the same is claimed by any person not a party to the attachment, it shall be the duty of the person claiming the same, his agent, or his attorney at law to make an oath before some person authorized by law to administer an oath that the property levied on is the property of the claimant and is not subject to the attachment according to the best of his knowledge and belief.

(b) The claimant shall give bond, with good security, payable to the plaintiff in attachment in a sum not larger than double the amount of the attachment levied and, where the property attached is of less value than the attachment, in the judgment of the levying officer, then in double the value of the property conditioned to pay the plaintiff all damages which the jury, on the trial of the right of property, may assess against him in case it should be made to appear that the claim was made for the purpose of delay; and, in case the claim is interposed by the agent or attorney at law of the claimant, the agent or attorney at law shall have power to sign the name of the claimant to the bond, and the claimant shall be bound in the same manner as though he had signed it himself. It shall be the duty of the levying officer taking the affidavit and bond to return the same to the court to which the attachment is returnable, unless the property levied on should be real estate, in which case it shall be his duty to return the same to the superior court of the county where the land lies, provided that, if the claimant is unable to give such bond and security, he may interpose his claim as provided in Code Section 9-15-2. The claimant, his agent, or his attorney at law may give bond, with good security, payable to the levying officer, in a sum equal to double the value of the property claimed, the value to be judged by the levying officer, conditioned to deliver the property at the time and place of sale, provided the same should be found subject to the attachment; and, upon the delivery of the bond to the levying officer, it shall be his duty to deliver such property to the claimant, his agent, or his attorney at law; and it shall be the duty of the levying officer to return the bond, together with the affidavit and claim bond, to the court to which the attachment is returnable; and, when the claim is interposed by the agent or attorney at law of the claimant, the agent or attorney at law shall have power to sign the name of the claimant to the bond, who shall be bound thereby in the same manner as though he had signed it himself. ARTICLE 4

18-3-70. Property bound by judgment in attachment.

When the defendant has given bond and security, or when he has appeared and made defense by himself or attorney at law without raising a valid defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person, the judgment rendered against him in such case shall bind all his property and shall have the same force and effect as when there has been personal service, and execution shall issue accordingly, but it shall be first levied upon the property attached. In all other cases, the judgment on the attachment shall only bind the property attached and the judgment shall be entered only against such property. (Code 1933, § 8-901, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 1; Code 1981, § 18-3-70, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 2.)

18-3-71. Setting aside judgment.

A judgment in attachment may be set aside in a court of law upon an issue suggesting fraud or want of consideration, tendered by a judgment creditor of the defendant in attachment. (Code 1933, § 8-902, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 1; Code 1981, § 18-3-71, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 2.)

18-3-72. Execution and levy on judgment.

After the judgment has been obtained in any case of attachment, execution shall issue as in cases at common law, which execution shall be levied in the same manner as executions issuing at common law; and the proceedings in all respects shall be the same, except that when the judgment only binds the property levied on by the attachment, as aforesaid, the execution shall be issued against such property only and that property only shall be levied on and sold. (Code 1933, § 8-903, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 1; Code 1981, § 18-3-72, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 2.)

18-3-73. Application of proceeds of sale.

All money raised by the sale of defendant's property or otherwise, by virtue of this chapter, shall be paid over to the creditors of the defendant, according to the priority of the lien of their judgments, except that as between attaching creditors the attachment first levied shall be first satisfied to the entire exclusion of any attachment of younger levy. (Code 1933, § 8-904, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 1; Code 1981, § 18-3-73, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 2.)

18-3-74. When lien arises; priorities.

The lien of an attachment is created by the levy and not the judgment in the attachment; and in case of a conflict between attachments, the first levied shall be first satisfied; but in a contest between attachments and ordinary judgments or suits, it is the judgment and not the levy which fixes the lien. However, the lien of an attachment shall have priority over the lien of an ordinary judgment that has been obtained upon a suit filed after the levy of the attachment. (Code 1933, § 8-905, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 1; Code 1981, § 18-3-74, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 2.)

18-3-75. Entry on attachment docket; effect of failure to make such entry.

As against the interests of third parties acting in good faith and without notice who may have acquired a transfer or lien binding any real estate, no attachment levied upon real estate shall be a lien on the same from the levy thereof unless said attachment is entered upon the attachment docket of the county in which the real estate is situated within five days from said levy. When the attachment is entered upon the docket after the five days, the lien shall date from such entry; and it shall be the duty of the sheriff to have said entry made within the five days. Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to affect the validity or force of any attachment as between the parties thereto. (Code 1933, § 8-906, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 1; Code 1981, § 18-3-75, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 1578, § 2.)

For note discussing constitutional developments affecting garnishment procedures, see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 814 (1978).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Ga. L. 1855-6, pp. 36, 37, former Civil Code 1895, § 4709, and former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5265, 5268, and 5269 are included in the annotations for this chapter.

Due process compliance. — Garnishment in attachment must comply with defendant's due process rights under a valid garnishment statute. Coursin v. Harper, 144 Ga. App. 4, 240 S.E.2d 565 (1977).

Proceedings on garnishment in attachment which do not comply with statutory provisions violate the defendant's due process rights under the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Coursin v. Harper, 144 Ga. App. 4, 240 S.E.2d 565 (1977).

Constitutional requirements for garnishment proceedings. — See North Ga. Finishing, Inc. v. Di-Chem, Inc., 419 U.S. 601, 95 S. Ct. 719, 42 L. Ed. 2d 751 (1975).

Garnishment must be strictly pursued. — Garnishment proceeding is a distinct suit against a separate party, and for an entirely new cause of action, and such proceeding, being purely statutory and in derogation of common law, must be strictly pursued. Anderson v. Ledbetter-Johnson Contractors, 62 Ga. App. 732, 9 S.E.2d 860 (1940).

No constitutional right to jury trial. — Georgia garnishment law is a special statutory proceeding enacted subsequent to the first Georgia Constitution and is in derogation of the common law. Thus, a garnishment action is not a civil action of such a nature in which a trial by jury is guaranteed. Mull v. Mull, 167 Ga. App. 687, 307 S.E.2d 675 (1983).

Garnishment constitutes a distinct suit against separate party for an entirely new cause of action. Ahrens & Ott Mfg. Co. v. Patton Sash, Door & Bldg. Co., 94 Ga. 247, 21 S.E. 523 (1894) (decided under former Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 36); Woods v. Massachusetts Mills, 17 Ga. App. 422, 87 S.E. 688 (1916); Lamb v. Whitman, 17 Ga. App. 687, 87 S.E. 1095 (1916); Jones v. Maril, 19 Ga. App. 216, 91 S.E. 445 (1917) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5265).

Issuance of successive summons of garnishment is permissible. Born v. Williams & Bro., 81 Ga. 796, 7 S.E. 868 (1888); Pratt v. Young, 90 Ga. 39, 15 S.E. 630 (1892), (decided under former Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 37).

Original summons is served, rather than a copy thereof, and it is unnecessary that a copy be put on file. Tifton Compress Co. v. Robinson, 31 Ga. App. 350, 120 S.E. 701 (1923) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5269).

Only evidence record showing to whom summons directed and to what court returnable is officer's entry. Tifton Compress Co. v. Robinson, 31 Ga. App. 350, 120 S.E. 701 (1923) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5269).

Waiver. — Appearance and pleading waives all objections to process and return of officer. Flournoy & Epping v. Rutledge, 73 Ga. 735 (1884) (decided under former Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 37).

Defective service waived by appearance of garnishee. Dooly v. Miles, 101 Ga. 797, 29 S.E. 118 (1897) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4709).

Summons returnable to justice court, when main suit pending in the superior court, is void. Durden v. Belt, 61 Ga. 545 (1878) (decided under former Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 37).

Reliance on officer's promise to notify garnishee when to answer. — Promise by officer that the officer would notify garnishee when to answer, coupled with sheer ignorance on part of latter, was not an excuse. Jones v. Bibb Brick Co., 120 Ga. 321, 48 S.E. 25 (1904) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4709).

Attorney at law of corporation cannot verify answer. Plant & Son v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 92 Ga. 636, 19 S.E. 719 (1893) (decided under Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 37).

Failure to make timely answer. — Garnishee cannot attack judgment for causes anterior to rendition when garnishee failed to make timely answer. Henderson v. Mutual Fertilizer Co., 150 Ga. 465, 104 S.E. 229 (1920) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5269).

Damages when plaintiff fails in original suit. — When the plaintiff fails to recover in original suit, the defendant may recover as damages the premium on, and expenses paid in procuring dissolution bond, and reasonable attorneys fees. Collins v. Myers, 30 Ga. App. 151, 117 S.E. 265 (1923) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5268).

(b) The procedure in garnishment cases shall be uniform in all courts throughout this state; and, except as otherwise provided in this chapter, Chapter 11 of Title 9 shall apply in garnishment proceedings. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Amendment after evidence but prior to judgment. — It is not error to allow a party to amend the party’s garnishment affidavit only a few days before judgment, and after all the evidence has been presented. Coleman v. Burnett, 169 Ga. App. 297, 312 S.E.2d 627 (1983).
Absence of a judge’s or clerk’s signature on an affidavit for garnishment did not constitute a nonamendable defect justifying the grant of a motion to set aside a judgment. Horizon Credit Corp. v. Lanier Bank & Trust Co., 220 Ga. App. 362, 469 S.E.2d 452 (1996).

(a) Any party of record to a proceeding under this chapter who may be affected materially thereby may challenge the sufficiency of any bond required or permitted by this chapter. Such challenge shall be made by motion to require additional security; and, if upon hearing the same the court shall determine that the security upon the bond is inadequate for the purposes for which the bond is filed, an order shall be entered requiring the person filing the bond to furnish additional security within seven days of the date of the order.

18-4-20. Property subject to garnishment generally; claim amount and defendant's social security number on summons; information to be contained on summons of garnishment upon financial institution.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Disposable earnings" means that part of the earnings of an individual remaining after the deduction from those earnings of the amounts required by law to be withheld.

(2) "Earnings" means compensation paid or payable for personal services, whether denominated as wages, salary, commission, bonus, or otherwise, and includes periodic payments pursuant to a pension or retirement program.

(b) All debts owed by the garnishee to the defendant at the time of service of the summons of garnishment upon the garnishee and all debts accruing from the garnishee to the defendant from the date of service to the date of the garnishee's answer shall be subject to process of garnishment; and no payment made by the garnishee to the defendant or to his order, or by any arrangement between the defendant and the garnishee, after the date of the service of the summons of garnishment upon the garnishee, shall defeat the lien of such garnishment.

(c) All property, money, or effects of the defendant in the possession or control of the garnishee at the time of service of the summons of garnishment upon the garnishee or coming into the possession or control of the garnishee at any time from the date of service of the summons of garnishment upon the garnishee to the date of the garnishee's answer shall be subject to process of garnishment except, in the case of collateral securities in the hands of a creditor, such securities shall not be subject to garnishment so long as there is an amount owed on the debt for which the securities were given as collateral.

(d)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this Code section, the maximum part of the aggregate disposable earnings of an individual for any work week which is subject to garnishment may not exceed the lesser of:

(A) Twenty-five percent of his disposable earnings for that week; or

(B) The amount by which his disposable earnings for that week exceed 30 times the federal minimum hourly wage prescribed by Section 6(a)(1) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, U.S.C. Title 29, Section 206(a)(1), in effect at the time the earnings are payable.

(2) In case of earnings for a period other than a week, a multiple of the federal minimum hourly wage equivalent in effect to that set forth in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be used.

(e) The limitation on garnishment set forth in subsection (d) of this Code section shall apply although the garnishee may receive a summons of garnishment in more than one garnishment case naming the same defendant unless the garnishee has received a summons of garnishment based on a judgment for alimony or the support of a dependent, in which case the limitation on garnishment set forth in subsection (f) of this Code section shall apply although the garnishee may receive a summons of garnishment in more than one garnishment case naming the same defendant. No garnishee shall withhold from the disposable earnings of the defendant any sum greater than the amount prescribed by subsection (d) or subsection (f) of this Code section, as applicable, regardless of the number of summonses served upon the garnishee.

(f) The exemption provided by subsection (d) of this Code section shall not apply if the judgment upon which the garnishment is based is a judgment for alimony or for the support of any dependent of the defendant, provided the summons of garnishment shall contain a notice to the garnishee that the garnishment is based on the judgment for alimony or the support of a dependent. In any case in which the garnishment is based on the judgment, the maximum part of the aggregate disposable earnings of an individual for any workweek which is subject to garnishment shall be 50 percent of the individual's disposable earnings for that week.

(g) Except as provided in Article 7 of this chapter for a summons of continuing garnishment for support, the summons of garnishment, including a summons of continuing garnishment pursuant to Article 6 of this chapter, shall on its face state the total amount claimed to be due at the time of the summons and the amount subject to garnishment shall not exceed the amount so shown on the summons of garnishment.

(h) The summons of garnishment, including a summons of continuing garnishment, shall on its face set forth the social security number of the defendant to the extent it is reasonably available to the plaintiff; provided, however, that if such summons is filed with a court, the court filing shall be redacted in accordance with Code Section 9-11-7.1 or 15-10-54, as applicable. The defendant's full social security number shall be made known to the garnishee and defendant in accordance with Code Section 9-11-7.1 or 15-10-54, as applicable, to the extent such information is reasonably available to the plaintiff.

(i)(1) A summons of garnishment upon a financial institution, or an attachment thereto, shall state with particularity all of the following information, to the extent reasonably available to the plaintiff:

(A) The name of the defendant, and, to the extent such would reasonably enable the garnishee to properly respond to the summons, all known configurations, nicknames, aliases, former or maiden names, trade names, or variations thereof;

(B) The service address and the current addresses of the defendant and, to the extent such would reasonably enable the garnishee to properly respond to the summons of garnishment and such is reasonably available to the plaintiff, the past addresses of the defendant;

(C) The social security number or federal tax identification number of the defendant; provided, however, that if such summons is filed with a court, the court filing shall be redacted in accordance with Code Section 9-11-7.1 or 15-10-54, as applicable. The defendant's full social security number or federal tax identification number shall be made known to the garnishee and defendant in accordance with Code Section 9-11-7.1 or 15-10-54, as applicable, to the extent such information is reasonably available to the plaintiff; and

(D) Account, identification, or tracking numbers reasonably available to the plaintiff used by the garnishee in the identification or administration of the defendant’s funds or property; provided, however, that if such summons is filed with a court, the court filing shall be redacted in accordance with Code Section 9-11-7.1 or 15-10-54, as applicable. The defendant’s account, identification, or tracking numbers shall be made known to the garnishee and defendant in accordance with Code Section 9-11-7.1 or 15-10-54, as applicable, to the extent such information is reasonably available to the plaintiff.

(2) A misspelling of any information required by this subsection, other than the surname of a natural person defendant, shall not invalidate a summons of garnishment, so long as such information is not misleading in a search of the garnishee’s records. (Code 1933, § 46-301, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1977, p. 159, § 3; Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, §§ 2-4; Ga. L. 1984, p. 370, § 1; Ga. L. 1985, p. 149, § 18; Ga. L. 1985, p. 785, § 1; Ga. The 2014 amendment, effective July 1, 2014, in subsection (h), substituted “shall on its face set forth the social security number of the defendant to the extent it is reasonably available to the plaintiff; provided, however, that if such summons is filed with a court, the court filing shall be redacted in accordance with Code Section 9-11-7.1 or 15-10-54, as applicable.” for “may on its face set forth, if known, the social security number of the defendant” and added the second sentence; and re-wrote subsection (i). See editor’s notes for applicability.

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2014, p. 482, § 10/SB 386, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that this Act shall become effective on July 1, 2014, and

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 36; former Ga. L. 1872, p. 43; former Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 109; former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4712 and 4732; former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5265, 5272, 5273, 5296, and 5298; and former Code 1933, §§ 46-201, 46-203, and 46-208 as they read prior to revision of Chapter 46-2 by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Garnishment is a purely statutory proceeding, and will not be extended so as to reach money or property of the defendant not made subject thereto by statute. Hartsfield Co. v. Zakas Bakery, 50 Ga. App. 284, 177 S.E. 825 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5272).

Purpose of garnishment lien. — Purpose of garnishment proceeding is to assure that property in hands of third party is held subject to order of the court until conflicting claims are adjudicated. It frequently has been held that a judgment creates no lien on choses in action belonging to the defendant. Carmichael Tile Co. v. Yaarab Temple Bldg. Co., 177 Ga. 318, 170 S.E. 294 (1933) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5273).

Garnishment lien is intended to reach something actually due the defendant and which the defendant could force the garnishee to pay. A.C. White Transf. & Storage Co. v. Grady Mem. Hosp., 151 Ga. App. 751, 261 S.E.2d 476 (1979).

Presence of a debt is necessary to validity of garnishment process. In re Eidson, 6 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980).

Underlying debt is essential for validity of garnishment. In re Eidson, 6 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980).

When no debt is owed by garnishee to the defendant, there is no basis for garnishment. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., 101 Ga. App. 577, 114 S.E.2d 546 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-201, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Garnishments issued under void judgments are also void. In re Eidson, 6 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980).

Garnishment operates both on person of garnishee and on debt itself. — Garnishment proceeding notifies the debtor not to pay the debt, operates to arrest the debt's payment, fixes a lien upon it, and ultimately subjects it to the plaintiff's claim. Thus, it operates both on the person of the garnishee and on the debt itself. In re Eidson, 6 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980).

Garnishment action properly allowed. — Trial court did not err by allowing a garnishment action to proceed because the garnishor was not pursuing a reverse-piercing claim, or any other equitable action, against the garnishee, rather, the action arose from a garnishment action expressly authorized by law. Carrier411 Servs. v. Insight Tech., Inc., 322 Ga. App. 167, 744 S.E.2d 356 (2013).

Garnishment law not intended to violate existing contracts or restrain right to contract. — Garnishee is bound by existing liens on property in the garnishee's hands, and while garnishment law is to prevent evasions and subterfuges, it does not intend to violate existing contracts or restrain right to contract, but is only intended to reach something actually due the defendant and which the defendant could recover personally. J. Austin Dillon Co. v. Edwards Shoe Stores, Inc., 53 Ga. App. 437, 186 S.E. 470 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-208).

Salespersons earnings not subject to garnishment. — One who sells bread, cakes, and pastries for a baking company, receiving as remuneration therefore 10 percent of the cash purchase-price of all such products sold by that person, the company furnishing daily an automobile truck to haul and deliver the bread and pies, with the necessary gasoline to operate the truck, and also the necessary products for such salesperson to sell, it being the arrangement and agreement that at the end of each day the salesperson shall account to the company for the products sold that day, delivering to the company 90 percent of the cash sales, and all unsold bread, and retaining for the salesperson 10 percent thereof, does not earn any salary, wages, or other compensation for selling such bakery products as can be reached by or subjected to the process of garnishment served upon the baking company in proceedings against the salesperson. Hartsfield Co. v. Zakas Bakery, 50 Ga. App. 284, 177 S.E. 825 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5273).

Judgment creditor is bound by existing counter-claims, setoffs, pledges, encumbrances, or liens, though they may be unrecorded. Owens v. Atlanta Trust & Banking Co., 122 Ga. 521, 50 S.E. 379 (1905) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4712).

Garnishment lien attaches upon service of summons. — Lien attaches to the garnished funds when the summons of garnishment is served. Ameron Protective Coatings Div. v. Georgia Steel, Inc., 25 Bankr. 781 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Garnishing creditor has, as to any property, money, or effects of garnishee's debtor that may be caught in hands of garnishee, an inchoate lien, which arises on service of summons of garnishment. Shabaz v. Henn, 48 Ga. App. 441, 173 S.E. 249 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5273).

Service of garnishment operates as an inchoate lien until judgment is rendered against garnishee. Such inchoate lien becomes a complete lien upon, and in virtue of, rendition of judgment against garnishee, after which time the legal rights of the creditor are fixed, dating from service of garnishment. Carmichael Tile Co. v. Yaarab Temple Bldg. Co., 177 Ga. 318, 170 S.E. 294 (1933) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5273).

Service of summons operates as a lien upon all garnishee's indebtedness to the defendant, and on all accruing indebtedness, which lien shall not be defeated by any payments to defendant or other arrangements between a defendant and a garnishee. J. Austin Dillon Co. v. Edwards Shoe Stores, Inc., 53 Ga. App. 437, 186 S.E. 470 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-201, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

As to nature of lien created upon service of summons of garnishment, see Ownby v. Wager, 64 Ga. App. 433, 13 S.E.2d 686 (1941) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-203, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Garnishee to whom defendant is indebted has lien superior to plaintiff in garnishment. — If debtor is indebted to garnishee, the latter has a lien on funds coming into the garnishee's hands, or future indebtedness to the debtor, superior to that of the plaintiff in garnishment; the garnishee is entitled to pay oneself before the garnishee is required to collect for the benefit of others, and this applies to any past indebtedness due the garnishee by the defendant. W.C. Caye & Co. v. Milledgeville Banking Co., 91 Ga. App. 664, 86 S.E.2d 717 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-203 prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

When garnishing creditor obtains valid judgment, lien shall date from service of garnishment. — Service of a summons of garnishment in all cases operates as a lien on the garnishee's indebtedness at the date of service, and upon all future indebtedness accruing up to date of answer, which lien is inchoate or incomplete; such inchoate lien becomes completed when the creditor obtains a valid judgment against the debtor and such lien shall date from service of garnishment. Anderson v. Ashford & Co., 174 Ga. 660, 163 S.E. 741 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5273).

Garnishment by judgment creditor against defendant's insurer. — After the parents of a shooting victim obtained a judgment against the owner of the property on which their son was shot, and the owner filed bankruptcy, the Court of Appeals erred in reversing the trial court and holding that a judgment debtor had no garnishment action against the owner's insurer. Ross v. St. Paul Reinsurance Co., Ltd., 279 Ga. 92, 610 S.E.2d 57 (2005).

Service of summons more than four months before bankruptcy proceeding is effective. — Service of summons of garnishment more than four months before proceeding in bankruptcy is filed creates a lien upon any property, money, or effects of the debtor which may be caught in the hands of the garnishee. Light v. Hunt, 17 Ga. App. 491, 87 S.E. 763 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5272).

Garnishment may be classified as a proceeding quasi in rem. — Statutory proceeding in garnishment strictly speaking is not a proceeding in rem. It partakes both of the nature of a proceeding in personam and a proceeding in rem and may be classified as a proceeding quasi in rem. In re Eidson, 6 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980).

State law controls both procedures and extent to which wages may be garnished under 42 U.S.C. § 659(a). Williamson v. Williamson, 247 Ga. 260, 275 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Effect of exclusive jurisdiction of bankruptcy court over debt. — When debt upon which garnishment action is based came into exclusive jurisdiction of United States Bankruptcy Court prior to entry of judgment by state court, jurisdiction of state court over cause of action is preempted. In re Eidson, 6 Bankr. 613 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1980).

Position of garnishing plaintiff with respect to garnishee is no better than that of the defendant with respect to the garnishee. If the defendant personally could not obtain judgment against the garnishee, garnishing the plaintiff cannot do so. Gant, Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 151 Ga. App. 212, 259 S.E.2d 485 (1979); Scarboro v. Ralston Purina Co., 160 Ga. App. 576, 287 S.E.2d 623 (1981).

Ascertainment of whether garnishee is indebted to or holds assets of defendant. — In garnishment action, question as to whether such garnishee is or is not indebted to the defendant, or whether such garnishee has assets of such defendant in its hands, should be ascertained by comparing their respective claims or accounts, and after service of summons, garnishee may not increase indebtedness to itself for purpose of this comparison. A.C. White Transf. & Storage Co. v. Grady Mem. Hosp., 151 Ga. App. 751, 261 S.E.2d 476 (1979).

Proceeds of war risk insurance paid to beneficiary under federal statute not subject to garnishment. Hunt v. Slagle, 45 Ga. App. 470, 165 S.E. 287 (1932).

Certificates of title held by bank as security interest. — Judgment creditor cannot reach debtor's rights in vehicles, certificates of title to which are held by bank as security interests for debtor's loans, by attempting to garnish certificates of title in bank's hand. Cobb Bank & Trust Co. v. Springfield, 145 Ga. App. 753, 245 S.E.2d 42 (1978).

Effect of execution for amount of garnished property. — When judgment is rendered against the garnishee for property in the garnishee's control at the time of service of the summons of garnishment, and the execution is issued for an amount equal to the value of that same property, no distinction will be drawn between the judgment and the execution; indeed, the garnishee must turn over an amount equal to the value of the garnishable property. Toporek v. Water Processing Co., 169 Ga. App. 141, 312 S.E.2d 132 (1983).

Finding required as to amount withheld. — Trial court erred when the court did not determine whether more had been withheld from the party's earnings than is subject to garnishment under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-20 as the issue was distinctly raised in the evidence and in the party's contentions that these garnishments were keeping the party in slavery and destroying the party's ability to pay current obligations. Cale v. Cale, 161 Ga. App. 398, 288 S.E.2d 677 (1982).

Limitation on creation of debts to defeat garnishment. — Statutory limitation of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-20(b) as to payments to the defendant is based upon the theory that a garnishee may not create a debt on the part of a defendant after the service of the summons of garnishment and then use that debt in order to defeat the lien created by the service of that summons. Ameron Protective Coatings Div. v. Georgia Steel, Inc., 25 Bankr. 781 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Garnishee may not defeat a lien of garnishment by making payments to the defendant. Ameron Protective Coatings Div. v. Georgia Steel, Inc., 25 Bankr. 781 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Independent liability of the garnishees arises when the garnishees are no longer in possession due to some arrangement, between the defendant and the garnishees after the date of the service of the summons of continuing garnishment upon the garnishees, designed to defeat the lien of such garnishment. Stone v. George F. Richardson, Inc., 169 Ga. App. 232, 312 S.E.2d 339 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Collusion between judgment debtor and debtor's professional corporations. — Arrangement between judgment debtor and debtor's professional corporations whereby judgment debtor technically ceased to draw salaries from the corporations supported finding of fraud and collusion, and did not defeat lien of garnishment against such corporations. Stone v. George F. Richardson, Inc., 163 Ga. App. 86, 293 S.E.2d 746 (1982).

Title does not vest in plaintiff in garnishment proceeding. — Title to property that is the subject of a garnishment does not vest in the plaintiffs in the garnishment proceeding, but rather remains property belonging to the defendant. Conner v. Mount Carmel Country Estates, 21 Bankr. 616 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1982).

Stay does not allow return of property. — Georgia's garnishment statutes, including O.C.G.A. § 18-4-20(b), (c), provide that a garnishment plaintiff is protected by the effect of the service of a summons of garnishment through the time of the garnishee's answer; thus, a stay of the garnishee's answer does not allow the garnishee to return to the defendant any of the defendant's property. Chase Manhattan Bank v. LaFray, 258 Ga. App. 183, 573 S.E.2d 435 (2002).

Transfer of garnishment funds to creditor constitutes transfer of property of debtor within the ambit of 11 U.S.C. §§ 101(40) and 547 of the Bankruptcy Code. Conner v. Mount Carmel Country Estates, 21 Bankr. 616 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1982).

Garnishment as preference for bankruptcy purposes. — Georgia law does not vest title in plaintiff but, instead, allows garnishment of property "belonging to defendant." This is true despite fact that nonanswering garnishee is subject to direct liability to plaintiff. Accordingly, to extent that a transfer occurred during 90 day preference period preceding filing of debtor's petition, a preferential transfer has been made. Evans v. CIT Fin. Servs., Inc., 16 Bankr. 731 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1982).

Garnishee cannot waive judgment-debtor's claim to exemption. — While the garnishee can waive its defenses to the proceeding, a garnishee cannot waive the judgment-debtor's claim to an exemption from the garnishment process of the amounts in the hands of the garnishee. Cale v. Eastern Air Lines, 159 Ga. App. 630, 284 S.E.2d 647 (1981).

Garnishee failing to disclose exemption may incur liability. — Garnishee who fails to disclose exemption when the fact is within the garnishee's knowledge, and when the defendant is not present to claim it personally, may render oneself liable to the defendant after payment into court; for the garnishee ought to disclose the garnishment; and the garnishee cannot deprive the defendant of that right against the garnishee by failing to do so. Cale v. Eastern Air Lines, 159 Ga. App. 630, 284 S.E.2d 647 (1981).

Garnishee paying over money which constitutes part of personalty exemption of the debtor does so at garnishee's own risk. Garnishee will be liable to the debtor (garnishee's creditor) for the full amount of the money garnishee has paid. A person who has been brought into court as a garnishee may answer that the property of the debtor, in the garnishee's hands, or the garnishee's indebtedness to such debtor, is exempt by law from seizure on attachment or execution, and the garnishee is bound to bring the fact to the notice of the court; otherwise the judgment against such garnishee, and the satisfaction thereof, will not bar an action against the garnishee by the attaching debtor. Cale v. Eastern Air Lines, 159 Ga. App. 630, 284 S.E.2d 647 (1981).

Garnishee may waive garnishee's personal jurisdiction defense under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-20 and submit itself to the jurisdiction of a court which would not otherwise have jurisdiction over the garnishee. Cale v. Eastern Air Lines, 159 Ga. App. 630, 284 S.E.2d 647 (1981).

Garnishment of ERISA welfare plan. — Federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act, 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq., does not forbid garnishment of an ERISA welfare benefit plan, even when the purpose is to collect judgments against plan participants. Mackey v. Lanier Collection Agency & Serv., Inc., 486 U.S. 825, 108 S. Ct. 2182, 100 L. Ed. 2d 836 (1988).

Cited in Mercantile Nat'l Bank v. Founders Life Assurance Co., 236 Ga. 71, 222 S.E.2d 368 (1976); King v. Tyler, 148 Ga. App. 272, 250 S.E.2d 784 (1978); Fidelity Nat'l Bank v. KM Gen. Agency, Inc., 244 Ga. 753, 262 S.E.2d 67 (1979); Burgess v. Jones, 158 Ga. App. 826, 282 S.E.2d 399 (1981).

Constitutionality

Due process requirements. — Garnishment of wages to satisfy alimony orders or judgments meets demands of due process. Black v. Black, 245 Ga. 281, 264 S.E.2d 216 (1980).

Allowing garnishment of wages earned wholly outside this state is not an unconstitutional extension of the laws of this state to a debt created outside the geographical limits of this state thus depriving the garnishee of due process. United Merchants & Mfrs., Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 166 Ga. App. 468, 304 S.E.2d 552 (1983).

What Is Subject to Garnishment

Garnishee's dominion and control over property. — It was the legislature's intent to allow a garnishor to obtain a garnishment lien only on the property over which the garnishee exercised dominion or control. Parham v. Lanier Collection Agency & Serv., Inc., 178 Ga. App. 84, 341 S.E.2d 889 (1986).

Test of whether funds in hands of third person are subject to garnishment is whether or not the principal debtor could personally recover such funds by suit directly against the garnishee. Anderson v. Burnham, 12 Bankr. 286 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

Check is an asset which is garnishable. Water Processing Co. v. Southern Golf Bldrs., Inc., 248 Ga. 597, 285 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

Garnishment may reach out-of-state wages. — Wages of persons who reside out of this state and which have been earned wholly within or without this state are subject to garnishment in this state particularly when the case is not one brought by writ of attachment. Phillips v. Phillips, 159 Ga. App. 676, 285 S.E.2d 52 (1981).

Garnishment may reach property or money belonging to client in hands of an attorney. Water Processing Co. v. Southern Golf Bldrs., Inc., 248 Ga. 597, 285 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

Garnishment cannot reach assets in possession of garnishee which defendant personally could not recover. Anderson v. Burnham, 12 Bankr. 286 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

Garnishment cannot reach assets in possession of garnishee which defendant personally could not recover from garnishee. J. Austin Dillon Co. v. Edwards Shoe Stores, Inc., 53 Ga. App. 437, 186 S.E. 470 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-201, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1); Southern Amusement Co. v. Neal, 15 Ga. App. 130, 82 S.E. 765 (1914) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5272); Gainesville Feed & Poultry Co. v. Waters, 87 Ga. App. 354, 73 S.E.2d 771 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-203 prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Creditor cannot reach by garnishment assets which the debtor personally could not recover from the garnishee; for what one cannot recover personally cannot, by garnishment, be recovered against the debtor. Hiatt v. Edwards, 52 Ga. App. 152, 182 S.E. 634 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-201 prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

If the defendant personally cannot obtain judgment against the garnishee, the garnishing plaintiff cannot do so. Hiatt v. Edwards, 52 Ga. App. 152, 182 S.E. 634 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-201 prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Husband's obligation to make a lump-sum cash payment to his ex-wife could not be characterized as alimony for garnishment purposes, when the terms of the divorce decree described an exchange of assets between the parties, and it was clear that alimony was not involved. Boyd v. Boyd, 191 Ga. App. 718, 382 S.E.2d 730 (1989).

Income of tenant cropper. — When landlord furnishes to landlord's cropper everything to make the crop, except labor (which is furnished by the cropper, the cropper's family, and others employed by the cropper), net amount due cropper after full settlement with landlord is in nature of wages paid to day laborers. McElmurray v. Turner, 86 Ga. 215, 12 S.E. 359 (1890) (decided under former Ga. L. 1872, p. 43); Thompson v. Passmore, 9 Ga. App. 771, 72 S.E. 185 (1911) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5298).

Contract debtor or one holding property of defendant in tort action. — Plaintiff in a pending tort action for damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by negligence of the defendant may take out garnishment proceeding against contract debtor of the defendant in tort action, or against one who has property, money, or effects in the debtor's possession belonging to the defendant in tort action. Curtis v. Bailey, 51 Ga. App. 119, 179 S.E. 633 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-201, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

(1887) (decided under Ga. L. 1880-81, p. 109); Bluethenthal & Bickart v. Silverman, 113 Ga. 102, 38 S.E. 344 (1901) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4712).

Proceeds from land sold by executor are subject to garnishment. — If executors, empowered by will to sell lands of decedent, sell the land for purpose of division, proceeds are personalty, unimpressed with character of real estate, and therefore are subject to garnishment. Brown Guano Co. v. Bridges, 34 Ga. App. 652, 130 S.E. 695 (1925) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5272).

Bank accounts. — Bank was not entitled to assume that an account was a legitimate corporate account when the bank did not follow the bank's own internal procedure with respect to opening the account and, thus, the bank was not excused from complying with a summons of garnishment naming a signatory on the account, nor did the fact that the bank was unable to locate the account relieve the bank from the bank's responsibilities under the garnishment statutes. Mobile Paint Mfg. Co. v. Johnston, 219 Ga. App. 299, 464 S.E.2d 903 (1995).

AVCO Fin. Servs., Inc.*, 129 Ga. App. 605, 200 S.E.2d 309 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-201, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Garnishment did not reach surplus of proceeds of security in hands of secured creditor, arising from sale made after garnishment had been answered. Cutter & Co. v. Central Bank & Trust Corp., 24 Ga. App. 564, 101 S.E. 704 (1919) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5296).

Setoff by Garnishee

Garnishment lien subject to offset of garnishee; latter subject to good faith. — Garnishment lien becomes perfected upon rendition of valid judgment in favor of garnishing creditor against the defendant, subject, however, to any claim or right of offset in garnishee at the time of service of summons of garnishment or subsequently thereto, up to the time for answer, provided the right in the garnishee was not a result of bad faith on the garnishee's part. Gant, Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 151 Ga. App. 212, 259 S.E.2d 485 (1979).

Garnishee's setoff may not be result of bad faith on the garnishee's part. — Setoff of a valid claim is a remedy specifically given by law to the garnishees, and a garnishment lien is subject to any claim or right of setoff in the garnishee at time of service of summons of garnishment, or subsequently thereto, up to time for answer, provided such right in garnishee was not a result of bad faith on the garnishee's part. Florida First Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 154 Ga. App. 211, 267 S.E.2d 849 (1980).

Availability of setoff. — Right to setoff is an available remedy specifically given by law, whether the defendant debtor is an employee of the garnishee or bears some other relation to the garnishee. Florida First Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 154 Ga. App. 211, 267 S.E.2d 849 (1980).

Bank's right to setoff general deposit account of customer. — Generally, a bank has right of setoff against amount of general deposit account belonging to customer of a matured debt due by customer to the bank. Washington Loan & Banking Co. v. First Fulton Bank & Trust, 155 Ga. App. 141, 270 S.E.2d 242 (1980).

Superiority of lien of garnishee to whom defendant is indebted. — If the debtor is indebted to the garnishee, the latter has a lien on funds coming into the garnishee's hands, or future indebtedness to the debtor, superior to that of another creditor in garnishment; garnishee is entitled to pay oneself before the garnishee is required to collect for the benefit of others. Florida First Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 154 Ga. App. 211, 267 S.E.2d 849 (1980).

Requirement of filing answer. — If the defendant owes debt of a greater amount to the garnishee than the garnishee owes to the defendant, the garnishee would not be required to pay any sums into the court, but this would not relieve the garnishee of responsibility of filing an answer. Washington Loan & Banking Co. v. First Fulton Bank & Trust, 155 Ga. App. 141, 270 S.E.2d 242 (1980).

Garnishee may setoff claim for money illegally taken between time of service and answer. — Garnishee may setoff against defendant a claim for money illegally taken from the garnishee between time of service of garnishment and time for filing garnishment answer. Jacobs Pharmacy Co. v. Southern Bell Tel. Co., 56 Ga. App. 661, 193 S.E. 487 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-203 prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Employer-garnishee cannot setoff employee's indebtedness to employer entirely against nonexempt wages. — Garnishee, in answering a summons of garnishment in a suit against an employee who works for daily, weekly, or monthly wages, where the employee is indebted to the garnishee, is not entitled to offset debt of employee against only that portion of wages due which is not exempt but which is subject to process of garnishment; but garnishee, if garnishee offsets debt of defendant against what garnishee owes defendant, must offset it without reference to whether any portion of garnishee's indebtedness to defendant is exempt from or subject to garnishment. Davison-Paxon Co. v. Mutual Empire Clothing Co., 52 Ga. App. 686, 184 S.E. 409 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-208 as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Right of setoff exists in garnishee-employer respecting indebtedness of defendant-employee to garnishee employer as against claim of plaintiff in garnishment; thus, the gar-nishee is entitled to pay oneself from earnings accruing to the employee before paying the plaintiff in garnishment. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-26.

18-4-21. Garnishment of salaries of officials and employees of state and its subdivisions; exemption; summons.

(a) Money due officials or employees of a municipal corporation or county of this state or of the state government, or any department or institution thereof, as salary for services performed for or on behalf of the municipal corporation or county of this state, or the state, or any department or institution thereof, shall be subject to garnishment, except in no event may the officials' or employees' salary for services performed for or on behalf of any municipal corporation or county of this state, or the state, or any department or institution thereof, be garnisheed where the judgment serving as a basis for the issuance of the summons of garnishment arises out of the liability incurred in the scope of the officials' or employees' governmental employment while responding to an emergency. In such cases, the summons shall be directed to such political entity and served upon the person authorized by law to draw the warrant on the treasury of the government or to issue a check for such salary due, or upon the chief administrative officer of the political subdivision, department, agency, or instrumentality; and such entity shall be required to respond to the summons in accordance with the mandate thereof and as provided by this chapter.

(b) For purposes of this Code section only, the state and its political subdivisions, departments, agencies, and instrumentalities shall be deemed private persons; and jurisdiction for the purpose of issuing a summons of garnishment shall be restricted to a court located in the county in which the warrant is drawn on the treasury of the government or in which the check is issued for the salary due the official or employee of the state or its political subdivisions, departments, agencies, or instrumentalities. (Code 1933, § 46-306, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1977, p. 634, § 1; Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 6; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 5/HB 683.)

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 18-4-21 is not unconstitutionally vague, nor does the statute violate equal protection of the laws for two reasons: (1) this is a limited waiver of state sovereign immunity from suit; and (2) the section is intended to encourage selfless response to emergencies on the part of governmental employees. Harp v. Winkles, 255 Ga. 42, 335 S.E.2d 292 (1985).

“Employed while responding to an emergency.” — City police officer responding to an “officer down” call and under the direct supervision of the officer's immediate supervisor is “employed while responding to an emergency,” pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-21 (a), such that the officer's wages are exempt from garnishment by a judgment creditor. Harp v. Winkles, 255 Ga. 42, 335 S.E.2d 292

Garnishment of funds other than those designated by section. — O.C.G.A. § 18-4-21 provides for limited waiver of sovereign immunity by permitting salaries of officials and employees of the state and the state's subdivisions to be made subject to garnishment. That section, however, is silent as to other funds in hands of the subdivision of the state. Therefore, such funds are still not subject to garnishment in Georgia. Grant v. Barge, 160 Ga. App. 488, 287 S.E.2d 393 (1981).

18-4-22. Exemption of pension or retirement funds or benefits.

(a) Funds or benefits from a pension or retirement program as defined in 29 U.S.C. Section 1002(2)(A) or funds or benefits from an individual retirement account as defined in Section 408 or 408A of the United States Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, shall be exempt from the process of garnishment until paid or otherwise transferred to a member of such program or beneficiary thereof. Such funds or benefits, when paid or otherwise transferred to the member or beneficiary, shall be exempt from the process of garnishment only to the extent provided in Code Section 18-4-20 for other disposable earnings, unless a greater exemption is otherwise provided by law.

(b) The exemption provided by this Code section shall not apply when the garnishment is based upon a judgment for alimony or for child support, in which event such funds or benefits shall then be subject to the process of garnishment to the extent provided in subsection (f) of Code Section 18-4-20.

(c) Nothing in this Code section shall prohibit the attachment or alienation of welfare benefits as defined in 29 U.S.C. Section 1002(1) in the control of an administrator or trustee. (Code 1933, § 46-302, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 5; Ga. L. 1983, p. 683, § 1; Ga. L. 1990, p. 360, § 1; Ga. L. 2006, p. 119, § 1/HB 149.)

Pension funds exempt, not individual pension payments. — Law exempted from garnishment all pension funds for policemen and municipal employees, irrespective of their source or intended beneficiaries, but it is the funds, rather than the individual pension payments, that are exempt from garnishment. Cooper v. City of Atlanta Policemen’s Pension Fund, 147 Ga. App. 633, 249 S.E.2d 684 (1978).

When funds or benefits exempt. — O.C.G.A. § 18-4-22 means that funds or benefits from a pension or retirement program are exempt from the process of garnishment until such funds or benefits are in the hands of the member or beneficiary of the program. Davis v. Davis, 161 Ga. App. 722, 288 S.E.2d 748 (1982).

Chapter 7 bankruptcy. — Debtor’s Individual Retirement Account (IRA) would be excluded from the bankruptcy estate under 11 U.S.C. § 541(c)(2) on the basis of the restriction on transfer by garnishment contained in subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-22, notwithstanding that the transfer restriction was contained only in the Georgia statute and was not contained within the IRA document itself and notwithstanding that the debtor had access to the IRA funds for personal use upon payment of a 10% penalty tax. Meehan v. Wallace, 102 F.3d 1209 (11th Cir. 1997).

Federal preemption. — Twenty-five percent of the defendant ERISA beneficiary’s benefit payment was subject to garnishment by the defendant judgment creditor under a continuing garnishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-22(a) because the ERISA Plan was a Top Hat Plan, which was not subject to the ERISA anti-alienation provision, 29 U.S.C. § 1056. AFLAC Inc. v. Diaz-Verson, No.

(CDL), 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 73140 (M.D. Ga. May 25, 2012).

Benefits not actually received not subject to garnishment. — Retirement benefits paid into registry of trial court by garnishee were not subject to garnishment because the defendant had never received actual possession of the benefits. Birchfield v. Birchfield, 165 Ga. App. 101, 299 S.E.2d 409 (1983).

Individual retirement accounts. — Federal law preempts O.C.G.A. § 18-4-22 and mandates a finding that individual retirement accounts possessed by the garnishees are exempt from garnishment by commercial creditors in a nonbankruptcy situation. Citizens Bank v. Shingler, 173 Ga. App. 511, 326 S.E.2d 861 (1985) (decided prior to 1990 amendment specifically exempting individual retirement account funds or benefits).

Chapter 7 debtor’s Roth individual retirement account (IRA) was not excluded from the property of the estate because O.C.G.A. § 18-4-22(a) applied only to an IRA within the meaning of 26 U.S.C. § 408 and Georgia law provided no similar protection for a Roth IRA established under 26 U.S.C. § 408A. Goodman v. Bramlette (In re Bramlette), 333 B.R. 911 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2005).

Annuity. — O.C.G.A. § 44-13-100 specifically addresses what types of annuities and similar contracts are exempt in bankruptcy cases. Therefore, the debtor’s attempt to exempt the annuity under O.C.G.A. §§ 18-4-22 and 47-2-332 would have failed even if the annuity met the requirements of those statutes (which appeared not to be the case in any event). In re Sheffield, 507 B.R. 400 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2014).

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Ga. L. 1884-85, p. 95, former Civil Code 1895, § 4710, former Civil Code 1910, § 5270, and former Code 1933, § 46-106, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

Construction. — Because garnishment is a special statutory proceeding in derogation of common law, O.C.G.A. § 18-4-23 must be strictly construed. ARC Sec., Inc. v. Massey Bus. College, 221 Ga. App. 489, 471 S.E.2d 569 (1996).

Ga. Bank, 28 Ga. App. 416, 111 S.E. 694 (1922).

When person other than president is served, return must show it was agent in charge. Twilley & Hodges v. Middle Ga. Bank, 28 Ga. App. 416, 111 S.E. 694 (1922) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5270).

Service on others. — Entry showing service on cashier must show that cashier was in charge. North Ga. Banking Co. v. Fancher, 23 Ga. App. 683, 99 S.E. 229 (1919) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5270).

Return merely designating person served as "supt." is insufficient. Hargis v. East Tenn., V. & Ga. Ry., 90 Ga. 42, 15 S.E. 631 (1892); Southern Ry. v. Hagan, 103 Ga. 564, 29 S.E. 760 (1897) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4710).

Service on chief clerk when agent is absent, and that clerk is in charge suffices. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Ellis, 17 Ga. App. 536, 87 S.E. 815 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5270).

Personal service upon ticket agent in charge of ticket office of railroad company, and selling tickets and handling passenger business for the railroad and other like companies is sufficient. Seaboard Air-Line Ry. v. Browder, 144 Ga. 322, 87 S.E. 6 (1915) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5270).

Burden of proof. — When corporation denies that agent served was in charge of office, prima facie presumption in favor of return arises, and burden of proof is on company. Twilley & Hodges v. Middle Ga. Bank, 28 Ga. App. 416, 111 S.E. 694 (1922) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5270).

Evidence sufficient to challenge service. — Testimony from the president and controller of a corporation that they were the only persons authorized to receive service and that the person served was not a corporate officer, performed only clerical functions, and was paid on an hourly basis, along with similar testimony from the receptionist who was served, was sufficient evidence that service was improper. ARC Sec., Inc. v. Massey Bus. College, 221 Ga. App. 489, 471 S.E.2d 569 (1996).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Ga. L. 1955-56, p. 37, former Civil Code 1895 § 4709, and former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5265 and 5269, are included in the annotations for this article. Decisions under prior law dealing with garnishment procedure generally appear in the annotations at the beginning of this chapter.

Garnishments may be issued upon pending suits and summons of garnishments may be served upon any "person" who is supposed to be indebted to, or who has in one's possession property or effects belonging to, defendant. A partnership is but an association of persons, and has always been amenable to suit at common law. Ocilla Grocery Co. v. Wilcox, Ives & Co., 37 Ga. App. 718, 141 S.E. 822 (1928) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5269).

When action is pending. — When there remains the possibility of the judgment being reversed and the defendant prevailing, action is still pending. Carrollton Bank v. Glass, 35 Ga. App. 89, 132 S.E. 238 (1926) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5265).

After case has terminated in judgment against defendant therein, additional summons may not issue. Ahrens & Ott Mfg. Co. v. Patton Sash, Door & Bldg. Co., 94 Ga. 247, 21 S.E. 523 (1894) (decided under former Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 37); Paton & Co. v. Chamberliss & Co., 114 Ga. 626, 40 S.E. 760 (1902) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4709).

Malicious abuse of process. — When the trial court concluded the statutory grounds for garnishment were established, there was no showing that the plaintiff-bank had proceeded in the absence of any justiciable issue so as to warrant the filing of a counterclaim by the defendant for malicious abuse and use of process. Young v. Bank of Quitman, 180 Ga. App. 491, 349 S.E.2d 510 (1986).

Technical defects in issuance of garnishments. — Since affidavits filed in support of legal proceedings are amendable as provided by O.C.G.A. § 9-10-130, assuming there were technical defects in the issuance of the garnishments, these defects were cured at the hearing on traverses where the orders of the trial court (although finding them technically correct) dismissed them as moot because of the satisfaction of the indebtedness. Young v. Bank of Quitman, 180 Ga. App. 491, 349 S.E.2d 510 (1986).

18-4-40. Grounds for issuance of writ of garnishment prior to judgment.

In cases where an action is pending against the defendant, garnishment may issue prior to judgment only in the following cases:

- (1) When the defendant resides outside the limits of the state;
- (2) When the defendant is actually removing, or about to remove, outside the limits of the county;
- (3) When the defendant is causing his property to be removed beyond the limits of the state;
- (4) When the defendant has transferred, has threatened to transfer, or is about to transfer property to defraud or delay his creditors; or
- (5) When the defendant is insolvent. (Code 1933, § 46-201, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Code 1933, § 46-101, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Garnishment proceedings are purely statutory and cannot be extended to cases not enumerated in statutes, and courts have no power to enlarge the remedy or hold under it property not made subject to process. Undercoffer v. Brosnan, 113 Ga. App. 475, 148 S.E.2d 470 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-101).

Process of garnishment issued upon ground not authorized by statute is without authority of law, and judgment based upon it is binding upon no one. Undercofler v. Brosnan, 113 Ga. App. 475, 148 S.E.2d 470 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-101).

Prejudgment garnishment for children's expenses. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(h)(3)(B)(i) does not authorize garnishment for uninsured health care expenses that have not been reduced to a money judgment without compliance with the requirements of the more restrictive prejudgment garnishment procedure set out in O.C.G.A. § 18-4-40. Stoker v. Severin, 292 Ga. App. 870, 665 S.E.2d 913 (2008).

Use of post-judgment garnishment procedures when money judgment obtained. — When the defendant defaulted and a money judgment was obtained against it, there was a "judgment" on the merits, even though there was no expressly adjudicated "final judgment," and the use of post-judgment garnishment procedures, rather than prejudgment gar-nishment procedures, to enforce the judgment provided the defendant with the process to which it was due under the federal constitution. Georgia Farm Bldgs., Inc. v. Willard, 597 F. Supp. 629 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Former spouse not entitled to prejudgment garnishment. — Because the amount a former spouse claimed the other spouse owed for health care and extracurricular activity expenses incurred by their children had not been reduced to a money judgment, and because the former spouse failed to show entitlement to the process of prejudgment garnishment under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-40, the other spouse's traverse to the garnishment petition was properly granted. Stoker v. Severin, 292 Ga. App. 870, 665 S.E.2d 913 (2008).

18-4-41. Application to judge for writ; contents.

When the plaintiff contends one or more of the grounds set forth in Code Section 18-4-40 exist, the plaintiff may, prior to obtaining judgment against the defendant, make application to a judge of any court of record, other than the probate court, in the county of residence of the garnishee having jurisdiction over the garnishee, for an order authorizing the issuance of summons of garnishment. Such application shall be made in writing, under oath, and shall set forth the specific facts that show the existence of one or more such grounds as well as the name of the court where the action is pending, the case number of such action, and the amount claimed therein by the plaintiff. (Code 1933, § 46-202, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1895, § 4708, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Amount stated in affidavit may be less than ad damnum clause in original suit. The latter may be reduced by amendment. Seaboard Air-Line Ry. v. Hutchinson, 4 Ga. App. 526, 62 S.E. 97 (1908) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4708).

18-4-42. Entry of order by judge authorizing garnishment prior to judgment; issuance of summons of garnishment pursuant to order by clerk of court generally.

After considering plaintiff’s application, if the judge to whom same is made finds that the facts alleged show the existence of one or more of the grounds set forth in Code Section 18-4-40, he may enter an order authorizing garnishment prior to judgment. The entry of such order shall authorize the clerk of the court in which the garnishment proceedings are pending to issue summons of garnishment from time to time without a further showing until the case is terminated or until further order of the court. (Code 1933, § 46-203, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1910, § 5273, and former Code 1933, § 46-203, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Service of summons creates lien. — Garnishing creditor has, as to any property, money, or effects of the debtor that may be caught in the hands of the garnishee, an inchoate lien, which arises on service of summons of garnishment. Shabaz v. Henn, 48 Ga. App. 441, 173 S.E.

249 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5273).

Service of garnishment operates as an inchoate lien until judgment is rendered against the garnishee. Such inchoate lien becomes a complete lien upon, and in virtue of, rendition of judgment against garnishee, after which time the legal rights of creditor are fixed, dating from service of garnishment. *Carmichael Tile Co. v. 18-4-43. Bond required prior to issuance of summons of garnishment; amount; presentation of bond to clerk of court for approval.

No summons of garnishment prior to judgment shall issue unless accompanied by a bond with good security, conditioned to pay the defendant all costs and damages that he may sustain in consequence of the issuance of the summons of garnishment in the event that the amount claimed to be due was not due, or that no lawful ground for the issuance of such garnishment prior to judgment existed, or that the property sought to be garnisheed was not subject to garnishment. Such bond shall be in a sum equal to twice the amount claimed due in the plaintiff's application. The bond shall be presented to the clerk of the court where the application provided for in this article is sought to be filed, for approval by the clerk prior to making application to the judge of the court for the writ of garnishment. (Code 1933, § 46-204, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Civil Code 1895, § 4708, former Civil Code 1910, § 5268, and former Code 1933, § 46-102 as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Purpose of bond. — Bond is intended for protection of the defendant, not to insure the garnishee against costs in answering. Brunswick Bank & Trust Co. v. Delegal, 122 Ga. 189, 50 S.E. 44 (1905) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4708).

Bond executed by applicant for garnishment is amendable. Carrollton Bank v. Glass, 35 Ga. App. 89, 132 S.E. 238 (1926) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5268).

Attorney's fees for defense of garnishment. — Reasonable attorney's fees incurred by the defendant in a garnishment proceeding in defense to the garnishment constitute damages sustained by the defendant in consequence of suing out a garnishment and are recoverable as such in suit on bond. Cohen v. Nichols, 54 Ga. App. 394, 188 S.E. 48 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-102).

When summons of garnishment shall issue before judgment against the defendant, the defendant may at any time traverse the plaintiff's affidavit upon which the garnishment was obtained, stating that the affidavit is untrue or legally insufficient. Upon filing of the traverse, the court from which the garnishment issued shall issue a show cause order to the plaintiff requiring him to appear at a specified time, which shall not be more than ten days from the filing of the traverse, to prove the grounds for the issuance of the garnishment. If the plaintiff shall fail to carry the burden of proof, the order authorizing the garnishment prior to judgment shall be revoked. (Code 1933, § 46-206, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Preemption by federal law. — Because O.C.G.A. § 18-4-46 would have required the defendant to obtain a state court judgment prior to garnishing the plaintiff debtor's wages, the Georgia statute was preempted by the Higher Education Act, 20 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq., because that Act hindered the defendant's ability to garnish a debtor's wages. Bennett v. Premiere Credit of N. Am., LLC, No. 12-12859, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 1828 (11th Cir. Jan. 28, 2013) (Unpublished).

18-4-47. Funds and property paid into court or subject to garnishment to be held by clerk pending judgment; exception.

When funds or other property are paid into court or subject to garnishment under this article, the funds or other property shall be held by the clerk of the court in which the garnishment proceedings are pending until final judgment is entered against the defendant in the main proceedings; provided, however, that, if the garnishment is released by filing of the bond provided for by Code Section 18-4-81, such funds or other property shall be delivered to the defendant if no claim has been filed pursuant to Code Section 18-4-95 at the time the bond is approved and filed with the clerk of the court. (Code 1933, § 46-208, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Disposition of choses in action deposited with clerk. — When the garnishee returns what the garnishee has in the garnishee's hands, notes, bonds, and other evidences of debt belonging to the absent debtor, the same are directed to be deposited with the clerk; and after the plaintiff shall have established the plaintiff's demand, these choses in action, thus surrendered, are not to be sold as other property but turned over to the agent or attorney of the creditor, to be collected, and the proceeds, or so much thereof as shall be needed for that purpose, applied to the discharge of the plaintiff's debt. Water Processing Co. v. Toporek, 158 Ga. App. 502, 280 S.E.2d 901, rev'd on other grounds, 248 Ga. 597, 285 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

After final judgment is entered in an action in which a summons of garnishment was issued prior to judgment, the garnishment proceedings shall continue in accordance with Article 4 of this chapter. The plaintiff shall not have judgment against the garnishee until he obtains final judgment against the defendant. (Code 1933, § 46-209, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1895, § 4726, and former Civil Code 1910, § 5292, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Applicability of section. — Former provisions applied when there had been trial of issues on traverse to garnishee's answer. Fagan v. Jackson & Orme, 1 Ga. App. 24, 57 S.E. 1052 (1907) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4726); South Ga. Grocery Co. v. Wade Chambers Grocery Co., 12 Ga. App. 213, 77 S.E. 6 (1913) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5292).

Judgment against defendant must be capable of present enforcement, and not an oral judgment. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Brown, 3 Ga. App. 561, 60 S.E. 319 (1908) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4726).

Judgment must be introduced in evidence, although the garnishee and the plaintiff agree that the claim is a proceeding upon judgment. Mitchell v. Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co., 7 Ga. App. 824, 68 S.E. 343 (1910) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4726).

Discharge in bankruptcy will prevent rendition of judgment against the defendant and sureties on dissolution bond. A. Klipstein & Co. v. Allen-Miles Co., 136 F. 385 (5th Cir. 1905) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4726).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Ga. L. 1884-55, p. 54, former Civil Code 1895, § 4708, and former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5265 and 5268 are included in the annotations for this article. Decisions under prior law dealing with garnishment procedure generally appear in annotations at the beginning of this chapter.

Constitutionality. — Post-judgment garnishment proceedings are not unconstitutional for lack of due process. Morgan v. Morgan, 156 Ga. App. 726, 275 S.E.2d 673 (1980).

Postjudgment garnishment procedure meets requirements of judicial supervision and notice, and is not unconstitutional for those reasons. Easterwood v. LeBlanc, 240 Ga. 61, 239 S.E.2d 383 (1977); Farmer v. Farmer, 147 Ga. App. 387, 249 S.E.2d 106 (1978).

Parties to proceedings. — Post-judgment garnishments primarily involve a plaintiff (bank) and garnishee (employer) with a very limited right of participation by the defendant (debtor). Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Defendant debtor is not a "party" to a garnishment proceeding, although provision is made in O.C.G.A. § 18-4-64 for defendant debtor to receive notice. The defendant debtor at the defendant debtor's option may become a party by compliance with O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93 for the limited purposes set out in O.C.G.A. § 18-4-65. Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Dismissal of proceeding upon notification of bankruptcy. — Judgment creditor's attorney had an affirmative duty to dismiss the garnishment proceeding upon notification of bankruptcy. Dennis v. Pentagon Fed. Credit Union, 17 Bankr. 558 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Proceedings must be based on a domestic, not a foreign judgment. Union Inv. Co. v. Southern Ry., 32 Ga. App. 478, 124 S.E. 77, cert. denied, 32 Ga. App. 808, (1924) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5265).

Separate affidavit and bond is required for each judgment as to which garnishment is sought. Rich & Co. v. Kiser & Co., 61 Ga. 370 (1878) (decided under former Ga. L. 1884-55, p. 54).

Consolidation by assignee of two executions issued on judgments obtained in separate suits in affidavit and bond renders proceedings illegal and void. Morgan v. Latham, 111 Ga. 835, 36 S.E. 99 (1900) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4708); Wright v. Stewart, 22 Ga. App. 655, 97 S.E. 193 (1918) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5268).

18-4-60. Right to writ of garnishment after judgment.

In all cases where a money judgment shall have been obtained in a court of this state or in a federal court sitting in this state, the plaintiff shall be entitled to the process of garnishment. (Code 1933, § 46-101, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Bank account holder whose accounts contained funds that were exempt from garnishment had standing to challenge the constitutionality of the garnishment statute as there was a substantial likelihood the account holder would suffer future garnishment proceedings and the return of the account holder's previously garnished funds did not moot the action because the "capable of repetition, yet evading review" exception applied. Strickland v. Alexander, 772 F.3d 876 (11th Cir. 2014).

Garnishment proceedings are purely statutory and cannot be extended to cases not enumerated in statute. Kirchman v. Kirchman, 212 Ga. 488, 93 S.E.2d 685 (1956).

As garnishment proceedings are purely statutory the proceedings cannot be extended to cases not enumerated in the statutes, and courts have no power to enlarge the remedy or hold under it property not made subject to process. Undercofler v. Brosnan, 113 Ga. App. 475, 148 S.E.2d 470 (1966).

Garnishment proceedings are purely statutory, in derogation of common law, and must be strictly pursued. Arnold v. Citizens' & S. Nat'l Bank, 47 Ga. App. 254, 170 S.E. 316 (1933).

Process of garnishment issued upon any ground not authorized by statute is without authority of law, and judgment based upon it is binding upon no one. Undercofler v. Brosnan, 113 Ga. App. 475, 148 S.E.2d 470 (1966).

Test as to whether funds in hands of another are subject to garnishment is whether or not the defendant in garnishment could recover such funds by suit directly against the garnishee. Morgan v. Morgan, 156 Ga. App. 726, 275 S.E.2d 673 (1980).

Judgment rendered in foreign jurisdiction. — Summons of garnishment cannot legally issue upon judgment rendered in a foreign jurisdiction. Allman v. Hardee, Barovick, Konecky & Braun, 152 Ga. App. 551, 263 S.E.2d 489 (1979).

Judgment for alimony is a money judgment in sense that it may be enforced in the same manner as other judgments as is a judgment for child support. Thacker Constr. Co. v. Williams, 154 Ga. App. 670, 269 S.E.2d 519 (1980).

Decree of alimony is a money judgment and as such may be the subject matter of post-judgment garnishment proceeding. Morgan v. Morgan, 156 Ga. App. 726, 275 S.E.2d 673 (1980).

Burden of proof. — Burden is on the plaintiff generally to establish that the plaintiff is entitled to the garnished fund. Thacker Constr. Co. v. Williams, 154 Ga. App. 670, 269 S.E.2d 519 (1980).

Attorney subject to garnishment, when the attorney has money or other effects belonging to the defendant in the attorney's hands. Water Processing Co. v. Toporek, 158 Ga. App. 502, 280 S.E.2d 901, rev'd on other grounds, 248 Ga. 597, 285 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

Chose in action. — Proper way to reach chose in action is by garnishment. Water Processing Co. v. Toporek, 158 Ga. App. 502, 280 S.E.2d 901, rev'd on other grounds, 248 Ga. 597, 285 S.E.2d 21 (1981).

Use of garnishment procedures generally. — When the defendant defaulted and a money judgment was obtained against the defendant, there was a "judgment" on the merits, even though there was no expressly adjudicated "final judgment," and the use of post-judgment garnishment procedures, rather than prejudgment garnishment procedures, to enforce the judgment provided the defendant with the process to which it was due under the federal Constitution. Georgia Farm Bldgs., Inc. v. Willard, 597 F. Supp. 629 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

The plaintiff, the plaintiff's attorney at law, or the plaintiff's agent shall make, on personal knowledge, an affidavit setting forth that the plaintiff has a judgment against a named defendant, the amount claimed to be due on the judgment, the name of the court which rendered the judgment, and the case number thereof. Upon the filing of the affidavit with the clerk of any court having jurisdiction over the garnishee, the clerk shall cause a summons of garnishment to issue forthwith; provided, however, that the affidavit shall first be made and be approved as containing the information required by this Code section in one of the following ways:

(1) The affidavit may be made before and approved by a judge of the court in which the garnishment proceeding is filed;

(2) The affidavit may be made before and approved by a judge of the court that rendered the judgment upon which the garnishment is based;

(3) The affidavit may be made before and approved by a judge of any court of record;

(4) The affidavit may be made before any officer authorized to administer oaths, including a notary public, provided that the affidavit is then submitted by mail or in person to any judge of a court specified in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of this Code section and is approved by him; or

(5) The affidavit may be made before the clerk or deputy clerk of the court in which the garnishment is filed or before any officer authorized to administer oaths, including a notary public, and may be approved by the clerk or deputy clerk if the judge or judges of the court promulgate rules supervising the initiation of the garnishment proceedings and the affidavit is made and approved pursuant to such rules. No court rule or practice shall preclude a plaintiff from proceeding pursuant to paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) of this Code section. (Code 1933, § 46-102, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

CONSTITUTIONALITY

Present obligation necessary. — Garnishment on apprehension that some amount might become due in the future is not authorized. Kirchman v. Kirchman, 212 Ga. 488, 93 S.E.2d 685 (1956).

Jurisdiction over garnishment of U.S. Marine Corps member’s pay. — Georgia trial court had jurisdiction to consider a wife’s garnishment of her husband’s U.S. Marine Corps pay to collect past due child support, despite the fact that the Marine Corps Finance Center (the garnishee) was located in Missouri and the husband was stationed in North Carolina. Souza v. Souza, 196 Ga. App. 59, 395 S.E.2d 298, cert. denied, 196 Ga. App. 909, (1990).

Claim for interest waived. — Because the plaintiffs failed to timely put an insurer on notice that the plaintiffs were seeking to garnish the interest accruing on an underlying consent judgment with the insured, the plaintiffs claim for that interest was waived under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-61. St. Paul Reinsurance Co. v. Ross, 276 Ga. App. 135, 622 S.E.2d 374 (2005).

Garnishee holding funds of judgment debtor. — One need not know prior to making affidavit that the garnishee holds funds or property of the judgment debtor. Fidelity Nat’l Bank v. KM Gen. Agency, Inc., 244 Ga. 753, 262 S.E.2d 67 (1979).

Name of garnishee need not be stated in affidavit for garnishment. Gainesville Feed & Poultry Co. v. Waters, 87 Ga. App. 354, 73 S.E.2d 771 (1952).

Affidavits subscribed to before unauthorized persons. — When garnishment or attachment affidavits are subscribed to before unauthorized persons, proceedings are void ab initio rendering judgments based thereon likewise void. Jenkins v. Community Loan & Inv. Corp., 120 Ga. App. 543, 171 S.E.2d 654 (1969).

Absence of a judge’s or clerk’s signature on an affidavit for garnishment did not constitute a nonamendable defect justifying the grant of a motion to set aside a judgment. Horizon Credit Corp. v. Lanier Bank & Trust Co., 220 Ga. App. 362, 469 S.E.2d 452 (1996).

Fieri facias need not issue along with or follow judgment prior to issuance of summons of garnishment. Black

Constitutionality

Garnishment procedure meets due process requirements. — Constitutional due process requirements are adequately met by judicial supervision and notice to the defendant mandated by the statutory procedure for garnishments. Black v. Black, 245 Ga. 281, 264 S.E.2d 216 (1980).

Compliance of garnishment procedure with due process requirements. — See Antico v. Antico, 241 Ga. 294, 244 S.E.2d 820 (1978).

18-4-62. Contents and service of summons of garnishment; requirements as to filing of answer to summons.

(a) The summons of garnishment shall be directed to the garnishee, commanding the garnishee to respond stating what money or other property is subject to garnishment. Except as provided in subsection (b) or (c) of this Code section, the garnishee's answer shall be filed with the court issuing the summons not sooner than 30 days and not later than 45 days after the service of the summons and shall be accompanied by the money or other property subject to garnishment. Upon the affidavit and summons being delivered to the sheriff, marshal, constable, or like officer of the court issuing the summons, it shall be his or her duty to serve the summons of garnishment, as set forth in Code Section 18-4-23, upon the person to whom it is directed and to make an entry of service upon the affidavit and return the affidavit to the court. The summons of garnishment shall state that if the garnishee fails to file a garnishee's answer to the summons, a judgment by default will be entered against the garnishee for the amount claimed by plaintiff against the defendant.

(b) Under circumstances where the defendant has been an employee of the garnishee, and if the defendant is no longer employed by the garnishee, and if the garnishee has no money or property of the defendant subject to garnishment, the garnishee may immediately file the garnishee's answer; provided, however, that such garnishee's answer shall be filed not later than 45 days after the service of the summons.

(c) If the garnishee is a bank or other financial institution and if the defendant does not have an active account with, and is not the owner of any money or property in the possession of, the bank or financial institution, then the garnishee may immediately file a garnishee's answer; provided, however, that such garnishee's answer shall be filed not later than 45 days after the service of the summons. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of summons of garnishment. — Summons of garnishment is the process that brings the garnishee into court, and in this respect is like process in an ordinary suit, its purpose being to give notice to the garnishee of the plaintiff's claim upon the defendant's property in the garnishee's possession or upon the garnishee's indebtedness to the defendant. Gowen v. Bell, 113 Ga. App. 324, 148 S.E.2d 52 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-105, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Substantial compliance with requirements. — Substantial compliance with the requisites of the Code, with respect to issuing and serving of process, will be sufficient, and, when notice is given, no technical or formal objection shall invalidate any process. Gainesville Feed & Poultry Co. v. Waters, 87 Ga. App. 354, 73 S.E.2d 771 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-105, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Premature answer in garnishment is amendable. — Answer in garnishment prematurely filed exists, after time for proper filing arrives, in an imperfect form, and is therefore amendable as are pleadings generally. Mark Ten Homes Corp. v. First Nat'l Bank, 115 Ga. App. 597, 155 S.E.2d 455 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Personal service necessary. — Former Civil Code 1910, § 5269 required that when summons of garnishment is issued, officer shall serve the summons upon person of garnishee, which means that the summons shall be served upon the garnishee personally. Robinson v. T.A. Bryson & Sons, 45 Ga. App. 440, 165 S.E. 158 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5269).

Personal service defined. — Personal service means actual delivery of process to the defendant in person, and does not include leaving a copy at the defendant's usual place of abode, or the defendant's home, or at the defendant's office, or by delivery to someone else. Robinson v. T.A. Bryson & Sons, 45 Ga. App. 440, 165 S.E. 158 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5269).

Availability of personal service provisions of § 9-11-4(d). — Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d) concerning personal service of process are available in a garnishment case. Alpha Transp. Serv., Inc. v. Cartwright, 248 Ga. 701, 285 S.E.2d 713 (1982).

O.C.G.A. § 18-4-62 does not expressly state that personal service provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d) are unavailable, and further, § 9-11-4(j) provides that "service shall be sufficient when made in accordance with the statutes relating particularly to the proceeding or in accordance with this Code section." Alpha Transp. Serv., Inc. v. Cartwright, 248 Ga. 701, 285 S.E.2d 713 (1982).

Service on nonresident garnishee's agent and answer by garnishee. — When attachment process is sued out against nonresident and summons of garnishment was served on agent of garnishee, and when garnishee filed answer admitting funds, garnishee cannot legally defend against subsequent action on attachment bond on ground that the garnishee was not personally served as required. Carrington v. Wilharbla Realty Co., 67 Ga. App. 898, 20 S.E.2d 860 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933,

Return of service conclusive as to identity of person to whom summons was directed. — When it is not contended that it was irregular or incomplete in any way, return of service is conclusive as to identity of person to whom summons of garnishment was directed. Gainesville Feed & Poultry Co. v. Waters, 87 Ga. App. 354, 73 S.E.2d 771 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-105, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Amendability of return of service. — Return of service not amendable to show that person named in it was garnishee served. Gibbs v. Rhodes Furn. Co., 58 Ga. App. 352, 198 S.E. 315 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-105, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Motion to quash filed after time for answering has expired. — When time provided by law for answering summons of garnishment has expired when garnishee files the garnishee's motion to quash, the trial court errs if the court grants the motion. Gowen v. Bell, 113 Ga. App. 324, 148 S.E.2d 52 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-105, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Garnishment by judgment creditor against defendant's insurer. — After the parents of a shooting victim obtained judgment against the owner of the property on which their son was shot, and the owner filed bankruptcy, the Court of Appeals erred in reversing the trial court and holding that the judgment debtor had no garnishment action against the owner's insurer; the insurer could contest, under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-62, the assertion that it held property belonging to the owner, namely the benefits to be paid on the owner's behalf under an insurance contract. Ross v. St. Paul Reinsurance Co., Ltd., 279 Ga. 92, 610 S.E.2d 57 (2005).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Civil Code 1910, § 5269 have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

Additional affidavit to obtain another summons in appropriate cases. — While summons of garnishment may issue from time to time before trial, without giving an additional affidavit, the plaintiff in a garnishment proceeding is not precluded from making, if the plaintiff so desires, an additional affidavit to obtain another summons of garnishment, when the answer of the garnishee to the first summons shows that the garnishee was indebted to the defendant in an amount less than that of the plaintiff's claim. *Johnson v. 18-4-64. Service of copy of summons of garnishment upon defendant; notice of filing and issuance of summons of garnishment; time for distribution.

(a) In a garnishment based on a judgment, the defendant shall be given notice of the filing of the first summons of garnishment on an affidavit for garnishment and of the issuance of an additional summons of garnishment on such affidavit when no notice has been given to the defendant within 90 days immediately preceding the issuance of such additional summons, using any one or more of the following methods:

(1) The plaintiff, at the time the garnishment is filed with the clerk, shall commence procedures to effectuate the service of a copy of the summons of garnishment on the defendant; and service thereafter shall be made on the defendant as soon as is reasonably practicable. Service pursuant to this paragraph shall be made pursuant to Code Section 9-11-4;

(2) The plaintiff, after issuance of the summons of garnishment and not more than three business days after service of the summons of garnishment on the garnishee, shall cause a written notice to be sent to the defendant at the defendant's last known address by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested. Either the return receipt indicating receipt by the defendant or the envelope bearing the official notification from the United States Postal Service of the defendant's refusal to accept delivery of such registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery shall be filed with the clerk of the court in which the garnishment is pending. The defendant's refusal to accept such registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery addressed to defendant shall be deemed notice to defendant;

(3) The plaintiff, after the issuance of the summons of garnishment and not more than three business days after service of the summons of garnishment on the garnishee, shall cause a written notice to be delivered personally to the defendant by the plaintiff or by the plaintiff's attorney at law or other agent. A certification by the person making the delivery shall be filed with the clerk;

(4)(A) When the defendant resides out of the state, has departed the state, cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state, or conceals his place of residence from the plaintiff and the fact shall appear, by affidavit, to the satisfaction of the judge or clerk of the court, the levy and attachment of the lien of the garnishment shall constitute sufficient notice to the defendant, provided such levy and attachment of the lien of garnishment alone shall constitute sufficient notice, unless the plaintiff has actual knowledge of the defendant's address, in which case, to provide sufficient notice, the plaintiff shall also mail a written notice of garnishment to the defendant at said address; or, not having such actual knowledge of the defendant's address but the address at which the defendant was served being shown on the return of service in the action resulting in the judgment, to provide sufficient notice, the plaintiff shall also mail a written notice of garnishment to the defendant at said address.

(B) A mailing of the written notice provided for in this Code section shall be made after the issuance of the summons of garnishment and not more than three business days after service of the summons of garnishment on the garnishee; and a certificate of such mailing shall be filed with the clerk by the person mailing the notice;

(5)(A) Where it shall appear by affidavit that a defendant in the garnishment action is not a resident of this state or has departed from this state, or after due diligence cannot be found in this state, or conceals his place of residence from the plaintiff, notice may be given by causing two publications of the written notice in the paper in which advertisements are printed by the sheriff in each county in which a summons of garnishment is served. Such publications must be at least six days apart; and the second publication must be made not more than 21 days after the service of the summons of garnishment on the garnishee. A certification by the person causing the notice to be published shall be filed with the clerk, provided such publication shall constitute sufficient notice alone, unless the plaintiff has actual knowledge of the defendant's address, in which case, to provide sufficient notice, the plaintiff shall also mail a written notice of garnishment to the defendant at said address.

(B) A mailing of the written notice provided for in this Code section shall be made after the issuance of the summons of garnishment and not more than three business days after service of the summons of garnishment on the garnishee; and a certificate of such mailing shall be filed with the clerk by the person mailing the notice;

(6) After issuance of the summons of garnishment and not more than three business days after service of the summons of garnishment on the garnishee, the plaintiff shall send by ordinary mail a written notice of the garnishment to the defendant at the address at which the defendant was served in the action resulting in the judgment on which the garnishment proceeding is based; provided, however, this paragraph may be used only when the garnishment proceeding is commenced within 60 days after the judgment upon which the garnishment is based was obtained. A certification by the person mailing the notice shall be filed with the clerk;

(7) Where the defendant's address is known, the plaintiff, after issuance of the summons of garnishment and not more than three business days after service of the summons of garnishment on the garnishee, shall send to the defendant at such known address by ordinary mail a written notice of the garnishment. A certification by the person mailing the notice shall be filed with the clerk.

(b) The receiving by the defendant of actual timely notice of a summons of garnishment shall constitute notice.

(c) "Written notice," as referred to in paragraphs (2) through (7) of subsection (a) of this Code section, shall consist of a copy of the summons of garnishment or of a document which includes the names of the plaintiff and the defendant, the amount claimed in the affidavit of garnishment, a statement that a garnishment against the property and credits of the defendant has been or will be served on the garnishee, and the name of the court issuing the summons of garnishment.

(d) The methods of notification specified in subsection (a) of this Code section are cumulative and may be used in any sequence or combination. Where it appears that a plaintiff has reasonably, diligently, and in good faith attempted to use one method, another method thereafter may be utilized; and, for the time during which the attempt was being made, the time limit shall be tolled for the subsequent method.

(e) No money or other property delivered to the court by the garnishee shall be distributed; nor shall any judgment be rendered against the garnishee until after the expiration of ten days from the date of compliance with at least one method of notification provided by subsection (a) of this Code section. (Code 1933, § 46-105, enacted by Ga. L. 1977, p. 159, § 2; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1589, § 3.)

Garnishment procedure meets constitutional due process requirements.

— Constitutional due process requirements are adequately met by judicial supervision and notice to the defendant mandated by the statutory procedure for garnishments. Black v. Black, 245 Ga. 281, 264 S.E.2d 216 (1980).

Garnishment proceeding as complying with procedural due process requirements. — See Antico v. Antico, 241 Ga. 294, 244 S.E.2d 820 (1978).

Written notice containing specified information was sufficient, although unsigned. Mahan v. Ford Motor Co., 146 Ga. App. 291, 246 S.E.2d 374 (1978).

No garnishment allowed upon out-of-state wages of nonresident. — Georgia state court was without power to enforce a Georgia child support judgment through the garnishment of the defendant's wages in another state when the defendant was not within Georgia. Nelson v. Nelson, 173 Ga. App. 546, 327 S.E.2d 529 (1985).

Court refused to dismiss consumer's claim that a debt collection agency's letter to the consumer did not comply with the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-64(c) that written notice include a statement that a garnishment against the property and credits had been or would be served on the garnishee; the collection agency, an agency employee, and a law firm failed to address that claim in their Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. Taylor v. Heath W. Williams, L.L.C., 510 F. Supp. 2d 1206 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 23, 2007).

Dismissal of a garnishment action was proper because the judgment creditor failed to comply with the notice requirement of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-64(a)(2); the judgment debtor was not served with notice until more than six months after the bank was served. Because there was no compliance with the notice requirements, the burden did not shift to the judgment debtor to raise improper service/notice as a defense. TBF Fin., LLC v. Houston, 298 Ga. App. 657, 680 S.E.2d 662 (2009).

Substantial compliance with three-day notice period was insufficient. — Court of Appeals erred when the court held that a judgment creditor's notification of a judgment debtor of a garnishment eight business days after service of the garnishee substantially complied with O.C.G.A. § 18-4-64(a)(7)'s requirement that notice be given within three business days. O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1 did not apply because the statute was unambiguous. Cook v. NC Two, L.P., 289 Ga. 462, 712 S.E.2d 831 (2011).

18-4-65. Issues defendant may raise by traverse of plaintiff's affidavit.

(a) When garnishment proceedings are based upon a judgment, the defendant, by traverse of the plaintiff's affidavit, may challenge the existence of the judgment or the amount claimed due thereon. The defendant may plead any other matter in bar of the judgment, except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section.

(b) The validity of the judgment upon which a garnishment is based may only be challenged in accordance with Chapter 11 of Title 9; and no such challenge shall be entertained in the garnishment case. However, where the court finds that the defendant has attacked the validity of the judgment upon which the garnishment is based in an appropriate forum, the judge may order the garnishment released and stayed until the validity of the judgment has been determined in such forum.

(c) If the garnishment proceedings are based upon a pending action, the case shall proceed in accordance with Code Section 18-4-45. (Code 1933, § 46-403, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1982, p. 3, § 18.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Procedure for debtor asserting interest in garnishment funds. — Only O.C.G.A. §§ 18-4-65 and 18-4-93 provide how debtor may assert any “interest” the debtor may have in garnishment funds. Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Defendant is not a “party” to the garnishment proceeding, although provision is made for the defendant to receive notice. Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

O.C.G.A. § 18-4-65 does not set a deadline by which a traverse must be filed and does not state or imply that the failure to file a traverse divests the defendant of any interest in garnished property. Bowen v. Thompson (In re Thompson), No. 13-52212, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 5610 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Apr. 29, 2013).

Challenge to validity of judgment not permitted. — In a postjudgment garnishment proceeding, the judgment debtor’s traverse asserting the judgment was void or voidable was clearly an impermissible challenge to the validity of the judgment. The trial court was not authorized to consider the debtor’s verified complaint for damages which addressed issues in bar of judgment in support of the debtor’s traverse, and the trial court improperly dismissed the proceeding by granting summary judgment on the debtor’s verified complaint without holding an evidentiary hearing on the debtor’s traverse. Southern Land & Cattle Co. v. Brock, 213 Ga. App. 3, 443 S.E.2d 647 (1994).

Res judicata. — Trial court properly granted a bank summary judgment in a suit for conversion against the bank brought by a debtor because the debtor’s claim was barred by res judicata since the debtor failed to raise any challenge in the garnishment proceeding wherein the bank was a garnishee. Copeland v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 317 Ga. App. 669, 732 S.E.2d 536 (2012), cert. denied, No. S13C0189, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 124 (Ga. 2013).

No provision for traversing answer of garnishee. — Georgia garnishment statute and amendments thereto do not contain a specific provision whereby a defendant may traverse the answer of the garnishee. Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982). See also Terrell v. Fuller, 160 Ga. App. 56, 286 S.E.2d 50 (1981).

Traverse properly granted as to garnishment petition. — Because the amount a former spouse claimed the other spouse owed for health care and extracurricular activity expenses incurred by their children had not been reduced to a money judgment, and because the former spouse failed to show entitlement to the process of prejudgment garnishment under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-40 et seq., the other spouse’s traverse to the garnishment petition was properly granted. Stoker v. Severin, 292 Ga. App. 870, 665 S.E.2d 913 (2008).

Trial court did not err in granting a sole proprietorship’s traverse, in which it sought to become a party in a golf supplier’s garnishment action and asserted a verified claim to the funds at issue, because there was some evidence to support the findings that the sole proprietorship was a separate and distinct entity from the corporation and that the garnishee assented to the modification of a contract to replace the corporation with the sole proprietorship as the contractor; the sole proprietorship had its own tax identification number and liability insurance, and a representative of the garnishee testified that the garnishee was aware that someone had changed the contractor's name and that the garnishee had no business dealings with the corporation. A. M. Buckler & Assocs. v. Sanders, 305 Ga. App. 704, 700 S.E.2d 701 (2010).

Plaintiff may not challenge judgment establishing debt. — Plaintiff in garnishment action is precluded from challenging the validity of the judgment upon which the garnishment was based. Loftin v. Loftin, 166 Ga. App. 778, 305 S.E.2d 641 (1983).

Deletion of the conjunction "and" between the partnership's name and the partner's name as they appear in the complaint and judgment does not mean that a judgment against the partner does not exist. Newton, Inc. v. Alex, 162 Ga. App. 664, 292 S.E.2d 121 (1982).

Dormancy of judgment. — In garnishment proceeding to collect arrears on child support judgment, issue of dormancy of judgment was not present when payments made by the appellant during the ten years following the divorce were more than adequate to cover the amount of any arrearages dating from over seven years in the past and the appellee had the right to consider those payments as having been applied to the oldest amounts due. Turner v. Wood, 162 Ga. App. 674, 292 S.E.2d 558 (1982).

Stay of garnishment pending attack on judgment. — So long as an attack on the underlying judgment is pending in a trial court or in an appellate court, the court in which the garnishment is pending has within the court's discretion the power to order the garnishment released and stayed until the validity of such judgment has been determined. Smith v. Smith, 161 Ga. App. 20, 289 S.E.2d 5 (1982).

Issuance of stay, without release, relieved garnishee from filing answer. — Although a court has the authority both to release and stay a garnishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-65, there is nothing to prevent a court from only issuing a stay without a release, and such a stay relieves the garnishee from answering even without issuance of a release; thus, the trial court erred in entering a default judgment against a bank as the garnishee in a garnishment proceeding while a stay was in effect based on the bank's failure to file an answer to the garnishment complaint. Chase Manhattan Bank v. LaFray, 258 Ga. App. 183, 573 S.E.2d 435 (2002).

Failure to determine validity of underlying judgment not error. — When the trial court's written order denying the defendant's traverse is not premised upon findings as to the validity of the underlying judgment, this error presents no ground for reversal. Loftin v. Loftin, 166 Ga. App. 778, 305 S.E.2d 641 (1983).

18-4-80. Effect of release of summons of garnishment on garnishee.

A release of summons of garnishment shall relieve the garnishee from any obligation to file a garnishee answer to any summons of garnishment pending on the date of the release and shall authorize the garnishee to deliver to the defendant in garnishment any money or other property in the garnishee’s possession belonging to the defendant. A release shall not operate as a dismissal of the garnishment proceedings. (Code 1933, § 46-308, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 9/HB 683.)

Issuance of stay relieved garnishee from filing answer while stay was in effect. — Although a court has the authority both to release and stay a garnishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-65, there is nothing to prevent a court from only issuing a stay without a release, and such a stay relieves the garnishee from answering even without issuance of a release; thus, the trial court erred in entering a default judgment against a bank as the garnishee in a garnishment proceeding while a stay was in effect based on the bank’s failure to file an answer to the garnishment complaint. Chase Manhattan Bank v. LaFray, 258 Ga. App. 183, 573 S.E.2d 435 (2002).

18-4-81. Effect of defendant's traverse on garnishee; filing of bond by defendant; entry of judgment on bond.

When the defendant files his or her traverse, the garnishee is not relieved of filing a garnishee answer, nor is the garnishee relieved of delivering the money or other property of the defendant which is subject to the garnishment to the court, unless the defendant files in the clerk's office of the court where the garnishment is pending a bond with good security, in favor of the plaintiff, conditioned for the payment of any judgment that may be entered in the proceeding. The bond shall be subject to approval by the clerk of the court; and, upon receipt of a bond deemed acceptable by the clerk, it shall be the clerk's duty to issue a release of any summons of garnishment pending in the garnishment proceeding. If the plaintiff shall prevail in the proceeding, the plaintiff shall be entitled to entry of judgment upon such bond against the principal and securities therein, as judgment may be entered against securities upon appeal. If the defendant files a bond, no further garnishment process may be filed in any court by the plaintiff against the defendant until the issues raised by the defendant's pleadings are decided. (Code 1933, § 46-402, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 9/HB 683.)

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Civil Code 1895, § 4718, former Civil Code 1910, § 5280, and former Code 1933, § 46-402, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Availability to debtor of bond to dissolve garnishment does not substitute for notice and hearing. Morrow Elec. Co. v. Cruse, 370 F. Supp. 639 (N.D. Ga. 1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-402).

Action on bond must be brought in name of party in whom legal interest vested. Taylor v. Felder, 7 Ga. App. 219, 66 S.E. 628 (1909) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4718).

Judgment in main action against defendant is condition precedent to judgment on dissolution bond. Light v. Hunt, 17 Ga. App. 491, 87 S.E. 763 (1916); Middleton v. Johnson, 19 Ga. App. 478, 91 S.E. 785 (1917) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5280).

Judgment cannot be reviewed by certiorari. Leake v. Tyner, 112 Ga. 919, 38 S.E. 343 (1901) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4718).

Judgment against garnishee is a condition precedent to judgment on bond given to dissolve garnishment. This includes judgment by default due to garnishee's failure to answer summons. Smith v. Kennedy, 125 Ga. 830, 54 S.E. 731 (1906) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4718).

Recital in judgment on dissolution bond that judgment against funds garnished had been rendered is not conclusive, but may be attacked by affidavit of illegality. Smith v. Kennedy, 125 Ga. 830, 54 S.E. 731 (1906) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4718).

Judgment against surety may be attacked by affidavit of illegality, by proof that judgment against garnishee was not proved. Simerly v. Brooks, 21 Ga. App. 169, 93 S.E. 1017 (1917) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5280).

59 S.E. 728 (1907) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4718).

Defendant's discharge in bankruptcy was not bar to action on garnishment bond. Light v. Hunt, 17 Ga. App. 491, 87 S.E. 763 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5280).

18-4-82. Contents of garnishee answer.

Within the time prescribed by Code Section 18-4-62, the garnishee shall file a garnishee answer describing what money or other property is subject to garnishment under Code Section 18-4-20. If the garnishee owes the defendant any sum for wages, the garnishee answer shall also state specifically when the wages were earned by defendant and whether they were earned as daily, weekly, or monthly wages. If the garnishee has been served with summons in more than one garnishment case involving the same defendant, the garnishee shall state in each garnishee answer that the money or other property is being delivered to the court subject to the claims of all the cases and shall give the numbers of all such cases in each garnishee answer. If the garnishee is unable to respond as provided for in this Code section, the garnishee's inability shall appear in the garnishee's answer, together with all the facts plainly, fully, and distinctly set forth, so as to enable the court to give judgment thereon. (Code 1933, § 46-501, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 9/HB 683.)

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Ga. L. 1884-5, p. 96, former Civil Code 1895, § 4727, former Civil Code 1910, § 5293, and former Code 1933, § 46-301, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Garnishment action against judgment debtor's insurer was proper. — After the parents of a shooting victim obtained judgment against the owner of the property on which their son was shot, and the owner filed bankruptcy, the Court of Appeals erred in reversing the trial court and holding that the judgment debtor had no garnishment action against the owner's insurer; the insurer could contest, under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-62, the assertion that it held property belonging to the owner, namely the benefits to be paid on the owner's behalf under an insurance contract. Ross v. St. Paul Reinsurance Co., Ltd., 279 Ga. 92, 610 S.E.2d 57 (2005).

Statement in answer that garnishee is not indebted is not a conclusion, but a factual averment. Ole Campbellton Constr. Co. v. Desert Inn & Country Club, 154 Ga. App. 107, 267 S.E.2d 646 (1980).

Verification of answer in behalf of corporation. — Answer in behalf of corporation to summons of garnishment may be verified by any agent who can and will depose positively to facts stated therein. Ole Campbellton Constr. Co. v. Desert Inn & Country Club, 154 Ga. App. 107, 267 S.E.2d 646 (1980).

Answer in garnishment is designed to show indebtedness of garnishee for two periods of time prior to the date of service of the summons, and also the period between service and answer. Mark Ten Homes Corp. v. First Nat'l Bank, 115 Ga. App. 597, 155 S.E.2d 455 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Garnishee must answer concerning indebtedness and effects belonging to defendant. Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Dasher, 16 Ga. App. 33, 84 S.E. 482 (1915) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5293).

Liability for improper answer on garnishment. — Garnishee's reliance on signature cards and the debtor's assurances that the bank accounts were trust accounts was insufficient to relieve the garnishee of liability for failing to list these accounts on the garnishment answer. Wachovia Bank v. Unisys Fin. Corp., 221 Ga. App. 471, 471 S.E.2d 554 (1996).

Garnishee cannot refuse to answer and garnishee's answer must be directed to matter contained in summons. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. AVCO Fin. Servs., Inc., 129 Ga. App. 605, 200 S.E.2d 309 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Bank's duty to comply with garnishment laws. — Bank was not entitled to assume that an account was a legitimate corporate account when the bank did not follow the bank's own internal procedure with respect to opening the account and, thus, the bank was not excused from complying with a summons of garnishment naming a signatory on the account, nor did the fact that the bank was unable to locate the account relieve the bank from the bank's responsibilities under the garnishment statutes. Mobile Paint Mfg. Co. v. Johnston, 219 Ga. App. 299, 464 S.E.2d 903 (1995).

Garnishee's determination as to status of assets is subject to contrary determination by court. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. AVCO Fin. Servs., Inc., 129 Ga. App. 605, 200 S.E.2d 309 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Answer in nature of an interpleader was permitted. Small v. Mendel, Gosling & Co., 96 Ga. 532, 23 S.E. 834 (1895); Booth v. Brooke & Co., 6 Ga. App. 299, 64 S.E. 1103 (1909) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4727).

Garnishee who is in doubt as to liability may have court resolve such doubt by presenting every element involved in the matter so that the court can make the determination and the garnishee avoid liability. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. AVCO Fin. Servs., Inc., 129 Ga. App. 605, 200 S.E.2d 309 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Inability of garnishee to answer as required. — See Estridge v. Janko, 96 Ga. App. 246, 99 S.E.2d 682 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Portion of section concerning garnishee's inability to answer as required, inapplicable when garnishee not indebted. — Statutory provision that when garnishee is unable to answer in what sum garnishee is indebted to defendant or what property garnishee has belonging to the defendant as required by the summon's garnishee shall so allege in the garnishee's answer setting forth all facts does not apply when the garnishee has not become indebted to the defendant. Hardware Mut. Cas. Co. v. Scott, 116 Ga. App. 637, 158 S.E.2d 275 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Status of indebtedness between defendant and garnishee becomes fixed when latter files answer. — When answer of garnishee is filed, status of indebtedness between the defendant and the garnishee upon which right and quantum of plaintiff's recovery depends, becomes fixed, and the plaintiff's right of recovery is not thereafter affected, increased nor diminished by debts or demands accruing to the credit of the defendant or the garnishee against the other. Estridge v. Janko, 96 Ga. App. 246, 99 S.E.2d 682 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Unless garnishee alleges inability to answer, status of indebtedness is fixed when answer is filed. — When a garnishee fails to allege, as required by former Code 1933, § 46-301, the garnishee's inability to answer whether or in what manner the garnishee is indebted to the defendant or that a nonresident debtor owes a debt not yet due, the status of indebtedness between the nonresident and the defendant is fixed as of the time when the garnishee files an answer to the summons of garnishment. Estridge v. Janko, 96 Ga. App. 246, 99 S.E.2d 682 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Garnishee's answer to summons, stating there is nothing in garnishee's possession subject thereto, is sufficient. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. AVCO Fin. Servs., Inc., 129 Ga. App. 605, 200 S.E.2d 309 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-301).

Garnishee is entitled to set-off any indebtedness owed by the defendant in garnishment. Mutual Reserve Life

One owing wages exempt from garnishment, need not pay money into court upon being garnished, but may resist by one's answer. Emmons, McKee & Co. v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 80 Ga. 760, 7 S.E. 232 (1888) (decided under former Ga. L. 1884-85, p. 96,).

18-4-83. Service of answer of garnishee on plaintiff or attorney.

All garnishee answers shall, concurrently with filing, be served upon the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney. Service may be shown by the written acknowledgment of the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney, or by the certificate of the garnishee or the garnishee's attorney, attached to the garnishee's answer, that a copy of the garnishee's answer was mailed to the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney; provided, however, that no service shall be required unless the name and address of the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney shall appear on the face of the summons of garnishment; provided, further, that, if the garnishee fails to serve the plaintiff, the plaintiff shall be allowed 15 days from the time the plaintiff receives actual notice of the garnishee's answer to traverse the same. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discharge of garnishee upon plaintiff's failure to traverse answer. — By enacting a specific time limitation within which the plaintiff must traverse the garnishee's answer, the legislature expressed

period. Nockonwood Indus., Inc. v. Tuloka Affiliates, Inc., 164 Ga. App. 424, 296 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Answer need not be served on defendant. — Garnishee's answer must be served upon the plaintiff, but there is no requirement that the answer be served upon the defendant, since the plaintiff and the garnishee are the only parties to the garnishment action. Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Failure of plaintiff to include sufficient addresses on summons of garnishment. — In garnishment proceeding, the plaintiff was required to traverse garnishee's answer within 15 days after filing of answer even though it had not been served with a copy of the answer where it had failed to include its or its attorney's address on the summons of garnishment.

Nockonwood Indus., Inc. v. Tuloka Affiliates, Inc., 164 Ga. App. 424, 296 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Effect of no service of answers. — When the name and address of the plaintiff's attorney appeared on the summons of garnishment, but no certificates of service were attached to the answers, and neither the plaintiff nor the plaintiff's attorney acknowledged receipt, the requirement that the plaintiff traverse the answers within 15 days of service was never triggered. *Lowery v. 18-4-84. Delivery to court of property admitted to be subject to garnishment; property in safety deposit box.

Along with the garnishee's answer, the garnishee shall deliver to the court the money or other property admitted in the garnishee's answer to be subject to garnishment. If in responding to the summons of garnishment, as provided in Code Section 18-4-82, the garnishee shall state that the property of the defendant includes property in a safe-deposit box or similar property, the garnishee shall respond to the court issuing the summons of garnishment as to the existence of such safe-deposit box and shall hold any contents of such safe-deposit box until the earlier of:

(1) Further order of said court either releasing the garnishment or specifically requiring the garnishee to open such safe-deposit box and deliver any contents thereof to said court upon conditions prescribed by said court; or section, see 14 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 114 (1997).

(2) The elapsing of 120 days from the date of filing of the garnishee answer to the summons of garnishment unless such time has been extended by the court. (Code 1933, § 46-503, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1997, p. 941, § 3; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 9/HB 683.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Garnishee may admit indebtedness but claim exemption. — Garnishee can admit an indebtedness but contend and show by denial that the indebtedness admitted is exempt from the process of garnishment, and because of its denial, the garnishee can fail to pay the amount into court without subjecting itself to the penalty of being subject to judgment for the entire indebtedness. United Merchants & Mfrs., Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 166 Ga. App. 468, 304 S.E.2d 552 (1983).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Summons of garnishment establishes lien which attaches from date of service. — Summons of garnishment directing the garnishee to deliver any property into court that is subject to garnishment establishes a lien on the subject property that attaches from the date of service of the summons of garnishment. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

Garnishment action remains ancillary to or dependent upon principal action between creditor and debtor, even though it establishes lien on subject property. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

Rank of judgment on which garnishment depends determines priority. — Because of ancillary nature of gar-nishment, the relevant factor in determining priorities of several garnishments is rank of judgment on which garnishment is dependent and not rank of garnishment lien. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

Priority lien that initial garnishing creditor obtains by virtue of initial creditor having first served garnishee does not defeat priority of subsequent garnishing creditor with senior judgment. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

18-4-85. Traverse of answer of garnishee by plaintiff — Time period; discharge for failure to traverse.

If the garnishee's answer is served on the plaintiff as provided for in Code Section 18-4-83, the plaintiff or claimant shall traverse the garnishee's answer within 15 days after it is served, or the garnishee shall be automatically discharged from further liability with respect to the summons so answered. (Code 1933, § 46-504, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 9/HB 683.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1895, § 4721, former Civil Code 1910, § 5283, and former Code 1933, § 46-303, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

Purpose of traverse to garnishee's answer is to give the garnishee right to be heard and for protection of the garnishee's rights and interests in the premises. Ole Campbellton Constr. Co. v. Desert Inn & Country Club, 154 Ga. App. 107, 267 S.E.2d 646 (1980).

Discharge of garnishee upon plaintiff's failure to traverse answer. — By enacting a specific time limitation within which the plaintiff must traverse the garnishee's answer, the legislature expressed a clear intent to provide for automatic discharge of the garnishee from all obligations under the summons if the plaintiff did not notify the court and the garnishee otherwise within the brief prescribed time period. Nockonwood Indus., Inc. v. Tuloka Affiliates, Inc., 164 Ga. App. 424, 296 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Party asserting superior claim must traverse garnishee's answer. — Defendant who has elected to become a party to the garnishment proceedings and who has a claim superior to that of the plaintiff to money or property in the hands of the garnishee is authorized to, and indeed must, assert such a claim and then traverse the answer of the garnishee. Terrell v. Fuller, 160 Ga. App. 56, 286 S.E.2d 50 (1981).

Failure of plaintiff to include sufficient addresses on summons of garnishment. — In garnishment proceeding, the plaintiff was required to traverse garnishee's answer within 15 days after filing of answer even though it had not been served with a copy of the answer where it had failed to include its or its attorney's address on the summons of garnishment. Nockonwood Indus., Inc. v. Tuloka Affiliates, Inc., 164 Ga. App. 424, 296 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Effect of failure to serve answers. — When the name and address of the plaintiff's attorney appeared on the summons of garnishment but no certificates of service were attached to the answers and neither the plaintiff nor the attorney acknowledged receipt, the requirement that the plaintiff traverse the answers within 15 days of service was never triggered. Lowery v. Dallis, 237 Ga. App. 309, 513 S.E.2d 740 (1999).

Garnishee's answer is accepted as true unless traversed by claimant or defendant. — When garnishee answers summons of garnishment, statements in garnishee's answer are accepted as true, and garnishee is discharged from all further liability unless either the claimant or the defendant files a traverse contesting the answer. West v. West, 402 F. Supp. 1189 (N.D. Ga. 1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303).

When answer is not traversed, all statements of fact appearing in answer are taken as true. Darlington v. Belt, 12 Ga. App. 522, 77 S.E. 653 (1913); Joiner v. Dougherty-Ward-Little Co., 14 Ga. App. 360, 80 S.E. 854 (1913); Harris v. Exchange Bank, 17 Ga. App. 700, 88 S.E. 40 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283).

Unqualified, though general denial of truth of answer, suffices. — Traverse may be amplified at option of the plaintiff, but nothing more is necessary to bring in question the liability of the garnishee to the garnishing creditor than an unqualified, though general, denial of the truth of the garnishee's answer. Rainey v. Eatonton Coop. Creamery, 69 Ga. App. 547, 26 S.E.2d 297 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303).

Plaintiff need not traverse answer admitting that garnishee is indebted for specified sum to the defendant. Harris v. Exchange Bank, 17 Ga. App. 700, 88 S.E. 40 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283).

Issue involved is whether garnishee is indebted as averred in traverse; it is not pertinent to such inquiry whether a prior judgment had been rendered against the defendant. Whaley v. Kear, 139 Ga. 16, 76 S.E. 390 (1912) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283).

Issue whether alleged indebtedness is mere cover for fraud may be tried. Smith v. Dysard Constr. Co., 15 Ga. App. 192, 82 S.E. 761 (1914) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283).

Absent dissolution bond, defendant not party to trial of issue raised by plaintiff's traverse of garnishee's answer. Leake v. Tyner, 112 Ga. 919, 38 S.E. 343 (1901) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4721).

At trial of traverse, plaintiff can recover from garnishee only what the defendant could have recovered from the garnishee. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. AVCO Fin. Servs., Inc., 129 Ga. App. 605, 200 S.E.2d 309 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303).

When traverse is filed, burden of proof is upon traversing party. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. AVCO Fin. Servs., Inc., 129 Ga. App. 605, 200 S.E.2d 309 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303).

When the defendant gives no bond to dissolve garnishment and there is no claim filed and the only traverse to answer of the garnishee was by the plaintiff in execution, the general rule is that the burden of proof is on the plaintiff in execution, the party traversing garnishee's answer. Rainey v. Eatonton Coop. Creamery, 69 Ga. App. 547, 26 S.E.2d 297 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303).

Burden of proof is on party traversing answer of garnishee. Rockmart Bank v. Nix, 14 Ga. App. 238, 80 S.E. 673 (1914) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283).

Judgment holder properly denied disbursement of funds. — In a garnishment proceeding, a trial court properly declined to disburse certain bank funds to the judgment holder since a claimant timely filed a claim to the funds, established sole ownership to the funds, and complied with the necessary procedural requirements to become a party to the action. Further, since a dispute existed about whether the funds were properly subject to garnishment and the trial court had not yet distributed the funds to the judgment holder, the trial court did not err by resolving the dispute rather than allowing an expedited distribution. Akridge v. Silva, 298 Ga. App. 862, 681 S.E.2d 667 (2009).

18-4-86. Traverse of answer of garnishee by plaintiff — Contents.

The traverse of the garnishee's answer shall be a statement by the plaintiff or his attorney, or by a claimant or his attorney, that the garnishee's answer is untrue or legally insufficient. Such statement places in issue all questions of law and fact concerning the garnishee's answer. (Code 1933, § 46-505, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Code 1933, § 46-303, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

Unqualified, though general, denial of truth of answer suffices. — Nothing more is necessary to bring in question the liability of the garnishee to the garnishing creditor than an unqualified, though general, denial of the truth of the garnishee's answer. Ole Campbellton Constr. Co. v. Desert Inn & Country Club, 154 Ga. App. 107, 267 S.E.2d 646 (1980).

Motion to dismiss opposing party's answer, on the facts, constituted a traverse. — Motion to dismiss opposing party's answer constituted a statement that such answer was legally insufficient in that costs had not been paid so as to open default. As such, the motion must be considered a traverse which had been filed. Marbut Co. v. Capital City Bank, 148 Ga. App. 664, 252 S.E.2d 85 (1979).

Party asserting superior claim must traverse garnishee's answer. — Defendant who has elected to become a party to the garnishment proceedings and who has a claim superior to that of the plaintiff to money or property in the hands of the garnishee is authorized to, and indeed must, assert such a claim and then traverse the answer of the garnishee. Terrell v. Fuller, 160 Ga. App. 56, 286 S.E.2d 50 (1981).

There is no specific statutory requirement of verification of traverse. — Although garnishment and answer thereto must be verified, there is no specific statutory requirement of verification as to traverse. Ben O'Callaghan Co. v. Rose, Silverman & Hunt, 131 Ga. App. 29, 205 S.E.2d 45 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303 as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Verification of traverse by plaintiff corporation's attorney is sufficient. Ben O'Callaghan Co. v. Rose, Silverman & Hunt, 131 Ga. App. 29, 205 S.E.2d 45

(1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303 as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Unqualified, though general denial of truth of answer, suffices. — Traverse may be amplified at option of the plaintiff, but nothing more is necessary to bring in question the liability of the garnishee to the garnishing creditor than an unqualified, though general, denial of the truth of the garnishee's answer. Rainey v. Eatonton Coop. Creamery, 69 Ga. App. 547, 26 S.E.2d 297 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-303 as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

18-4-87. Traverse of answer of garnishee by plaintiff — Service.

A traverse shall be served in the same manner as is provided for in subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-5 for the service of subsequent pleadings. (Code 1933, § 46-506, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1910, § 5287, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

It is inadequate notice to exhibit traverse to garnishee at time it is filed. Vaughan v. Bank of Cobbtown, 14 Ga. App. 9, 79 S.E. 1130 (1913) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5287).

18-4-88. Order of proceedings after answer of garnishee generally.

After the garnishee's answer is filed, the defendant's traverse shall be tried first, the plaintiff's traverse shall be tried second, and claims shall be tried last; provided, however, the court shall retain the money or other property subject to garnishment until trial of all claims which are filed under this chapter. (Code 1933, § 46-511, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Proof required of defendant to sustain traverse that defendant is not indebted in amount alleged. — See Thacker Constr. Co. v. Williams, 154 Ga. App. 670, 269 S.E.2d 519 (1980).

Trial of issue created by traverse should be postponed until after judgment against defendant. Whaley v. Kear, 139 Ga. 16, 76 S.E. 390 (1912) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283).

Trial of defendant's traverse or evidentiary hearing required. — In a postjudgment garnishment proceeding, the judgment debtor's traverse asserting that the judgment was void or voidable was clearly an impermissible challenge to the validity of the judgment. The trial court was not authorized to consider the debtor's verified complaint for damages which addressed issues in bar of judgment in support of the debtor's traverse, and the trial court improperly dismissed the proceeding by granting summary judgment on the debtor's verified complaint without holding an evidentiary hearing on the debtor's traverse. Southern Land & Cattle Co. v. Brock, 213 Ga. App. 3, 443 S.E.2d 647 (1994).

Verdict for plaintiff for amount named in traverse is construed as a finding in favor of traverse. Whaley v. Kear, 139 Ga. 16, 76 S.E. 390 (1912) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5283).

18-4-89. Proceedings after answer of the garnishee if no traverse or claim filed.

If no traverse or claim has been filed within 15 days after the garnishee's answer is filed:

(1) If money is delivered to the court by the garnishee, the clerk shall pay the money to the plaintiff or his attorney on his application;

(2) If other property is delivered to the court by the garnishee, the sheriff, marshal, constable, or like officer of the court shall sell the property in the manner provided by law for the sale of property levied under an execution; and the proceeds of the sale shall be delivered to the plaintiff or his attorney on his application; or

(3) If money or other property admitted to be subject to the garnishment is not delivered to the court, judgment shall be entered for the plaintiff and against the garnishee for the money or other property and execution shall issue on the judgment. (Code 1933, § 46-510, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Statute provides for immediate payment when no traverse or claim has been filed. Marbut Co. v. Capital City Bank, 148 Ga. App. 664, 252 S.E.2d 85 (1979).

Legislative intent behind statute was to simplify matters when there was no dispute, and therefore, no need of direct judicial supervision. Marbut Co. v. Capital City Bank, 148 Ga. App. 664, 252

S.E.2d 85 (1979).

Section inapplicable. — Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1 was inapplicable when case has proceeded beyond point where further judicial supervision is unnecessary. Marbut Co. v. Capital City Bank, 148 Ga. App. 664, 252 S.E.2d 85 (1979).

Burden on plaintiff to identify property subject to garnishment when garnishee does not. — When the garnishee does not identify the property subject to garnishment, the burden is on the plaintiff to demonstrate which property the garnishee holds on behalf of the debtor. Fontaine v. Stuhler, 172 Ga. App. 584, 323 S.E.2d 881 (1984).

No preclusion of need for court order directing clerk to disburse funds. — O.C.G.A. § 18-4-89 does not state that the passage of the 15-day period divests the defendant of any interest in the garnished funds, nor does the statute provide that failing to file a traverse within the 15-day period bars the defendant from thereafter filing one. Although the section authorizes the clerk to disburse the garnished funds, the statute does not specify when the clerk must do so and does not preclude the need for a court order directing the clerk to disburse funds. Bowen v. Thompson (In re Thompson), No. 13-52212, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 5610 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Apr. 29, 2013).

Judgment holder properly denied disbursement of disputed funds. — In a garnishment proceeding, a trial court properly declined to disburse certain bank funds to the judgment holder since a claimant timely filed a claim to the funds, established sole ownership to the funds, and complied with the necessary procedural requirements to become a party to the action. Further, since a dispute existed about whether the funds were properly subject to garnishment and the trial court had not yet distributed the funds to the judgment holder, the trial court did not err by resolving the dispute rather than allowing an expedited distribution. Akridge v. Silva, 298 Ga. App. 862, 681 S.E.2d 667 (2009).

18-4-90. Entry of default judgment upon failure of garnishee to file garnishee answer to summons; opening of default.

In case the garnishee fails or refuses to file a garnishee answer by the forty-fifth day after service of the summons, the garnishee shall automatically be in default. The default may be opened as a matter of right by the filing of a garnishee answer within 15 days of the day of default and payment of costs. If the case is still in default after the expiration of the period of 15 days, judgment by default may be entered at any time thereafter against the garnishee for the amount claimed to be due on the judgment obtained against the defendant. (Code 1933, § 46-508, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 10/HB 683.)

Law reviews. — For note discussing default by the garnishee, see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 814 (1978).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

When claim for default arises. — Claim arises against the garnishee at the time the garnishee falls into default by failing to file answers in a continuing garnishment proceeding, and is separate and distinct from any claim which may have existed prior to that time. Fazio v. Growth Dev. Corp., 168 Bankr. 1009 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1994).

Garnishee failed to amend the defective answer as permitted by law and, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-90, the garnishee was automatically in default. Because the garnishee failed to establish the presence of a nonamendable defect on the face of the record or pleadings, the court abused the court's discretion by granting the motion to set aside the default judgment. Oxmoor Portfolio, LLC v. Flooring & Tile Superstore of Conyers, Inc., 320 Ga. App. 640, 740 S.E.2d 363 (2013).

O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91 only applicable to default judgments under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-90. — Because a debtor's principal had answered a garnishment action by a judgment creditor, denying that the principal held any money or assets of the debtor, and the trial court entered a final judgment in favor of the creditor after holding an evidentiary hearing on the merits, it was error for the trial court to have reduced the judgment pursuant to the principal's motion under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91, as such was only applicable when a default judgment was obtained pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-90. United Maint., Inc. v. Wilson, 265 Ga. App. 683, 595 S.E.2d 376 (2004).

18-4-91. Relief of garnishee from default judgment.

When a judgment is rendered against a garnishee under Code Section 18-4-90, on a motion filed not later than 60 days from the date the garnishee receives actual notice of the entry of the judgment against the garnishee, the garnishee may, upon payment of all accrued costs of court, have the judgment modified so that the amount of the judgment shall be reduced to an amount equal to the greater of $50.00 or $50.00 plus 100 percent of the amount by which the garnishee was indebted to the defendant from the time of service of the summons of garnishment through and including the last day on which a timely garnishee answer could have been made for all money, other property, or effects belonging to the defendant which came into the garnishee's hands from the time of service of the summons through and including the last day on which a timely answer could have been made and, in the case of garnishment of wages, less any exemption allowed the defendant by law. Notice to the garnishee by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery shall be sufficient notice as required in this Code section. On the trial of the motion, the burden of proof shall be upon any plaintiff who objects to the timeliness of the motion to establish that the motion was not filed within the time provided for by this Code section. (Code 1933, § 46-509, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1977, p. 783, § 1; Ga. L.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Code 1933, § 46-406, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

Purpose of section. — O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91 is a remedial statute. It provides a second chance for a garnishee who, having been personally served with a summons of garnishment, ignored its call for an answer. Five Star Steel Contractors, Inc. v. Colonial Credit Union, 208 Ga. App. 694, 431 S.E.2d 712 (1993).

Garnishee's failure to accept certified mail notification that a default judgment has been entered against the garnishee satisfies the requirement of "actual notice" in O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91 so as to commence the running of the 60-day period during which, upon payment of accrued costs, a garnishee may move to modify the default judgment. Five Star Steel Contractors, Inc. v. Colonial Credit Union, 208 Ga. App. 694, 431 S.E.2d 712 (1993).

O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91 is applicable only after a garnishee fails or refuses to file a timely answer to the summons of garnishment and a default judgment is subsequently entered against the garnishee. Southeast Grading, Inc. v. Grissom-Harrison Corp., 171 Ga. App. 298, 319 S.E.2d 121 (1984).

Filing motion to reduce judgment does not amount to recognition of judgment's validity. — By filing motion to reduce amount of judgment under former Code 1933, § 46-509, the defendant does not recognize the validity of the judgment so as to be estopped from thereafter seeking to set the judgment aside. Gibbs v. Spencer Indus., Inc., 244 Ga. 450, 260 S.E.2d 342 (1979).

Amendment of motion. — Prior to judgment thereon, a motion filed under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91 may be retroactively amended to substitute the name and signature of a licensed Georgia attorney pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. North Ga. Medical Ctr. v. Food Lion, Inc., 238 Ga. App. 78, 517 S.E.2d 799 (1999).

Payment of accrued costs within 60 days is a prerequisite to bringing a motion to modify a default judgment of garnishment. Maley v. VanCronkite, 220 Ga. App. 21, 467 S.E.2d 351 (1996).

Until garnishee creates prima facie showing of right to relief, plaintiff need not oppose motion. — Burden is upon garnishee in seeking relief from default judgment, and until garnishee has created prima facie showing of right to relief, the plaintiff is under no compulsion to oppose the motion. Sambo's of Ga., Inc. v. First Am. Nat'l Bank, 152 Ga. App. 899, 264 S.E.2d 330 (1980).

Garnisher entitled to hearing on setting aside of default and modification of judgment. — Trial court deprives garnisher of due process by failing to afford garnished a hearing on setting aside of default and propriety of modifying amount of judgment. Apex Supply Co. v. Johnny Long Homes, Inc., 143 Ga. App. 699, 240 S.E.2d 171 (1977).

Trial court did not err in reclassifying the garnishee's motion entitled "Motion to Set Aside Default Judgment" as a motion for relief from judgment under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91; however, prior to modifying the judgment, the judge should have conducted a hearing on the merits of the garnishment action. Jova Daniels Busby, Inc. v. Greenforest Community Baptist Church, Inc., 240 Ga. App. 419, 523 S.E.2d 629 (1999).

Untimely motion. — Petitioner was not entitled to relief from a default judgment entered in favor of the judgment creditor because the petitioner did not seek relief from the default judgment until well outside the 60-day window pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91. W. Ray Camp, Inc. v. Cavalry Portfolio Servs., LLC, 308 Ga. App. 597, 708 S.E.2d 560 (2011).

Judgment setting aside default by ex parte order fails to afford garnisher a hearing as the statute required. Apex Supply Co. v. Johnny Long Homes, Inc., 143 Ga. App. 699, 240 S.E.2d 171 (1977).

Pleading referred to in statute did not require verification. Chambers v. Almond, 146 Ga. App. 46, 245 S.E.2d 336 (1978).

Burden of proof. — The 1980 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91, in omitting the requirement that on trial of motion for relief from judgment the burden of proof be on the garnishee, relieved a garnishee from the burden of presenting evidence in support of the garnishee's motion in the absence of a traverse thereto. Accredited Assocs. v. Shottenfeld, 162 Ga. App. 575, 292 S.E.2d 417 (1982).

When garnishee has affirmatively set forth in its motion such facts as would entitle it to relief under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91, these facts must be taken as true unless traversed. Accredited Assocs. v. Shottenfeld, 162 Ga. App. 575, 292 S.E.2d 417 (1982).

Even though policy of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91 is to protect garnishee against whom default judgment has been entered, it does not appear that the General Assembly intended to place the burden of proof on all issues upon the plaintiff who has traversed the garnishee's motion for relief from default judgment. Accredited Assocs. v. Shottenfeld, 162 Ga. App. 575, 292 S.E.2d 417 (1982).

Law did not require any reason to be shown for failure to answer originally as required by law, but in lieu thereof, exacts a penalty. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Ervin Co., 127 Ga. App. 346, 193 S.E.2d 262 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-406, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Proof required of garnishee. — Only proof required of the garnishee was to show the garnishee owed the defendant a lesser sum, or value of property or effects, than amount of judgment rendered on default. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Ervin Co., 127 Ga. App. 346, 193 S.E.2d 262 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-406, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Modification of judgment does not prevent finality. — Former Code 1933, § 46-406 was analogous to former Code 1933, § 30-220 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-18 and 19-6-19), which allowed the petitions to be filed to modify the terms of the permanent alimony decree, in that while the judgment may be modified, this did not prevent the judgment from being final. Weeks v. High Point Sprinkler Co., 125 Ga. App. 511, 188 S.E.2d 144 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-406, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Only applicable to default judgments. — Because a debtor's principal answered a garnishment action by a judgment creditor, denying that the principal held any money or assets of the debtor, and the trial court entered a final judgment in favor of the creditor after holding an evidentiary hearing on the merits, it was error for the trial court to have reduced the judgment pursuant to the principal's motion under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91, as such was only applicable when a default judgment was obtained pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-90. United Maint., Inc. v. Wilson, 265 Ga. App. 683, 595 S.E.2d 376 (2004).

ALR. — Liability of garnishee to garnishing creditor for depreciation in value of property pending contest, 32 ALR 572.

18-4-92. Effect of garnishee's failure to respond properly to summons of garnishment.

On the trial of the plaintiff's traverse, if the court finds the garnishee has failed to respond properly to the summons of garnishment, the court shall disallow any expenses claimed by the garnishee and enter a judgment for any money or other property delivered to the court with the garnishee's answer, plus any money or other property the court finds subject to garnishment which the garnishee has failed to deliver to the court; provided, however, that the total amount of such judgment shall in no event exceed the amount claimed due by the plaintiff, together with the costs of the garnishment proceeding. (Code 1933, § 46-514, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 10/HB 683.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

General litigation expenses statute, O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, does not apply in garnishment proceedings. Worsham Bros. Co. v. FDIC, 167 Ga. App. 163, 305 S.E.2d 816 (1983).

Attorney fees are not included in "costs." Worsham Bros. Co. v. FDIC, 167 Ga. App. 163, 305 S.E.2d 816 (1983).

Attorney fees must be included in the amount claimed or those fees will be stricken. Worsham Bros. Co. v. FDIC, 167 Ga. App. 163, 305 S.E.2d 816 (1983).

Trial court must specifically find that the garnishee had money owing to or belonging to the judgment debtor; the garnishee's refusal to produce records to rebut allegations that the debtor was the garnishee's employee did not satisfy the creditor's burden of showing that the garnishee had money of the debtor. W.R. Leasing, Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur., 211 Ga. App. 818, 440 S.E.2d 714 (1994).

Excessive award. — Trial court's order in garnishment proceeding was defective since the order failed to indicate what monies were due the judgment debtor from the garnishees and, therefore, failed to find what money was subject to garnishment, and when, due to an award of interest, the total amount of judgment exceeded amount claimed due by the plaintiff. Stone v. George F. Richardson, Inc., 163 Ga. App. 86, 293 S.E.2d 746 (1982).

Disposition of funds paid into court when plaintiff loses in determination on merits of traverse. — See Marbut Co. v. Capital City Bank, 148 Ga. App. 664, 252 S.E.2d 85 (1979).

18-4-92.1. Relief of garnishee from liability; definitions.

(a) A garnishee may be relieved from liability for failure to file a garnishee answer properly to the summons of garnishment if the plaintiff failed to provide the information required by subsection (i) of Code Section 18-4-20 that would reasonably enable the garnishee to respond properly to the summons of garnishment and a good faith effort to locate the requested property was made by the garnishee based on the information provided by the plaintiff. In determining whether a garnishee may be relieved of liability imposed by Code Section 18-4-92, the court shall consider and compare the accuracy and quantity of the information supplied by the plaintiff pursuant to subsection (i) of Code Section 18-4-20 with the manner in which the garnishee maintains and locates its records, the compliance by the garnishee with its own procedures, and the conformity of the record systems and procedures with reasonable commercial standards prevailing in the area in which the garnishee is located.

(b) A garnishee and a plaintiff shall not be subject to liability to any party or nonparty to the garnishment at issue arising from the attachment of a lien, the freezing, payment, or delivery into court of property, money, or effects reasonably believed to be that of the defendant if such attachment, freezing, payment, or delivery is reasonably required by a good faith effort to comply with the summons of garnishment. In determining whether such compliance by a garnishee is reasonable, the court shall proceed in the manner prescribed in subsection (a) of this Code section by comparing the efforts of the plaintiff to comply with subsection (i) of Code Section 18-4-20 and the garnishee's record system and procedures.

(c)(1) As used in this subsection, the term:

(A) "Association account" means any account, or any safe-deposit box or similar property, maintained by a corporation, statutory close corporation, limited liability company, partnership, limited partnership, limited liability partnership, foundation, trust, a national, state, or local government or quasi-government entity, or any other incorporated or unincorporated association.

(B) "Fiduciary account" means any account, or any safe-deposit box, maintained by any party in a fiduciary capacity for any other party other than the defendant in garnishment. Without limiting the foregoing, for purposes of this subsection, the term fiduciary account shall include any "trust account" as defined in Code Section 7-1-810, any account created pursuant to a transfer governed by Code Section 44-5-119, and any agency account or safe-deposit box governed by a power of attorney or other written designation of authority.

(2)(A) A garnishee shall not be liable for failure to deliver to the court property, money, or effects in an association account that may be subject to garnishment by reason of the fact that a defendant is an authorized signer on such association account, unless the summons of garnishment alleges that the association account is being used by the defendant for an improper or unlawful purpose.

(B) A garnishee shall not be liable for failure to deliver to the court property, money, or effects in a fiduciary account that may be subject to garnishment if such account specifically is exempted from garnishment by the laws of this state.

(C) A garnishee shall not be liable for failure to deliver to the court property, money, or effects in a fiduciary account that may be subject to garnishment by reason of the fact that a defendant is a fiduciary of the fiduciary account, unless the summons of garnishment is against the defendant in the defendant's capacity as a fiduciary of the fiduciary account or the summons of garnishment alleges that the fiduciary account is being used by the defendant for an improper or unlawful purpose. (Code 1981, § 18-4-92.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1997, p. 941, § 4; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 11/HB 683.)

Res judicata. — Trial court properly granted a bank summary judgment in a suit for conversion against the bank brought by a debtor because the debtor's claim was barred by res judicata since the debtor failed to raise any challenge in the garnishment proceeding wherein the bank was a garnishee. Copeland v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 317 Ga. App. 669, 732 S.E.2d 536 (2012), cert. denied, No. S13C0189, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 124 (Ga. 2013).

18-4-93. Right of defendant to become a party to garnishment proceedings; procedure.

A garnishment proceeding is an action between the plaintiff and the garnishee; but, at any time before a judgment is entered on the garnishee's answer or before money or other property subject to garnishment is distributed, the defendant may become a party to the garnishment for the purposes set out in Code Section 18-4-65 by filing a traverse to the plaintiff's affidavit stating that the affidavit is untrue or legally insufficient; and he shall be a party to all proceedings thereafter. Upon the filing of the defendant's traverse, and at the defendant's application therefor, a judge of the court in which the case is pending shall order a hearing to be held not more than ten days from the date the traverse is filed. The hearing shall be available to the defendant as a matter of right after filing his traverse; and no further summons of garnishment may issue nor may any money or other property delivered to the court as subject to garnishment be disbursed until the hearing shall be held. (Code 1933, § 46-401, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, certain decisions under former Code 1933, § 46-401, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1, have been included in the annotations for this Code section.

O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93 is inapplicable to different garnishment proceedings based on same debt, but prohibits only further issuance of any summons of garnishment in same proceeding in which traverse is filed, pending hearing on traverse. Cale v. Cale, 160 Ga. App. 434, 287 S.E.2d 362 (1981).

Defendant is not a "party" to the garnishment proceeding, although provision is made at O.C.G.A. § 18-4-64 for the defendant to receive notice. Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Defendant may become party to garnishment. — Present garnishment statutes do not contain a specific provision whereby a defendant may traverse the answer of the garnishee. However, while there is no express provision authorizing a defendant to traverse the garnishee's answer, it is provided that a defendant may become a party to the garnishment. Terrell v. Fuller, 160 Ga. App. 56, 286 S.E.2d 50 (1981).

Defendant is not party to garnishment. — When garnishment action is filed, the plaintiff and garnishee are the only parties. Defendant is not a party to garnishment. Stone v. Peoples Bank, 127 Ga. App. 588, 194 S.E.2d 276 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-401, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

For defendant to become a party it is a condition precedent that garnishment be dissolved. Stone v. Peoples Bank, 127 Ga. App. 588, 194 S.E.2d 276 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-401, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Interest of a defendant or a third party in garnished funds. — As O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93 and a court of appeals holding make clear, the interest of a defendant or that of a third party in garnished funds cannot be extinguished prior to a distribution or a judgment directing a distribution of garnished funds. Bowen v. Thompson (In re Thompson), No. 13-52212, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 5610 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Apr. 29, 2013).

Defendant wishing to contest garnishment should follow procedure outlined in statute. Powell v. Powell, 95 Ga. App. 122, 97 S.E.2d 193 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 46-401, as it read prior to revision by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1).

Procedure available to debtor. — Only O.C.G.A. §§ 18-4-65 and 18-4-93 provide how debtor may assert any "interest" debtor may have in garnishment funds. Flournoy v. Pate (In re Antley), 18 Bankr. 207 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Res judicata. — Trial court properly granted a bank summary judgment in a suit for conversion against the bank brought by a debtor because the debtor's claim was barred by res judicata since the debtor failed to raise any challenge in the garnishment proceeding wherein the bank was a garnishee. Copeland v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 317 Ga. App. 669, 732

S.E.2d 536 (2012), cert. denied, No. S13C0189, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 124 (Ga. 2013).

Challenge to validity of judgment not permitted. — In a postjudgment garnishment proceeding, the judgment debtor's traverse asserting that the judgment was void or voidable was clearly an impermissible challenge to the validity of the judgment. The trial court was not authorized to consider the debtor's verified complaint for damages which addressed issues in bar of judgment in support of the debtor's traverse, and the trial court improperly dismissed the proceeding by granting summary judgment on the debtor's verified complaint without holding an evidentiary hearing on the debtor's traverse. Southern Land & Cattle Co. v. Brock, 213 Ga. App. 3, 443 S.E.2d 647 (1994).

Brokerage service account owner's assignee's claims against the service that it had unlawfully allowed disbursement of the funds in the account, pursuant to a garnishment judgment, after the owner had sought to close the account, were barred by res judicata under O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40 after it was noted that the owner had filed a traverse in the garnishment proceeding and, accordingly, the owner could have raised the same issues at that time, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93. The owner, as the debtor in the garnishment proceeding, was required to assert any claim that the owner's right to the funds was superior to that of the judgment creditor, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-95. Lamb v. First Union Brokerage Servs., 263 Ga. App. 733, 589 S.E.2d 300 (2003).

Judgment debtor not party to proceedings unless debtor files a traverse to plaintiff's affidavit. — When president of judgment debtor did not file a traverse to the plaintiff's affidavit to become a party to garnishment proceeding pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93, the president failed to satisfy statutory mandate and did not become a party to the garnishment proceeding. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Trans State, Inc., 172 Ga. App. 763, 324 S.E.2d 585 (1984).

Individual's wages wrongfully garnished. — Claim by an individual whose wages are wrongfully garnished, but who is not the defendant in a garnishment proceeding, can not be asserted in the garnishment proceeding. Baptist Convention v. Henry, 187 Ga. App. 551, 370 S.E.2d 813 (1988).

Traverse properly granted. — Trial court did not err in granting a sole proprietorship's traverse, in which it sought to become a party in a golf supplier's garnishment action and asserted a verified claim to the funds at issue, because there was some evidence to support the findings that the sole proprietorship was a separate and distinct entity from the corporation and that the garnishee assented to the modification of a contract to replace the corporation with the sole proprietorship as contractor; the sole proprietorship had its own tax identification number and liability insurance, and a representative of the garnishee testified that the garnishee was aware that someone had changed the contractor's name and that the garnishee had no business dealings with the corporation. A. M. Buckler & Assocs. v. Sanders, 305 Ga. App. 704, 700 S.E.2d 701 (2010).

Relationship to bankruptcy law. — Chapter 7 debtor was entitled to claim that funds the debtor's employer withheld from the debtor's wages and remitted to a Georgia court were exempt from creditors' claims under O.C.G.A. § 44-13-100(a)(6) because the debtor still had the right at the time the debtor declared bankruptcy to file a traverse under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93 to an affidavit a creditor filed when the creditor garnished the debtor's wages. Because the debtor retained an interest in the funds, the funds became property of the debtor's bankruptcy estate under 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1) and could be exempted from the creditors' claims, and a lien the creditor held on the funds could be avoided under 11 U.S.C. § 522(f). In re Williams, 460 B.R. 915 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2011).

18-4-94. Procedure where defendant prevails generally; establishment of interests in money or other property in court by parties filing claims thereto; distribution of money or other property.

(a) Where the defendant prevails upon the trial of the issues made by his traverse, the garnishment case shall be dismissed by the court; and any money or other property belonging to the defendant in the possession of the court shall be restored to the defendant unless a claim thereto has been filed.

(b) If a claim has been filed, all parties of record may introduce evidence to establish their respective interests in the money or other property in court; and the court shall direct that the money or other property be distributed in accordance with the laws governing priority of claims. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Property interest. — Because the debtor had a property interest in the debtor's claim against the debtor's employer, it followed that the debtor had a property interest in garnished funds. O.C.G.A. § 18-4-94(a) reflected this conclusion. Bowen v. Thompson (In re Thompson), No.

18-4-95. Right of claimants of property subject to garnishment to become parties; procedure.

At any time before judgment is entered on the garnishee's answer or money or other property subject to garnishment is distributed, any person may file a claim in writing under oath stating that he has a claim superior to that of the plaintiff to the money or other property in the hands of the garnishee subject to the process of garnishment; and the claimant shall be a party to all further proceedings upon the garnishment. (Code 1933, § 46-404, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

Section to be strictly construed. — O.C.G.A. § 18-4-95 is in derogation of common law and thus must be strictly construed. Terrell v. Fuller, 160 Ga. App. 56, 286 S.E.2d 50 (1981).

Appellant must file claim in writing under oath. — When an appellant does not file a claim in writing under oath to funds paid by the garnishee, the appellant fails to comply with necessary procedural requirements to enable the appellant to assert a claim to the allegedly exempt wages and thus a traverse of the garnishee's answer is a mere nullity. Terrell v. Fuller, 160 Ga. App. 56, 286 S.E.2d 50 (1981).

Garnishment claims are required to be filed under oath. National Loan Investors v. Satran, 231 Ga. App. 21, 497 S.E.2d 627 (1998).

Failure to file a verified complaint in a garnishment action is more than a mere technicality in the context of res judicata. Lamb v. T-Shirt City, Inc., 272 Ga. App. 298, 612 S.E.2d 108 (2005).

Summary judgment was proper on the ground of res judicata because: (1) the gist of the assignee's complaint was that the individual's claim to the garnished funds was superior to that of the corporation; (2) this was the very issue that the individual raised in the motion to intervene in the garnishment proceeding; (3) the garnishment court denied the motion to intervene, finding that the individual failed to file the claim under oath as required by O.C.G.A. § 18-4-95; (4) by failing to file a verified claim, the individual failed to present the necessary evidence to prove that the individual held a superior claim; and (5) thus, it was the individual's failure of proof that deprived the garnishment court of jurisdiction to consider the claim, and the denial of the motion to intervene had the effect of a negative adjudication on the merits barring any subsequent claims to the garnished funds. Lamb v. T-Shirt City, Inc., 272 Ga. App. 298, 612 S.E.2d 108 (2005).

Claim timely. — Because a sole proprietorship filed a claim before the trial court entered judgment in the garnishment action or ordered the distribution of the money at issue, the claim was timely under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-95, and the trial court did not err in considering the claim. A. M. Buckler & Assocs. v. Sanders, 305 Ga. App. 704, 700 S.E.2d 701 (2010).

Traverse properly granted. — Trial court did not err in granting a sole proprietorship's traverse, in which it sought to become a party in a golf supplier's garnishment action and asserted a verified claim to the funds at issue, because there was some evidence to support the findings that the sole proprietorship was a separate and distinct entity from the corporation and that the garnishee assented to the modification of a contract to replace the corporation with the sole proprietorship as contractor; the sole proprietorship had its own tax identification number and liability insurance, and a representative of the garnishee testified that the garnishee was aware that someone had changed the contractor's name and that the garnishee had no business dealings with the corporation. A. M. Buckler & Assocs. v. Sanders, 305 Ga. App. 704, 700 S.E.2d 701 (2010).

Party asserting superior claim must traverse garnishee's answer. — Defendant who has elected to become a party to the garnishment proceedings and who has a claim superior to that of the plaintiff to money or property in the hands of the garnishee is authorized to, and indeed must, assert such a claim and then traverse the answer of the garnishee. Terrell v. Fuller, 160 Ga. App. 56, 286 S.E.2d 50 (1981).

Brokerage service account owner's assignee's claims against the service that it had unlawfully allowed disbursement of the funds in the account, pursuant to a garnishment judgment, after the owner had sought to close the account, were barred by res judicata under O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40 after it was noted that the owner had filed a traverse in the garnishment proceeding and, accordingly, the owner could have raised the same issues at that time, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93. The owner, as the debtor in the garnishment proceeding, was required to assert any claim that the owner's right to the funds was superior to that of the judgment creditor pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-95. Lamb v. First Union Brokerage Servs., 263 Ga. App. 733, 589 S.E.2d 300 (2003).

Judgment holder properly denied disbursement of disputed funds. — In a garnishment proceeding, a trial court properly declined to disburse certain bank funds to the judgment holder since a claimant timely filed a claim to the funds, established sole ownership to the funds, and complied with the necessary procedural requirements to become a party to the action. Further, since a dispute existed about whether the funds were properly subject to garnishment and the trial court had not yet distributed the funds to the judgment holder, the trial court did not err by resolving the dispute rather than allowing an expedited distribution. Akridge v. Silva, 298 Ga. App. 862, 681 S.E.2d 667 (2009).

18-4-96. Procedure where money or other property in court subject to conflicting cases.

Where money or other property in court is subject to the claims of more than one garnishment case, any interested party to any one of the garnishment cases may make a motion to the court in his case for the distribution of the money or other property. Each party of interest in each case and the clerk of the court shall be served with a copy of the motion. Upon hearing the motion, the court shall enter an order directing that the clerk be paid the court cost of each garnishment proceeding first, and all remaining money or other property shall be distributed in accordance with the law governing the relative priorities of claims, judgments, and liens. (Code 1933, § 46-513, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1895, § 4724, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Effect of garnishment proceedings on creditor's liens. — Merely suing out garnishment proceedings will not alter priority of creditor's liens against bank deposits. Patterson v. Beck, 133 Ga. 701, 66 S.E. 911 (1910) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4724).

By initiating garnishment proceeding, junior judgment creditor acquires no priority over senior judgment creditor. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Wray, 144 Ga. App. 769, 242 S.E.2d 365 (1978).

Judgment holder properly denied disbursement of disputed funds. — In a garnishment proceeding, a trial court properly declined to disburse certain bank funds to the judgment holder since a claimant timely filed a claim to the funds, established sole ownership to the funds, and complied with the necessary procedural requirements to become a party to the action. Further, since a dispute existed about whether the funds were properly subject to garnishment and the trial court had not yet distributed the funds to the judgment holder, the trial court did not err by resolving the dispute rather than allowing an expedited distribution. Akridge v. Silva, 298 Ga. App. 862, 681 S.E.2d 667 (2009).

Exception to no lien rule exists in alimony cases when there is an execution against the property or an attachment of the proceeds of the sale of the defendant's property for past due installments. Cale v. Hale, 157 Ga. App. 412, 277 S.E.2d 770 (1981).

An ex-wife's fi. fa. and summons of garnishment relate back to original divorce judgment entered against her ex-husband and she takes priority as the holder of oldest judgment; but she can take priority only in that portion of the garnishment fund which represents ex-husband's arrearage on the date of the second creditor's judgment because she does not have a lien at the latter date for future installments that were not yet payable. Cale v. Hale, 157 Ga. App. 412, 277 S.E.2d 770 (1981).

Summons of garnishment establishes lien which attaches from date of service. — Summons of garnishment directing garnishee to deliver any property into court that is subject to garnishment establishes lien on subject property that attaches from date of service of summons of garnishment. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

Garnishment action remains ancillary to or dependent upon principal action between creditor and debtor, even though it establishes lien on subject property. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

Rank of judgment on which garnishment depends determines priority. — Because of ancillary nature of garnishment, the relevant factor in determining priorities of several garnishments is rank of judgment on which garnishment is dependent and not rank of garnishment lien. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

Priority lien that initial garnishing creditor obtains by virtue of initial creditor's having first served garnishee does not defeat priority of subsequent garnishing creditor with senior judgment. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

When two or more judgment creditors claim priority to money or property that is paid into court pursuant to summons of garnishment, the garnishing creditor whose judgment is founded on senior judgment has priority over garnishing creditor whose judgment is founded on junior judgment. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-25.

18-4-97. Right of garnishee to actual reasonable expenses in making true garnishee answer of garnishment; procedure for collection; reimbursement.

(a) The garnishee shall be entitled to the garnishee's actual reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, in preparing and filing a garnishee's answer to a summons of garnishment. The amount so incurred shall be taxed in the bill of costs and shall be paid by the party upon whom the cost is cast, as costs are cast in other cases. The garnishee may deduct $50.00 or 10 percent of the amount paid into court, whichever is greater, not to exceed $100.00, as reasonable attorney's fees or expenses.

(b) If the garnishee can show that the garnishee's actual attorney's fees or expenses exceed the amount provided for in subsection (a) of this Code section, the garnishee shall petition the court for a hearing at the time of filing the garnishee's answer without deducting from the amount paid into court. Upon hearing from the parties, the court may enter an order for payment of actual attorney's fees or expenses proven by the garnishee to have been incurred reasonably in preparing and filing the garnishee's answer.

(c) In the event the garnishee makes the deduction permitted in subsection (a) of this Code section but the costs are later cast upon the garnishee, the garnishee shall forthwith refund to the defendant the funds deducted; and, if the costs are later cast against the plaintiff, the court shall enter judgment in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff for the amount of the deductions made by the garnishee.

(d) Nothing in this Code section shall limit the reimbursement of costs incurred by a financial institution as provided by Code Section 7-1-237. (Code 1933, § 46-507, enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1608, § 1; Ga. L. 1985, p. 1632, § 3; Ga. L. 1997, p. 941, § 5; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 12/HB 683.)

tee on the Unlicensed Practice of Law on the issue of execution and filing of an answer in the garnishment action by a nonattorney employee of the garnishee, see 16 (No. 1) Ga. St. B.J. 102 (2010).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Garnishee's recovery limited where garnishee fails to employ statutory procedure. — Garnishee's recovery of attorney's fees or expenses was limited to $50 after the garnishee failed to employ procedure specified in O.C.G.A. § 18-4-97; garnishee's award in excess of $50 was, therefore, erroneous. *Travelers Ins. CONTINUING GARNISHMENT PROCEEDINGS

Law reviews. — For note reviewing Georgia's new garnishment procedures, see 17 Ga. St. B.J. 140 (1981).

18-4-110. Right of plaintiff who has obtained money judgment to process of continuing garnishment; methods, practices, and procedures for continuing garnishment generally.

In addition to garnishment proceedings otherwise available under this chapter, in cases where a money judgment has been obtained in a court of this state or a federal court sitting in this state, the plaintiff shall be entitled to the process of continuing garnishment against any garnishee who is an employer of the defendant against whom the judgment has been obtained. Unless otherwise specifically provided in this article, the methods, practices, and procedures for continuing garnishment shall be the same as for any other garnishment as provided in this chapter, including, but not limited to, those proceedings after a garnishee's answer as provided in Code Section 18-4-89. (Code 1933, § 46-701, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 8; Ga. L. 1981, p. 383, § 2; Ga. L. 1985, p. 1632, § 4; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 13/HB 683.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Only employers subject to continuing garnishment. — Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-110 is to ensure that only employers will be subject to continuing garnishment and that nonemployer garnishees will be automatically discharged with regard to the continuing aspect of the action; however, the section does not purport to discharge a nonemployer garnishee from such general garnishment liability as existed at time original answer was filed. Melnick v. Fund Mgt., Inc., 172 Ga. App. 773, 324 S.E.2d 595 (1984).

Restitution order is a money judgment for purposes of continuing garnishment under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-110. Cameron v. Pickering, 219 Ga. App. 877, 467 S.E.2d 210 (1996).

Garnishment action properly allowed. — Trial court did not err by allowing a garnishment action to proceed because the garnishor was not pursuing a reverse-piercing claim, or any other equitable action, against the garnishee; rather, the action arose from a garnishment action expressly authorized by law. Carrier411 Servs. v. Insight Tech., Inc., 322 Ga. App. 167, 744 S.E.2d 356 (2013).

Garnished funds as property of debtor's bankruptcy estate. — Funds in the amount of $475.86 which a debtor's employer remitted to a Georgia magistrate court after the debtor's landlord filed a garnishment action to collect unpaid rent were property of the debtor's bankruptcy estate under 11 U.S.C. § 541 because the magistrate court still held the funds at the time the debtor declared bankruptcy; although the courts were divided on the issue of whether funds that were paid to a state court under Georgia's garnishment statute were property of a debtor's bankruptcy estate, the better rule was that a judgment defendant in a Georgia garnishment proceeding retained title to wages garnished from the defendant and deposited into the registry of the garnishment court until such wages were distributed by the court. Shubert v. Murray (In re Shubert), 525 B.R. 536 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 2015).

18-4-111. Property, money, or effects subject to continuing garnishment.

(a) All debts owed by the garnishee to the defendant at the time of service of summons of continuing garnishment upon the garnishee and all debts accruing from the garnishee to the defendant from such date of service to and including the one hundred seventy-ninth day thereafter shall be subject to process of continuing garnishment; and no payment made by the garnishee to the defendant or to his order or by any arrangement between the defendant and the garnishee after the date of the service of the summons of continuing garnishment upon the garnishee shall defeat the lien of such garnishment.

(b) All property, money, or effects of the defendant in the possession or control of the garnishee at the time of service of the summons of continuing garnishment upon the garnishee or coming into the possession or control of the garnishee at any time from the date of such service to and including the one hundred seventy-ninth day thereafter shall be subject to process of continuing garnishment, except in the case of collateral securities in the hands of a creditor. Such securities shall not be subject to continuing garnishment so long as there is an amount owed on the debt for which such securities were given as collateral.

(c) Notwithstanding this Code section, the exemptions from garnishment required or allowed by law, including, but not limited to, exemptions provided by Code Sections 18-4-20 and 18-4-22, shall be applicable to a continuing garnishment. (Code 1933, § 46-702, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 8.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Unpaid retirement benefits not subject to garnishment. — Retirement benefits paid into registry of trial court by garnishee were not subject to garnishment because the defendant never received actual possession of benefits. Birchfield v. Birchfield, 165 Ga. App. 101, 299 S.E.2d 409 (1983).

Garnishment subject to bankruptcy stay. — Clearly all debts owed by the garnishees to the debtor and all property, money, or effects of the debtor in possession or control of the garnishees at the time of service of the summons of continuing garnishment are portions of the estate of the debtor so that garnishment proceedings directed at these assets are subject to the automatic stay of 11 U.S.C. § 362 (bankruptcy). Stone v. George F. Richardson, Inc., 169 Ga. App. 232, 312 S.E.2d 339 (1983).

Independent liability of the garnishees arises when the garnishees are no longer in possession due to some arrangement between the defendant and the garnishees after the date of the service of the summons of continuing garnishment upon the garnishees, designed to defeat the lien of such garnishment. Stone v. George F. Richardson, Inc., 169 Ga. App. 232, 312 S.E.2d 339 (1983).

Garnished funds as property of debtor's bankruptcy estate. — Funds in the amount of $475.86 which a debtor's employer remitted to a Georgia magistrate court after the debtor's landlord filed a garnishment action to collect unpaid rent were property of the debtor's bankruptcy estate under 11 U.S.C. § 541 because the magistrate court still held the funds at the time the debtor declared bankruptcy; although courts were divided on the issue of whether funds that were paid to a state court under Georgia's garnishment statute were property of a debtor's bankruptcy estate, the better rule was that a judgment defendant in a Georgia garnishment proceeding retained title to wages garnished from the debtor and deposited into the registry of the garnishment court until such wages were distributed by the court. *Shubert v. 18-4-112. Filing and contents of affidavit for continuing garnishment; issuance of summons; notice and service of summons.

(a) In addition to the information required by Code Section 18-4-61, an affidavit for continuing garnishment shall state that the plaintiff believes that the garnishee is or may be an employer of the defendant and subject to continuing garnishment and shall request that a summons of continuing garnishment shall issue. Upon the filing of the affidavit with the clerk of any court having jurisdiction over the garnishee, the clerk shall cause a summons of continuing garnishment to issue forthwith, provided that the affidavit shall first be made and approved as containing the information required by Code Section 18-4-61 and by this Code section in one of the ways provided for in Code Section 18-4-61.

(b) Only one summons of continuing garnishment may issue on one affidavit for continuing garnishment, and the defendant shall be given notice of the issuance of the summons using any method provided for in Code Section 18-4-64.

(c) The plaintiff, using either forms provided by the court or forms prepared by the plaintiff, shall cause forms sufficient for seven garnishee answers to a summons of continuing garnishment to be served on the garnishee along with the summons. (Code 1933, § 46-703, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 8; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 14/HB 683.)

18-4-113. Contents of summons of continuing garnishment; filing and contents of garnishee answers.

(a) The summons of continuing garnishment shall be directed to the garnishee, who shall be required:

(1) To file a first garnishee answer no later than 45 days after service of summons of continuing garnishment, which garnishee answer shall state what property, money, or other effects of the defendant are subject to continuing garnishment from the time of service through and including the day of the first garnishee answer;

(2) To file further garnishee answers for the remaining period covered by the summons of continuing garnishment. Further garnishee answers shall be filed no later than 45 days after the previous garnishee answer date. Further garnishee answers shall state what property, money, or other effects of the defendant are subject to continuing garnishment from the previous garnishee answer date through and including the date on which that next garnishee answer is filed. No subsequent garnishee answers shall be required on a summons of continuing garnishment if the last garnishee answer filed states what property, money, or other effects of the defendant are subject to continuing garnishment from the previous garnishee answer date to and including the one hundred seventy-ninth day after service of summons of continuing garnishment. The last garnishee answer shall be filed, notwithstanding the other provisions of this paragraph, no later than the one hundred ninety-fifth day after service. For purposes of this paragraph, “previous garnishee answer date” means the date upon which the immediately preceding garnishee answer to the summons of continuing garnishment was filed as provided in this subsection; and

(3) To accompany all such garnishee answers with any property, money, or other effects of the defendant admitted in the garnishee answer to be subject to continuing garnishment.

(b) The summons of continuing garnishment shall state the requirements of subsection (a) of this Code section and shall inform the garnishee that failure to comply with such requirements may result in a judgment against the garnishee for the entire amount claimed due on the judgment against the defendant. (Code 1933, § 46-704, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 8; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 15/HB 683.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Garnishee may admit indebtedness but claim exemption. — Garnishee can admit an indebtedness but contend and show by denial that the indebtedness admitted is exempt from the process of garnishment, and because of the garnishee's denial, the garnishee can fail to pay the amount into court without subjecting itself to the penalty of being subject to judgment for the entire indebtedness. United Merchants & Mfrs., Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 166 Ga. App. 468, 304 S.E.2d 552 (1983).

Default judgment. — Because a default judgment can be entered pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-115(a) only when the garnishee fails to timely file an answer, and by the plain terms of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-113(a)(1), the time in which an answer must be filed is triggered by the service of a summons of continuing garnishment, a default judgment is entered as provided in § 18-4-115(a) only after the garnishee has been served with proper process or has waived service of process, and § 18-4-115(b) provides relief, therefore, only when process has been served or waived; when a court enters a default judgment in a continuing garnishment proceeding in which the garnishee has not been served with a summons of continuing garnishment and the court has not obtained jurisdiction of the person of the garnishee, the default judgment is not one entered as provided in § 18-4-115(a), and § 18-4-115(b) affords no relief, and in such a case, the garnishee is entitled to bring a motion to set aside the default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(1). Lewis v. Capital Bank, 311 Ga. App. 795, 717 S.E.2d 481 (2011).

O.C.G.A. § 18-4-117 is not intended to obviate a nonemployer-garnishee's compliance with O.C.G.A. § 18-4-113. Melnick v. Fund Mgt., Inc., 172 Ga. App. 773, 324 S.E.2d 595 (1984).

18-4-114. Traverse of garnishee answer by plaintiff.

If the garnishee's answer is served on the plaintiff as provided in Code Section 18-4-83, the plaintiff shall traverse the garnishee answer within 15 days after it is served, or the garnishee shall be automatically discharged from further liability with respect to the summons so answered. (Code 1933, § 46-707, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 8; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 15/HB 683.)

Discharge does not preclude use of evidence in subsequent garnishment. — Although O.C.G.A. § 18-4-114 automatically discharges the garnishee from liability with regard to those periods covered by untraversed answers, it does not immunize the garnishee from evidence obtained during those periods that is pro-bative toward liability in a subsequent period. Worsham Bros. Co. v. FDIC, 167 Ga. App. 163, 305 S.E.2d 816 (1983).

18-4-115. Entry of default judgment against garnishee; relief from default judgment.

(a) If the garnishee fails or refuses to file a garnishee answer at least once every 45 days, the garnishee shall automatically become in default. The default may be opened as a matter of right by the filing of the required garnishee answer within 15 days after the day of default upon payment of costs. If the case is still in default after the expiration of such period of 15 days, judgment by default may be entered at any time thereafter against garnishee for the amount claimed to be due on the judgment obtained against the defendant.

(b) The garnishee may obtain relief from default judgment entered as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section upon the same conditions as provided in Code Section 18-4-91. (Code 1933, § 46-708, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 8; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 15/HB 683.)

(a) In a continuing garnishment proceeding, upon the filing of a traverse by defendant pursuant to Code Section 18-4-93, no further summons of garnishment may issue nor may any money delivered to the court as subject to garnishment be disbursed until the hearing is held upon defendant's traverse. The filing of a traverse by the defendant does not relieve the garnishee of the duties of filing a garnishee answer, of withholding property, money, or other effects subject to continuing garnishment, or of delivering to the court any property, money, or other effects subject to continuing garnishment.

Notwithstanding the requirements of Code Section 18-4-113, if the employment relationship between the garnishee and the defendant does not exist at the time of the service of summons of continuing garnishment or terminates during the continuing garnishment, in any garnishee answer required by this article, the garnishee may state that the employment relationship between the garnishee and defendant does not exist or has been terminated, giving the date of termination if terminated on or after service of this summons of continuing garnishment. If no traverse is filed within 15 days after the garnishee answer is served as provided in Code Section 18-4-83, the garnishee shall be automatically discharged from further liability and obligation under Code Section 18-4-113 for that summons with respect to the period of continuing garnishment remaining after the employment relationship is terminated. (Code 1933, § 46-706, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 1769, § 8; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 15/HB 683.)

certified copy of the judgment to be enforced and shall also state the following in the affidavit:

(b) The garnishee shall accompany such initial garnishee answer with money of the defendant admitted in the garnishee answer to be subject to continuing garnishment for support. In computing the amounts subject to this article, the provisions of subsection (f) of Code Section 18-4-20 shall control.

(c) The money paid into court with the initial garnishee answer, after deduction for costs, shall be first applied to the periodic support payment accrued on a daily basis from the date of the affidavit of the plaintiff to the date of the initial garnishee answer. All sums in excess of such periodic payment shall be applied to the original arrearage. Original arrearage shall mean those arrears existing as of the date of the making of the plaintiff's affidavit, plus any amounts includable pursuant to subsection (b) of Code Section 18-4-134. (Code 1981, § 18-4-133, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 785, § 2; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 17/HB 683.)

The amounts paid into court pursuant to subsequent garnishee answers, over and above the periodic payment accruing within such period, shall be applied to the original arrearage until the same is retired.

(c) The garnishee shall file additional garnishee answers until the original arrearage is retired and all periodic support payments are current.

(d) Upon the termination of employment of the defendant by the garnishee, the garnishee shall be required to file a final garnishee answer stating the date and reason for the defendant's termination from employment and stating, to the best of the garnishee's information, the defendant's present residential address and employer. (Code 1981, § 18-4-134, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 785, § 2; Ga. L. 2012, p. 2, § 17/HB 683.)

18-5-1. Definitions.

As used in this chapter, the term:

(1) “Debt adjusting” means doing business in debt adjustments, budget counseling, debt management, or debt pooling service or holding oneself out, by words of similar import, as providing services to debtors in the management of their debts and contracting with a debtor for a fee to:

(A) Effect the adjustment, compromise, or discharge of any account, note, or other indebtedness of the debtor; or

(B) Receive from the debtor and disburse to his or her creditors any money or other thing of value.

(2) “Person” means an individual, corporation, partnership, trust, association, or other legal entity.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Forum selection provision invalid when denying debtor rights. — Trial court erred in granting a Texas corporation’s motion to dismiss a debtors’ action alleging that the debt adjustment services a Texas corporation provided them violated Georgia statutes specifically regulating the business of “debt adjusting” as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 18-5-1 et seq. on the ground that the parties’ contract contained a provision selecting Texas as the forum for any dispute because, if enforced, the contract’s forum selection and choice of law provisions requiring the debtors to bring their action before a Texas court applying Texas law would operate in tandem to deprive the debtors of specific statutory protections set forth in § 18-5-1 et seq., relating to debt adjustment agreements; because that would violate Georgia’s public policy established in those provisions the forum selection and choice of law provisions in the contract were invalid and unenforceable. *Moon v. L. 2015, p. 1088, § 18/SB 148.)

19-2-1. Place of domicile; how domicile changed, generally.

(a) The domicile of every person who is of full age and is laboring under no disability is the place where the family of the person permanently resides, if in this state. If a person has no family or if his family does not reside in this state, the place where the person generally lodges shall be considered his domicile.

(b) The domicile of a person sui juris may be changed by an actual change of residence with the avowed intention of remaining at the new residence. Declaration of an intention to change one's domicile is ineffectual for that purpose until some act is done in execution of the intention. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ROLE OF JURY
APPLICATION

General Consideration

Applicability of section. — Law was not intended to apply in determining whether person had lost domicile acquired in this state and has become domiciled in some other state. Williams v. Williams, 191 Ga. 437, 12 S.E.2d 352 (1940).

Establishment of residence. — Law required both act and intent to establish residence, and either without the other was insufficient. Bufford v. Bufford, 223 Ga. 133, 153 S.E.2d 718 (1967).

Domicile of man having family. — Domicile of man having family was place where family shall permanently reside, if in this state. Grimaud v. Knox-Georgia Homes, Inc., 210 Ga. 514, 81 S.E.2d 476 (1954).

"Family" defined. — No definition of the word "family" as used in the law would be satisfactory that does not convey the idea of unity of the household in which were gathered the members of the family as one collective body under the management or control of the head thereof. Forlaw v. Augusta Naval Stores Co., 124 Ga. 261, 52 S.E. 898 (1905).

Meaning of the word "family" is not necessarily identical with the meaning of the same word as used in the homestead and exemption laws, and there was a still further variation from the meaning in criminal laws and police regulations. Forlaw v. Augusta Naval Stores Co., 124 Ga. 261, 52 S.E. 898 (1905).

"Permanently" defined. — Word "permanently" is used in these provisions in contradistinction from the word "temporarily." Alvaton Mercantile Co. v. Caldwell, 34 Ga. App. 151, 128 S.E. 781 (1925); Grimaud v. Knox-Georgia Homes, Inc., 210 Ga. 514, 81 S.E.2d 476 (1954).

"Residence" and "domicile" were not synonymous and convertible terms. Worsham v. Ligon, 144 Ga. 707, 87 S.E. 1025 (1916); Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930); Bass v. Bass, 222 Ga. 378, 149 S.E.2d 818 (1966); Pugh v. Jones, 131 Ga. App. 600, 206 S.E.2d 650 (1974).

Trial court erred in finding that venue was proper in Effingham County, Georgia because the defendant, who maintained residences in both Effingham County and Chatham County, Georgia, was domiciled in Chatham County. Oglesby v. Deal, 311 Ga. App. 622, 716 S.E.2d 749 (2011).

"Domicile," unlike "residence," means permanent place of abode, whereas "residence" is not necessarily permanent, and may be at some place other than the place of domicile. Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930).

Actual residence and intention to remain. — There must be concurrence of actual residence and intention to remain to acquire domicile. Forlaw v. Augusta Naval Stores Co., 124 Ga. 261, 52 S.E. 898 (1905); Worsham v. Ligon, 144 Ga. 707, 87 S.E. 1025 (1916); Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930); Sorrells v. Sorrells, 247 Ga. 9, 274 S.E.2d 314 (1981).

Prerequisites to change of domicile. — In order to change a person's domicile, a person must actually remove to another place with a present intention of remaining there as that person's place of domicile, or having removed, avow that person's intention of remaining there as the person's place of domicile, but such avowal may be proved by express declaration or acts equivalent thereto. Worsham v. Ligon, 144 Ga. 707, 87 S.E. 1025 (1916); Bass v. Bass, 222 Ga. 378, 149 S.E.2d 818 (1966).

For a person to change that person's domicile, it is essential that the person should have a bona fide intent to make the change. In addition, the person must also declare an intent to change the person's domicile and do some act in execution of such intent. Brandt v. Buckley, 147 Ga. 389, 94 S.E. 233 (1917).

To effect a change of domicile there must be an avowed intent, which may be shown by declarations or acts equivalent thereto, and an actual removal. Bellamy v. Bellamy, 187 Ga. 804, 2 S.E.2d 413 (1939).

Person may have several residences, but only one domicile. Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930).

Change in domicile involves exercise of volition and choice. — As to a person sui juris, the matter of making a change in domicile is one involving the exercise of volition and choice. Stanfield v. Hursey, 36 Ga. App. 394, 136 S.E. 826 (1927).

There must be either tacit or explicit intention to change one's domicile before there is a change of legal residence. Sorrells v. Sorrells, 247 Ga. 9, 274 S.E.2d 314 (1981).

When length of stay away from domicile immaterial. — When an individual travels away from that individual's domicile for a time, it is immaterial whether such a stay is for one month or any number of months, provided it does not become so extended that it could be reasonably inferred that there is an actual intention to make a change of domicile. Venable v. Long Realty Co., 46 Ga. App. 803, 169 S.E. 322 (1933).

There may be residence for long time at place not intended as permanent abode. — See Bush v. State, 10 Ga. App. 544, 73 S.E. 697 (1912).

Rules stated in this section determine where suit should be instituted. Daniel v. Sullivan, 46 Ga. 277 (1872).

Domicile for purpose of legal action. — Domicile or legal residence for the purpose of action exists when there has been a concurrence of an actual residence and an intention to remain there permanently, which intention may be proved by acts. Mayo v. Ivan Allen-Marshall Co., 51 Ga. App. 250, 180 S.E. 20 (1935).

One's legal residence for purpose of being sued was necessarily the same county as the person's domicile where domicile was determined by this statute. Pugh v. Jones, 131 Ga. App. 600, 206 S.E.2d 650 (1974) (see O.C.G.A. § 19-2-1).

Role of Jury

Question of domicile is mixed question of law and fact, and is ordinarily one for jury and should not be determined by the court as a matter of law except in plain and palpable cases. Williams v. Williams, 226 Ga. 734, 177 S.E.2d 481 (1970); Pugh v. Jones, 131 Ga. App. 600, 206 S.E.2d 650 (1974); Milton v. Wilkes, 152 Ga. App. 362, 262 S.E.2d 624 (1979).

Question of bona fides of intent to change domicile is one for jury determination. Brandt v. Buckley, 147 Ga. 389, 94 S.E. 233 (1917).

Residence was a question of fact to be determined by the jury, so far as it involves ascertainment of the intention of the party. Jordan v. Carter, 60 Ga. 443 (1878); Battle v. Braswell, 107 Ga. 128, 32 S.E. 838 (1899); Forlaw v. Augusta Naval Stores Co., 124 Ga. 261, 52 S.E. 898 (1905); Mims v. Jones, 135 Ga. 541, 69 S.E. 824 (1910); Smith v. Smith, 136 Ga. 197, 71 S.E. 158 (1911).

Defendant's liability to suit. — Whether defendant was liable to suit as resident was question for jury. Jordan v. Carter, 60 Ga. 443 (1878).

Question of domicile may be withdrawn from jury only if the evidence demands a finding that there has not been a change of domicile. Milton v. Wilkes, 152 Ga. App. 362, 262 S.E.2d 624 (1979).

Application

Change of domicile not shown. — Trial court did not err when the court denied the father's motion to move a child custody action from Gwinnett County to DeKalb County because the father had not proved domicile in DeKalb County; while the father testified that the father moved to DeKalb County, the father's driver's license showed a Gwinnett County address eight months later and the father had not notified the father's homeowner's insurance company or the Internal Revenue Service of the move. Goyal v. Fifadara, 324 Ga. App. 567, 751 S.E.2d 190 (2013).

Dismissal for lack of residency affirmed. — Trial court's finding that a wife was not a resident of DeKalb County, Georgia, and its order dismissing her DeKalb County divorce case were affirmed where the parties had sold their home in Georgia six months before the divorce was filed, and the wife's tax forms stated that she did not maintain a home in the United States, but rather that her bona fide residence was in South Africa; although the wife claimed that she intended to return to DeKalb County, the trial court properly applied the principle that the testimony of a party who offered herself as a witness in her own behalf at trial was to be construed most strongly against her when it was self-contradictory, vague, or equivocal. Conrad v. Conrad, 278 Ga. 107, 597 S.E.2d 369 (2004).

Person's domicile is not changed merely by the person's enlistment in Army and that person's transfer or assignment by military order to another jurisdiction. Squire v. Vazquez, 52 Ga. App. 712, 184 S.E. 629 (1936).

Father did not reside in Georgia for purposes of recording and modifying an Alabama child support order under

Application (Cont'd)

O.C.G.A. § 19-11-172(a) of the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-11-100 et seq., because while the father had been stationed in Georgia in the Army, the father was registered to vote in Alabama, had a driver's license there, and lived in Alabama with his wife, two sons, and his father; thus, the father was domiciled in Alabama for the purposes of O.C.G.A. § 19-2-1. Kean v. Marshall, 294 Ga. App. 459, 669 S.E.2d 463 (2008).

Military personnel may change domicile. — It is as competent for a soldier to abandon the soldier's domicile or residence and acquire a new one as it is for any other citizen to do so. Engram v. Faircloth, 205 Ga. 577, 54 S.E.2d 598 (1949); Smiley v. Davenport, 139 Ga. App. 753, 229 S.E.2d 489 (1976).

Effect of transfer to mental hospital on domicile. — Person's domicile is not changed merely by the person's transference to a mental hospital located in another jurisdiction, nor by an adjudication of a court of competent jurisdiction that the person is of unsound mind, remanding the person to a hospital for the insane, nor is the person's domicile changed by the appointment of a guardian for the person's estate. Squire v. Vazquez, 52 Ga. App. 712, 184 S.E. 629 (1936).

Mentally incompetent person may lack capacity to intend change of domicile. — Person who is mentally incompetent and who moves from one place to another may lack the mental capacity to change his or her domicile. Sorrells v. Sorrells, 247 Ga. 9, 274 S.E.2d 314 (1981).

Boarding. — When a single person boards and lodges four nights in the week in a certain district for the purpose of teaching school such district will constitute the person's residence. Hinton v. Lindsay, 20 Ga. 746 (1856).

Criminal flight from state. — Change of domicile is not effected by a person fleeing from the state after wounding another when the person's family continues to live in the former state. Barrett & Williford v. Black, Cobb & Co., 25 Ga. 151 (1858).

Domicile of convict sent to a penitentiary in a county other than that of the convict's domicile is not changed by this reason. Barton v. Barton, 74 Ga. 761 (1885).

Effect of abandoning family. — When a man has a family but has abandoned the family, the man's residence must be determined under the latter part of the section, namely, that pertaining to persons with no family. Gilmer v. Gilmer, 32 Ga. 685 (1861); Smith v. Smith, 136 Ga. 197, 71 S.E. 158 (1911).

Change of residence by wife. — Wife cannot, in the absence of the husband, and without his consent, change the family residence so as to change the husband's venue. Sindall v. H.C. Thacker & Co., 56 Ga. 51 (1876).

Pendency of divorce proceeding in another state. — Mere pendency of a suit for divorce in another state, which was dismissed only a short time before the filing of a suit for divorce in this state, does not disprove the positive testimony of the plaintiff that the plaintiff had been a bona fide resident of this state for 12 months prior to the filing of the plaintiff's suit. Bellamy v. Bellamy, 187 Ga. 804, 2 S.E.2d 413 (1939).

Residence taken upon marital separation not domicile when husband disavows as such. — When the husband had lived with the wife in the county in which a suit for divorce and alimony was filed and took an apartment in another county upon their separation which he disavowed as his domicile, he did not abandon the former county as his domicile. Smith v. Smith, 223 Ga. 551, 156 S.E.2d 916 (1967).

In a family violence case in which the respondent has left the family home but has not avowed an intention to remain in that new location, venue is proper both in the county of the family's residence and in the county to which the respondent has relocated. Davis-Redding v. Redding, 246 Ga. App. 792, 542 S.E.2d 197 (2000).

No intention to abandon residence. — Man having a permanent residence in one county does not lose such residence by accepting a contract in another county, and renting a house in the latter county to which he moved his family, when it is not his intention to abandon his former domicile in the county first referred to. Knight

v. Bond, 112 Ga. 828, 38 S.E. 206 (1901).

Second house rented for special purpose not domicile. — Fact that defendant removed to another county and there rented a house did not constitute a change of domicile since the removal was for the purpose of educating children, the former home was maintained, the incidents of citizenship there discharged, and there was at no time an intention to provide a fixed place of abode in the place of removal, or to there establish permanent residence. Alvaton Mercantile Co. v. Caldwell, 34 Ga. App. 151, 128 S.E. 781 (1925).

Temporary departure from domicile. — If a person leaves the place of the person's domicile temporarily, or for a particular purpose, and does not actually remove to another place with the intention of remaining there indefinitely, the person will not be considered as having changed the person's legal residence. Venable v. Long Realty Co., 46 Ga. App. 803, 169 S.E. 322 (1933); Smith v. Smith, 223 Ga. 551, 156 S.E.2d 916 (1967).

Temporary absence from county by man who has no family does not operate to change domicile. Bellamy v. Bellamy, 187 Ga. 804, 2 S.E.2d 413 (1939).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Domicile is broader and more fundamental concept than mere residence. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 91.

Domicile means one's fixed and permanent place of abode, to which, when one is absent therefrom, one intends to return. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 91; 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 375.

Person's domicile is principally question of intent; one acquires domicile by residing in a particular place with the intention of remaining there indefinitely; taking up temporary residence in other places, even for long periods of time, will not result in loss of one's domicile as long as the intent to return prevails. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 144.

Residence and domicile distinguished. — Residence means living in a particular locality; domicile means living in that locality with the intent to make it a fixed and permanent home. Residence requires only physical presence as an inhabitant in a given place, while domicile requires presence in that place as well as an intention to make it a domicile. A new domicile cannot be acquired simply by change of residence without an intention to abandon the old domicile. A person may continue to be domiciled in this state even though actually residing in another state. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-22.

One cannot change domicile by merely assuming residence in new location without intention to remain there; physical presence in the new location must coexist with the requisite intention to remain there. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 91; 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 375.

Change of domicile requires physical move and intention to remain. — In order to change one's domicile it is necessary that one move from one's old domicile and become a resident in the proposed new domicile with the intention to remain there permanently or at least indefinitely. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 91.

Domicile retained until officially established elsewhere. — Person, having established domicile within this state, will retain the person's domicile here until the person officially establishes domicile in another state. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-70.

Temporary residence does not change domicile. — Temporary residence of a person with the person's family in another county while the person was performing a contract in that county does not result in a change of domicile. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 92.

Temporary residence of wife and family for special purpose. — While it is provided that the domicile of a married man shall be the place where his family resides, the wife or the wife and family may, for purposes of temporary convenience or for the purpose of educating the children, reside for a long time at a place not intended as a permanent abode, without effecting any change of legal residence; this for the reason that while there is a physical removal, there was never, on the part of those who moved, an intention to abandon a former domicile. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 92.

One may have two or more residences at same time, but every person has but one domicile. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 91.

Extension of land into district immaterial as to domicile. — Fact that a candidate's land extends into a district is immaterial; in order to qualify as a candidate from that district, one's house must be within the boundaries of that district and one must be physically present in that district. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-273.

Members of armed forces never lose their domicile merely by joining service, and in response to military orders, moving about from state to state or abroad; they retain the domicile they held at the time they entered the service, unless they indicate that it is their intention to remove their domicile to some other state in which they are residing. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 91.

While a person in military service may change the person's domicile, the mere enlistment in the armed forces and transfer by military order does not necessarily change the domicile. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-22.

No change effected when military personnel have no intent to change domicile. — That a legal resident of a county is absent from the county in the military service of the United States for a long period of time with no intent to change the person's residence does not effect a change. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 478.

Military personnel intending to remain in Georgia. — If one moved to Georgia with intention of remaining when returning from military, one may consider Georgia one's domicile. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-190.

Noncitizens of United States may acquire domicile in Georgia for purposes of attending state supported college or university. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 128.

19-2-2. Election between two or more domiciles; domicile of transients.

(a) If a person resides indifferently at two or more places in this state, the person shall have the privilege of electing which of such places shall be his domicile. If the election is made known generally among those with whom the person transacts business in this state, the place chosen shall be the person's domicile. If no such election is made or if an election is made but is not generally known among those with whom the person transacts business in this state, third persons may treat any one of the places in which the person resides as his domicile and it shall be so held; and in all such cases a person who habitually resides a portion of the year in one county and another portion of the year in another shall be deemed a resident of both, so far as to subject him to actions in either for contracts made or torts committed in such county.

(b) Transient persons whose business or pleasure causes a frequent change of residence and who have no family permanently residing at one place in this state shall be deemed, as to third persons, to be domiciled at such place as they at the time temporarily occupy. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Words "all such cases" refer to preceding portion of subsection (a) of this section dealing with persons who "reside indifferently at two or more places in this state." Jackson v. Taylor, 49 Ga. App. 261, 175 S.E. 259 (1934).

Juror living on county line may serve in county claimed as domicile. — Juror living in a house which is partly in one county and partly in another is competent to serve in the county in which the juror claims residence, votes, and pays the juror's taxes. Chancey v. State, 141 Ga. 54, 80 S.E. 287 (1913).

In a family violence case in which the respondent has left the family home but has not avowed an intention to remain in that new location, venue is proper both in

McDermott*, 110 Ga. App. 536, 139 S.E.2d 143 (1964).

19-2-3. Domicile of married person.

The domicile of a married person shall not be presumed to be the domicile of that person's spouse. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1646; Code 1868, § 1691; Code 1873, § 1692; Code 1882, § 1692; Civil Code 1895, § 1826; Civil Code 1910, § 2183; Code 1933, § 79-403; Ga. L. 1982, p. 805, §§ 1, 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Section unconstitutional insofar as it might prevent voting registration. — Joint operation of former Code 1933, §§ 79-403 and 79-407 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-2-3 and 19-2-6) and former Code 1933, § 34-632, insofar as it established an irrebuttable presumption that the domicile and residence of a married woman was that of her husband, and thereby prevented her from registering to vote in Georgia, violated U.S. Const., amend. 19. Kane v. Fortson, 369 F. Supp. 1342 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Words "voluntary separation" and "living apart," do not necessarily mean mutual agreement for separation; for when husband has been guilty of such dereliction of duty in the marital relation as entitles the wife to have it either partially or totally dissolved, she may acquire a separate domicile of her own for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction on the proper tribunal in a proceeding for divorce or separation. Pearlstine v. Pearlstine, 148 Ga. 756, 98 S.E. 264 (1919); Abou-Issa v. Abou-Issa, 229 Ga. 77, 189 S.E.2d 443 (1972).

Domicile not presumed to be spouse's domicile. — In a case involving the residency requirements of O.C.G.A. §§ 21-2-217(a) and 46-2-1(b), the trial court properly granted a commissioner's motion for summary judgment because the evidence established the commissioner's residence in District Two at least 12 months prior to the commissioner's election to the Public Service Commission; pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-2-3, the domicile of the commissioner's spouse in another district was not presumed to be the commissioner's domicile. Dozier v. Baker, 283 Ga. 543, 661 S.E.2d 543 (2008).

Military personnel stationed in Georgia. — Member of the military stationed in Georgia may claim an exemption on her automobile pursuant to the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 574] regardless of her husband's claiming homestead exemption on his house in Georgia, unless other conduct on her part establishes an intent to change her residency to Georgia. 1990 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U90-15.

19-2-4. Domicile of minor.

(a) If a minor child's parents are domiciled in the same county, the domicile of that child shall be that of the parents. If a minor child's parents are divorced, separated, or widowed, or if one parent is not domiciled in the same county as the other parent, the child's domicile shall be that of the custodial parent. The domicile of a minor child born out of wedlock shall be that of the child's mother.

(b) Where a child's parents have voluntarily relinquished custody of the child to a third person or have been deprived of custody by court order, the child's domicile shall be that of the person having legal custody of the child. If there is no legal custodian, the child's domicile shall be that of his guardian if the guardian is domiciled in this state. If there is neither a legal custodian nor a guardian, the domicile of the child shall be determined as if he were an adult. (Orig. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Domicile of parents at time of birth is domicile of child, and remains the child's domicile until changed in some manner as provided by law, either by a change of the domicile of the parents or of the parent whose domicile controls that of the child before the child reaches majority, or by a change in the domicile of the child. Squire v. Vazquez, 52 Ga. App. 712, 184 S.E. 629 (1936).

Husband and wife separated. — When husband and wife are separated, the county of the husband's residence is that of the minor children, unless he has consented otherwise. Hunt v. Hunt, 94 Ga. 257, 21 S.E. 515 (1894).

Children removed from state by widowed mother. — When children had been removed from the state by their widowed mother, who had married again but they frequently avowed an intention of returning to their former home, on an application for homestead out of their father's property in the county in which the father dies resident, the question of domicile was for the jury, and a verdict in favor of the minor's rights will not be disturbed. Harkins v. Arnold, 46 Ga. 656 (1872).

Child's domicile changed to that of mother when father abandoned family. — That a father left his wife and minor child in Georgia to obtain employment for himself in Michigan and failed to provide for the family, except sending the family about $12.00 for about two years, authorized a finding that the father had voluntarily relinquished his parental authority over the child to the mother, thereby rendering the domicile of the child that of the child's mother. Thus, a Michigan divorce decree awarding him the custody of the child was void for lack of jurisdiction, even though the mother filed an answer in the divorce proceeding, asking that she be awarded the child. Elliott v. Elliott, 181 Ga. 545, 182 S.E. 846 (1935).

Child's domicile changed to that of guardians when father relinquished custody. — Giving full faith and credit to the decree of a Tennessee court to which father of child relinquished his parental authority, which decree committed child to petitioners, residents of this state, it is clear that the child's domicile was changed from Tennessee to Georgia. Herrin v. Graham, 87 Ga. App. 291, 73 S.E.2d 572 (1952), overruled on other grounds, Davey v. Evans, 156 Ga. App. 698, 275 S.E.2d 769 (1980).

Minor leaving home with parental consent. — Change of domicile does not result from the minor's leaving home with the father's consent, to live in another county and conduct a partnership business there in the minor's own name for the minor and the minor's father. Jackson v. Southern Flour & Grain Co., 146 Ga. 453, 91 S.E. 481 (1917).

Choice by minor. — When a minor has neither father, mother, nor guardian, the minor may change the minor's residence at will. Dampier v. McCall, 78 Ga. 607, 3 S.E. 563 (1887).

Residence of ward who has come to years of discretion. — When ward has come to years of discretion, residence of guardian is not residence of ward, unless the ward chooses to make it the ward's residence. Roberts v. Walker, 18 Ga. 5 (1855).

Service of process on illegitimate child's mother gives juvenile court jurisdiction. — Service of process on the mother in the county in which the mother of an illegitimate child resides is sufficient to give the county juvenile court jurisdiction over both the mother and the child, regardless of whether there was a "detention" of the child, and in spite of the fact that a welfare worker had obtained possession of the child outside of the state. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 148 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Domicile of child for school purposes can be altered by voluntary relinquishment of parental authority if proper legal action has been taken or circumstances are present which secure to the person with whom the child is residing some legal obligation as to the child's welfare and education. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-8.

Relinquished parental control of child. — If parental control of a child is relinquished to Georgia residents, the child is legally domiciled in this state. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-190.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

When ward is inmate at state hospital when guardian appointed. — Law did not refer to situations where ward was inmate at state hospital at time of guardian's appointment, was never in the custody of the guardian, and had been declared sane some years prior to the ward's death, and the sole remaining contact with the guardian at the time of the ward's death was with reference to whether a certain disbursement made by the guardian was proper. Fuller v. Weekes, 105 Ga. App. 790, 125 S.E.2d 662, rev'd on other grounds, 218 Ga. 515, 128 S.E.2d 715 (1962).

Section unconstitutional insofar as it might prevent voting registration.

— The joint operation of former Code 1933, § 79-407 (see O.C.G.A. § 19-2-6) and former Code 1933, § 34-632, insofar as it established an irrebuttable presumption that the domicile and residence of a married woman is that of her husband, and thereby prevents her from registering to vote in Georgia, violates U.S. Const., amend. 19. *Kane v. SAME SEX MARRIAGE

General Consideration

O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1 applies equally to both ceremonial and common-law marriages. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lucas, 761 F. Supp. 130 (M.D. Ga. 1991).

"According to law" had reference to common law as expounded in Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga. 173 (1860), and recognized by the legislature as then existing, but which on that feature was intended to be "regulated" by statute. Drewry v. State, 208 Ga. 239, 65 S.E.2d 916 (1951), adopting dissenting opinion in Lefkoff v. Sicro, 189 Ga. 554, 6 S.E.2d 687 (1939).

In order for valid marriage to exist there must be ceremonial marriage or common-law marriage entered into in good faith. Kersey v. Gardner, 264 F. Supp. 887 (M.D. Ga. 1967).

To constitute valid marriage in this state, there must be parties able to contract. Connor v. Rainwater, 200 Ga. 866, 38 S.E.2d 805 (1946).

Marriage is in law complete when parties able to contract have actually contracted to be man and wife in the forms and with the solemnities required by law. Pitts v. State, 147 Ga. 801, 95 S.E. 706 (1918).

Evidence

Evidence presented must show present intent to marry; an agreement to marry in the future is not sufficient. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Smith, 151 Ga. App. 270, 259 S.E.2d 675 (1979).

All presumptions necessary to make marriage valid attach on proof of formal ceremony and cohabitation by the parties under the belief that the parties were lawfully married. Fanning v. State, 46 Ga. App. 716, 169 S.E. 60 (1933); Brewer v. Interstate Life & Accident Co.,

56 Ga. App. 720, 193 S.E. 909 (1937).

Presumption of capacity to contract marriage. — When marriage is regularly solemnized and parties live together, there is a presumption of capacity to contract marriage, and of the existence of all other facts necessary to render the marriage valid; and this presumption prevails until the contrary appears. Fanning v. State, 46 Ga. App. 716, 169 S.E. 60 (1933); Brewer v. Interstate Life & Accident Co., 56 Ga. App. 720, 193 S.E. 909 (1937); Addison v. Addison, 186 Ga. 155, 197 S.E. 232 (1938); Brown v. Hogan, 72 Ga. App. 691, 34 S.E.2d 619 (1945); Carter v. Graves, 206 Ga. 234, 56 S.E.2d 917 (1949).

Presumption of validity of marriage. — Law favors validity of marriages, and marriage is presumed to be valid until the marriage's validity is negated by disproving every reasonable possibility of the marriage's validity. Brown v. State, 208 Ga. 304, 66 S.E.2d 745 (1951).

O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1 reflects Georgia's policy favoring the validity of marriages; validity is presumed absent proof negating the possibility of validity. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lucas, 761 F. Supp. 130 (M.D. Ga. 1991).

Absence of proof of entry into a present marriage contract as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1 supported the finding that a petitioner for year's support was not the decedent's common-law spouse. Holmes v. Holmes, 232 Ga. App. 434, 502 S.E.2d 294 (1998).

Burden to show marriage invalid. — Burden is upon one who attacks validity of marriage to show that the marriage is invalid by clear, distinct, positive, and satisfactory proof. Fanning v. State, 46 Ga. App. 716, 169 S.E. 60 (1933); Brewer v. Interstate Life & Accident Co., 56 Ga. App. 720, 193 S.E. 909 (1937); Addison v. Addison, 186 Ga. 155, 197 S.E. 232 (1938); Brown v. Hogan, 72 Ga. App. 691, 34 S.E.2d 619 (1945).

Whether or not common law marriage exists is question of fact, requiring proof of simultaneous existence of all elements of O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1. Gregg v. Barnes, 203 Ga. App. 549, 417 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 206 (1992); Dixon v. State, 217 Ga. App.

267, 456 S.E.2d 758 (1995).

Act of living together as man and wife. — Marriage may be shown by such circumstances as act of living together as man and wife, holding themselves out to the world as such, and repute in the vicinity and among neighbors and visitors that they are such, and indeed all such facts as usually accompany the marriage relation and indicate the factum of the marriage and the evidence in each case is for the jury. Murray v. Clayton, 151 Ga. App. 720, 261 S.E.2d 455 (1979); Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Smith, 151 Ga. App. 270, 259 S.E.2d 675 (1979).

Relationship cannot be partial or periodic. — Evidence that parties held themselves out as married when it was to their benefit and maintained their non-marital status when it was to their benefit supported finding that there was no marriage as such legal relationship cannot be partial or periodic. Baynes v. Baynes, 219 Ga. App. 848, 467 S.E.2d 195 (1996).

Agreement on which common-law marriage is founded must contain mutual intent to be married in praesenti, not a present intent to marry in the future. Hubbard v. State, 145 Ga. App. 714, 244 S.E.2d 639 (1978).

Immediate agreement to become husband and wife. — To constitute a valid marriage per verba de praesenti there must be an agreement to become husband and wife immediately from the time when the mutual consent is given. An express future condition is absolutely fatal to a claim of marriage, and cannot be explained away by circumstances, as it shows mental reservations which are incompatible with consent, whether the condition relates to the creation of the marriage status, or to the duration of the relations of the parties. Peacock v. Peacock, 196 Ga. 441, 26 S.E.2d 608 (1943).

General repute in community. — Marriage is matter of public interest, and general repute in community is admissible upon such an issue. Murray v. Clayton, 151 Ga. App. 720, 261 S.E.2d 455 (1979).

Party asserting marriage has burden of proving end of illicit relationship. — When the relationship between the parties begins as an illicit arrangement, the burden is on the party asserting the validity of the marriage to show that the illicit relationship ended and that the parties did actually enter a marriage contract. Brown v. Brown, 234 Ga. 300, 215 S.E.2d 671 (1975); Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Smith, 151 Ga. App. 270, 259 S.E.2d 675 (1979).

Party seeking to prove prior marriage founded upon cohabitation must show every element necessary to validity of such a prior marriage by proving not only that the prior marriage was consummated in accordance with the rules of law, but that such alleged former spouse was single and possessing every other qualification for a valid marriage. Addison v. Addison, 186 Ga. 155, 197 S.E. 232 (1938).

Inconsistent acts do not overcome direct proof of common-law marriage. — When a common-law marriage has been satisfactorily proved, inconsistent acts and declarations of the parties subsequent thereto, although entitled to consideration, do not overcome the direct proof of the existence of the marriage. Evans v. Marbut, 140 Ga. App. 329, 231 S.E.2d 94 (1976), cert. dismissed, 238 Ga. 583, 234 S.E.2d 506 (1977).

Presumption as valid contract, arising from cohabitation and repute, yields to proof of subsequent ceremonial marriage of one of the parties. Addison v. Addison, 186 Ga. 155, 197 S.E. 232 (1938); Carter v. Graves, 206 Ga. 234, 56 S.E.2d 917 (1949).

Ceremonial marriage will not prevail over properly proven previous common-law marriage. Carter v. Graves, 206 Ga. 234, 56 S.E.2d 917 (1949), later appeal, 207 Ga. 308, 61 S.E.2d 282 (1950).

Rules of estoppel between parties cannot be invoked to determine validity of marriage. Bell v. Bell, 206 Ga. 194, 56 S.E.2d 289 (1949).

Georgia does not allow the validity of a marriage to be challenged through estoppel. Hayes v. Schweiker, 575 F. Supp. 402 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 723 F.2d 918 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 953, 104 S. Ct. 2160, 80 L. Ed. 2d 545 (1984).

Evidence supported jury's determination that common-law marriage existed. See Ridley v. Grandison, 260 Ga. 6, 389 S.E.2d 746 (1990).

Conflicting evidence allowed the jury to find evidence of a common-law marriage between a decedent and a widower, which began before January 1, 1997, when common-law marriages were no longer recognized in Georgia, and continued to the date of the decedent's death, because they were able to contract as the decedent was a widow and the widower was divorced, they had a sexual relationship and shared a bedroom, they agreed to be married and the decedent accepted a ring from the widower which she wore daily until her last hospitalization, the widower referred to the decedent as his wife, they opened joint financial accounts, to which they both contributed monies, and shared household expenses, they opened separate individual retirement accounts, designating each other as sole beneficiaries, they incurred debt together, they bought land which was titled in both of their names, he signed consents for her last hospitalization, and they introduced each other to others as husband or wife. In re Estate of Love, 274 Ga. App. 316, 618 S.E.2d 97 (2005).

When a couple had not agreed to live together as man and wife and had not held themselves out to the world as husband and wife, but had, on the contrary, frequently referred to themselves as engaged to be married, there was no common-law marriage. In re Estate of Wilson, 236 Ga. App. 496, 512 S.E.2d 383 (1999).

Common-law Marriage

Common-law marriage is valid marriage in this state. Steed v. State, 80 Ga. App. 360, 56 S.E.2d 171 (1949).

There is no common-law marriage de futuro cum copula in this state. Peacock v. Peacock, 196 Ga. 441, 26 S.E.2d 608 (1943).

Elements of common-law marriage. — By the common law and the law of this state a mutual agreement to be husband and wife, by parties able to contract, followed by cohabitation, is recognized as a valid marriage. Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga.

173 (1860); Dillon v. Dillon, 60 Ga. 204 (1878); Wynne v. State, 17 Ga. App. 263, 86 S.E. 823 (1915); Stewart v. Price, 89 Ga. App. 62, 81 S.E.2d 28 (1954).

To establish a common-law marriage in Georgia three requisites must be met. There must be: (1) parties able to contract; (2) an actual contract of marriage; and (3) consummation by cohabitation in Georgia. Kersey v. Gardner, 264 F. Supp. 887 (M.D. Ga. 1967).

In order for a common-law marriage to come into existence, the parties must be able to contract, must agree to live together as man and wife, and must consummate the agreement. Georgia Osteopathic Hosp. v. O'Neal, 198 Ga. App. 770, 403 S.E.2d 235 (1991).

Georgia law allows proof of common-law marriage by proof of cohabitation in conjunction with the husband and wife holding themselves out to the world as married. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lucas, 761 F. Supp. 130 (M.D. Ga. 1991).

In a will contest, in which it was disputed whether the decedent was married by common law to her purported widower, a son's requested jury charge that a common-law marriage could not be partial or periodic was adequately covered in the trial court's charge on the elements of a common-law marriage under O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1. In re Estate of Love, 274 Ga. App. 316, 618 S.E.2d 97 (2005).

In order for a common law marriage to come into existence, the parties must be able to contract, must agree to live together as man and wife, and must consummate the agreement, and all three of these elements as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1 must be met simultaneously. In re Estate of Love, 274 Ga. App. 316, 618 S.E.2d 97 (2005).

Evidence tending to show the existence of a common law marriage may include such circumstances as the act of living together as man and wife, holding themselves out to the world as such, and repute in the vicinity and among neighbors and visitors that they are such, and indeed all such facts as usually accompany the marriage relation and indicate the factum of marriage. In re Estate of Love, 274 Ga. App. 316, 618 S.E.2d 97 (2005).

Requirements of common-law marriage. Three requirements of law must be met, all at one time, in order for there to be a common-law marriage. Brown v. Brown, 234 Ga. 300, 215 S.E.2d 671 (1975); Evans v. Marbut, 140 Ga. App. 329, 231 S.E.2d 94 (1976), cert. dismissed, 238 Ga. 583, 234 S.E.2d 506 (1977); Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Smith, 151 Ga. App. 270, 259 S.E.2d 675 (1979).

O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1 establishes the three essential elements of a marriage in this state, all of which must be met during one period of time in order to prove a common law marriage. Edwards v. Edwards, 188 Ga. App. 821, 374 S.E.2d 791 (1988).

Essential elements of a marriage are: (1) parties able to contract; (2) an actual contract; and (3) consummation according to law. These requirements must be satisfied simultaneously in order for a marriage to exist. Brown v. Carr, 198 Ga. App. 567, 402 S.E.2d 296 (1991).

No common law marriage. — There was evidence supporting the finding that an administrator and a decedent were not common-law spouses. The couple separated numerous times, and the administrator had a boyfriend during one separation, filed tax returns as a single person, and did not list the decedent as the father on her daughter's birth certificate or give her his last name; furthermore, the administrator was the only person who testified in support of her common-law marriage, while the remaining two witnesses testified that neither the administrator nor the decedent held themselves out as husband and wife. In re Estate of Smith, 298 Ga. App. 201, 679 S.E.2d 760 (2009).

Cohabitation

It is not sufficient to agree to present cohabitation and future regular marriage when more convenient, or when a wife dies, or when a ceremony can be performed. Peacock v. Peacock, 196 Ga. 441, 26 S.E.2d 608 (1943).

Fact of cohabitation is essential in establishing common-law marriage in this state. Drewry v. State, 208 Ga. 239, 65 S.E.2d 916 (1951), adopting dissenting opinion in Lefkoff v. Sicro, 189 Ga. 554, 6 S.E.2d 687 (1939); Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Smith, 151 Ga. App. 270, 259 S.E.2d 675 (1979).

Cohabitation (Cont'd)

Agreement of marriage may be inferred from cohabitation and reputation unless there is other evidence indicating that such an agreement was not present. In order for a relationship based upon repute and cohabitation to obtain the status of marriage at least one of the parties must have believed in good faith that their marital agreement made them husband and wife. Kersey v. Gardner, 264 F. Supp. 887 (M.D. Ga. 1967).

Marriage may be inferred from proof of cohabitation, and that the parties held themselves out to the world as husband and wife. Such proof may be made by general repute among neighbors and others in a position to know the facts. Simeonides v. Zervis, 127 Ga. App. 506, 194 S.E.2d 324 (1972).

Informal agreement not consummated by cohabitation is insufficient to establish common-law marriage. Tabor v. Fowler, 119 Ga. App. 259, 167 S.E.2d 220 (1969).

Common-law marriage not negated by plans for marriage ceremony. — When the probate court was clearly authorized to determine from the evidence both that decedent and a woman had intended to live together as husband and wife subsequent to decedent's divorce from his first wife and that they actually had done so, the fact that they planned at some point in the future to secure a license and formalize their union with a ceremonial marriage did not negate the existence of a common-law marriage. Brown v. Carr, 198 Ga. App. 567, 402 S.E.2d 296 (1991).

Woman's statement that she and decedent had "talked some about getting married but never did it" did not necessarily negate the existence of a common-law marriage relationship for a couple may enter into such a relationship yet nevertheless discuss and plan a marriage ceremony for the purpose of formalizing the arrangement. Georgia Osteopathic Hosp. v. O'Neal, 198 Ga. App. 770, 403 S.E.2d 235 (1991).

Presumption when only proof in case is of continuous cohabitation. — When only proof in case is of continuous cohabitation, presumption is that it was lawful. When to this proof is added some affirmative proof of holding themselves out as man and wife, it adds so much to the force of presumption, and length of time strengthens the probative force of the presumption. This presumption of marriage from connubial habit is one of the strongest known to the law, and is to be repelled only by clear evidence. Simeonides v. Zervis, 127 Ga. App. 506, 194 S.E.2d 324 (1972).

Insufficient evidence of common law marriage. — Absence of proof of entry into a present marriage contract resulted in the affirmation of the trial court's finding that the tenant was not the common law spouse of the decedent. In re Estate of Legrand, 259 Ga. App. 67, 576 S.E.2d 54 (2002).

Same Sex Marriage

Lesbian marriages. — Attorney General, that is, the State of Georgia's interest, as an employer in promoting the efficiency of the Attorney General's important public service outweighed the plaintiff's personal associational interests in a lesbian marriage. Shahar v. Bowers, 114 F.3d 1097 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1049, 118 S. Ct. 693, 139 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1998).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Common-law marriages are just as valid as any other marriage. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 89.

State recognizes common-law marriages. — While there is no statute relating to common-law marriage in this state, such marriages have long been recognized by the courts; such a marriage must be between persons who are otherwise able to contract a valid marriage in Georgia and who actually intend to be, or hold themselves out to be, husband and wife. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-35.

Common-law marriages are legal from inception provided essentials of marriage contract are present; namely: (1) the parties are able to contract; (2) it is an actual contract; and (3) it is consummated according to law; however, should either party be unable to meet any of the prerequisites the marriage would not be legal from the marriage's inception. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 89.

Mutual agreement to be husband and wife by parties able to contract, followed by cohabitation, is recognized as a valid common-law marriage; such a marriage is not defined in terms of length of time of relationship, but rather intent of the relationship. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-35.

Effect of lack of publicizing common-law marriage. — If it were disclosed that the common-law marriage was unknown to relatives, friends, or neighbors, that fact might be taken as one circumstance bearing upon the credibility as a witness of the party claiming the existence of the common-law marriage, but the lack of publicizing the marriage would not affect its validity if there was an actual contract or marriage. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 93.

Relationship illicit in inception when intent of marriage is not present is presumed illegal no matter how long the relationship continues; if a cohabitation between a man and a woman is shown to have been illicit in its inception, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the illicit relation will be presumed to have continued throughout the period of cohabitation. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-35.

No common-law marriage shall be entered into in this state on or after January 1, 1997. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Application to termination proceedings. — Trial court did not err in denying a father's motion to continue a termination hearing in order for the father to obtain income tax returns that would have shown that the father filed joint tax returns with the mother, thereby showing that they had a common law marriage, because, inter alia, correspondence from the IRS noted that records before January 1, 1997 were likely destroyed and tax records dated after January 1, 1997 would not have been probative of a common law marriage as common law marriages could no longer have been created after that date. In the Interest of D.C., 279 Ga. App. 889, 632 S.E.2d 744 (2006).

No common law marriage found. — There was evidence supporting the finding that an administrator and a decedent were not common-law spouses. The couple separated numerous times, and the administrator had a boyfriend during one separation, filed tax returns as a single person, and did not list the decedent as the father on her daughter's birth certificate or give her his last name; furthermore, the administrator was the only person who testified in support of her common-law marriage, while the remaining two witnesses testified that neither the administrator nor the decedent held themselves out as husband and wife. In re Estate of Smith, 298 Ga. App. 201, 679 S.E.2d 760 (2009).

Evidence of common law marriage. — Trial court did not err in admitting evidence regarding the conduct of a common law husband and a common law wife after moving to Georgia because although the parties' cohabitation and public recognition of their marriage in Georgia could not establish a common-law marriage, those facts could corroborate other evidence of a prior agreement to marry entered into in Alabama. Norman v. Ault, 287 Ga. 324, 695 S.E.2d 633 (2010).

Common law marriage found. — Jury was authorized to conclude that a common law marriage existed between a common law husband and a common law wife because the evidence satisfied enough of the criteria generally indicative of public recognition to determine that the husband assented to the marriage in another state; three years after the husband's divorce, the wife began living in Alabama in the same home as him, sharing a bedroom, and doing housework, the parties would tell people that the other was his or her spouse, and the husband would tell the wife all the time that "in God's eyes, you are my wife," the husband had sexual relations only with the wife, and before the parties moved to Georgia, the husband executed a deed filed in Alabama conveying property to himself, his daughter, and his wife. Norman v. Ault, 287 Ga. 324, 695 S.E.2d 633 (2010).

19-3-2. Who may contract marriage; parental consent.

(a) To be able to contract marriage, a person must:

(1) Be of sound mind;

(2) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, be at least 18 years of age;

ANALYSIS

SOUND MIND
AGE
PREVIOUS UNDISCLOSED MARRIAGE

General Consideration

Law is more regardful of nuptial contracts, and persons incapable of contracting generally may contract marriage. Unlawful marriages are not void unless so declared. Park v. Barron, 20 Ga. 702 (1856).
Presumption of capacity to contract marriage. — There is presumption that parties had capacity to contract marriage and this presumption prevails until overcome by proof. Fanning v. State, 46 Ga. App. 716, 169 S.E. 60 (1933).
Requirements of section applicable to common-law marriage. — In order to be able to contract a valid common-law marriage, one must be able to meet the requirements of this statute. Hiter v. Shelp, 129 Ga. App. 401, 199 S.E.2d 832 (1973).

When the existence of a common-law marriage was raised as a defense to kidnapping, even though the trial court erred in failing to charge that defendant’s burden to prove the marriage was only to a preponderance of the evidence, the error was harmless since no evidence was cited to prove two of the elements as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-3-2. Dixon v. State, 217 Ga. App. 267, 456 S.E.2d 758 (1995).

Wilburn*, 262 Ga. App. 52, 584 S.E.2d 659 (2003).

Sound MindSound mind essential requirement.

— It is essential to the validity of a marriage in this state that the parties should be of sound mind and marriages of persons unable to contract are void. Bell v. Bennett, 73 Ga. 784 (1884). For other cases, see 9 Enc. Dig. 189.

Age

Ratification of marriage contract upon majority. — Although this statute prescribed the consentable age of parties, if a party below the age marries, but after the party reaches the consentable age the party affirms the marriage, and there is cohabitation, the marriage will thereafter be valid and binding. Americus Gas &

Elec. Co. v. Coleman, 16 Ga. App. 17, 84 S.E. 493 (1915).

Marriage of a boy under 17 (now 16) years of age, although declared by former Code 1933, § 53-104 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-5) to be void, may nevertheless be ratified and confirmed by continuing, after arriving at the age of 17 (now 16), to cohabit with his wife as such. Jones v. Jones, 200 Ga. 571, 37 S.E.2d 711 (1946).

If a girl contracts a marriage which is invalid because she is under the age of consent, but, on arriving at this age, ratifies the marriage by continued cohabitation, the marriage is thereafter valid. Such marriages partake more of the nature of voidable than void marriages. They are imperfect marriages which the party may affirm or disaffirm after reaching the age of consent. The burden of proof is upon the person seeking to prove that the marriage was in fact ratified by continued cohabitation after the removal of the disability. Mims v. Hardware Mut. Cas. Co., 82 Ga. App. 210, 60 S.E.2d 501 (1950).

Underage party who contracts invalid marriage not subject to alimony claim. — When at the time of purported marriage, and at the time of an order granting alimony on the application of the wife for the support of their child, the partner was less than 17 years of age (now 16 years of age) the grant of such judgment against him was contrary to law, since there was no valid marriage to support it, and whether he could in some way be held liable for support of the child, he could not be subject to such liability through a claim of alimony. Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945) (decided under former version of section specifying minimum age of 17 for marriage by a male).

Alimony permissible if minor subsequently ratifies marriage. — Marriage of a boy under the age specified in law, though not absolutely void, being voidable only and subject to ratification, must yet be treated as void, so far as alimony is concerned, unless and until it is so ratified by him after reaching such age. Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945).

Previous Undisclosed Marriage

Party to previous undissolved marriage is unable to contract marriage. Connor v. Rainwater, 200 Ga. 866, 38 S.E.2d 805 (1946).

Previous undissolved marriage of one of the parties to a marriage ceremony renders such party incapable of making a marriage contract. Pritchett v. Ellis, 201 Ga. 809, 41 S.E.2d 402 (1947).

One who has a prior undissolved marriage does not have legal capacity to contract marriage. Kicklighter v. Kicklighter, 217 Ga. 54, 121 S.E.2d 122 (1961); Murry v. Lett, 222 Ga. 67, 148 S.E.2d 412 (1966).

Previous undissolved marriage renders attempted second marriage void. Graves v. Carter, 207 Ga. 308, 61 S.E.2d 282 (1950); Lovett v. Zeigler, 224 Ga. 144, 160 S.E.2d 360 (1968).

When a woman having a living husband married another man, or a husband having a living wife and married another woman, the second marriage is void. Murchison v. Green, 128 Ga. 339, 57 S.E. 709 (1907); Curlew v. Jones, 146 Ga. 367, 91 S.E. 115 (1917).

Marriage ceremony accompanied by cohabitation between a man and a woman, when one of them has a living wife or husband, is an absolute nullity, and may be so treated by the parties. Atlantic Bitulithic Co. v. Maxwell, 40 Ga. App. 483, 150 S.E. 110 (1929).

Bigamous marriage, being void, is a nullity, and no decree is necessary to avoid the marriage. The marriage may be treated as an absolute nullity by the parties to such a ceremony and by all the world. Smith v. State, 66 Ga. App. 669, 19 S.E.2d 168 (1942).

Attempted bigamous marriage is utterly void, and may be disregarded without ever being decreed void by a judgment of a court. Gearllach v. Odom, 200 Ga. 350, 37 S.E.2d 184 (1946).

Knowledge of former marriage by innocent party to second marriage is not requisite to render void the second marriage. Clark v. Cassidy, 62 Ga. 407 (1879); Belle Isle v. Belle Isle, 47 Ga. App. 168, 170 S.E. 211 (1933).

When marriage has been proved, relation is presumed to exist until evidence of marriage's dissolution by divorce or death, and the party asserting the dissolution must prove the dissolution. Clark v. Cassidy, 62 Ga. 407 (1879); Belle Isle v. Belle Isle, 47 Ga. App. 168, 170 S.E. 211 (1933).

Subsequent marriage does not create presumption of dissolution of first marriage. Uddyback v. Johnson, 149 Ga. App. 769, 256 S.E.2d 29 (1979).

When there is proof that one party has living spouse, there is no presumption that divorce was granted dissolving the former marriage. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ellis, 99 Ga. App. 486, 109 S.E.2d 70 (1959).

Presumption of validity of second marriage is strong, and burden is upon one attacking said marriage to overcome the presumption by clear, distinct, positive, and satisfactory proof. Jones v. Transamerica Ins. Co., 154 Ga. App. 408, 268 S.E.2d 444 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Glover v. Glover, 172 Ga. App. 278, 322 S.E.2d 755 (1984).

Presumption arose that second marriage was valid until evidence was adduced that first spouse is living, and only then does the law place the burden on the party contending that the second marriage was valid to go forward with the evidence and show that the first marriage was dissolved by divorce. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Copeland, 113 Ga. App. 707, 149 S.E.2d 402 (1966); Patrick v. Simon, 237 Ga. 742, 229 S.E.2d 746 (1976); Kelly v. Kelly, 144 Ga. App. 43, 240 S.E.2d 312 (1977); Glover v. Glover, 172 Ga. App. 278, 322 S.E.2d 755 (1984).

When establishing dissolution of former marriage required. — It is only when there is evidence of a living spouse that rule requiring affirmative establishment of dissolution of previous marriage comes into play. Zurich Ins. Co. v. Craft, 103 Ga. App. 889, 120 S.E.2d 922 (1961).

Burden of proof, once former marriage is shown, is on party asserting dissolution. Good faith or ignorance of the parties to the second marriage as to the true facts does not change the rule. New Amsterdam Cas. Co. v. Thompson, 100 Ga. App. 677, 112 S.E.2d 273 (1959), criticized, Zurich Ins. Co. v. Craft, 103 Ga. App. 889, 120 S.E.2d 922 (1961).

Third party may legally marry party to bigamous marriage not otherwise incapacitated. — When a single man laboring under no disability married a woman who had theretofore knowingly been a party to a bigamous marriage, but was not otherwise incapacitated, his marriage to her was legal and, so long as it was not dissolved, constituted an impediment against another marriage by him. Atlantic Bitulithic Co. v. Maxwell, 40 Ga. App. 483, 150 S.E. 110 (1929).

Previous Undisclosed

To void bigamous marriage, a party may later marry when no other impediment exists. — The fact that a woman otherwise capable of contracting marriage entered into a marriage ceremony with a man who, to her knowledge, had a living wife from whom he was not divorced, would not render her incapable of later contracting marriage with another man, and this she could do without any judgment or decree annulling the previous marriage. Atlantic Bitulithic Co. v. Maxwell, 40 Ga. App. 483, 150 S.E. 110 (1929).

Common-law wife could not invoke marital privilege against testimony when previous existing marriage shown. — When witness testified that prior to the time she lived with the defendant as his common-law wife, she was married to another person who was still living and from whom she had not been divorced, the witness was not entitled to the marital privilege of refusing to testify as the previous marriage was not presumed to have been dissolved. Gates v. State, 120 Ga. App. 518, 171 S.E.2d 375 (1969).

Bigamous marriage may become lawful on death of first spouse. — If a man who had a living wife undivorced entered into a ceremonial marriage with another woman who was not shown to have known of the former marriage, and they cohabited as husband and wife from the time of such marriage and continued to do so after the death of the first wife, they will be considered thereafter as lawfully married. Hamilton v. Bell, 161 Ga. 739, 132 S.E. 83 (1926).

Validity of marriage challenged through estoppel. — Georgia does not allow validity of a marriage to be challenged through estoppel. Hayes v. Schweiker, 575 F. Supp. 402 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 723 F.2d 918 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 953, 104 S. Ct. 2160, 80 L. Ed. 2d 545 (1984).

Setting aside divorce decree when marriage void from inception. — Trial court erred by denying an ex-husband's motion to set aside a divorce decree with the ex-wife because the marriage was void from the marriage's inception due to the ex-wife having a living spouse from an undissolved marriage at the time and there was no issue of the protection of a child to prevent the decree from being set aside. Wright v. Hall, 292 Ga. 457, 738 S.E.2d 594 (2013).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Former Code 1933, § 53-107 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-36) took precedence over former Code 1933, § 53-102 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-2) insofar as a conflict existed between the two statutes; when documentary proof of an applicant's age was required only a birth or baptismal certificate will suffice. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U75-5.

Marriage performed before final divorce decree issues as to one of parties is void. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 150.

Marriage between first cousins not being prohibited by former Code 1933, § 53-105 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-3), such marriage was legal and proper in this state. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-107.

Person who has been declared incompetent cannot enter into valid marriage, whether the marriage is performed by a minister or arises by declaration through common-law cohabitation; only a court can adjudicate the existence of a marital relationship in a specific case based on a set of particular circumstances. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-69.

Physician's certificate is not required to be in affidavit form; the law only contemplates that a physician's certificate be presented, and that the certificate bear the signature of the physician;

thus, any reasonable form of certification by the physician would appear to suffice. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 771.

19-3-5. What marriages void; legitimacy of issue; effect of later ratification.

(a) Marriages of persons unable to contract, unwilling to contract, or fraudulently induced to contract shall be void. However, the issue of such a marriage born before the marriage is annulled and declared void by a competent court shall be legitimate.

(b) In the case of persons unwilling to contract or fraudulently induced to do so, a subsequent consent and ratification of the marriage, freely and voluntarily made, accompanied by cohabitation as husband and wife shall render the marriage valid. In the case of a marriage void on one of the grounds specified in paragraphs (1) through (3) of Code Section 19-3-2, after removal of the impediment to marriage, a subsequent free and voluntary consent and ratification of the marriage accompanied by cohabitation as husband and wife shall likewise render the marriage valid. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Legislative intent as to applicability. — In the use of the word "marriages" in the law, dealing with "marriages of persons unable to contract," it cannot be said that the legislature, in providing that the issue of such marriages before annulled will be legitimate, intended it to apply only to ceremonial marriages. Campbell v. Allen, 208 Ga. 274, 66 S.E.2d 226 (1951).

Legislature intended to remove stigma of bastardy from children if their parents go through marriage ceremony, even though the marriage is void because one of the parties was unable to contract marriage by reason of an existing marriage. Brazziel v. Spivey, 219 Ga. 445, 133 S.E.2d 885 (1963).

"Marriage" construed. — Former Code 1933, § 53-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-1) defined the essentials of a marriage, and this court repeatedly recognized common-law marriages as complying with these essentials. Former Code 1933, § 53-102 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-2) specified those persons who were able to contract a marriage, and listed as one of the disabilities to contract a marriage, a previous marriage undissolved. Campbell v. Allen, 208 Ga. 274, 66 S.E.2d 226 (1951).

Marriages of persons unable to contract marriage are void. Christopher v. Christopher, 198 Ga. 361, 31 S.E.2d 818 (1944).

Contract of marriage entered into by insane person is void. Johnson v. Johnson, 172 Ga. 273, 157 S.E. 689 (1931).

Party to previous undissolved marriage cannot contract marriage and marriage by such person is void. Connor v. Rainwater, 200 Ga. 866, 38 S.E.2d 805 (1946).

Previous undissolved marriage of one of the parties to a marriage ceremony renders such party incapable of making a marriage contract. A marriage contract involving such a party is void. Pritchett v. Ellis, 201 Ga. 809, 41 S.E.2d 402 (1947).

Attempted bigamous marriage is void and may be disregarded without being decreed void by a judgment of court. Campbell v. Allen, 208 Ga. 274, 66 S.E.2d 226 (1951).

Previous undissolved marriage renders void an attempted second marriage. Lovett v. Zeigler, 224 Ga. 144, 160 S.E.2d 360 (1968).

When a man having a living wife enters into a ceremonial marriage to another woman, such purported second marriage is void. Rush v. Holtzclaw, 154 Ga. App. 4, 267 S.E.2d 316 (1980).

Bigamous marriage, being void, is a nullity and no decree is necessary to avoid the marriage. The marriage may be treated as an absolute nullity by the parties to such a ceremony and by all the world. Smith v. State, 66 Ga. App. 669, 19 S.E.2d 168 (1942).

This state has abandoned common-law rule that made children of void marriage illegitimate, and adopted the civil law rule that the issue of certain void marriages, before they were annulled, were to be considered legitimate. Andrews v. Willis, 133 Ga. App. 697, 212 S.E.2d 24 (1975).

Children born before marriage declared void. — Until marriages are declared void by competent court, children of such marriages are legitimate. Christopher v. Christopher, 198 Ga. 361, 31 S.E.2d 818 (1944).

If the parents participated in a marriage ceremony, even though the marriage might ultimately be void, children born before the marriage was annulled or declared void were legitimate. Hall v. Coleman, 242 Ga. App. 576, 530 S.E.2d 485 (2000).

Issue of bigamous marriage, born before the marriage is annulled and declared void by a competent court are legitimate. Connor v. Rainwater, 200 Ga. 866, 38 S.E.2d 805 (1946).

When party to marriage prosecuted for bigamy. — Although a party to a bigamous marriage is convicted of the offense of bigamy, the issue of such second marriage, born before the commencement of any prosecution for bigamy shall, notwithstanding the invalidity of such marriage, be considered as legitimate. Perkins v. Levy, 158 Ga. 896, 124 S.E. 799 (1924); Connor v. Rainwater, 200 Ga. 866, 38 S.E.2d 805 (1946).

When there are two ceremonial marriages and the second is void because the man had previously married and was undivorced, the children of the purported second marriage are legitimate if the second marriage has not been declared void and when the children were born before the commencement of a prosecution for bigamy. Andrews v. Willis, 133 Ga. App. 697, 212 S.E.2d 24 (1975).

Children of bigamous marriage may be lawful heirs of deceased parent. — Child of a bigamous common-law marriage, born before such marriage was annulled or declared void by a court, is legitimate and is the lawful heir of the child's deceased father. Campbell v. Allen, 208 Ga. 274, 66 S.E.2d 226 (1951).

Policy which former Code 1933, § 53-104 codified did not legitimate offspring of illicit relationship. This declared policy was applicable only to those situations, broadly defined in the Code, when a marriage contract had been undertaken, but was void or voidable because of the legal inability of one of the parties to make a valid contract. Hobby v. Burke, 227 F.2d 932 (5th Cir. 1955).

Illegitimate offspring. — If no marriage, either ceremonial or common law, ever took place, offspring are illegitimate. Hobby v. Burke, 227 F.2d 932 (5th Cir. 1955).

Void marriage may ripen into valid marriage. — While ceremonial marriage may be void at inception, it may under given circumstances ripen into a valid marriage. Beebe v. Beebe, 227 Ga. 248, 179 S.E.2d 758 (1971).

No children from marriage void from inception. — Trial court erred by denying an ex-husband's motion to set aside a divorce decree with the ex-wife because the marriage was void from the marriage's inception due to the ex-wife having a living spouse from an undissolved marriage at the time and there was no issue of the protection of a child to prevent the decree from being set aside. Wright v. Hall, 292 Ga. 457, 738 S.E.2d 594 (2013).

Continued cohabitation after removal of impediment renders marriage valid. — If the parties cohabited as husband and wife from the time of the ceremonial marriage, and so continued after the husband's disabilities were removed, they will be considered as lawfully married. Hawkins v. Hawkins, 166 Ga. 153, 142 S.E. 684 (1928).

When parties enter into a ceremonial marriage which is not valid because of the incapacity of one of them, unknown to the other, but the impediment is later removed, their continued cohabitation thereafter as husband and wife is sufficient to create the presumption of a valid common-law marriage, nothing further appearing. Rush v. Holtzclaw, 154 Ga. App. 4, 267 S.E.2d 316 (1980).

Marriage of boy under 17 (now 16), may be ratified and confirmed by continuing, after arriving at the age of 17 (now 16), to cohabit with his wife as such. Smith v. Smith, 84 Ga. 440, 11 S.E. 496 (1890); Morgan v. Morgan, 148 Ga. 625, 97 S.E. 675 (1918); Jones v. Jones, 200 Ga. 571, 37 S.E.2d 711 (1946).

Marriage by female under 14 (now 16) may be ratified by her after she has reached the age of 17. Powers v. Powers, 138 Ga. 65, 74 S.E. 759 (1912); Dunson v. State, 25 Ga. App. 172, 102 S.E. 899 (1920).

Party not subject to alimony when marriage void. — When at the time of purported marriage, and at the time of order granting alimony on the application of the wife for the support of their child, the partner was less than 17 years of age (now 16), the grant of such judgment against him was contrary to law, since there was no valid marriage to support it, and whether the father could in some way be held liable for support of the child, he could not be subject to such liability through a claim of alimony. Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945).

When husband estopped to deny marriage in alimony actions. — In a suit by reputed wife for alimony, the husband is estopped from denying her competency to contract marriage if he has in fact married her, lived with her many years as his wife, and reared a family of children by her. Dillon v. Dillon, 60 Ga. 204 (1878); Bell v. Bennett, 73 Ga. 784 (1884).

19-3-6. Effect of restraints on marriage; when valid.

Marriage is encouraged by the law. Every effort to restrain or discourage marriage by contract, condition, limitation, or otherwise shall be invalid and void, provided that prohibitions against marriage to a particular person or persons or before a certain reasonable age or other prudential provisions looking only to the interest of the person to be benefited and not in general restraint of marriage will be allowed and held valid. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1652; Code 1868, § 1696; Code 1873, § 1697; Code 1882, § 1697; Civil Code 1895, § 2410; Civil Code 1910, § 2929; Code 1933, § 53-107.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

It is public policy of this state to maintain family relation and to permit the settlement of matrimonial differences for that purpose. Evans v. Hartley, 57 Ga. App. 598, 196 S.E. 273 (1938); McClain v. McClain, 237 Ga. 80, 227 S.E.2d 5 (1976).

Termination of alimony in event of remarriage. — Provision for permanent alimony which provided that in the event the wife should obtain a divorce and should marry again, or should marry again in the event of the death of her husband, the alimony should terminate was not violative of law and contrary to public policy in that it was in restraint of marriage. Watson v. Burnley, 150 Ga. 460, 104 S.E. 220 (1920).

Agreement incorporated into a divorce decree providing for termination of the former wife's equity in real property upon her remarriage does not act as a restraint on marriage. Gordin v. Gordin, 249 Ga. 371, 290 S.E.2d 921 (1982).

Fact that a termination-upon-remarriage provision in a final judgment and decree originated in the jury's verdict rather than from an agreement of the parties is a distinction without legal significance. A trial court does not err by allowing the jury to return the verdict including the termination provision, or in entering judgment on the verdict. Gordin v. Gordin, 249 Ga. 371, 290 S.E.2d 921 (1982).

When agreement to divorce held void. — Any agreement between husband and wife, prior to a separation, that they will live separate and apart, or that either or both will obtain a divorce, and any agreement to otherwise promote a dissolution of the marriage relation, is against public policy and void, and consideration founded thereon is illegal, but a contract between husband and wife, providing for the wife's maintenance, made after a separation has taken place, is valid and enforceable. Craig v. Craig, 53 Ga. App. 632, 186 S.E. 755 (1936).

Contract for attorney's fee void when contingent on procuring divorce. — Contract for the payment of a fee to an attorney contingent upon the attorney procuring a divorce for the attorney's client or contingent in amount upon the amount of alimony to be obtained is void as against public policy. Evans v. Hartley, 57 Ga. App. 598, 196 S.E. 273 (1938).

Contract for attorney's fee void when fee to be paid from alimony recovered. — Contract by wife to pay her solicitors part of alimony to be recovered by her in a suit for divorce, as compensation for their services in such suit, is void as against public policy. Evans v. Hartley, 57 Ga. App. 598, 196 S.E. 273 (1938).

Attorney may recover reasonable value of services where contract void. — When an attorney's contract for compensation for services rendered a married woman was void as against public policy, the attorney could recover what the attorney's services were reasonably worth. Evans v. Hartley, 57 Ga. App. 598, 196 S.E. 273 (1938).

Foreign judgment given full faith though based on separation agreement void in this state. — Although a North Carolina judgment which was incorporated into a Georgia divorce decree on the issues of alimony, child support, and custody was based on a separation contract which included a provision not to contest a later divorce which contract was clearly void as against the public policy of this state, the North Carolina alimony judgment was entitled to full faith and credit and the trial court did not err in incorporating it in the divorce decree. Cannon v. Cannon, 244 Ga. 299, 260 S.E.2d 19 (1979).

Apprenticeship of female not void when she becomes 18 as being in restraint of marriage. Dent v. Cock, 65 Ga. 400 (1880).

Employment contract not void when restraint on marriage reasonable. — Employment contract which provided that a woman employee was to be employed as a teacher only so long as she did not marry was not void because the contract provision was a reasonable one and the restraint on marriage was incidental to the primary lawful purpose of the contract. Huiet v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 70 Ga. App. 233, 28 S.E.2d 83 (1943).

Limitation of appointment to such time as executrix remains widow is not void as an illegal restraint against marriage. Bruce v. Fogarty, 53 Ga. App. 443, 186 S.E. 463 (1936).

Provision in will prohibiting share in estate if daughter married designated individual was not "in terrorem" but was specific valid restraint not tending to discourage marriage. Taylor v. Rapp, 217 Ga. 654, 124 S.E.2d 271 (1962).

Statute has nothing to do with adoption standards. — Public policy of the state as enunciated by the General Assembly is to consider the best interest of the child when determining whether he or she should be adopted, O.C.G.A. § 19-8-18(b); in stating that marriage is encouraged, O.C.G.A. § 19-3-6 forbids most efforts to restrain or discourage marriage by contract, condition, limitation, or otherwise, and § 19-3-6 has nothing to do with the standards the courts must apply in determining whether to allow a child to

Meretricious relationship defense did not apply to a promise to marry.

— Because the object of a promise to marry was not illegal or against public policy, O.C.G.A. § 19-3-6, the fact that a man and woman were living together before and after a marriage proposal was only collateral to the promise to marry, and the meretricious relationship defense provided by O.C.G.A. § 13-8-1 was inapplicable to the promise to marry. Kelley v. Cooper, 325 Ga. App. 145, 751 S.E.2d 889 (2013).

ANALYSIS

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1983 AMENDMENT

General Consideration

Section does not change common-law doctrine of interspousal immunity. — O.C.G.A. § 19-3-8 does not purport to change common law regarding personal torts committed by one spouse against the other, and the law, with respect to those matters, is still the same as it was under common law, that is, that marriage extinguishes antenuptial rights of action between husband and wife, and after marriage the wife cannot maintain an action against her husband based on tortious injury to her person, though committed prior to coverture. Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Common-law interspousal immunity doctrine applies to husbands as well as wives. Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Scope of doctrine. — Doctrine of interspousal tort immunity bars actions between spouses in respect to personal torts committed by one spouse against the other, except when the traditional policy reasons for applying interspousal tort immunity are absent, i.e., when there is no marital harmony to be preserved and when there exists no possibility of collusion between the spouses. Shoemake v. Shoemake, 200 Ga. App. 182, 407 S.E.2d 134 (1991).

Application of interspousal immunity doctrine to wrongful death actions violates constitutional guarantee of equal protection because the doctrine arbitrarily distinguishes between classes of wrongful death claimants. Jones v. Jones, 259 Ga. 49, 376 S.E.2d 674 (1989).

Doctrine of interspousal immunity is not unconstitutional as a matter of due process or equal protection. Robeson

v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Common-law interspousal immunity doctrine bears reasonable relationship to promotion of domestic tranquility interest sought to be furthered by it. Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

For discussion of reasons for preserving doctrine of interspousal immunity. — See Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Doctrine of interspousal tort immunity is inapplicable when there is, realistically speaking, no marital harmony to be protected by application of the rule nor any hint of collusion between the husband and wife or of intent to defraud an insurance company. Smith v. Rowell, 176 Ga. App. 100, 335 S.E.2d 461 (1985).

When husband and wife had been separated for ten years, despite sporadic reconciliation attempts, and during which time the husband lived with another woman, the doctrine of interspousal tort immunity did not apply since there was no "marital harmony" to be protected. Harris v. Harris, 252 Ga. 387, 313 S.E.2d 88 (1984).

Suit against husband's estate by wife's parents. — Interspousal immunity doctrine was not a bar to a wrongful death action brought against the estate of a deceased husband by the parents of the wife who died with her husband in the crash of a plane piloted by the husband. Trust Co. Bank v. Thornton, 186 Ga. App. 706, 368 S.E.2d 158 (1988), cert. vacated, 258 Ga. 543, 373 S.E.2d 512 (1988).

Requirement to apportion damages did not violate interspousal tort immunity doctrine. — Application of the apportionment of damages pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-12-33 did not violate the interspousal tort immunity doctrine, O.C.G.A. § 19-3-8, because the trial court's holding that the jury should have been instructed to apportion the award of damages to a wife according to the jury's determination of the percentage of fault of her husband and a driver, if any, in no way requires the wife to file suit against her husband, but instead, precluded the wife from recovering from the driver that portion of her damages, if any, that a trier of fact concluded resulted from the negligence of her husband. Barnett v. Farmer, 308 Ga. App. 358, 707 S.E.2d 570 (2011).

Application of doctrine. — Trial court erred in denying a husband's motion to dismiss, which was treated as a motion for summary judgment, and in failing to apply the interspousal tort immunity doctrine, as codified in O.C.G.A. § 19-3-8, to a wife's claim for damages for a motorcycle accident, even though the wife's complaint against the husband contained a count for dissolution of the marriage. Gates v. Gates, 277 Ga. 175, 587 S.E.2d 32 (2003).

Decisions Prior to 1983 Amendment

Editor's notes. — Prior to the 1983 amendment, Code Section 19-3-8 read as follows: "The husband is the head of the family and the wife is subject to him; her legal civil existence is merged in the husband, except insofar as the law recognizes her separately, for her own protection, for her benefit, or for the preservation of public order."

Common law legal fiction. — At common law, husband and wife were in legal fiction one and same person. Taylor v.

Vezzani, 109 Ga. App. 167, 135 S.E.2d 522 (1964).

This statute remained unamended and inviolate although there have been many changes regarding the husband-wife relationship. Cleveland v. State, 155 Ga. App. 267, 270 S.E.2d 687 (1980).

This statute established presumption that husband's conduct was not ruled by wife's commands. Brigman v. Brenner, 206 Ga. 222, 56 S.E.2d 471 (1949).

Husband as head of his family. — In this state, the husband is recognized by law as head of his family. Dailey v. State, 47 Ga. App. 57, 169 S.E. 678 (1933); Jenkins v. State, 51 Ga. App. 95, 179 S.E. 597 (1935); Gilder v. State, 52 Ga. App. 252, 183 S.E. 95 (1935); Carver v. Carver, 199 Ga. 352, 34 S.E.2d 509 (1945); Upchurch v. Upchurch, 76 Ga. App. 215, 45 S.E.2d 855 (1947); Cleveland v. State, 155 Ga. App. 267, 270 S.E.2d 687 (1980).

Conclusiveness of section. — Legal status of the husband as head of the family cannot be affected even by sworn testimony to the effect that in the particular case the wife is in fact the head of the family. Patterson v. State, 8 Ga. App. 454, 69 S.E. 591 (1910).

Legal presumption when husband and wife reside together is that house and household effects belong to husband as the head of the family. This presumption, of course, is rebuttable. Dailey v. State, 47 Ga. App. 57, 169 S.E. 678 (1933); Jenkins v. State, 51 Ga. App. 95, 179 S.E. 597 (1935); Gilder v. State, 52 Ga. App. 252, 183 S.E. 95 (1935); Upchurch v. Upchurch, 76 Ga. App. 215, 45 S.E.2d 855 (1947); Hutchens v. State, 87 Ga. App. 219, 73 S.E.2d 506 (1952); Cleveland v. State, 155 Ga. App. 267, 270 S.E.2d 687 (1980).

House occupied by husband and wife together may be denominated husband's house, even though the wife pays the house rent and supports the husband. Barron v. State, 46 Ga. App. 829, 169 S.E. 323 (1933); Hutchens v. State, 87 Ga. App. 219, 73 S.E.2d 506 (1952).

Coresidence of wife alone does not rebut legal presumption that the house and all the household effects belong to the husband as the head of the family. Smith v. Berman, 8 Ga. App. 262, 68 S.E. 1014 (1910).

Joint residence would not alone be sufficient to give notice of claim of interest in land by wife. Smith v. Berman, 8 Ga. App. 262, 68 S.E. 1014 (1910).

Husband is presumed to be in charge and in control of effects in home. Kelly v. State, 90 Ga. App. 76, 81 S.E.2d 866 (1954).

Contraband found in marital residence is presumed to be possessed by head of household. Richardson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 664, 272 S.E.2d 529 (1980).

When alleged "lottery" book was found in a dresser drawer in the house of the husband, and not on the person of the defendant wife, or in her possession, or in any possession which might be traceable to her, the presumption was that the possession was that of the husband. Lemon v. State, 66 Ga. App. 653, 19 S.E.2d 52 (1942).

Rule that the husband is recognized by law as the head of the family and the rebuttable legal presumption that the house and all the household effects belong to him as the head of the house was applicable when recently stolen goods were found in a home occupied by the defendant and his wife. Wyatt v. State, 72 Ga. App. 511, 34 S.E.2d 312 (1945).

In the case of a dwelling home, occupied by a single family, the contents therein, including any drugs, may be inferred to have been in the possession of the head of the household. Cleveland v. State, 155 Ga. App. 267, 270 S.E.2d 687 (1980).

When wife owned home. — Although defendant wife owned home, jury was authorized to infer that defendant husband, as head of the household, was in constructive possession of the contraband (marijuana). Cleveland v. State, 155 Ga. App. 267, 270 S.E.2d 687 (1980).

When presumption not rebutted, conviction of wife for possessing contraband found on premises is contrary to law. Hutchens v. State, 87 Ga. App. 219, 73 S.E.2d 506 (1952).

Goods bought by husband and held in his possession not subject to conversion by wife. — Husband being the head of the family, the goods brought by him on his own account, and which are in the house where he and the wife reside, are in the husband's possession, and are not in the possession of the wife, the property not having been in the wife's possession, there has been no conversion by the wife, and the seller cannot maintain a suit in trover against the wife for conversion of the property. Boss v. Ed. & Al. Matthews, Inc., 51 Ga. App. 889, 181 S.E. 688 (1935).

Proof of legal presumption that contraband found in house belongs to husband is sufficient to make prima facie case for the state that it was in the possession of the defendant. Gilder v. State, 52 Ga. App. 252, 183 S.E. 95 (1935).

Section does not necessarily render husband possessor of contraband found in household. — Fact that husband has been declared to be head of household does not render it "more likely than not" that he is the possessor of contraband found therein. Knighton v. State, 248 Ga. 199, 282 S.E.2d 102 (1981).

Presumption as violation of due process. — Permissive, or rebuttable, presumption that contraband found in a house belongs to the husband by virtue of his statutory status as head of household cannot withstand due process scrutiny. Knighton v. State, 248 Ga. 199, 282 S.E.2d 102 (1981).

Husband has right to fix matrimonial residence without wife's consent; and the wife is bound to follow her husband, when he changes his residence, provided the change is made by him in good faith, and not from whim or caprice, or as mere punishment of the wife, or to a place where he did not intend to reside, or to a place where her health or comfort will be endangered. Carver v. Carver, 199 Ga. 352, 34 S.E.2d 509 (1945).

Husband is entitled to wife's services. — When husband and wife are living together and any valuable services which she may render to another are rendered by the husband, by and through the instrumentality of the wife as his agent. Cooper v. Cooper, 59 Ga. App. 832, 2 S.E.2d 145 (1939).

Husband is liable for all necessities required for family's support and maintenance, although they may be bought and contracted for by the wife, unless they are sold to her on her own account under an express agreement between her and the seller by which she, and not the husband, is liable therefor. Boss v. Ed. & Al. Matthews, Inc., 51 Ga. App. 889, 181 S.E. 688 (1935).

Husband is responsible generally for wife's medical expenses, but this rule is not applicable when such expenses are charged to the wife at her request, and she promises to pay such expenses herself instead of her husband paying them. Bell v. Proctor, 92 Ga. App. 759, 90 S.E.2d 84 (1955), rev'd on other grounds, 212 Ga. 325, 92 S.E.2d 514 (1956).

Husband's duty to support wife holds until legally absolved. — Husband is bound to support and maintain his wife. These rights and liabilities of the husband remain in effect during cohabitation of the husband and wife, and until there has been a separation and the husband is relieved in some manner provided by law, such as divorce, contract or deed of separation, or by decree of court. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Right of one spouse to sue other is purely statutory, and in order to maintain an action, the right must be expressly granted or be granted by necessary implication. Wallach v. Wallach, 94 Ga. App. 576, 95 S.E.2d 750 (1956).

Husband and wife are no longer unit, one person in law, but are, so far as property is concerned, two distinct persons, with distinct and separate rights. Sessions v. Parker, 174 Ga. 296, 162 S.E. 790, answer conformed to, 45 Ga. App. 101, 163 S.E. 297 (1932).

Wife as feme sole. — In respect to property rights of the wife, she is as feme sole, and may be sued by her husband in a bail-trover proceeding for recovery of his personal property converted by her. Eddleman v. Eddleman, 183 Ga. 766, 189 S.E. 833 (1937).

Wife's unrestricted right to sue for damages to property. — Action for damages to property is right as to which wife suffers from no restrictions from coverture, and she may accordingly maintain an action for damages against her husband thereon. Hubbard v. Ruff, 97 Ga. App. 251, 103 S.E.2d 134 (1958).

No personal tort not involving property right. — There is no right of action in one spouse against another for personal tort not involving property right, and this is true regardless of the fact that the tort is wantonly and maliciously inflicted. Wright v. Wright, 85 Ga. App. 721, 70 S.E.2d 152 (1952).

Married woman living with her husband is not entitled to have homestead set apart to her as the head of a family, out of her separate estate, notwithstanding the fact that the husband may be physically unable to work and possessed of no property nor means of support. Simmons v. Anderson, 56 Ga. 53 (1876); Johnson v. Little, 90 Ga. 781, 17 S.E. 294 (1893).

At common law, earnings of wife belonged to her husband. Cotter v. Gazaway, 141 Ga. 534, 81 S.E. 879 (1914).

Real estate of wife prior to married women's statute. — Under the statutes of this state as they were in force prior to the Act approved December 13, 1866 (Acts 1866, p. 146), all the real estate of the wife in her possession and to which she had title at the time of the marriage vested in and belonged to the husband. Hudgins v. Chupp, 103 Ga. 484, 30 S.E. 301 (1898).

Law constituted women as feme soles. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

Wife's separate property. — Law gave wife right to keep, acquire, and control her separate property. Foster v.

Withrow, 201 Ga. 260, 39 S.E.2d 466 (1946).

Wife's action for conversion of her property. — Trial court erred by finding that a wife could not proceed against her former husband on claims relating to his conversion of stock certificates owned solely in her name. Fleming v. Fleming, 246 Ga. App. 69, 539 S.E.2d 563 (2000).

Debts of husband. — Law did not restrict a woman's assumption of debts of her husband. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

Bankruptcy exemptions. — When husband and wife debtors sought to exempt their income tax refunds, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 44-13-100(a)(6), the procedure set forth in In re Crowson, 431 B.R.

484, 489 (10th Cir. B.A.P. 2010) was to be followed. Each debtor was treated separately under 11 U.S.C. § 522(m), and Georgia law had no presumption of equal ownership of property between spouses under O.C.G.A. § 19-3-9. In re Evans, 449 B.R. 827 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2010).

Retention of tax refund by Chapter 7 debtors. — Chapter 7 debtors could not retain total tax refunds because, pursuant to Georgia law, which—pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-3-9—had no presumption of equal ownership of property between spouses, the refund in its entirety was the sole property of the sole income earner at the time of the bankruptcy filing. In re Hraga, 467 B.R. 527 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2011).

Statute's effect on common law property right of wife. — Statutes of this state do change common law in respect to property rights of wife; with respect to such rights she is as a feme sole. Eddleman v. Eddleman, 183 Ga. 766, 189 S.E. 833 (1937).

Husband and wife are no longer unit, one person in law, with all property vested in husband as the head of the family, and subject to his debts, but they are, in law, so far as property is concerned, two distinct persons, with distinct and separate rights. Sessions v. Parker, 174 Ga. 296, 162 S.E. 790, answer conformed to, 45 Ga. App. 101, 163 S.E. 297 (1932).

Married woman may deal with her property as freely as man may deal with his; she is not forbidden to utilize her estate for her husband's benefit. Johnston v. Susman, 193 Ga. 758, 19 S.E.2d 919 (1942).

Wife may sue and be sued in all matters relating to her sole and separate property. Martin v. Gurley, 201 Ga. 493, 39 S.E.2d 878 (1946).

Wife has right of action for damages to her separate estate resulting from her husband's negligence. This right is necessary in order that a wife may have equal protection of the law respecting her separate estate. Hubbard v. Ruff, 97 Ga. App. 251, 103 S.E.2d 134 (1958).

Right of action for damages to property resulting from negligence is a property right as to which a wife in this state suffers from no restrictions arising from coverture, and she may accordingly maintain an action for damages against her husband thereon. Hubbard v. Ruff, 97 Ga. App. 251, 103 S.E.2d 134 (1958).

Married woman's action for loss of consortium. — Married woman may maintain action for damages against third person for loss of consortium, even though she may be living at the time with her husband. Tingle v. Maddox, 186 Ga. 757, 198 S.E. 722 (1938).

Recovery by wife (and mother) for homicide of child is property right. Kehely v. Kehely, 200 Ga. 41, 36 S.E.2d 155 (1945).

Husband can maintain bailtrovers action against his wife, a husband and wife can make contracts with each other, and the husband and wife can become copartners in a business enterprise. Foster v. Withrow, 201 Ga. 260, 39 S.E.2d 466 (1946); Bradley v. Tenneco Oil Co., 146 Ga. App. 161, 245 S.E.2d 862 (1978).

Husband cannot use his wife's separate money to buy property for himself; if he invests her funds in real estate in his own name, equity will fix a trust upon the land, and having jurisdiction for one purpose, it will do complete justice and give full relief between the parties. Sasser v. Sasser, 73 Ga. 275 (1884).

Failure to allege that wife's separate estate provided portion of purchase price. — Insofar as petition sought to recover one-half, or some other portion of the real estate here involved or to impress such real estate with a trust, upon the theory that it was purchased in part out of the separate estate of the wife, the petition failed to set out a cause of action because it did not allege that any definite portion of the purchase price was paid by her out of her separate estate. Roach v. Roach, 212 Ga. 40, 90 S.E.2d 423 (1955).

Property brought into marriage by one party is not subject to equitable division. Bailey v. Bailey, 250 Ga. 15, 295 S.E.2d 304 (1982).

Property acquired during marriage by either party by gift, inheritance, bequest, or devise remains separate property of party that acquired it, and is not subject to equitable division. Bailey v. Bailey, 250 Ga. 15, 295 S.E.2d 304 (1982).

Interspousal gifts of property acquired during marriage are subject to claims for equitable division of property. McArthur v. McArthur, 256 Ga. 762, 353 S.E.2d 486 (1987).

Parties' residence constituted marital property for purposes of equitable division, despite the subsequent interspousal transfer for the purpose of shielding the home from a potential judgment creditor, since the parties initially acquired the property as marital property. Sparks v. Sparks, 256 Ga. 788, 353 S.E.2d 508 (1987).

When there is no question that the house initially was acquired as marital property, deeded by husband to wife, the trial court did not err by denying the wife's motion for directed verdict, by charging the jury that gifts, for purposes of determining the parties' separate property, consist of gifts from a nonspouse before or during the marriage, nor by entering judgment on the jury's verdict awarding to the husband a 35 percent interest in the house. McArthur v. McArthur, 256 Ga. 762, 353 S.E.2d 486 (1987).

Former husband was barred from seeking resulting trust in parties' residence, because his misconduct of fraudulently transferring the house to the former wife related directly to the transaction from which he sought relief—the transfer of the house placing title in her, but his misconduct in transferring the residence did not relate directly to his claim for an equitable division of the residence. That claim was based not on the circumstances surrounding the transfer, but on the fact that the property was acquired during the parties' marriage, through their labor and investments, thereby giving each party an equitable interest therein. Sparks v. Sparks, 256 Ga. 788, 353 S.E.2d 508 (1987).

Effect of conveyance of separate property. — Husband deeding of a home to both his wife and himself, to be held as "tenants in common" with right of survivorship manifested an intent to transform the husband's own separate property into marital property; because both the husband and the wife then owned an undivided one-half interest in the property, the entire home should have been treated as marital property. Lerch v. Lerch, 278 Ga. 885, 608 S.E.2d 223 (2005).

Once separated by judicial determination in a separate maintenance judgment, property becomes part of the separate estate of the party to whom the property is awarded and the property is not thereafter subject to equitable division in a later divorce action. Goodman v. Goodman, 254 Ga. 703, 334 S.E.2d 179 (1985).

Section does not change common-law doctrine of interspousal immunity. — O.C.G.A. § 19-3-9 does not purport to change common law regarding personal torts committed by one spouse against the other, and the law, with respect to those matters, is still the same as it was under common law, that is, that marriage extinguishes antenuptial rights of action between husband and wife, and after marriage the wife cannot maintain an action against her husband based on tortious injury to her person, though committed prior to coverture. Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Common-law interspousal immunity doctrine applies to husbands as well as wives. Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Doctrine of interspousal immunity is not unconstitutional, as a matter of due process or equal protection. Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Common-law interspousal immunity doctrine bears reasonable relationship to promotion of domestic tranquillity interest sought to be furthered by it. Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

For discussion of reasons for preserving doctrine of interspousal immunity. — See Robeson v. International Indem. Co., 248 Ga. 306, 282 S.E.2d 896 (1981).

Unvested retirement benefits are marital property subject to equitable division, insofar as the retirement benefits are acquired during the marriage. Courtney v. Courtney, 256 Ga. 97, 344 S.E.2d 421 (1986).

Applicable to third-party actions. — Interspousal immunity doctrine does apply in the context of third-party actions. New v. Hubbard, 206 Ga. App. 679, 426 S.E.2d 379 (1992).

ANALYSIS

TRANSACTIONS

EVIDENCE

General Consideration

Statute applied to transactions between husband and wife only, and does not extend to transactions between other near relatives. First Nat'l Bank v. Kelly, 190 Ga. 603, 10 S.E.2d 66 (1940).

Statute was rule of evidence, and does not dispense with necessary elements in setting aside conveyance based on a valuable consideration. Baker v. Goddard, 205 Ga. 477, 53 S.E.2d 754 (1949).

Purpose of section. — Recognizing that in transactions between husband and wife fraud might be so completely concealed that creditors could not expose the fraud, and in order that the public might not suffer from such concealment, the law imposes upon the husband and wife the duty of affirmatively establishing their good faith when creditors attack such transactions for fraud. Arrington v. Awbrey, 190 Ga. 193, 8 S.E.2d 648 (1940); Powell v. Grimes, 223 Ga. 56, 153 S.E.2d 434 (1967).

Transactions

Husband not liable for rent if wife specifically contracts to pay. — Husband is not liable for the rent simply because the rent constitutes a necessity of life for his family and because he is legally bound to support his family and provide them with the necessities of life if it appears under the allegations of the petition that the wife expressly contracted with the landlord to pay the rent for the dwelling abode of the family and that the wife entered into a written lease contract with the landlord to that effect. Butler v. Godley, 51 Ga. App. 784, 181 S.E. 494 (1935).

Married woman bound as purchaser when entering into unambiguous written contract. — When a married woman enters into an unambiguous written contract whereby she becomes the owner of personalty, and agrees to pay a stipulated price therefor, she is bound by her obligation as purchaser, if the seller committed no fraud upon her nor knew of any committed by the husband. Gibson v. GMAC, 46 Ga. App. 201, 167 S.E. 203 (1932).

When a married woman was sold an automobile under a written contract of purchase and sale, and there was no evidence whatever of any fraud practiced upon her by the vendor, and no evidence going to show that she was unable to read and comprehend the terms of the written agreement, and although the defendant may have purchased the automobile for the benefit of her husband, and may have immediately turned it over to him, she (the married woman) was bound by the unambiguous written contract, by which she became the purchaser of the property, and by which the consideration for the agreement on her part to pay the purchase price passed legally and morally to her. Gibson v. GMAC, 46 Ga. App. 201, 167 S.E. 203 (1932).

Transactions between husband and wife involving transfer of property are to be scanned closely. Futrelle v. Karsman, 41 Ga. App. 765, 154 S.E. 714 (1930).

Transactions between husband, wife, and near relatives, to the prejudice of creditors, are to be closely scanned and their bona fides clearly established. State Banking Co. v. Miller, 185 Ga. 653, 196 S.E. 47 (1938).

Fraud

Conveyances may be fraudulent as to subsequent creditors, as well as existing creditors, if made with intent to defraud. Jones v. J.S.H. Co., 199 Ga. 755, 35 S.E.2d 288 (1945).

Burden on spouses to show fair transaction when creditors allege fraud. — When a transaction between husband and wife is attacked for fraud by the creditors of either, the onus is on the husband and wife to show that the transaction was fair. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934); Edwards v. United Food Brokers, Inc., 195 Ga. 1, 22 S.E.2d 812 (1942).

When the plaintiff was attacking a conveyance from the husband of claimant to her on the ground that it was voluntarily made to delay or defraud the creditor, since the transaction attacked was one between husband and wife, the onus was on them to show the transaction was fair. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Kontz, 185 Ga. 131, 194 S.E. 536 (1937).

Whenever a transaction is between husband and wife, and the creditors of the husband attack the transaction for fraud, if the wife claims the property purchased or received from her husband, the onus is on her to make a fair showing about the whole transaction. State Banking Co. v. Miller, 185 Ga. 653, 196 S.E. 47 (1938); Jones v. J.S.H. Co., 199 Ga. 755, 35 S.E.2d 288 (1945).

In a claim case where the wife sets up title to the property levied upon under a deed from her husband, and his creditor attacks the deed upon the ground that it is a fraudulent conveyance, this puts the burden upon the husband and wife to show that the transaction as a whole is free from fraud. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934); Merchants' & Citizens' Bank v. Clark, 180 Ga. 490, 179 S.E. 103 (1935); Hodges v. Tattnall Bank, 185 Ga. 657, 196 S.E. 421 (1938).

Although the onus is on the husband and wife making the transaction to show that the transaction was fair, the plaintiff still retains the burden of putting forth evidence of the fraud. Bonner v. Smith, 247 Ga. App. 419, 543 S.E.2d 457 (2000).

Husband and wife must show that transaction as a whole is free from fraud, and the bona fides must be clearly established. Mattox v. West, 194 Ga. 310, 21 S.E.2d 428 (1942); Edwards v. United Food Brokers, Inc., 195 Ga. 1, 22 S.E.2d 812 (1942).

When there was no proof to show any transaction between spouses, onus was upon creditor to show fraud or collusion if any. Rainey v. Eatonton Coop. Creamery, 69 Ga. App. 547, 26 S.E.2d 297 (1943).

Conveyances for nominal consideration presumed fraudulent. — When there exist conveyances in exchange for love and affection or nominal consideration, the law forms a presumption that such transfers between husband and wife were fraudulent as against their creditors, because the burden of proving that a legitimate sale occurred must be shouldered by the debtor and his/her spouse. Loeb v. Dante, 1 Bankr. 547 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1979).

Failure to produce testimony is badge of fraud, when the bona fides of the transaction are in issue, and witnesses who ought to be able to explain the transaction are in reach. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934).

Transfer of property by alleged killer in unliquidated wrongful death claim. — Summary judgment was error when an issue of fact remained as to whether an unliquidated wrongful death claim at the time of a killer's property transfer without consideration to the killer's spouse rendered the killer insolvent and material issues remained as to fraud. Bryant v. Browning, 259 Ga. App. 467, 576 S.E.2d 925 (2003).

Evidence

Mere introduction of conveyance from husband to wife would not shift burden from her to the creditor. State Banking Co. v. Miller, 185 Ga. 653, 196 S.E. 47 (1938); Jones v. J.S.H. Co., 199 Ga. 755, 35 S.E.2d 288 (1945).

Slight circumstances must be considered, and may be sufficient to establish existence of fraud. Arrington v. Awbrey, 190 Ga. 193, 8 S.E.2d 648 (1940).

Charge to jury on wife's burden to show fairness. — Onus being on the claimant wife to show the fairness of the transaction and deed under which she claimed, as the court correctly charged, and she having assumed this burden and accepted the right to open and conclude the argument, it was not error, in the absence of request, for the court to fail to charge the jury further as to such burden, or as to any shift in the burden of introducing evidence. Tucker v. Talmadge, 186 Ga. 798, 198 S.E. 726 (1938).

Wife's proof of good faith is jury question. — It is for jury to say whether wife has made proof of good faith required of her by law by simply denying knowledge of such business affairs of her husband. Mercantile Nat'l Bank v. Aldridge, 233 Ga. 318, 210 S.E.2d 791 (1974).

LICENSE AND CEREMONY

19-3-30. Issuance, return, and recording of license.

(a) Marriage licenses shall be issued only by the judge of the probate court or his clerk at the county courthouse between the hours of 8:00 A.M. and 6:00 P.M., Monday through Saturday.

(b)(1) No marriage license shall be issued to persons of the same sex.

(2) If one of the persons to be married is a resident of this state, the license may be issued in any county of this state. If neither the male nor the female to be married is a resident of this state, the license shall be issued in the county in which the ceremony is to be performed.

(c) The license shall be directed to the Governor or any former Governor of this state, any judge, including judges of state and federal courts of record in this state, city recorder, magistrate, minister, or other person of any religious society or sect authorized by the rules of such society to perform the marriage ceremony; such license shall authorize the marriage of the persons therein named and require the Governor or any former Governor of this state, judge, city recorder, magistrate, minister, or other authorized person to return the license to the judge of the probate court with the certificate thereon as to the fact and date of marriage within 30 days after the date of the marriage. The license with the return thereon shall be recorded by the judge in a book kept by such judge for that purpose.

(d) The fact of issue of any unrecorded marriage license may be established by affidavit of either party to a ceremonial marriage, which affidavit shall set forth the date, the place, and the name and title of the official issuing the license.

(e) In the event that any marriage license is not returned for recording, as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section, either party to a ceremonial marriage may establish the marriage by submitting to the judge of the probate court the affidavits of two witnesses to the marriage ceremony setting forth the date, the place, and the name of the official or minister performing the ceremony. The judge shall thereupon reissue the marriage license and enter thereon the certificate of marriage and all dates and names in accordance with the evidence submitted and shall record and cross-index same in the proper chronological order in the book kept for that purpose.

(f) Any other provisions of this Code section or any other law to the contrary notwithstanding, the judge of the probate court of any county which has within its boundaries a municipality that has a population according to the United States decennial census of 1950 or any future such census greater than that of the county seat of the county is authorized to appoint a clerk for the purpose of granting marriage licenses in the municipality at an office designated by the judge. The licenses shall be issued only between the hours prescribed in subsection (a) of this Code section. (Laws 1805, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 282; Laws 1809, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 282; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Public record of ceremonial marriage is conclusive evidence of such marriage, in the absence of a timely direct attack on such record, which attack must be supported by proper proof. Guess v. Guess, 202 Ga. 364, 43 S.E.2d 326 (1947).

Marriage certificate produced in alimony action presumed valid unless directly attacked. — In an action for alimony, after plaintiff introduces a certified copy of a marriage certificate, no issue as to the validity of the marriage is made in the absence of a direct attack on the record by the defendant. Guess v. Guess, 202 Ga. 364, 43 S.E.2d 326 (1947).

In action for alimony, evidence of defendant denying marriage was without probative value to contradict or disprove the written record of a ceremonial marriage between the parties in absence of direct attack on record showing ceremonial marriage. Guess v. Guess, 202 Ga. 364, 43 S.E.2d 326 (1947).

License valid when ceremony performed, and license issued, in another state. — Failure to issue a marriage license in the county where the female resident resides does not invalidate the license if the ceremony was performed in another state and a valid license was issued in that state. Perry v. Perry, 173 Ga. App. 247, 326 S.E.2d 481 (1985).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

License must be issued and ceremony performed in same county when female is nonresident. — There is only one occasion where there is a requirement that the license be issued and the ceremony be performed in the same county and that is when the female is not a resident of the State of Georgia. 1965-66 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 66-175.

Justice of the peace is authorized to perform marriage ceremony at any place a judge, city recorder, or minister might perform such ceremony. 1963-65 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 329; 1969 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 69-178.

Out-of-state judge has the authority to perform a marriage ceremony in Georgia. 1998 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U98-5.

Judges emeriti may perform ceremonies. — When a statute separate from the Emeritus Act provides that the ministerial act of performing a marriage ceremony may be carried out by any judge, a judge of the superior courts emeritus may perform that function. 1975 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U75-3.

City recorder may perform marriages outside municipality. — City recorder, authorized by to perform marriage ceremonies, was not restricted to performing such ceremonies within the territorial limits of the city in which the person serves as recorder. 1975 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U75-96.

Officiant’s failure to return license does not invalidate marriage. — Law was a direction to the officer or minister and the failure to return the license with the certificate within the 30 days would not have any effect upon the validity of the marriage or the validity of the marriage’s record. 1957 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 95.

No witnesses are required to be present at marriage ceremony in order to make the marriage legal; this state recognizes common-law marriage, and no ceremony is actually essential to the validity of the marriage. 1970 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U70-148.

Probate judge may not decline to perform a marriage ceremony for the reason that the parties are not of the same race. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-31.

Person may have several residences, but only one place of domicile. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

"Resides" in O.C.G.A. § 19-3-30 was intended to refer to "legal residence" or "domicile" rather than mere "residence," since a later section, O.C.G.A. § 19-3-45, only provides for liability of probate court judge who issues marriage license to female who, to the judge's knowledge, is domiciled in another county. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

Acquisition of domicile. — Domicile is only acquired through concurrence of actual, physical residence and intention to remain. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

Generally, minor child cannot change domicile of own volition. — Modern case law does not support idea of allowing a minor child to change the child's domicile of the child's own volition when that child has living parents whose rights have not been voluntarily or involuntarily relinquished. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

Domicile of minor is that of the minor's parents, but this can be altered when usual parental authority and control over minor is ended by voluntary or involuntary relinquishment. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

Marriage license may be issued to minor female only in county of her parents' domicile in absence of certain exceptions. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

Previous marriage of minor female allows change in her domicile. — Previous marriage of minor female, with or without parents' consent, not only emancipates her from her parents' control, but also allows change in her domicile. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

Probate judge may lawfully perform marriage ceremony in county other than one in which judge is elected and in which judge serves. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U80-7.

Prohibition on attorneys or clerks performing ceremony. — Neither attorneys appointed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-9-13(a), nor the clerks of the probate court, may perform marriage ceremonies, in that such power is inherently a personal one of the probate judge pursuant to subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 19-3-30. 1988 Op. 19-3-35. Issuance of license to applicants otherwise eligible.

When both applicants for a marriage license are eligible to receive that license pursuant to the other provisions of this chapter and that license is otherwise authorized to be issued pursuant to the other provisions of this chapter, that license may be issued immediately and without any waiting period. (Ga. L. 1927, p. 224, § 1A; Code 1933, § 53-202; Ga. L. 1958, p. 214, § 1; Ga. L. 1965, p. 335, § 3; Ga. L. 1972, p. 193, § 4; Ga. L. 1976, p. 1719, § 2; Ga. L. 1989, p. 605, § 1.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1972, p. 193, § 10, not codified by the General Assembly, effective July 1, 1972, provided that the purpose of the Act was to reduce the age of legal majority from 21 years of age to 18 years of age so that all persons, upon reaching the age of 18, would have the rights, privileges, powers, duties, responsibilities, and liabilities previously applicable to persons 21 years of age or over. The section further provided that the Act was not to be construed to have the effect of changing the age from 21 to 18 with respect to any legal instrument or court decree in existence prior to the effective date of the Act when the instrument referred only to "the age of majority" or words of similar import, except that any guardianship of the person or property of a minor under the provisions of Title 49 of the 1933 Code, whether such guardianship was created by court order or decree entered before or after the effective date of the Act or under the will of a testator which was executed after the effective date of the Act, would terminate when the ward for whom such guardianship was created reached 18 years of age.

(a) Any term used in this Code section and defined in Code Section 31-22-9.1 shall have the meaning provided for such term in Code Section 31-22-9.1.

(b) The Department of Public Health shall prepare a brochure describing AIDS, HIV, and the dangers, populations at risk, risk behaviors, and prevention measures relating thereto. That department shall also prepare a listing of sites at which confidential and anonymous HIV tests are provided without charge. That department shall further prepare a form for acknowledging that the brochures and listings have been received, as required by subsection (c) of this Code section. The brochures, listings, and forms prepared by the Department of Public Health (formerly known as the Department of Human Resources for these purposes) under this subsection shall be prepared and furnished to the office of each judge of the probate court no later than October 1, 1988.

(c) On and after October 1, 1988, each person who makes application for a marriage license shall receive from the office of the probate judge at the time of the application the AIDS brochure and listing of HIV test sites prepared and furnished pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section. On and after October 1, 1988, no marriage license shall be issued unless both the proposed husband and the proposed wife sign a form acknowledging that both have received the brochure and listing. (Code 1981, § 19-3-35.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1988, p. 1799, § 5; Ga. L. 2009, p. 453, § 1-16/HB 228; Ga. L. 2011, p. 705, § 6-3/HB 214.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1988, p. 1799, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “The General Assembly finds that Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS) and its causative agent, including Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), pose a grave threat to the health, safety, and welfare of the people of this state. In the absence of any effective vaccination or treatment for this disease, it threatens almost certain death to all who contract it. The disease is largely transmitted through sexual contacts and intravenous drug use, not through casual contact, and, while deadly, is therefore preventable. The key component of the fight against AIDS is education. Through public education and counseling our citizens can learn how the disease is transmitted and, thus, how to protect themselves and prevent its spread. The Department of Human Resources is encouraged to continue its efforts to educate all Georgians about the disease, its causative agent, and its means of transmission. In addition, voluntary testing should be encouraged for anyone who feels at risk of infection. While education, counseling, and voluntary testing are vital to the elimination of this epidemic, other measures are needed to protect the health of our citizens, and it is the intention of the General Assembly to enact such measures in the exercise of its police powers in order to deal with AIDS and HIV infection.”

19-3-36. Proof of age of applicants.

The judge of the probate court to whom the application for a marriage license is made shall satisfy himself or herself that the provisions set forth in Code Section 19-3-2 regarding age limitations are met. If the judge does not know of his or her own knowledge the age of a party for whom a marriage license is sought, the judge shall require the applicant to furnish the court with documentary evidence of proof of age in the form of a birth certificate, driver's license, baptismal certificate, certificate of birth registration, selective service card, court record, passport, immigration papers, alien papers, citizenship papers, armed forces discharge papers, armed forces identification card, or hospital admission card containing the full name and date of birth. In the event an applicant does not possess any of the above but appears to the judge to be at least 25 years of age, the applicant, in lieu of furnishing the judge with one of the above, may give an affidavit to the judge stating the applicant's age. Applicants who have satisfactorily proved that they have reached the age of majority may be issued a marriage license immediately. (Orig. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1972, p. 193, § 10, not codified by the General Assembly, effective July 1, 1972, provided that the purpose of the Act was to reduce the age of legal majority from 21 years of age to 18 years of age so that all persons, upon reaching the age of 18, would have the rights, privileges, powers, duties, responsibilities, and liabilities previously applicable to persons 21 years of age or over. OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Former Code 1933, § 53-206 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-36) took precedence over former Code 1933, § 53-102 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-2) insofar as conflict existed between the two statutes; when documentary proof of an applicant's age was required only a birth or baptismal certificate will suffice. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U75-5.

Judge may dispense with documentary proof of age only if the judge is certain, within the limits imposed by human observation and experience, that the applicants standing before the judge are of age; accordingly, “of his own knowledge” meant that a judge's observation of or prior personal acquaintance with the parties enabled the judge to conclude as a matter of practical certainty that the parties were of age. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-18.

(A) Any person at least five years older than the applicant standing in loco parentis to the applicant for at least two years;

(B) Any person at least five years older than the applicant with whom the applicant has lived for at least two years and who has or would be allowed to claim the applicant as a dependent for the purposes of a federal dependent income tax deduction;

(C) Any relative by blood or marriage at least five years older than the applicant and with whom the applicant has lived at least two years, when the whereabouts of the applicant’s parents are unknown; or

(D) A court appointed guardian.

(2) “Parent” means:

(A) Both parents if the parents are living together;

(B) The parent who has legal custody if the parents are divorced, separated, or widowed; or

(C) Either parent if the parents are living together but one parent is unavailable because of illness or infirmity or because he is not within the boundaries of this state or because physical presence is impossible.

(b) When parental consent required; how obtained. In cases where the parties applying for a license are 16 or 17 years of age, their ages to be proved to the judge of the probate court as provided in Code Section 19-3-36, the parents or guardians of each underage applicant shall appear in person before the judge and consent to the proposed marriage, provided that if physical presence because of illness or infirmity is impossible, an affidavit by the incapacitated parent or guardian along with an affidavit signed by a licensed attending physician stating that the parent or guardian is physically incapable of being present shall suffice. The licensed attending physician shall include only those physicians licensed under Chapter 34 of Title 43 or under corresponding requirements pertaining to licensed attending physicians in sister states.

(c) Alternative methods for obtaining parental consent.

(1) When the parents or guardians of any underage applicants requiring parental consent reside within the state but in a county other than the county where the marriage license is to be issued, it shall not be necessary for the parents or guardians to appear in person before the judge of the probate court of the latter county and consent to the proposed marriage, if the parents or guardians appear in person and consent to the proposed marriage before the judge of the county in which they reside.

(2) Where the parents or guardians of any underage applicants requiring parental consent reside outside the state, it shall not be necessary for the parents or guardians to appear in person before the judge of the probate court and consent to the proposed marriage, if the parents or guardians appear in person before the judicial authority of their county who is authorized to issue marriage licenses and consent to the proposed marriage before the judicial authority. If the parents or guardians are physically incapable of being present because of illness or infirmity, the illness or infirmity may be attested to by an attending physician licensed in such state, as is provided for in subsection (a) of this Code section.

(3) Where the alternate provisions for parental consent are utilized under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection, the parents or guardians shall obtain a certificate from the judge of the probate court or the proper judicial officer before whom they have appeared with the seal and title of the official appearing thereon, the certificate containing information to the effect that the parents or guardians appeared before the judge or judicial officer and consented to the proposed marriage. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1972, p. 193, § 10, not codified by the General Assembly, effective July 1, 1972, provided that the purpose of the Act was to reduce the age of legal majority from 21 years of age to 18 years of age so that all persons, upon reaching the age of 18, would have the rights, privileges, powers, duties, responsibilities, and liabilities previously applicable to persons 21 years of age or over. The section further provided that the Act was not to be construed to have the effect of changing the age from 21 to 18 with 19-3-42. Effect on marriage of want of authority in person officiating.

A marriage which is valid in other respects and supposed by the parties to be valid shall not be affected by want of authority in the minister, Governor or any former Governor of this state, judge, city recorder, magistrate, or other person to solemnize the same; nor shall such objection be heard from one party who has fraudulently induced the other to believe that the marriage was legal. 19-3-43. Marriage in another state; effect in this state.

All marriages solemnized in another state by parties intending at the time to reside in this state shall have the same legal consequences and effect as if solemnized in this state. Parties residing in this state may not evade any of the laws of this state as to marriage by going into another state for the solemnization of the marriage ceremony. (Orig. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Valid marriage in another state is valid here, although one party labors under disability in this state, provided the parties acted in good faith and did not go to the foreign state for the mere purpose of evading the provisions of Georgia law. Brown v. Sheridan, 83 Ga. App. 725, 64 S.E.2d 636 (1951); Bituminous Cas. Corp. v. Wacht, 84 Ga. App. 602, 66 S.E.2d 757 (1951).

Effect of marriage contrary to public policy of state. — While the lex loci, as a general rule, governs questions of marriage, it is subject, in practice, to the great controlling idea, that it will not be enforced, by comity, if it involves anything immoral, contrary to general policy, or violative of the conscience of the state called on to give it effect. Eubanks v. Banks, 34 Ga. 407 (1866).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

If alleged marriage is valid when performed, it is valid in this state, regardless of the fact that the license was invalid where the ceremony was performed or that no license at all was taken out. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-240.

19-3-44. Return of license to parties.

(a) The judge of the probate court of each county shall return to the parties to a marriage the license and the return thereon after the same have been recorded as provided by law. This subsection shall be applicable to all marriage licenses and the returns thereon recorded after March 25, 1958.

(b) Upon request of either of the parties, the judge of the probate court of each county is authorized, as to marriage licenses with the returns thereon recorded prior to March 25, 1958, to return the license:

(1) To the parties to the marriage if the marriage is not dissolved and the parties are not living in a state of separation;

(2) To the surviving party to the marriage if one of the parties is deceased; or

(3) To the party first requesting the license if the parties are divorced. (Ga. L. 1958, p. 331, §§ 1, 2.)

19-3-45. Forfeiture for improper issuance of marriage license; by whom and when action brought; attorney's fee and court costs; disposition of balance of recovery.

Any judge of the probate court who by himself or his clerk knowingly grants a license without the required consent or without proper precaution in inquiring into the question of minority shall forfeit the sum of $500.00 for every such act, to be recovered at the action of the father or mother, if living, and, if not, at the action of the guardian or legal representative of either of such contracting parties, provided that under no circumstances shall more than one action be maintained by the father or mother, guardian, or legal representative of either of such contracting parties in connection with any one marriage; and provided, further, that no such action shall be brought prior to the expiration of 60 days from the date that the marriage becomes public and that no action under this Code section shall be maintained after the expiration of 12 months from the date the marriage becomes public. A recovery shall be had against the offending judge and his bondsmen. From the recovery a reasonable attorney's fee, to be fixed by the presiding judge trying the case, shall be paid to the attorney representing the person bringing the action and, after the payment of court costs, one-third of the remainder of the recovery shall be paid to the person bringing the action; and the remaining two-thirds shall be paid to the county educational fund of the county of the judge's residence. A judge who in good faith destroys physician's certificates of pregnancy and all records of the certificates under his control in accordance with the provisions of law shall not be prosecuted under this Code section for failure to require such a certificate from the applicants for a marriage license, if a birth certificate is issued for a child born to the applicants within the period of gestation after the marriage license was issued. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1661; Code 1868, § 1704; Code 1873, § 1705; Code 1882, § 1705; Civil Code 1895, § 2419; Civil Code 1910, § 2938; Ga. L. 1924, p. 53, § 2; Ga. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1972, p. 193, § 10, not codified by the General Assembly, effective July 1, 1972, provided that the purpose of the Act was to reduce the age of legal majority from 21 years of age to 18 years of age so that all persons, upon reaching the age of 18, would have the rights, privileges, powers, duties, responsibilities, and liabilities previously applicable to persons 21 years of age or over. The section further provided that the Act was not to be construed to have the effect of changing the age from 21 to 18 with respect to any legal instrument or court decree in existence prior to the effective date of the Act when the instrument referred only to "the age of majority" or words of similar import, except that any guardianship of the person or property of a minor under the provisions of Title 49 of the 1933 Code, whether such guardianship was created by court order or decree entered before or after the effective date of the Act or under the will of a testator which was executed after the effective date of the Act, would terminate when the ward for whom such guardianship was created reached 18 years of age.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability of 1939 amendments to this section. — Amendments of 1939 to this statute were intended to apply to bonds previously executed, and as thus construed they are not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts. If the bond contemplated such possible increase in liability, then the later statutes would not impair its obligation. National Sur. Corp. v. Gatlin, 192 Ga. 293, 15 S.E.2d 180 (1941).

19-3-62. “Marriage articles” defined; enforceable in equity; executed contracts distinguished.

(a) As used in this article, the term “marriage articles” means any antenuptial agreement between the parties to a marriage contemplating a future settlement upon one spouse. Marriage articles, whether by parol or in writing, may be executed and enforced by a court of equity at the instance of the spouse at any time during the life of the other spouse, so long as the rights of third persons, purchasers, or creditors, in good faith and without notice, are not affected thereby.

(b) An agreement perfect in itself which needs no future conveyance to effect its purposes is an executed contract and does not come under the definition of marriage articles. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1724; Code 1868, § 1765; Code 1873, § 1775; Code 1882, § 1775; Civil Code 1895, § 2480; Civil Code 1910, § 2999; Code 1933, § 53-401.)

Husband cannot alter antenuptial agreement by postnuptial deed. Maxwell v. Hoppie, 70 Ga. 152 (1883).

Final and complete settlement. — Prenuptial agreement between decedent husband and wife, wherein the wife agreed not to assert any claim on the husband’s estate, constituted a final and complete settlement which the mother and sister of the decedent had standing to enforce. Sieg v. Sieg, 265 Ga. 384, 455 S.E.2d 830 (1995).

Requirement of attestation by two witnesses. — In a divorce case in which a wife appealed the trial court’s denial of the wife’s motion for partial summary judgment on her claim that the antenuptial agreement was unenforceable, the antenuptial agreement was a marriage contract pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-3-62(b), and the agreement was unenforceable since the agreement had only been signed by one witness, and O.C.G.A. § 19-3-63 required that every marriage contract in writing, made in contemplation of marriage, must be attested by at least two witnesses. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 286 Ga. 53, 684 S.E.2d 861 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse discretion in setting aside agreement. — Because the evidence supported a finding that one spouse failed to make a full and fair disclosure of assets, income, and liabilities to the other spouse prior to the execution of an antenuptial agreement, hiding specific facts of the spouse’s true financial status, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in setting the agreement aside. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Children provided for in settlement, when no words indicate different import are presumed children of marriage which gives occasion to the settlement. Knorr v. Raymond, 73 Ga. 749 (1884).

Requirement for two signatures enforced. — In a divorce case in which a wife appealed the trial court’s denial of the wife’s motion for partial summary judgment on her claim that the antenuptial agreement was unenforceable, the antenuptial agreement was a marriage contract pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-3-62(b), and the agreement was unenforceable since the agreement had only been signed by one witness, and O.C.G.A. § 19-3-63 required that every marriage contract in writing, made in contemplation of marriage, must be attested by at least two witnesses. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 286 Ga. 53, 684 S.E.2d 861 (2009).

Parties’ premarital agreement, viewed as a whole, was a marriage contract made in contemplation of marriage, not a prenuptial agreement made in anticipation of divorce, and the trial court therefore correctly denied enforcement of the agreement due to noncompliance with the attestation requirement of O.C.G.A. § 19-3-63. Fox v. Fox, 291 Ga. 492, 731 S.E.2d 676 (2012).

Attendant and surrounding circumstances may always be resorted to, and proof of the local usage or understanding of words is admissible to arrive at the meaning intended by the parties. Brown v. Ransey, 74 Ga. 210 (1884).

Misrepresentation or nondisclosure of material fact. — Husband’s argument that an antenuptial agreement contained a severability clause and that, under O.C.G.A. § 13-1-8(a), the failure to abide by the portion of the agreement concerning attachment of lists showing property owned or held did not void the entire agreement was without merit; the trial court was not bound by the language of the agreement as to severability, but the question was whether there was a misrepresentation or nondisclosure of a material fact. Alexander v. Alexander, 279 Ga. 116, 610 S.E.2d 48 (2005).

Intention of parties must be carried out even though court has to disregard rules of grammatical construction to effectuate the intent. Ardis v. Printup, 39 Ga. 648 (1869); Brown v. Ransey, 74 Ga. 210 (1884).

Use of void antenuptial agreement. — Trial court committed reversible error by permitting testimony as to the contents of the parties antenuptial agreement into the final decree of divorce because that agreement had been previously ruled void and unenforceable, and the existence of the agreement and its contents were not to be considered by the fact-finder; hence, the matter was remanded for a new trial. Chubbuck v. Lake, 281 Ga. 218, 635 S.E.2d 764 (2006).

Because a prenuptial agreement addressing alimony issues was not an agreement made in contemplation of marriage, the trial court erred in ruling that O.C.G.A. § 19-3-63 applied; however, the criteria in Scherer v. Scherer, 249 Ga. 635 (1982) was satisfied by the disclosure of the husband’s assets. Dove v. Dove, 285 Ga. 647, 680 S.E.2d 839 (2009).

Contract made in contemplation of divorce, not marriage. — Trial court did not err in upholding the validity of an antenuptial agreement because the agreement was not subject to the dual attestation requirement of O.C.G.A. § 19-3-63 when it was a contract made in contemplation of divorce, not a contract made in contemplation of marriage; the antenuptial agreement addressed alimony, and it referred explicitly to the possibility of divorce, explaining that the parties wanted the agreement to govern in that event. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 286 Ga. 309, 687 S.E.2d 421 (2009).

19-3-64. Voluntary execution of antenuptial agreement; conveyance of property during marriage.

A spouse may voluntarily execute an agreement described in Code Section 19-3-62 or he may at any time during the marriage, either indirectly through trustees or directly to his spouse, convey any property to which he has title, subject to the rights of prior purchasers or creditors without notice. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1725; Code 1868, § 1766; Code 1873, § 1776; Code 1882, § 1776; Civil Code 1895, § 2481; Civil Code 1910, § 3000; Code 1933, § 53-404.)

Ga. 345 (1847) and Lafitte v. Lawton, 25 Ga. 305 (1858).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Trial court did not abuse discretion in setting aside agreement. — Because the evidence supported a finding that one spouse failed to make a full and fair disclosure of assets, income, and liabilities to the other spouse prior to the execution of an antenuptial agreement, hiding specific facts of the spouse's true financial status, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in setting the agreement aside. Blige v. Blige, 283 Ga. 65, 656 S.E.2d 822 (2008).

19-3-65. Powers of superior court judge in appointing and removing trustees and protecting trust estate; recordation of proceedings.

The judge of the superior court of the county of a spouse's domicile may at any time, upon petition, exercise equitable powers in appointing, removing, or substituting trustees or in granting any order for the protection of the trust estate, exercising a wise discretion as to the terms on which the appointment shall be made or on which the order shall be granted. The proceeding in each case shall be transmitted to the clerk of the superior court, to be recorded in the book of the minutes of the court. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1729; Code 1868, § 1770; Code 1873, § 1780; Code 1882, § 1780; Civil Code 1895, § 2485; Civil Code 1910, § 3004; Code 1933, § 53-405.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Removal of trustees. — Former Code 1933, § 53-405 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-3-65) does not authorize filing action to remove trustees in any county other than county of trustees' residence. If that section is capable of being otherwise construed, it is in direct conflict with Ga.

Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VIII and Art. XI, Sec. I, Para I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. V) and must yield to the Constitution which is the paramount law. First Nat'l Bank v. Rowley, 224 Ga. 440, 162 S.E.2d 294 (1968).

Marriage contracts and postnuptial settlements shall be enforced at the instance of all persons in whose favor there are limitations of the estate. Marriage articles, as defined in subsection (a) of Code Section 19-3-62, shall be executed only at the instance of the parties to the contract and the offspring of the marriage and their heirs; but, when executed at their instance, the court may execute also in favor of other persons and volunteers. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Interested parties to action construing contract. — When the construction of a doubtful marriage settlement is sought it is proper to make all persons, who may have an interest under any possible construction of the instrument, parties. Carswell v. Schley, 56 Ga. 101 (1876).

Parties within scope of marriage settlements. — Those having natural claims upon the parties, such as the wife and offspring, and those claiming under or through them, alone come within the scope of the marriage consideration. The fact that collaterals are first mentioned in the limitations of the articles does not bring them within the reach and influence of the agreement. Merritt v. Scott, 6 Ga. 563 (1849).

Prenuptial agreement between decedent husband and wife, wherein the wife agreed not to assert any claim on the husband's estate, constituted a final and complete settlement which the mother and sister of the decedent had standing to enforce. Sieg v. Sieg, 265 Ga. 384, 455 S.E.2d 830 (1995).

Reformation. — Persons, though provided for in a marriage settlement, if they are not parties to it, nor heirs at law of parties thereto, and are not embraced within the scope of the marriage consideration, cannot have it reformed in a court of chancery. Merritt v. Scott, 6 Ga. 563 (1849); Cook v. Walker, 21 Ga. 370 (1857); Cartledge v. Cutliff, 29 Ga. 758 (1859).

Changes to agreement. — Final version of the settlement agreement adopted by the trial court over the objections of the defendant included several provisions either not included in the original or different than those initially agreed upon; those changes and additions to the parties agreement rendered the trial court's adoption of the subsequently drafted final version error. DeGarmo v. DeGarmo, 269 Ga. 480, 499 S.E.2d 317 (1998).

19-3-67. Recordation of marriage contracts and voluntary settlements; effect of failure to record.

(a) Every marriage contract and every voluntary settlement made by one spouse with the other, whether or not in execution of marriage articles, shall be recorded in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county of the residence of the spouse making the settlement within three months after the execution thereof. If such a contract or settlement is made in another state and the parties subsequently move into this state, the same shall be recorded within three months from the move. If the settled property is in this state and the parties reside in another state, the record shall be made in the county where the property is located within the time specified above.

(b) A contract or settlement which is not recorded as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section shall be of no force or effect against one who, bona fide and without notice, becomes a purchaser, creditor, or surety before the actual recording of the same. (Laws 1847, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 180; Code 1863, § 1727; Code 1868, § 1768; Code 1873, § 1778; Code 1882, § 1778; Civil Code 1895, § 2483; Civil Code 1910, § 3002; Code 1933, § 53-408.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Effect of law was to require record of instrument, on pain of forfeiture, as against certain dealers with the parties. It is but fair that a law of this character should be strictly construed, and not extended beyond its terms. Cummins v. Boston & Gunby, 25 Ga. 277 (1858); Cloud & Shackelford v. Dupree, 28 Ga. 170 (1859); Cunningham v. Schley, 41 Ga. 426 (1870).

Section not applicable to actions between parties. — As between the parties, a marriage contract is valid, though it is not recorded. Reinhart v. Miller, 22 Ga. 402 (1857); Logan v. Goodall, 42 Ga. 95 (1871).

Bona fide creditors. — Bona fide creditor is one who gives credit on the faith of the property contained in the marriage settlement. Cloud & Shackelford v. Dupree, 28 Ga. 170 (1859); Brown v. Spivey, 53 Ga. 155 (1874).

Person must have become creditor before actual record of settlement. Brown v. Spivey, 53 Ga. 155 (1874).

What constitutes voluntary settlement. — Deed from the husband to the wife for love and affection is a voluntary settlement and must be recorded within three months to vest title in the wife against the claim of a surety who endorses for the husband before the date of the record. Sumner v. Bryan, Dillingham & Co., 54 Ga. 613 (1875).

Conveyances after marriage. — Law applied to marriage agreements and marriage settlements only, and the law's terms will not be extended by construction so as to embrace conveyances of property by a husband to a wife after marriage, upon an independent consideration not connected with the marriage contract. Coleman, Burden & Warthen Co. v. Walker, 102 Ga. 576, 28 S.E. 973 (1897).

Application as to nonresident. — Law did not require the record of an antenuptial contract between a woman who was a resident and a man who was a nonresident, by which the latter attempted to release certain supposed rights in her property located within the state. Bearden v. Benner, 136 F. 258 (S.D. Ga. 1905).

Marriage contract properly recorded in county where marriage effected. — When a husband, at the time of entering into a marriage contract, lives in one county but after the consummation of the marriage resides in another, the record of the contract in the latter county is proper. Hayden v. Mitchell, 103 Ga. 431, 30 S.E. 287 (1898).

Effect upon mortgagee with notice. — When a husband deeded property to himself, as trustee, for the benefit of his wife and children, and such deed was recorded in compliance with law, and the husband later mortgaged the property to a third party, the conveyance was good as against the mortgagee who had notice before the mortgage was executed. Wilson v. Riddle, 123 U.S. 608, 8 S. Ct. 255, 31 L. Ed. 280 (1887).

Effect of subsequent removal of husband's residence. — Marriage settlement, duly recorded within the time prescribed by law, in the county of the residence of the husband, need not be again recorded in the county or counties to which the husband may subsequently move. The first registration, if properly done, is sufficient. Clark v. Way & Taylor, 33 Ga. 149 (1864).

(a) If the trustee or the spouse having possession of a marriage contract or settlement fails or refuses to have the same recorded, the other spouse or any person acting on behalf of the spouse may apply to the judge of the superior court at any time for an order compelling its recordation. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of section. — Purpose of statute to uphold the interest and welfare of children is manifested in the provisions insuring their legitimacy, prohibiting annulment, and thus requiring divorce to dissolve such marriages. Riddle v. Riddle, 240 Ga. 515, 241 S.E.2d 214 (1978).

O.C.G.A. § 19-4-1 was promulgated for purpose of protecting children of an otherwise void marriage, in other words, this statute, by requiring parties to an otherwise void marriage to seek a divorce rather than an annulment, prevents those parties from bastardizing children which are a product of the marriage. Burnett v. Schweiker, 643 F.2d 1168 (5th Cir. 1981).

Section provides exception to common-law rule. — Georgia legislature, in promulgating O.C.G.A. § 19-4-1, carved out an exception to the common-law rule that if one party to a marriage has a previous unresolved marriage, then that party is unable to contract a subsequent valid marriage, and the later marriage is void from the beginning. Burnett v. Schweiker, 643 F.2d 1168 (5th Cir. 1981).

Section does not render legitimate an otherwise void marriage. — In Georgia, a person who enters into a marriage that is void because of a legal impediment must seek a divorce in order to terminate the purported marriage; traditionally, a divorce proceeding seeks to terminate a valid marriage, thus it appears that O.C.G.A. § 19-4-1 confers validity upon an otherwise void marriage; but under closer scrutiny, that section does not render legitimate an otherwise void marriage. Burnett v. Schweiker, 643 F.2d 1168 (5th Cir. 1981).

Annulment statutes protect children of marriages previously considered void by prohibiting annulment and thus guaranteeing their legitimacy. Consistent with this purpose, the legislature provided that such marriage could be dissolved only by divorce. Wallace v. Wallace, 221 Ga. 510, 145 S.E.2d 546 (1965). For comment, see 3 Ga. St. B.J. 219 (1966).

Right to alimony lies as necessary concomitant remedy to fulfill the general design of this statute. Wallace v. Wallace, 221 Ga. 510, 145 S.E.2d 546 (1965); Riddle v. Riddle, 240 Ga. 515, 241 S.E.2d 214 (1978).

Under Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 416(h)(1)(A), state law determines whether a marriage is valid or not in order to determine family status for purposes of social security benefits. Burnett v. Schweiker, 643 F.2d 1168 (5th Cir. 1981).

Widows of such marriages not "legal" widows for social security purposes. — In enacting O.C.G.A. § 19-4-1, under which, if a child has been born or will be born of a marriage otherwise void because of legal impediment, the proper procedure for resolution of such marriage is to obtain a divorce rather than an annulment, the Georgia legislature did not intend to confer validity on such otherwise void marriage; therefore, the widow of such void marriage is not the legal widow for purpose of receiving social security benefits. Burnett v. Schweiker, 643 F.2d 1168 (5th Cir. 1981).

Denial of social security benefits to spouses of void marriages. — O.C.G.A. § 19-4-1 does not confer validity on an otherwise void marriage for purpose of permitting a spouse to such marriage to receive benefits that only inure to the husband or wife of the legal marriage; in other words, denying a spouse the ability to receive benefits as a legal widow does not cast doubt on the legitimacy of the child born of a void marriage. Furthermore, to permit such spouse to receive benefits intended to inure only to the benefit of a legal widow would wreak havoc on any scheme set up to protect a surviving spouse. Burnett v. Schweiker, 643 F.2d 1168 (5th Cir. 1981).

Setting aside divorce decree when marriage void from inception. — Trial court erred by denying an ex-husband's motion to set aside a divorce decree with the ex-wife because the marriage was void from the marriage's inception due to the ex-wife having a living spouse from an undissolved marriage at the time and there was no issue of the protection of a child to prevent the decree from being set aside. Wright v. Hall, 292 Ga. 457, 738 S.E.2d 594 (2013).

19-4-5. Effect of annulment.

A decree of annulment, when rendered, shall have the effect of a total divorce between the parties of a void marriage and shall return the parties thereto to their original status before marriage. However, a decree of annulment shall not operate to relieve the parties to a marriage of criminal charges or responsibilities occasioned by the marriage. (Ga. L. 1952, p. 149, § 5.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Annulled marriage is rendered void ab initio. — Since a subsequent annulment is not merely a dissolution of the marriage but a judicial declaration that no marriage ever existed and, in the absence of a statutory declaration otherwise, its effect is usually said to make the annulled marriage void ab initio, a certificate of marriage to another woman did not establish an irrebuttable presumption that the petitioner was no longer the deceased's widower at the time the widower filed the year's support petition. Hamrick v. Bonner, 182 Ga. App. 76, 354 S.E.2d 687 (1987).

"Responsibilities occasioned by the marriage" are not limited to criminal charges but include civil liabilities, such as necessities furnished the wife by a third person. McKinney v. McKinney, 242 Ga. 607, 250 S.E.2d 470 (1978).

Decree of annulment shall return parties to their original status but shall not relieve any party of criminal charges. McKinney v. McKinney, 242 Ga. 607, 250 S.E.2d 470 (1978).

Trial court erred in excluding from evidence a marriage certificate and the proffered testimony concerning the nature of the actual relationship between a petitioner for a year's support and another woman when, given the financial benefits which the petitioner and the woman stood to achieve after the caveat was filed by having their marriage annulled, a manifest injustice could result if the caveators were not permitted to go behind the annulment decree in an attempt to prove that the couple had in fact cohabitated as man and wife both before and after the entry of the annulment decree. Hamrick v. Bonner, 182 Ga. App. 76, 354 S.E.2d 687 (1987).

Annulled marriage as res judicata. — While an annulment decree may have been res judicata between the parties thereto, it was not res judicata with respect to others who were neither parties nor in privity with the parties to the annulment proceedings. Hamrick v. Bonner, 182 Ga. App. 76, 354 S.E.2d 687 (1987).

19-5-1. Total divorces authorized; how tried; referral for alternative dispute resolution.

(a) Total divorces may be granted in proper cases by the superior court; provided, however, that the parties shall comply with Code Section 19-5-1.1 if it is applicable. Unless an issuable defense is filed as provided by law and a jury trial is demanded in writing by either party on or before the call of the case for trial, in all petitions for divorce and permanent alimony the judge shall hear and determine all issues of law and of fact and any other issues raised in the pleadings.

(b) In any county in which there has been established an alternative dispute resolution program pursuant to Chapter 23 of Title 15, known as the “Georgia Court-annexed Alternative Dispute Resolution Act,” the judge may, prior to trial, refer all contested petitions for divorce or permanent alimony to the appropriate alternative dispute resolution method. In counties in which an alternative dispute resolution program has not been established, a judge may nonetheless refer any disputed divorce case to an appropriate alternative dispute resolution method if a method is reasonably available without additional cost to the parties. Editor's notes. — Code Section 19-5-1.1, referred to in subsection (a) of this Code section, does not exist. A new Code Section 19-5-1.1 was included in an early version of 2007 HB 369 but was removed by amendment prior to enactment of Ga. L. 2007, p. 554, § 7/HB 369.

Ga. L. 2007, p. 554, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: “The General Assembly of Georgia declares that it is the policy of this state to assure that minor children have frequent and continuing contact with parents who have shown the ability to act in the best interests of their children and to encourage parents to share in the rights and responsibilities of rearing their children after the parents have separated or dissolved their marriage or relationship.”

Ga. L. 2007, p. 554, § 8, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the 2007 amendment to subsection (a) shall apply to all child custody proceedings and modifications of child custody filed on or after January 1, 2008.

ANALYSIS

JURY TRIAL

APPLICATION

General Consideration

Legislative intent. — Laws peculiar to divorce suits clearly indicate an intention upon the part of the lawmaking power to impede the facility for obtaining divorces; and such purpose can only be attributed to a zealous regard for the well-being of society. Haygood v. Haygood, 190 Ga. 445, 9 S.E.2d 834 (1940).

Former Code 1933, § 30-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-5-1) was not violative of provisions of former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. VII (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para XI). Flournoy v. Flournoy, 228 Ga. 224, 184 S.E.2d 822 (1971).

“Issuable defense” within meaning of law may be made by pre-trial order or other pleadings filed as provided by law. Trulove v. Trulove, 233 Ga. 896, 213 S.E.2d 868 (1975).

Defending divorce action without filing answer cannot preclude “issuable defense.” — Spouse’s right in divorce action to defend without filing answer cannot preclude existence of “issuable defense” and thereby defeat the right to jury trial. Trulove v. Trulove, 233 Ga. 896, 213 S.E.2d 868 (1975).

Divorce proceedings are governed by Civil Practice Act. Ivey v. Ivey, 233 Ga. 45, 209 S.E.2d 590 (1974).

Divorce proceedings equitable in nature. — Proceedings for divorce and for alimony have always, under the practice of this state, been regarded as equitable. Early v. Early, 243 Ga. 125, 252 S.E.2d 618 (1979).

Superior court judge presiding over a divorce case exercises all of the traditional powers of a chancellor in equity, except as otherwise provided by law. Allen v. Allen, 260 Ga. 777, 400 S.E.2d 15 (1991).

Case involving the question of the enforceability of a settlement agreement was remanded to the trial court, pursuant to the rule holding that divorce proceedings are equitable in nature. Allen v. Allen, 260 Ga. 777, 400 S.E.2d 15 (1991).

City courts lack jurisdiction to entertain suit for alimony. — Because exclusive jurisdiction of divorce and/or alimony questions is vested in superior courts, city courts are without jurisdiction to entertain a suit for alimony in a case in which a judgment has previously been rendered in the superior court. Tyson v. Tyson, 176 Ga. 137, 167 S.E. 172 (1932).

Carmichael, 248 Ga. 216, 282 S.E.2d 71 (1981); Hudson v. State, 248 Ga. 397, 283 S.E.2d 271 (1981).

Jury Trial

When judge of superior court sits in divorce case without jury, the judge has plenary control of the judge's judgment during the term at which the judgment is rendered. Juneau v. Juneau, 98 Ga. App. 330, 105 S.E.2d 913 (1958).

Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 39 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-39) authorized the trial court to permit jury trial even if written demand was not timely filed under former Code 1933, § 30-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-5-1). Bullock v. Bullock, 234 Ga. 253, 215 S.E.2d 255 (1975).

Jury is authorized to find for divorce when evidence establishes ground upon which the action is brought. Brackett v. Brackett, 217 Ga. 84, 121 S.E.2d 146 (1961).

Jury trial required upon proper demand. — When one spouse made a proper demand for a jury trial which was not otherwise waived, it was reversible error for the court to enter a final judgment based upon the findings of an auditor, without a trial by jury. Franklin v. Franklin, 267 Ga. 82, 475 S.E.2d 890 (1996).

Parties waive their right to jury trial in a divorce case if the parties fail to make a written demand for a jury trial on or before the call of the case. Ivey v. Ivey, 264 Ga. 435, 445 S.E.2d 258 (1994).

Waiver of jury trial. — Actions of a party who dismisses a petition for divorce and thereafter files a separation agreement with the court settling all issues as to alimony, property settlement, child custody, and child support must be construed as a waiver of jury trial as to all issues in the case. In these circumstances, the trial court has the power to grant the divorce without the intervention of a jury and adopt the settlement entered into between the parties. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 236 Ga. 353, 223 S.E.2d 714 (1976).

When jury verdict construed as in favor of petitioner. — When both parties to a divorce action introduce evidence in support of their respective prayers for divorce, and the jury returns a verdict finding in favor of a total divorce between the parties, without stating whether the verdict is for the petitioner or the respondent, it will be construed to be for the petitioner. Carawan v. Carawan, 203 Ga. 325, 46 S.E.2d 588 (1948).

Application

Absent fraud, client bound by decree as negotiated by attorney. — When one employs counsel to represent one in a divorce action and such counsel agrees with counsel for the opposite party to a decree which is entered by the court, such decree will, in the absence of a violation of express directions by the client to counsel, known to the adverse party or counsel, or fraud, accident, or mistake, be binding upon the client. Dixon v. Dixon, 204 Ga. 363, 49 S.E.2d 818 (1948).

Adultery as defense. — Alleged act of adultery, committed after date of separation and action, if proven, would be good defense against the grant of either total divorce or permanent alimony. Rowell v. Rowell, 209 Ga. 572, 74 S.E.2d 833 (1953).

Recriminatory charge of adultery committed by the plaintiff after the commencement of a divorce action is a valid defense and upon a proper application at any time before the final decree, if such application is made immediately after the discovery of the fact, the court should permit the defendant to put in a supplemental answer or file a plea for continuance for the purpose of setting up such matter as a new defense. Rowell v. Rowell, 209 Ga. 572, 74 S.E.2d 833 (1953).

Action for divorce instituted by guardian of person adjudicated insane cannot be maintained in this state; the right to bring and prosecute such an action being strictly personal, and not within the authority conferred by law upon a guardian. Phillips v. Phillips, 203 Ga. 106, 45 S.E.2d 621 (1947).

Allegations that an individual, before the individual was adjudged mentally incompetent, and at a time when the individual had mental capacity to show the nature of an action for divorce, expressed the individual's intention and desire to obtain a divorce from the defendant, that at the time of the filing of the action, and during a lucid interval, after such adjudication, the individual again expressed the same intention and desire, and that the suit was instituted pursuant to the individual's direction, desire, and will at the time of filing the suit, would nevertheless not show authority in the guardian to institute and maintain such action. Phillips v. Phillips, 203 Ga. 106, 45 S.E.2d 621 (1947).

Intervention by third party in divorce action. — There is no provision of law which allows third party to intervene in divorce action. Girtman v. Girtman, 191 Ga. 173, 11 S.E.2d 782 (1940).

Collateral attack of valid divorce judgment. — Judgment in divorce case not shown to be void could not be collaterally attacked in another case and different forum. Juneau v. Juneau, 98 Ga. App. 330, 105 S.E.2d 913 (1958).

Action to set aside fraudulent divorce can be maintained following death of party if it appears that the divorce decree or the subsequent action to set it aside involved some property right in which the surviving spouse is beneficially interested and the status and rights of the parties are retroactively affected. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Dunbar, 112 Ga. App. 102, 143 S.E.2d 663 (1965).

Decree properly set aside as fraudulent. — Petition alleging that petitioner had no knowledge of the pendency of the divorce action against the petitioner, the petitioner not having been served with process of the suit, nor had the petitioner acknowledged service thereof, and that the defendant had concealed from petitioner and kept petitioner ignorant of the pending suit, was sufficient as grounds of fraud for setting aside the divorce decree. Robertson v. Robertson, 196 Ga. 517, 26 S.E.2d 922 (1943).

Motion to set aside decree properly denied when unsupported. — When a judgment and decree sought to be set aside were rendered in one term, and the motion to set aside came at a subsequent term, was not based on any defect appearing on the face of the record or pleadings, and was not accompanied by any brief of the evidence adduced upon the trial which resulted in the judgment and decree, the trial judge did not err in dismissing the motion to set aside. Prewett v. Prewett, 215 Ga. 425, 110 S.E.2d 638 (1959).

Unadjudicated claim for divorce is purely personal and abates upon death. Segars v. Brooks, 248 Ga. 427, 284 S.E.2d 13 (1981).

Final judgment was prematurely entered at a temporary hearing in a divorce proceeding since 23 days remained during which defensive pleadings would have been required by law to be filed and both parties had filed timely demands for a jury trial. Henderson v. Henderson, 258 Ga. 205, 367 S.E.2d 40 (1988).

19-5-2. Residence requirements; venue.

No court shall grant a divorce to any person who has not been a bona fide resident of this state for six months before the filing of the petition for divorce, provided that any person who has been a resident of any United States army post or military reservation within this state for one year next preceding the filing of the petition may bring an action for divorce in any county adjacent to the United States army post or military reservation; and provided, further, that a nonresident of this state may file a petition for divorce, in the county of residence of the respondent, against any person who has been a resident of this state and of the county in which the action is brought for a period of six months prior to the filing of the petition. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Section's requirements as to domicile. — Law required that plaintiff in divorce action must be domiciled in this state for the statutory period before the institution of the action, but did not require in addition that the plaintiff shall have actually resided in this state during such period. Williams v. Williams, 191 Ga. 437, 12 S.E.2d 352 (1940); Williams v. Williams, 226 Ga. 734, 177 S.E.2d 481 (1970).

Section does not apply to application for alimony. — There was no provision of law extending the requirements of this statute to the application of the wife for alimony and attorney's fees. Lee v. Lee, 154 Ga. 820, 115 S.E. 493 (1923) (see O.C.G.A. § 19-5-2).

Legislature has established a statutory residency requirement of six months before divorce proceedings can be brought, but has not extended this requirement to alimony proceedings. Chalfant v. Rains, 244 Ga. 747, 262 S.E.2d 63 (1979).

“Resident” as used in statute was equivalent to domicile. Darbie v. Darbie, 195 Ga. 769, 25 S.E.2d 685 (1943).

Term “resident” meant “domiciliary.” Worrell v. Worrell, 242 Ga. 44, 247 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

“Domicile” refers to single fixed place of abode with intention of remaining there indefinitely, or the single fixed place of abode where a person intends to return, even though the person may in fact be residing elsewhere. Abou-Issa v. Abou-Issa, 229 Ga. 77, 189 S.E.2d 443 (1972).

Residence in county for six months is all that is required to give the court jurisdiction of a plaintiff’s petition for divorce. Tate v. Tate, 220 Ga. 393, 139 S.E.2d 297 (1964).

It requires both act and intent to establish residence, and either without the other is insufficient. Lorance v. Lorance, 216 Ga. 754, 119 S.E.2d 342 (1961).

To effect change of domicile there must be avowed intent and actual removal. Temporary absence from the county by a person who has no family does not operate to change the person’s domicile. Bellamy v. Bellamy, 187 Ga. 804, 2 S.E.2d 413 (1939).

Party who enters United States on temporary visa does not lack legal capacity to establish domicile in this state for the purposes of a divorce suit. Abou-Issa v. Abou-Issa, 229 Ga. 77, 189 S.E.2d 443 (1972).

Question of domicile is ordinarily mixed question of law and fact, and is for jury determination. Abou-Issa v. Abou-Issa, 229 Ga. 77, 189 S.E.2d 443 (1972); Campbell v. Campbell, 231 Ga. 214, 200 S.E.2d 899 (1973); Worrell v. Worrell, 242 Ga. 44, 247 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Alleging and proving bona fide residence. — One filing petition for divorce must allege and prove that one has been bona fide resident of the state for the length of time required by law. Jurisdiction of the subject matter cannot be conferred by consent. Dicks v. Dicks, 177 Ga. 379, 170 S.E. 245 (1933); Great Am.

Indem. Co. v. Jeffries, 65 Ga. App. 686, 16 S.E.2d 135 (1941); Tate v. Tate, 220 Ga. 393, 139 S.E.2d 297 (1964).

Plaintiff in divorce action carries burden of proving jurisdiction of the court, and this duty is no less incumbent upon the defendant who asks for alimony; in neither instance can jurisdiction be conferred by consent or by waiver. Jones v. Jones, 181 Ga. 747, 184 S.E. 271 (1936).

This provision as to venue in divorce cases is mandatory and jurisdictional, and as against demurrer (now motion to dismiss) should be alleged, and must be proved, nor can jurisdiction be conferred on the superior court of a different county by waiver or consent. Wade v. Wade, 195 Ga. 748, 25 S.E.2d 683 (1943).

State provisions authorizing waiver of jurisdiction. — Provisions of state law which authorize parties in certain cases to waive jurisdiction do not apply to divorce action. Haygood v. Haygood, 190 Ga. 445, 9 S.E.2d 834 (1940).

Parties by plea or otherwise cannot waive jurisdiction so as to dispense with proof in the court that the plaintiff had been a bona fide resident of this state for 12 months (now 6 months) before the suit was filed. Great Am. Indem. Co. v. Jeffries, 65 Ga. App. 686, 16 S.E.2d 135 (1941).

Allegation of jurisdictional requirements was essential to applications for divorce. Owens v. Owens, 189 Ga. 338, 5 S.E.2d 883 (1939); Rice v. Rice, 223 Ga. 363, 155 S.E.2d 393 (1967).

It is necessary to allege the correct venue and to make affirmative proof thereof. Johnson v. Johnson, 188 Ga. 800, 4 S.E.2d 807 (1939).

Personal jurisdiction over party. — Personal jurisdiction over the defendant is not a prerequisite to the grant of a divorce by a Georgia court. A party seeking a divorce must show only that the trial court had jurisdiction over the res of the marriage which results from his or her domicile in the state for the six-month period preceding the filing of the action. Abernathy v. Abernathy, 267 Ga. 815, 482 S.E.2d 265 (1997).

Failure to make proof of venue will render verdict for divorce subject to be set aside by proper procedure, and such proof is essential, even though the absence of this jurisdictional averment may be supplied by amendment. Wade v. Wade, 195 Ga. 748, 25 S.E.2d 683 (1943).

Dismissal for lack of residency affirmed. — Trial court's finding that a wife was not a resident of DeKalb County, Georgia, and the court's order dismissing her DeKalb County divorce case were affirmed since the parties had sold their home in Georgia six months before the divorce was filed, and the wife's tax forms stated that she did not maintain a home in the United States, but rather that her bona fide residence was in South Africa; although the wife claimed that she intended to return to DeKalb County, the trial court properly applied the principle that the testimony of a party who offered herself as a witness in her own behalf at trial was to be construed most strongly against her when the testimony was self-contradictory, vague, or equivocal. Conrad v. Conrad, 278 Ga. 107, 597 S.E.2d 369 (2004).

Action subject to dismissal for failure to allege time of residence. — When there was an absence of a proper allegation of "time of residence," a necessary jurisdictional allegation, an action for divorce was subject to the general demurrer (now motion to dismiss) on the ground that no cause of action was alleged, and the prayers for temporary and permanent alimony being incidental to the suit for divorce on the ground of cruel treatment, cannot be maintained as an independent action, but must fall with the divorce suit. Mullally v. Mullally, 199 Ga. 708, 35 S.E.2d 199 (1945).

Husband established that he was Georgia domiciliary. — Trial court's finding that a husband in a divorce case failed to establish that he was a domiciliary of Georgia was error and was reversed since the husband and the wife had maintained a marital residence in Georgia for at least five years before the wife returned to Britain, where the husband continued to maintain his domicile in Georgia and intended to remain in Georgia, and where the husband, an Irish citizen, had obtained permanent resident alien status, had designated himself a year round

Georgia resident on state tax returns, and had declared himself to be a non-resident of Britain for tax purposes. Cooke v. Cooke, 277 Ga. 731, 594 S.E.2d 370 (2004).

Even though the wife did not have sufficient minimum contacts with Georgia for the trial court to exercise jurisdiction over issues related to alimony, division of marital property, and attorney fees, the trial court had jurisdiction pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-5-2 to grant the divorce sought by the husband since the husband had lived in Georgia for at least six months. Ennis v. Ennis, 290 Ga. 890, 725 S.E.2d 311 (2012).

Domicile in Georgia. — Trial court had jurisdiction to grant a divorce, as opposed to the State of New York trial court wherein the wife petitioned for a divorce, because there was some evidence to support the trial court's findings on domicile of the parties, including that the husband was stationed in the military in Georgia, they lived in military housing then purchased a home, and continued to live in that home until their separation. Black v. Black, 292 Ga. 691, 740 S.E.2d 613 (2013).

19-5-3. Grounds for total divorce.

The following grounds shall be sufficient to authorize the granting of a total divorce:

(1) Intermarriage by persons within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity;

(2) Mental incapacity at the time of the marriage;

(3) Impotency at the time of the marriage;

(4) Force, menace, duress, or fraud in obtaining the marriage;

(5) Pregnancy of the wife by a man other than the husband, at the time of the marriage, unknown to the husband;

(6) Adultery in either of the parties after marriage;

(7) Willful and continued desertion by either of the parties for the term of one year;

(8) The conviction of either party for an offense involving moral turpitude, under which he is sentenced to imprisonment in a penal institution for a term of two years or longer;

(9) Habitual intoxication;

(10) Cruel treatment, which shall consist of the willful infliction of pain, bodily or mental, upon the complaining party, such as reasonably justifies apprehension of danger to life, limb, or health;

(11) Incurable mental illness. No divorce shall be granted upon this ground unless the mentally ill party has been adjudged mentally ill by a court of competent jurisdiction or has been certified to be mentally ill by two physicians who have personally examined the party; and he has been confined in an institution for the mentally ill or has been under continuous treatment for mental illness for a period of at least two years immediately preceding the commencement of the action; and the superintendent or other chief executive officer of the institution and one competent physician appointed by the court, after a thorough examination, make a certified statement under oath that it is their opinion that the party evidences such a want of reason, memory, and intelligence as to prevent the party from comprehending the nature, duties, and consequences of the marriage relationship and that, in the light of present day medical knowledge, recovery of the party's mental health cannot be expected at any time during his life. Notice of the action must be served upon the guardian of the person of the mentally ill person and upon the superintendent or other chief executive officer of the institution in which the person is confined. In the event that there is no guardian of the person, then notice of the action shall be served upon a guardian ad litem, who shall be appointed by the court in which the divorce action is filed, and upon the superintendent or chief executive officer of the institution in which the person is confined. The guardian and superintendent shall be entitled to appear and be heard upon the issues. The status of the parties as to the support and maintenance of the mentally ill person shall not be altered in any way by the granting of the divorce;

(12) Habitual drug addiction, which shall consist of addiction to any controlled substance as defined in Article 2 of Chapter 13 of Title 16;

(13) The marriage is irretrievably broken. Under no circumstances shall the court grant a divorce on this ground until not less than 30 days from the date of service on the respondent. General Consideration Law was capable of definition and application. Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

Specified grounds required for dissolution of marriage. — Marriage relationship cannot be dissolved in this state except upon grounds specified in this statute. Christopher v. Christopher, 198 Ga. 361, 31 S.E.2d 818 (1944).

When jury authorized to find for divorce. — Jury is authorized to find for divorce when evidence establishes grounds upon which the action is brought.

Brackett v. Brackett, 217 Ga. 84, 121 S.E.2d 146 (1961).

When action for divorce is not available remedy. — When marriage status never existed and complaint is not grounds for divorce, action for divorce is not available remedy to the petitioner. Gearllach v. Odom, 200 Ga. 350, 37 S.E.2d 184 (1946).

Previous undissolved marriage of one party is not grounds for divorce. Gearllach v. Odom, 200 Ga. 350, 37 S.E.2d 184 (1946); Pritchett v. Ellis, 201 Ga. 809, 41 S.E.2d 402 (1947); Lovett v. Zeigler, 224 Ga. 144, 160 S.E.2d 360 (1968).

Tobitt*, 249 Ga. 245, 290 S.E.2d 49 (1982).

Adultery

Adultery during marriage is ground for divorce by the other spouse, of whatever gender. Hargrett v. Hargrett, 242 Ga. 725, 251 S.E.2d 235 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Stokes v. Stokes, 246 Ga. 765, 273 S.E.2d 169 (1980).

Act of illicit sexual intercourse committed prior to marriage is not ground of divorce in this state. Stanley v. Stanley, 115 Ga. 990, 42 S.E. 374 (1902).

Adultery may involve homosexual relations. — Person commits adultery when he or she has sexual intercourse with a “person” other than his or her spouse. Therefore, both extramarital homosexual, as well as heterosexual, relations constitute adultery. Owens v. Owens, 247 Ga. 139, 274 S.E.2d 484 (1981).

Petitioner not precluded from alleging adultery when discovered after separation. — When the husband sought divorce on ground of adultery, among other grounds, the fact that the petitioner did not know of the adultery until after the separation did not prevent the petitioner from seeking a divorce based on adultery after learning of the adultery. Hargrett v. Hargrett, 242 Ga. 725, 251 S.E.2d 235 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Stokes v. Stokes, 246 Ga. 765, 273 S.E.2d 169 (1980).

Evidence of adultery. — To be a viable ground for divorce, evidence of adultery must continue to be admissible. Hargrett v. Hargrett, 242 Ga. 725, 251 S.E.2d 235 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Stokes v. Stokes, 246 Ga. 765, 273 S.E.2d 169 (1980).

Adultery may be proved by circumstantial evidence, but such evidence must infer as a necessary conclusion that adultery was committed. But if such evidence is fairly susceptible of two interpretations, one consistent with innocence and the other with guilt, it is not sufficient to prove adultery. Johnson v. Johnson, 218 Ga. 28, 126 S.E.2d 229 (1962).

Requirements for inferring adultery from circumstantial evidence. — There must be both opportunity and adulterous disposition for adultery to be inferred from circumstantial evidence. Johnson v. Johnson, 218 Ga. 28, 126 S.E.2d 229 (1962).

Cruel Treatment

“Cruel treatment,” was willful infliction of pain, bodily or mental, upon the complaining party such as reasonably justifies an apprehension of danger to life, limb, or health. Odom v. Odom, 36 Ga. 286 (1867), overruled on other grounds, Wise v. Wise, 156 Ga. 459, 119 S.E. 410 (1923); Ring v. Ring, 118 Ga. 183, 44 S.E. 861 (1903); Ford v. Ford, 146 Ga. 164, 91 S.E.

42 (1916); Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922); Adams v. Adams, 195 Ga. 479, 24 S.E.2d 683 (1943); Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954); Ewing v. Ewing, 211 Ga. 803, 89 S.E.2d 180 (1955); Connor v. Connor, 212 Ga. 92, 90 S.E.2d 581 (1955); Moody v. Moody, 224 Ga. 13, 159 S.E.2d 394 (1968).

Cruel treatment, or cruelty in the broad and unrestricted sense in which it is used in the statute, is any act intended to torment, vex, or afflict, or which actually afflicts or torments without necessity; or any act of inhumanity, wrong, oppression, or injustice. Ross v. Ross, 169 Ga. 524, 150 S.E. 822 (1929); Morris v. Morris, 202 Ga. 431, 43 S.E.2d 639 (1947); Bell v. Bell, 213 Ga. 176, 97 S.E.2d 571 (1957).

Acts of cruelty must be such as to render cohabitation unsafe, or are likely to be attended with injury to the person or to the health of the wife. It must be the intention of the offending party to injure — to wound. It must be a willful act the purpose of which is to hurt. Ewing v. Ewing, 211 Ga. 803, 89 S.E.2d 180 (1955).

Cruel treatment justifying separation defined. — Cruel treatment which would justify a wife in leaving her husband and living in a state of separation from him, while he is willing to have her come back to his home and live with him, should have the same definition as the cruel treatment which would afford grounds for divorce. Mell v. Mell, 190 Ga. 508, 9 S.E.2d 756 (1940); Mullikin v. Mullikin, 200 Ga. 638, 38 S.E.2d 281 (1946); Brown v. Brown, 217 Ga. 671, 124 S.E.2d 399 (1962).

Willfulness of cruel treatment is essential element which will authorize the grant of a divorce. Alford v. Alford, 189 Ga. 630, 7 S.E.2d 278 (1940).

Intention to wound is necessary element of cruel treatment for which divorce will be granted. Connor v. Connor, 212 Ga. 92, 90 S.E.2d 581 (1955); Brown v. Brown, 228 Ga. 330, 185 S.E.2d 412 (1971).

Without element of willfulness, there can be no cruel treatment which will authorize the grant of a divorce upon that ground. Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga.

497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954); Vaughan v. Vaughan, 223 Ga. 298, 154 S.E.2d 592 (1967).

If the alleged acts of cruel treatment by the defendant toward the petitioner resulted from the defendant's emotionally unstable personality and not from a willful desire to wound the plaintiff, then the defendant was guilty of no cruel treatment which could authorize the grant of a divorce to the plaintiff on this ground. Connor v. Connor, 212 Ga. 92, 90 S.E.2d 581 (1955).

While husband's allegations as to matters transpiring before the reconciliation of the parties asserted conduct unbecoming a wife, they did not amount to allegations of cruel treatment since there was shown no willful infliction of pain such as would justify an apprehension of danger to life or health. Womble v. Womble, 214 Ga. 438, 105 S.E.2d 324 (1958).

Insane person cannot commit willful acts which amount to cruel treatment within the meaning of paragraph (10) of this statute. Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954).

Divorce on grounds of cruel treatment presupposes bona fide separation. Sutton v. Sutton, 224 Ga. 140, 160 S.E.2d 385 (1968).

Separated spouses can commit cruel acts. — Fact that spouses live separated does not make it impossible for either to commit cruel acts which may be the basis for a divorce. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 190 Ga. 229, 9 S.E.2d 70 (1940); Wiley v. Wiley, 231 Ga. 798, 204 S.E.2d 170 (1974).

Separation can occur when one spouse moves into another room with intent and purpose of suspending conjugal rights. Blasingame v. Blasingame, 249 Ga. 791, 294 S.E.2d 519 (1982).

Actual physical violence is not essential ingredient of cruel treatment as used in paragraph (10) of this statute, or as construed by the Supreme Court. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 190 Ga. 229, 9 S.E.2d 70 (1940).

Mental anguish may amount to cruelty. — Mental anguish and wounded feelings, constantly aggravated by repeated insults and neglect, are as bad as actual bruises of the person, and that which produces the one is not more cruel than that which causes the other. Ross v. Ross, 169 Ga. 524, 150 S.E. 822 (1929); Duncan v. Duncan, 183 Ga. 570, 189 S.E. 18 (1936).

Commission of acts which outrage the feelings of modesty and decency, such as threatening to commit, or attempting to commit, adultery, or cursing, abusing, or using insulting and opprobrious language, when done between a husband and wife, whether by the husband to the wife, or by the wife to the husband, and in the knowledge or coming to the knowledge of both; these also, if persisted in and unatoned for, constitute cruel treatment. Ross v. Ross, 169 Ga. 524, 150 S.E. 822 (1929).

Words must be intended to wound. — In absence of intention to wound, words do not constitute cruel treatment as contemplated by the law as a ground for divorce. Ewing v. Ewing, 211 Ga. 803, 89 S.E.2d 180 (1955).

Acts intended to cause anguish. — Acts or conduct of the defendant which would not amount to cruel treatment when considered alone might be found by the jury to enter into an alleged calculated intent by the defendant of causing the petitioner great mental pain and anguish. Bell v. Bell, 213 Ga. 176, 97 S.E.2d 571 (1957).

Requirement of reasonable apprehension of injury. — There is no requirement that plaintiff's health be actually injured, but only that there be reasonable apprehension of injury. Hardy v. Hardy, 221 Ga. 176, 144 S.E.2d 172 (1965).

Minor acts of temper not cruelty. — Mere austerity of temper, petulance of manners, rudeness of language, a want of civil attention, even occasional sallies of passion, if they do not threaten bodily harm, do not amount to the cruelty against which the law can relieve. Ring v. Ring, 118 Ga. 183, 44 S.E. 861 (1903); Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954); Ewing v. Ewing, 211 Ga. 803, 89 S.E.2d 180 (1955).

Slight disagreements, and words inspired by transitory temper, were never intended by the statute as cause for setting aside a marriage contract. Brown v. Brown, 129 Ga. 246, 58 S.E. 825 (1907).

Single act of personal violence. — As a general rule, single act of personal violence is not considered cruel treatment, but two or more such acts alone may furnish ground for divorce. Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922); Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954).

One act of cruelty, not of a violent or serious character, standing alone, is not a sufficient ground for a divorce. Brown v. Brown, 217 Ga. 671, 124 S.E.2d 399 (1962); Hearn v. Hearn, 220 Ga. 577, 140 S.E.2d 861 (1965).

When single act of cruelty may justify divorce. — Single act of cruelty may be so severe and atrocious as to justify divorce; and a single act of cruel and inhuman treatment, accompanied by circumstances indicating a probability of a repetition of similar conduct, will warrant a divorce. Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922).

"Nagging" may be cruel treatment. Alford v. Alford, 189 Ga. 630, 7 S.E.2d 278 (1940).

Allegations of "fussing and nagging" are sufficient to state a cause of action for divorce based on cruel treatment. Swindle v. Swindle, 221 Ga. 760, 147 S.E.2d 307 (1966).

Continuous course of ill conduct, such as nagging, injuriously affecting or endangering health of other spouse, might constitute cruel treatment as a ground of divorce, even though one incident in the course of conduct would not; and condoned acts in such a series of misconduct might be revived by the renewal and persistence of the conduct. Womble v. Womble, 214 Ga. 438, 105 S.E.2d 324 (1958).

Acts by wife, including continuous nagging and fussing, which were alleged in the husband's petition for divorce are sufficient to state a cause of action for divorce on the ground of cruel treatment. Cramer v. Cramer, 217 Ga. 414, 122 S.E.2d 729 (1961).

Allegations of continuous fussing and nagging were sufficient to charge cruel treatment. Hirsch v. Hirsch, 217 Ga. 590, 123 S.E.2d 915 (1962).

Constant nagging and false accusations can amount to cruel treatment. Hardy v. Hardy, 221 Ga. 176, 144 S.E.2d 172 (1965).

Affectionate attentions to other persons. — Testimony of an unmarried woman as to attentions shown to her by the defendant, including a proposal of marriage, along with letters written by the defendant to the witness, containing terms of endearment and the like, is admissible to corroborate the testimony of the plaintiff as to cruel treatment. West v. West, 199 Ga. 378, 34 S.E.2d 545 (1945).

Circulating slanderous reports of infidelity. — Circulation of reports of infidelity is such cruelty as would not only justify a separation, but would sustain an action for total divorce. Myrick v. Myrick, 67 Ga. 771 (1881); Glass v. Wynn, 76 Ga. 319 (1886). This holding was said to be obiter in Ring v. Ring, 118 Ga. 183, 44 S.E. 861, 62 L.R.A. 878 (1903).

Charge of adultery. — Charging a wife who was undergoing "the change of life," in her presence, with incestuous adultery with her brother, and these charges producing such mental pain as to cause her to become ill and to keep her in bed, at times for as long as two weeks, is sufficient to authorize a verdict for total divorce on the ground of cruel treatment. Miller v. Miller, 139 Ga. 282, 77 S.E. 21 (1913).

Charge of unchastity. — It is not cruel treatment to charge a wife with unchastity if she has been guilty thereof. Fuller v. Fuller, 108 Ga. 256, 33 S.E. 865 (1899).

Kicking one's wife, wounding and bruising her eye, head, and face, is cruel treatment sufficient to justify a divorce. Ozmore v. Ozmore, 41 Ga. 46 (1870).

Refusal to cohabit not cruel treatment. — Mere proof that a wife declined to cohabit with her husband will not authorize the grant of a divorce to him on the ground of cruel treatment. Pinnebad v. Pinnebad, 134 Ga. 496, 68 S.E. 73 (1910).

Spouse's dishonesty to third person not cruelty. — Dishonesty on the part of a husband in his dealings with a third party, not connected with his domestic relations or his treatment of his wife or the grounds of cruelty alleged in her petition, should not be brought to the attention of the jury in the charge, as possibly illustrating the conduct of the parties in respect to each other, on the issue of whether or not the plaintiff cruelly treated his wife. Anglin v. Anglin, 145 Ga. 822, 90 S.E. 73 (1916).

Taking legal action against spouse. — That a wife brings action against her husband and recovers judgment against him for a debt due to her, and that after separation she sues him for temporary alimony and obtains a judgment in such action, does not constitute cruel treatment or furnish to the husband any basis for a suit for divorce. Pinnebad v. Pinnebad, 134 Ga. 496, 68 S.E. 73 (1910).

Alleging element of willfulness. — Allegations that the acts done or words spoken were done intentionally and for the purpose of injuring or wounding the petitioner were sufficient to allege the element of willfulness in the infliction of mental pain. Swindle v. Swindle, 221 Ga. 760, 147 S.E.2d 307 (1966).

Alleged cruelty of a continuous nature. — When cruelty alleged is of a continuous nature, it is not necessary to set forth dates of the cruelties complained of. Cramer v. Cramer, 217 Ga. 414, 122 S.E.2d 729 (1961).

Amending charges of cruelty. — Charges of cruelty in petition, as basis for divorce, may be amended by other charges of cruelty, and the plaintiff is not required to set forth with exactitude the dates of cruelty continuous in character. Duncan v. Duncan, 183 Ga. 570, 189 S.E. 18 (1936).

Element of willfulness in jury charge. — In charging upon cruel treatment, court should not omit reference to element of willfulness in the offense against the complaining party, nor fail to instruct the jury that it must be such as reasonably justifies the apprehension of the injuries referred to. Skellie v. Skellie, 152 Ga. 707, 111 S.E. 22 (1922).

Failure of judge to embrace element of willfulness in instruction requires grant of new trial, unless as a matter of law the court holds that the cruel treatment was willful. Alford v. Alford, 189 Ga. 630, 7 S.E.2d 278 (1940).

Charge which embodied substantially definition of cruel treatment was not erroneous merely because not stated in the exact language of the Code.

Bell v. Bell, 213 Ga. 176, 97 S.E.2d 571 (1957).

Cruelty presents question of law. — What constitutes cruel treatment within the meaning of the law is a question of law for the court. Gholston v. Gholston, 31 Ga. 625 (1860); Brown v. Brown, 129 Ga. 246, 58 S.E. 825 (1907).

Adverse verdict on one claim of cruelty not bar to second action. — Party who has once filed an action for divorce on the ground of cruel treatment, which resulted in a verdict and decree adverse to that party is not barred from thereafter filing a second petition on the same ground, but based on different acts, all of which were committed since the date of the former trial. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 190 Ga. 229, 9 S.E.2d 70 (1940).

Desertion

Willful and continued desertion. — Willful and continued desertion by either party for a term of three years (now one) will authorize total divorce. Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 159 Ga. 332, 125 S.E. 856 (1924).

Petitioner's consent to desertion is not grounds for divorce. Word v. Word, 29 Ga. 281 (1859); Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922).

Affirmative natural elements of desertion are two: the cohabitation ended, and the offending party's intent to desert. The statute creates a third affirmative element, the lapse of a definite period of time. Reagan v. Reagan, 221 Ga. 656, 146 S.E.2d 906 (1966).

There are three affirmative elements of desertion under law: the cohabitation ended, the offending party's intent to desert, and the lapse of a definite period of time. Cagle v. Cagle, 193 Ga. 34, 17 S.E.2d 75 (1941).

Desertion must be without legal justification, and without a breach of the continuity which the statute renders essential. Cagle v. Cagle, 193 Ga. 34, 17 S.E.2d 75 (1941); Reagan v. Reagan, 221 Ga. 656, 146 S.E.2d 906 (1966).

Desertion must be "willful." — Desertion must not only have been continued for three years (now one) but must be "willful." Siniard v. Siniard, 145 Ga. 541, 89 S.E. 517 (1916).

Law required voluntary separation of one married party from other, or the voluntary refusal to renew a suspended cohabitation, without justification either in the consent or the wrongful conduct of the other. Cagle v. Cagle, 193 Ga. 34, 17 S.E.2d 75 (1941); Reagan v. Reagan, 221 Ga. 656, 146 S.E.2d 906 (1966).

Separation by mutual consent does not constitute desertion. Born v. Born, 213 Ga. 830, 102 S.E.2d 170 (1958).

Voluntary separation is not desertion. — While desertion as a ground for divorce must have been "willful," a separation based merely on a voluntary agreement by both parties that they shall live apart, will not constitute the necessary element of willfulness as to a desertion by either party. Allen v. Allen, 194 Ga. 591, 22 S.E.2d 136 (1942).

Denial of conjugal rights may amount to desertion. — Within the meaning of the law, it was desertion by the wife, though she continues to reside in the matrimonial domicile, for her willfully, persistently, and without justification to deny her husband all his conjugal rights with the intention of casting him off as a husband completely and forever. The continuance of this state of affairs for three years (now one) affords cause of divorce on the grounds of desertion. Whitfield v. Whitfield, 89 Ga. 471, 15 S.E. 543 (1892); Pinnebad v. Pinnebad, 134 Ga. 496, 68 S.E. 73 (1910); Duncan v. Duncan, 184 Ga. 602, 192 S.E. 215 (1937).

Continued refusal after request for renewal of relations. — If the husband requests a resumption of the marital relation and a reconciliation in good faith, the refusal of the wife to resume cohabitation without justification or reasonable excuse manifests an intent to stay away and may constitute desertion on her part. Born v. Born, 213 Ga. 830, 102 S.E.2d 170 (1958).

One-year requirement for willful desertion. — Evidence must show willful desertion for period of one year prior to filing of divorce action. Monroe v. Monroe, 218 Ga. 353, 127 S.E.2d 899 (1962).

Evidence going to show that the desertion was not "willful," or that the petitioner was consenting, is admissible for the respondent. Word v. Word, 29 Ga. 281 (1859).

Desertion (Cont'd)

Parties as witnesses on desertion issue. — In an action for divorce by the husband against his wife alleging willful and continued desertion of the wife for a term of three years (now one), the husband is a competent witness; but he could not testify as to any facts derived by him from the confidential relation of husband and wife. Castello v. Castello, 41 Ga. 613 (1871).

Jury questions. — Under paragraph (7) of former Code 1933, § 30-102 (see O.C.G.A. § 19-5-3), even if the jury believed that appellant-husband had offered to resume marital relations and that appellee had refused to do so, a verdict for appellee would be proper because questions of good faith on the part of the husband in making the offer and whether the refusal of the wife to resume marital relations was justified or not under the circumstances and the period of time when the desertion began, are all for the determination of the jury. Reagan v. Reagan, 221 Ga. 656, 146 S.E.2d 906 (1966).

Marriage Irretrievably Broken

Constitutionality of divorce ground that marriage is irretrievably broken. — Grant of divorce on ground that marriage is irretrievably broken does not violate due process, equal protection, privileges and immunities, right to the courts, and right to trial by jury clauses of the state and federal constitutions. Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

Legislative intent in adding "no fault" ground of divorce was to manifest public policy of avoiding recriminations between married persons seeking a divorce. Anderson v. Anderson, 237 Ga. 886, 230 S.E.2d 272 (1976).

Paragraph (13) amends public policy. — Public policy of the state to hinder facility in the procurement of divorces has been amended to the extent that paragraph (13) of this statute facilitated the procurement of divorces. Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

When paragraph (13) of this section conflicts with other sections. — To the extent that paragraph (13) of this statute was in irreconcilable conflict with other statutes, it must be held to amend those statutes by implication. Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

Irretrievably broken marriage is one where either or both parties are unable or refuse to cohabit and there are no prospects for a reconciliation. McCoy v. McCoy, 236 Ga. 633, 225 S.E.2d 682 (1976).

No allocation of fault in irretrievably broken marriage. — Under irretrievably broken ground, divorce is granted to both parties without allocation of fault. Anderson v. Anderson, 237 Ga. 886, 230 S.E.2d 272 (1976).

Trial court is required to grant a divorce to both parties without fixing or placing fault on either party when a divorce is granted on the pleadings on irretrievably broken grounds. Herring v. Herring, 237 Ga. 771, 229 S.E.2d 756 (1976).

Divorce granted on irretrievably broken grounds should be granted to the parties equally. Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

When traditional fault grounds alleged in addition to irretrievable break. — Even when traditional fault allegations are put forth by affidavit, or as evidence at a hearing, on a motion for summary judgment on the irretrievably broken ground, the primary finding is merely that the marriage is one where either or both parties are unable or refuse to cohabit and there are no prospects for a reconciliation no matter what the reasons are that have caused that result. Anderson v. Anderson, 237 Ga. 886, 230 S.E.2d 272 (1976).

No proof of fault required to show marriage is "irretrievably broken." — When parties do not specifically complain of the other's conduct, but merely state that their marital differences are insoluble and request a change of status, the only question is whether there are prospects for reconciliation. Anderson v. Anderson, 237 Ga. 886, 230 S.E.2d 272 (1976).

No evidence requirement as to good faith effort. — There is no requirement that evidence show that parties made good faith effort to make successful marriage, nor that the marriage became irretrievably broken through no fault of either party. Whitmire v. Whitmire, 236 Ga. 153, 223 S.E.2d 135 (1976).

Reconciliation and cohabitation of parties terminates action for divorce. This is a “no-fault” ground, and there can be no reconciliation on condition applicable to it, the breach of which condition would revive the action for divorce. Lindsay v. Lindsay, 241 Ga. 166, 244 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

In a case in which a complaint for divorce is brought upon the ground that the marriage was irretrievably broken, subsequent reconciliation and cohabitation of the parties terminates the action for divorce. Joiner v. Joiner, 246 Ga. 77, 268 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

Allegation of an irretrievably broken marriage is demonstrably false if the parties have resumed cohabitation or have reconciled for any period. Joiner v. Joiner, 246 Ga. 77, 268 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

Reconciliation and cohabitation did not divest court of jurisdiction. — While cohabitation and reconciliation could be asserted as defenses to a pending divorce action, they did not divest a court of jurisdiction to enter a divorce decree; further, the court was authorized under O.C.G.A. § 19-5-3(13) to grant a divorce based on the evidence that the marriage was irretrievably broken. McCoy v. McCoy, 281 Ga. 604, 642 S.E.2d 18 (2007).

Whether possibility for reconciliation exists is subjective. When the issue is contested by one of the parties to the divorce action, all relevant evidence is admissible to aid in this determination. Whitmire v. Whitmire, 236 Ga. 153, 223 S.E.2d 135 (1976).

Party’s failure to embark upon reconciliation in good faith. — If one party does not embark upon reconciliation in good faith, it cannot amount to evidence of hope for the marriage. Joiner v. Joiner, 246 Ga. 77, 268 S.E.2d 661 (1980).

Mere fact that party maintains hope for reconciliation will not support finding that there are prospects for such. McCoy v. McCoy, 236 Ga. 633, 225 S.E.2d 682 (1976).

No-fault divorce may be granted by summary judgment when the movant seeks a divorce on the irretrievably broken grounds and pierces the opposing party’s pleadings, which deny that the marriage is irretrievably broken. Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

Summary judgment should be denied in a divorce proceeding when one of the parties moves for summary judgment on the issue of no-fault divorce and the other party opposes the motion by filing an affidavit expressing that party’s opinion that the marriage is not irretrievably broken and there are genuine prospects for reconciliation. Whittington v. Whittington, 247 Ga. 79, 274 S.E.2d 333 (1981).

Party estopped to complain of divorce judgment granted under paragraph (13). — When the court granted a divorce to the wife on the ground of the marriage being irretrievably broken she cannot later complain because one cannot complain of a judgment, order, or ruling that one’s own procedure or conduct procured or aided in causing. Friedman v. Friedman, 233 Ga. 254, 210 S.E.2d 754 (1974).

Other Grounds for Divorce

Insanity at time of marriage is grounds for divorce. Huguley v. Huguley, 204 Ga. 692, 51 S.E.2d 445 (1949).

Natural impotence existing at time of marriage will void the marriage. Head v. Head, 2 Ga. 191 (1847).

No requirement as to petitioner’s knowledge of impotency. — In naming impotency as a ground for divorce, merely specified “Impotency at the time of the marriage,” without any qualification as to knowledge of the petitioner thereof. Lovelace v. Lovelace, 179 Ga. 822, 177 S.E. 685 (1934).

Condonation of impotency is specific affirmative defense which must be alleged and proved by the party insisting upon it. Lovelace v. Lovelace, 179 Ga. 822, 177 S.E. 685 (1934).

“Menace.” — Any overt act of threatening character, short of actual assault, was “menace.” Bryant v. Bryant, 192 Ga. 114, 14 S.E.2d 725 (1941).

When false representation of paternity not grounds for divorce. — When woman prior to her marriage falsely and fraudulently represented to her prospective husband that he was the father of a child with which she was then pregnant, such representation would not be ground for the grant of a divorce based upon fraud, when it was shown that he married her to avoid a prosecution for seduction. Peacon v. Peacon, 197 Ga. 748, 30 S.E.2d 640 (1944).

There were three essential ingredients in grounds for divorce based on conviction for a crime of moral turpitude: the commission of the offense involving moral turpitude, the conviction for the offense, and a sentence for a term of two years or longer in the penitentiary. Holloway v. Holloway, 126 Ga. 459, 55 S.E. 191 (1906).

Right to divorce for criminal conviction is not affected by executive pardon granted after sentence has been imposed. Holloway v. Holloway, 126 Ga. 459, 55 S.E. 191 (1906).

Applicability of condonation. — Condonation has no application between date of conviction and sentence and actual incarceration. Henderson v. Henderson, 235 Ga. 236, 219 S.E.2d 160 (1975).

Voluntary manslaughter conviction. — Conviction of a married person of voluntary manslaughter followed by a sentence of imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of two years or longer gives to the other party to the marriage a right to a divorce. Holloway v. Holloway, 126 Ga. 459, 55 S.E. 191 (1906).

Not necessary to show continual intoxication. — In order to prove "habitual intoxication" on the part of the respondent, it is not essential to show that one was constantly and continuously drunk. Fuller v. Fuller, 108 Ga. 256, 33 S.E. 865 (1899).

Proof of drunkenness on one occasion insufficient. — Testimony that the husband was "drunk" or "under the influence of liquor" on one occasion prior to the separation is wholly insufficient to sustain a divorce on the ground of habitual intoxication. Stimpson v. Stimpson, 213 Ga. 235, 98 S.E.2d 559 (1957).

Provision on incurable mental illness strictly construed. — Since the settled law in this state is that, unless authorized by statute, insanity or other mental incapacity arising after marriage is not cause for divorce, any change in the settled law by statute making postnuptial insanity a ground for divorce should be strictly construed. Shelton v. Shelton, 209 Ga. 454, 74 S.E.2d 5 (1953).

Law did not create any new right to support and maintenance after a divorce granted to the husband on the grounds of incurable insanity. Morris v. Bruce, 98 Ga. App. 821, 107 S.E.2d 262 (1959).

19-5-4. Effect of collusion, consent, guilt of like conduct, or condonation.

(a) No divorce shall be granted under the following circumstances:

(1) The adultery, desertion, cruel treatment, or intoxication complained of was occasioned by the collusion of the parties, with the intention of causing a divorce;

(2) The party complaining of the adultery, desertion, cruel treatment, or intoxication of the other party was consenting thereto;

(3) Both parties are guilty of like conduct; or

(4) There has been a voluntary condonation and cohabitation subsequent to the acts complained of, with notice thereof.

(b) In all such cases, the respondent may plead in defense the conduct of the party bringing the action and the jury may, on examination of the whole case, refuse a divorce. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

- GENERAL CONSIDERATION
- LIKE CONDUCT
- CONDONATION
- JURY CHARGE

General Consideration

It is not necessary for wife to counterclaim for divorce to avail herself of this defense under the provisions of this statute. Minielly v. Minielly, 234 Ga. 434, 216 S.E.2d 271 (1975).

Reconciliation and cohabitation did not divest court of jurisdiction to grant divorce. — While cohabitation and reconciliation could be asserted as defenses to a pending divorce action, they did not divest a court of jurisdiction to enter a divorce decree; further, the court was authorized under O.C.G.A. § 19-5-3(13) to grant a divorce based on the evidence that the marriage was irretrievably broken. McCoy v. McCoy, 281 Ga. 604, 642 S.E.2d 18 (2007).

Like Conduct

“Like conduct” construed. — When the ground of divorce of the husband is cruel treatment occurring prior to the separation, and the wife’s charge in her answer is adultery, this is not such “like conduct” as is contemplated by law. Schwartz v. Schwartz, 222 Ga. 460, 150 S.E.2d 809 (1966).

Cruel treatment and desertion are not “like conduct” within the meaning of the law so as to prohibit the grant of a divorce. Blois v. Blois, 234 Ga. 475, 216 S.E.2d 281 (1975).

Cruel treatment by the wife prior to separation vis-a-vis adultery of the husband after separation and an invalid Mexican divorce are not “like conduct”. Blois v. Blois, 234 Ga. 475, 216 S.E.2d 281 (1975).

Cruel treatment of wife beating is “unlike” the cruel treatment of a wife’s abusive and insulting language to her husband. Blois v. Blois, 234 Ga. 475, 216 S.E.2d 281 (1975).

If both parties have been guilty of like misconduct, no divorce shall be granted. Cohen v. Cohen, 196 Ga. 562, 27 S.E.2d 28 (1943).

Divorce denied to both parties who participate in quarreling. — When plaintiff’s testimony showed conclusively that any fussing and quarreling was participated in by both, neither party could be granted a divorce under this testimony. Davis v. Davis, 223 Ga. 657, 157 S.E.2d 444 (1967).

Condonation

“Condonation” is forgiveness, either expressed or implied, by a husband of his wife, or by a wife of her husband, for a breach of marital duty, with an implied condition that the offense shall not be repeated. Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922); Duncan v. Duncan, 184 Ga. 602, 192 S.E. 215 (1937); Day v. Day, 210 Ga. 454, 81 S.E.2d 6 (1954);

Condonation (Cont'd)

Condonation includes conditional forgiveness of all antecedent acts of cruelty, and such acts as may have been condoned will not be revived except by fresh acts of cruelty. Poulos v. Poulos, 226 Ga. 375, 174 S.E.2d 925 (1970).

Sexual intercourse is not essential element of condonation, although it is conclusive evidence thereof. Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922); Duncan v. Duncan, 184 Ga. 602, 192 S.E. 215 (1937); Dixon v. Dixon, 211 Ga. 869, 89 S.E.2d 473 (1955); Poulos v. Poulos, 226 Ga. 375, 174 S.E.2d 925 (1970).

Mere request to resume marital relations not condonation. — Fact that the plaintiff had a friendly interview with his wife, and requested her to return home and live with him, does not amount in law to a condonation. Johns v. Johns, 29 Ga. 718 (1859).

What constitutes condonation of cruel treatment. — If, after an act of cruelty done by the husband to the wife, she lives with him for many years, and has by him numerous children, and would probably still live with him but for the interference of a child, the act is condoned by her. Buckholts v. Buckholts, 24 Ga. 238 (1858).

If a husband is guilty of cruel treatment toward his wife, or of adultery, and with full knowledge thereof she condones the offense and cohabits with him, and he is not guilty of any further misconduct, she can not thereafter, at her mere will, desert him. Davis v. Davis, 134 Ga. 804, 68 S.E. 594 (1910).

If there is no breach of condition after condonation, forgiveness stands complete and absolute. Condonation is not revocable at will. Davis v. Davis, 134 Ga. 804, 68 S.E.2d 594 (1910); Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922).

Condonation will not prevent divorce if based upon condition broken by the husband. Ozmore v. Ozmore, 41 Ga. 46 (1870).

Condonation and cohabitation after filing a suit for divorce, if conditioned upon the promise of the defendant not to again be guilty of the acts charged in the petition, will not prevent the plaintiff from proceeding with the original petition for divorce in the event of a breach of the condition and agreement on the part of the defendant. Day v. Day, 210 Ga. 454, 81 S.E.2d 6 (1954).

Resumption of cruelty vitiates condonation. — When a husband filed a suit for divorce against his wife on the ground of cruel treatment, and subsequently the marital relations were resumed on the strength of the wife's promise to desist from the acts of cruel treatment as alleged in the petition, and when on resumption of marital relations the wife did not desist from such cruel treatment and another separation took place, the act of the husband in resuming the marital relation did not amount to condonation of the wife's cruel treatment when she failed to fulfill the agreement by virtue of which the marital relations were resumed. Bruce v. Bruce, 195 Ga. 868, 25 S.E.2d 654 (1943).

Revival of right when condition of condonation broken. — If after the condonation the conduct of the husband is such as to revive the condoned acts and give to the wife a right to assert them, she is not debarred from so doing; nor is she prevented from setting up misconduct on his part after the condonation for the consideration of the jury in determining whether a divorce should be granted. Davis v. Davis, 134 Ga. 804, 68 S.E. 594, 30 L.R.A. (n.s.) 73, 20 Ann. Cas. 20 (1910); Harn v. Harn, 155 Ga. 502, 117 S.E. 383 (1923).

Question of condonation is peculiarly matter of defense in the trial of a divorce case on its merits. Lybrand v. Lybrand, 204 Ga. 312, 49 S.E.2d 515 (1948); Johnson v. Johnson, 210 Ga. 795, 82 S.E.2d 831 (1954).

Voluntary condonation and cohabitation subsequent to the acts complained of are matters of affirmative defense in the trial of the case upon its merits. Adams v. Adams, 213 Ga. 875, 102 S.E.2d 566 (1958).

Condonation may be more readily presumed against husband than wife, and condonation may be presumed from cohabitation which means dwelling together. Odom v. Odom, 39 Ga. 286 (1867), overruled on other grounds, Wise v. Wise, 156 Ga. 459, 119 S.E. 410 (1923); Phinizy v. Phinizy, 154 Ga. 199, 114 S.E. 185 (1922); Paris v. Paris, 197 Ga. 162, 28 S.E.2d 452 (1943).

Condonation is not so readily presumed against the wife, as the husband. Knowledge of the guilt of the husband, and forgiveness by the wife, are not legally to be presumed, but must be clearly and distinctly proved, in order to bar her action. Duncan v. Duncan, 184 Ga. 602, 192 S.E. 215 (1937); Livingston v. Livingston, 211 Ga. 420, 86 S.E.2d 288 (1955).

When presumption of condonation can be rebutted. — Although presumption of condonation arises if parties occupy same room and bed, such presumption can be rebutted by showing that the party seeking forgiveness has resorted to the same acts of cruel treatment which caused the initial separation. Thornton v. Thornton, 232 Ga. 666, 208 S.E.2d 557 (1974).

Presumption rebutted when party clearly denies cohabitation. — When the plaintiff wife testified that “we were not living as man and wife,” and that “there was no condonation on my part of the acts” of the husband, the general presumption of matrimonial cohabitation and condonation by the wife, arising from their occupancy of the same set of apartments, was sufficiently rebutted, so as to fully authorize a finding in her favor on the question of condonation. Duncan v. Duncan, 184 Ga. 602, 192 S.E. 215 (1937).

When presumption not overcome. — Strong though rebuttable presumption that a marital act occurs when the parties occupy the same room is not overcome by testimony of the husband that they occupied separate beds and such an act did not occur, when he fails to give the facts and circumstances under which he found himself occupying the same room with his wife in a hotel, when the wife testifies that a marital act did occur. Duncan v. Duncan, 184 Ga. 602, 192 S.E. 215 (1937).

Defense to pending divorce action only. — O.C.G.A. § 19-5-4 establishes only that voluntary condonation and cohabitation constitute a defense to a pending divorce action, not a ground for setting aside a previously entered divorce decree;

thus, it did not apply as a defense to a divorce decree and orders for custody and property division when the cohabitation occurred before, rather than after, filing of a divorce action. Southworth v. Southworth, 265 Ga. 671, 461 S.E.2d 215 (1995).

Moving party's admission to having committed adultery. — Jury may refuse a divorce in cases when movant committed adultery, but in such circumstances the jury may, on examination of the whole case, grant a divorce. Williford v. Williford, 230 Ga. 543, 198 S.E.2d 181 (1973).

Jury Charge

Proper charge of mutual cruel treatment as “like conduct.” — After the judge charged the jury that, “if both were guilty of cruel treatment then you would refuse a divorce to both parties,” this was a sufficient charge of the law that a divorce will not be granted either party when both are guilty of “like conduct”. Childs v. Childs, 223 Ga. 435, 156 S.E.2d 21 (1967).

Error to fail to charge that jury should refuse divorce. — When each party charges and proves cruel treatment by accusations alleged by the other to be false, and denial of love for the other, it is error to fail to charge, without request, that, if the jury found both parties guilty of like conduct, the jury should refuse a divorce to either of them. Moon v. Moon, 216 Ga. 627, 118 S.E.2d 473 (1961); McCartney v. McCartney, 217 Ga. 200, 121 S.E.2d 785 (1961); Schwartz v. Schwartz, 222 Ga. 460, 150 S.E.2d 809 (1966); Childs v. Childs, 223 Ga. 435, 156 S.E.2d 21 (1967); McClellan v. McClellan, 224 Ga. 355, 162 S.E.2d 425 (1968).

When there is evidence that both parties have been guilty of like conduct, it is reversible error to fail to charge, without request, that, if both parties have been guilty of like conduct then no divorce shall be granted. Brackett v. Brackett, 217 Ga. 84, 121 S.E.2d 146 (1961).

Error to overrule request for charge on definition of condonation. — When the pleadings and the evidence show repeated separations and reconciliations, after promises not to repeat the misconduct, and then a breach of such promises, and the court charged that all such conduct could be considered unless condoned, the special ground complaining of the failure to charge a definition of condonation is meritorious, and since the question of whether or not there was condonation became a material issue in the case it was error to overrule the decision. Hall v. Hall, 220 Ga. 677, 141 S.E.2d 400 (1965).

Charge to jury when equal guilt involved. — When the plaintiff's grounds for divorce are cruel treatment, and the defendant's cross-action (now counter-claim) seeks a divorce for desertion, it is reversible error to charge the jury that they may find a divorce in favor of both parties; to so find is a contradiction, contrary to the evidence and the law. Moon v. Moon, 216 Ga. 627, 118 S.E.2d 473 (1961).

While no objection was made by counsel for the wife to the instruction that a divorce could be granted to both parties when the jury could find that the parties were guilty of like conduct, this charge specifically authorized an invalid verdict, and it was a substantial error which is subject to review. Childs v. Childs, 223 Ga. 435, 156 S.E.2d 21 (1967).

Condonation presents jury question. — Whether husband has condoned acts of alleged cruelty about which he complains is a question for determination by the jury. Paris v. Paris, 197 Ga. 162, 28 S.E.2d 452 (1943).

Party estopped to challenge validity of property settlement in collusive divorce. — When the main relief sought by the plaintiff is the cancellation of certain conveyances and transfers and the recovery of real and personal property conveyed by him in pursuance of an agreement by which he obtained a divorce by collusion, he must come into a court of equity with clean hands and is estopped from attacking the validity of the decree thus self-induced. Fender v. Crosby, 209 Ga. 896, 76 S.E.2d 769 (1953).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Petition must show property. — Law provided that if division of property was involved, petition shall show property. Davis v. Davis, 216 Ga. 305, 116 S.E.2d 219 (1960).

It is not necessary to render schedule of property when alimony or support is not sought. Davis v. Davis, 216 Ga. 305, 116 S.E.2d 219 (1960).

Law required that petition for divorce be verified, but did not require that the answer be verified. Harrison v. Harrison, 228 Ga. 126, 184 S.E.2d 147 (1971).

Mandatory verification of petition.

— Requirement that all petitions be verified by the petitioner is a mandatory provision and is manifestly a rule of pleading and not of evidence. Bell v. Bell, 202 Ga. 615, 44 S.E.2d 118 (1947).

Effect of unverified complaint.

— Fact that original complaint for divorce is not verified does not render suit null and void, but is an amendable defect. Edwards v. Edwards, 227 Ga. 307, 180 S.E.2d 358 (1971).

Sworn petition which has not been legally verified. — Petition, having been sworn to by the plaintiff as required by law, was not subject to dismissal as showing on the petition's face that the petition was not legally verified. Bell v. Bell, 202 Ga. 615, 44 S.E.2d 118 (1947).

Provision requiring that the plaintiff swear to his or her petition being the only requirement of law that it be sworn to at all, it follows that, even if the plaintiff in such a divorce suit had not been legally empowered and required to verify his or her petition, the rule would simply be that no verification was necessary. Bell v. Bell, 202 Ga. 615, 44 S.E.2d 118 (1947).

Sufficiency of allegation concerning separation. — Allegation that the parties live in the same family dwelling, when taken in connection with the further allegation that they "are living separate and apart," is a sufficient allegation of living in a state of separation, and does not render the petition subject to general demurrer (now motion to dismiss). Westberry v. Westberry, 173 Ga. 42, 159 S.E. 671 (1931).

Challenge to residency assertion was challenge to court's jurisdiction.

— In a divorce case, a husband's enumerations of error raising the issue of the wife's residency under O.C.G.A. § 19-5-5(b)(2) were challenges to the trial court's jurisdiction over the subject matter; these related to a motion to set aside under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(1). Kuriatnyk v. Kuriatnyk, 286 Ga. 589, 690 S.E.2d 397 (2010).

19-5-6. Grant of divorce to respondent without necessity of counterclaim.

When a petition for divorce is filed, the respondent may recriminate in his answer and ask a divorce in his favor. If, at the trial, the court or jury believes that the respondent rather than the petitioner is entitled to a divorce, they may so find upon legal proof. (Ga. L. 1863-64, p. 45, § 1; Code 1868, § 1717; Code 1873, § 1718; Code 1882, § 1718; Civil Code 1895, § 2433; Civil Code 1910, § 2952; Code 1933, § 30-106; Ga. L. 1946, p. 90, § 5.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Respondent may recriminate and ask for a divorce. — Former Code 1933, § 30-106 did not support the conclusion that both parties may be entitled to a judgment of divorce. It clearly provides that a respondent in a divorce action may recriminate and ask for a divorce and not that both parties may be granted a divorce. Brackett v. Brackett, 217 Ga. 84, 121 S.E.2d 146 (1961).

Effect given to wife's counterclaim in divorce action. — Wife, when sued for divorce, may set up in answer any matter which should be subject of counterclaim, and by such counterclaim recriminate her husband and pray for permanent alimony. When the wife so pleads, her counterclaim is the legal equivalent of an independent suit for alimony. Cohen v. Cohen, 209 Ga. 459, 74 S.E.2d 95 (1953).

When plaintiff fails to make out case, the defendant may proceed to introduce evidence to support the plaintiff's allegations for a divorce. Owen v. Owen, 54 Ga. 526 (1875).

Counterclaim interposed by wife in husband's suit for divorce is legal equivalent of independent action and is treated, in short, as a mere ancillary suit. State rules of procedure, pleading, and practice as applicable to divorce cases do not require that an answer taking the character of a crossclaim (now counterclaim) be filed at the term to which the plaintiff's case is made returnable, or before the regular call of the appearance docket. Cohen v. Cohen, 209 Ga. 459, 74 S.E.2d 95 (1953).

Wife's right to proceed with a counterclaim for alimony is unaffected by withdrawal, or by a dismissal, for any reason of the original suit. Cohen v. Cohen, 209 Ga. 459, 74 S.E.2d 95 (1953).

Libel for divorce on ground of cruelty. — To be libel for divorce on ground of cruelty, the defendant may in answer recriminate plaintiff's adultery. Johns v. Johns, 29 Ga. 718 (1859); Rowell v. Rowell, 209 Ga. 572, 74 S.E.2d 833 (1953).

Recriminatory charge of adultery committed by plaintiff after commencement of divorce action is valid defense and upon a proper application at any time before the final decree, if such application is made immediately after the discovery of the fact, the court should permit the defendant to put in a supplemental answer for the purpose of setting up such matter as a new defense. Rowell v. Rowell, 209 Ga. 572, 74 S.E.2d 833 (1953).

Judgment set aside when trial court struck allegation of adultery. — When it appears that trial court in an action for divorce struck an amendment to the defendant's answer and counterclaim in which he recriminated the adultery of his wife, the plaintiff, which allegedly occurred after the parties separated and after the wife filed suit, good and sufficient cause for setting aside a verdict and judgment granting a total divorce and awarding permanent alimony is shown. Rowell v. Rowell, 209 Ga. 572, 74 S.E.2d 833 (1953).

19-5-7. Transfer of property after filing of petition; lis pendens notice.

After a petition for divorce has been filed, no transfer of property by either party, except a bona fide transfer in payment of preexisting debts, shall pass title so as to avoid the vesting thereof according to the final verdict of the jury in the case; provided, however, that the title to real property shall not be affected by the filing of an action for divorce unless a notice of lis pendens, as provided for by Code Section 44-14-610, is filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the real property is situated and is recorded by the clerk in a book kept by him for that purpose. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Law should be strictly construed since it is a restraint upon the alienation of property by the owner. Chatsworth Lumber Co. v. White, 214 Ga. 798, 107 S.E.2d 827 (1959).

Construction. — Restriction upon the free alienation of property by the owner is contrary to public policy, and will not be extended by construction beyond the plain intent and meaning of the law. Lamar v. Jennings, 69 Ga. 392 (1882); Russell v. Rice, 103 Ga. 310, 30 S.E. 37 (1898); Wallace v. Wallace, 189 Ga. 220, 5 S.E.2d 580 (1939).

When section is operative. — Law was operative only on conveyances made during pendency of divorce action. Chatsworth Lumber Co. v. White, 214 Ga. 798, 107 S.E.2d 827 (1959).

Law did not affect conveyance after separation, but before action for divorce was filed. Wallace v. Wallace, 189 Ga. 220, 5 S.E. 580 (1939).

Section's effect upon alienation. —

Law operated to render alienation subordinate to any disposition of scheduled property made by jury in the final verdict. Stephens v. Stephens, 168 Ga. 630, 148 S.E. 522 (1929).

Law did not apply to suits for alimony alone but applied to cases when a divorce proceeding was pending. Davis v. Leach, 228 Ga. 139, 184 S.E.2d 454 (1971).

Law did not operate in favor of third parties. Lamar v. Jennings, 69 Ga. 392 (1882).

Equitable proceeding to set aside fraudulent conveyance. — Former Code 1933, § 30-112 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-5-7) did not prevent equitable proceeding against grantee to set aside fraudulent conveyance, under former Code 1933, §§ 28-101 and 28-201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 18-2-1 and former 18-2-22), of real property by the husband with intent to defeat the wife's recovery of alimony since the grantee had knowledge or reason to suspect such intent since the grantee in such case was not an innocent purchaser. Wood v. McGahee, 211 Ga. 913, 89 S.E.2d 634 (1955).

Law contemplates rendition of final verdict by jury in the action for divorce, and did not contemplate that the restraint against alienation shall continue after rendition of such verdict was no longer possible. Chatsworth Lumber Co. v. White, 214 Ga. 798, 107 S.E.2d 827 (1959); Butler v. Hicks, 229 Ga. 72, 189 S.E.2d 416 (1972).

When property sold was included in the schedule, sale did not vest title in purchaser so as to prevent the vesting thereof in the wife, according to the verdict of the jury. The purchaser bought subject to the verdict, and the purchaser's want of actual notice does not protect the purchaser. Venable v. Craig, 44 Ga. 437 (1871).

When parties fail to schedule or incompletely schedule property, final decree leaves parties where it finds them, and the separate title of each to party to their property is unaffected by the decree. The same rule is applied to indebtednesses existing between them. Sparks v. Sparks, 127 Ga. App. 657, 194 S.E.2d 621 (1972).

Judgment obtained for pre-existing debt. — Valid judgment obtained against the husband during the pendency of a suit for a divorce, founded on a debt contracted before the separation of the husband and wife, is a good lien upon property set apart to the wife on the final hearing. Carithers v. Venable, 52 Ga. 389 (1874).

Property disposed before institution of divorce action unaffected. — Law construed in connection with its cognate sections did not restrict a transfer by a husband of his property, made bona fide and for value, prior to the institution of a divorce action, but was operative only on conveyances by the husband made during the pendency of a libel for divorce. Singleton v. Close, 130 Ga. 716, 61 S.E. 722 (1908).

Property not disposed of by verdict ultimately unaffected. — Restraint on alienation imposed by law was operative only insofar as it rendered the alienation subordinate to any disposition of the specific property which might be made by the jury in the final verdict; and this restraint did not affect property not disposed of by the final verdict granting the divorce. Almand & George v. Seamans, 89 Ga. 309, 15 S.E. 320 (1892).

Death of party releases restraint on alienation of property. — When action for divorce filed by wife against her husband abated upon her death, there could be no verdict in the divorce suit as contemplated by law and there was no longer any restraint upon the alienation of the husband's property. Chatsworth Lumber Co. v. White, 214 Ga. 798, 107 S.E.2d 827 (1959).

Since the death of one of the parties makes a final verdict impossible, the restraint on the husband's transfer of title is removed. Butler v. Hicks, 229 Ga. 72, 189 S.E.2d 416 (1972).

Possession of realty by wife and children as inquiry notice. — Actual possession of the realty by the former wife and children was sufficient to put all who might purchase from the husband on notice and on inquiry as to what interest, claim, or rights they might have therein, and this notice by reason of possession was effective as to the property possessed whether or not a lis pendens notice was filed under the requirements of law. Waddell v. City of Atlanta, 121 Ga. App. 94, 172 S.E.2d 862, cert. dismissed, 226 Ga. 631, 176 S.E.2d 801 (1970).

Effect of pendency of action on mortgage or conveyance. — Mere pendency of action for alimony will not disable defendant therein from making bona fide mortgage or conveyance of unencumbered property over which the court has not taken nor been asked to take any direct jurisdiction in order to administer or secure it for application to the claim for alimony, and the mortgagee of such property has priority over a judgment for alimony subsequently rendered. Coulter v. Lumpkin, 94 Ga. 225, 21 S.E. 461 (1894).

Equity will, by injunction, prevent husband from alienating his property to defeat alimony, it being well established, if others cooperate with him to perpetrate such wrong, the same remedy is proper as against them. Gray Bros. v. Gray, 65 Ga. 193 (1880).

When injunction should not issue. — Injunction should not issue when husband is neither attempting nor threatening to sell or encumber property, and no other grounds for the issuance of the writ is shown. Melvin v. Melvin, 129 Ga. 42, 58 S.E. 474 (1907); Ramsey v. Ramsey, 175 Ga. 685, 165 S.E. 624 (1932).

Not error to refuse charge of section when action for alimony only. — In a suit by a wife against her husband for alimony when no suit for divorce was pending, and no schedule of the husband's property was filed, it is not error to refuse to give former Civil Code 1910, § 2955 in charge. Chandler v. Chandler, 161 Ga. 350, 130 S.E. 685 (1925).

Bona fides question for jury. — It was a question of fact for the jury to decide whether a deed had been executed bona fides in payment of a pre-existing debt. Mathews v. Mathews, 162 Ga. 233, 133 S.E. 254 (1926).

19-5-8. Pleading and practice.

The same rules of pleading and practice applicable to ordinary civil actions shall apply to actions for divorce, alimony, and custody of minor children, except as otherwise specifically provided in this chapter. No verdict or judgment by default shall be taken in any such case but the allegations of the pleadings shall be established to the satisfaction of the court by the verified pleadings, by affidavit, by evidentiary hearing, or otherwise, as provided in Code Section 19-5-10. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Legislative intent. — Laws peculiar to divorce suits clearly indicate an intention upon the part of the lawmaking power to impede the facility for obtaining divorces; and such purpose can only be attributed to a zealous regard for the well-being of society. Haygood v. Haygood, 190 Ga. 445, 9 S.E.2d 834 (1940).

Evidence required to establish essential allegations in petition for divorce. — Essential allegations in petition for divorce, including jurisdiction, must be established by evidence and the burden of proving such allegations rests upon the plaintiff. Moody v. Moody, 194 Ga. 843, 22 S.E.2d 837 (1942); Harmon v. Harmon, 209 Ga. 474, 74 S.E.2d 75 (1953).

Divorce granted by court lacking jurisdiction. — Divorce granted by court having no subject matter or personal jurisdiction is nullity. Harmon v. Harmon, 209 Ga. 474, 74 S.E.2d 75 (1953).

In action for divorce it is necessary to allege correct venue, and to make affirmative proof thereof. Johnson v. Johnson, 188 Ga. 800, 4 S.E.2d 807 (1939).

Legal status of plaintiff's case, concerning plaintiff's right to verdict, is the same whether or not an answer is filed by the defendant or not. Lovelace v. Lovelace, 179 Ga. 822, 177 S.E. 685 (1934).

Construction with other law. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 is authority for the grant of default judgments; however, O.C.G.A. § 19-5-8 specifically exempts from the general ambit of § 9-11-55 issues with regard to the equitable division of marital property. Brown v. Brown, 271 Ga. 887, 525 S.E.2d 359 (2000).

Default judgment cannot be taken in divorce or alimony actions. Thus, even though notice of the hearing on the final decree is waived by failure to file responsive pleadings, the allegations of the petition must still be established by evidence. Youmans v. Youmans, 247 Ga. 529, 276 S.E.2d 837 (1981).

Although a default judgment was not permissible in a divorce case, O.C.G.A.

§ 19-5-8, a trial court did not err in entering a judgment of divorce on the pleadings pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-5-10(a) after a wife failed to file responsive pleadings, thereby waiving notice of the hearing under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5. The trial court properly relied on the husband's verified complaint and domestic relations affidavit in dividing the parties' property. Ellis v. Ellis, 286 Ga. 625, 690 S.E.2d 155 (2010).

No default judgment. — No provision has been made in this state by statute or otherwise for a judgment declaring a divorce suit to be in default as to pleadings. Jolley v. Jolley, 216 Ga. 51, 114 S.E.2d 534 (1960); Johnston v. Still, 225 Ga. 222, 167 S.E.2d 646 (1969).

Answer is not essential in domestic relations case because a default judgment may not be entered. Cagle v. Davis, 236 Ga. App. 657, 513 S.E.2d 16 (1999).

Child custody order in divorce case not a final judgment. — Because neither the original court-ordered parenting plan nor the two subsequent orders amending the plan constituted a final judgment, and the determination of child custody became final only when the final judgment and decree in the divorce case was entered, the wife's motion for new trial, although the motion obviously referenced the bench trial on the child custody issues, was timely filed within 30 days of the date of the final judgment in the divorce case. Hoover v. Hoover, 295 Ga. 132, 757 S.E.2d 838 (2014).

Default judgment and child support action. — Default judgment cannot be entered in an original action for child support. Likewise, a default judgment cannot be entered in a subsequent action for modification of a previous award of child support. Department of Human Resources v. Hedgepath, 204 Ga. App. 755, 420 S.E.2d 638 (1992).

Default judgment cannot be taken in child custody actions. — Judgment cannot be taken by default in actions involving the custody of minor children.

Wright v. Sanford, 243 Ga. 252, 253 S.E.2d 560 (1979).

Default judgment cannot be taken in habeas corpus custody cases. Wright v. Sanford, 243 Ga. 252, 253 S.E.2d 560 (1979).

Default provisions of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 24 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55) have no application to divorce cases. Simpson v. Simpson, 240 Ga. 543, 242 S.E.2d 45 (1978).

Spouse's right to defend without filing answer cannot be used to deny existence of "issuable defense" and thereby defeat the right to jury trial provided by former Code 1933, § 30-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-5-1). Trulove v. Trulove, 233 Ga. 896, 213 S.E.2d 868 (1975).

Requirement that evidence make prima facie case. — It is court's duty not to permit verdict for divorce, unless evidence makes prima facie case showing that the defendant in the divorce action was a resident of the county at the time the suit was filed, and it was the duty of the jury to refuse a divorce unless this fact is proved by a preponderance of the testimony. McConnell v. McConnell, 135 Ga. 828, 70 S.E. 647 (1911); Lovelace v. Lovelace, 179 Ga. 822, 177 S.E. 685 (1934).

Preponderance of evidence sufficient to establish terms of lost antenuptial agreement. — In a divorce case, applying the preponderance of the evidence standard, and deferring to the trial court's finding that both a husband and a wife believed their opposing positions regarding the contents of a lost antenuptial agreement, the husband failed to prove the terms of the lost agreement, and the agreement could not be enforced. Coxwell v. Coxwell, 296 Ga. 311, 765 S.E.2d 320 (2014).

Effect of mere failure to answer or contest particular evidence. — Since a divorce cannot be granted by default, a mere failure to answer the complaint or a failure to contest some particular evidence would not be an admission that a divorce should be granted. Benefield v. Benefield, 224 Ga. 208, 160 S.E.2d 895 (1968).

Third parties with claims against marital property properly joined in divorce action. — Trial court erred in entering a default judgment against the appellant because third parties are properly joined in a divorce action so as to facilitate resolution of the spouses' marital claims, and a claim against a non-spouse that involves marital property has always been considered an integral part of the divorce action. Brown v. Brown, 271 Ga. 887, 525 S.E.2d 359 (2000).

Attorney is entitled to the opening and concluding argument before the jury when the verdict for divorce and alimony is not demanded by the evidence and the defendant husband has introduced no evidence. Hogsed v. Hogsed, 230 Ga. 232, 196 S.E.2d 428 (1973).

Motion to set aside divorce decree. — When a judgment and decree sought to be set aside were rendered in one term, and the motion to set aside came at a subsequent term, was not based on any defect appearing on the face of the record or pleadings, and was not accompanied by any brief of the evidence adduced upon the trial which resulted in the judgment and decree, the trial judge did not err in dismissing the motion to set aside. Prewett v. Prewett, 215 Ga. 425, 110 S.E.2d 638 (1959).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Law required introduction of evidence sufficient to sustain verdict. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 85.

Divorce case was never in default, and since not in default, the case cannot be tried before the trial term, without consent of the parties. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 85.

Legal status of plaintiff's case, concerning plaintiff's right to verdict, is same whether or not answer is filed by the defendant. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 85.

Defendant should not be deprived of right to resist grant of total divorce whether defensive pleadings be filed or not. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 85.

19-5-9. Incompetency to serve as juror.

A juror who has conscientious scruples as to the granting of divorces shall be incompetent to serve in divorce cases. At the request of either party, the court may question the panel concerning such scruples. (Laws 1840, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 225; Code 1863, § 1681; Code 1868, § 1724; Code 1873, § 1725; Code 1882, § 1725; Civil Code 1895, § 2443; Civil Code 1910, § 2962; Code 1933, § 30-114.)

Cross references. — Challenging of jurors in civil cases generally, § 15-12-134.

19-5-10. Duty of judge in undefended divorce cases; appointment of attorney; evidentiary hearings; evidentiary attacks on prior judgments.

(a) In divorce cases which are not defended by the responding party, the judge shall determine that the asserted grounds for divorce are legal and sustained by proof or shall appoint an attorney of the court to discharge that duty for him. An evidentiary hearing for the determination of the existence of the grounds for divorce and for the determination of issues of alimony, child support, and child custody and other issues is authorized but not required. If no evidentiary hearing is held, the determination of such matters may be made upon the verified pleadings of either party, one or more affidavits, or such other basis or procedure as the court may deem proper in its discretion.

(b) The provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section shall apply to proceedings pending on July 1, 1987, as well as to proceedings filed on or after that date.

(c) Any motion to set aside or other proceeding to attack a judgment which attacks a judgment entered in a divorce case prior to July 1, 1987, and which is based upon an alleged failure to properly establish evidence supporting the judgment must be commenced prior to July 1, 1988, or thereafter be totally barred. The bar established by this subsection is in addition to and not in lieu of any other statute or rule of law which would operate as a bar to such a motion or other proceeding; and this subsection shall not operate to revive any otherwise barred right to prosecute any such motion or other proceeding. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1687; Code 1868, § 1730; Code 1873, § 1735; Code 1882, § 1735; Civil Code 1895, § 2455; Civil Code 1910, § 2974; Code 1933, § 30-129; Ga. L. 1987, p. 565, § 2; Ga. L. 1990, p. 1315, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Legislative intent. — Laws peculiar to divorce suits clearly indicate an intention upon the part of the lawmaking power to impede the facility for obtaining divorces; and such purpose can only be attributed to a zealous regard for the well-being of society. Haygood v. Haygood, 190 Ga. 445, 9 S.E.2d 834 (1940).

Duty imposed by law was clearly placed on trial judge, and not the solicitor general (now district attorney), although the judge may appoint the solicitor general or some other attorney to discharge that duty for the judge. Boykin v. Martocello, 194 Ga. 867, 22 S.E.2d 790 (1942).

Judge must hear evidence and determine legality of grounds alleged.

— While there was no judgment by default in a divorce case, law meant no more than that in any divorce case when no defensive pleadings were filed it was incumbent upon the trial court to hear evidence in support of the plaintiff's grounds of divorce and make an affirmative finding therefrom that the grounds are legal and were sustained by proof. Harris v. Harris, 228 Ga. 562, 187 S.E.2d 139 (1972).

Duties of attorney appointed by judge. — Since the solicitor general (now district attorney) was appointed to see that the grounds of a divorce were legal, and sustained by proof, the solicitor general might introduce evidence, and enter fully into the defense of the case. Creamer v. Creamer, 36 Ga. 618 (1867); Cohen v. Cohen, 209 Ga. 459, 74 S.E.2d 95 (1953).

No authority to grant relief beyond pleadings. — Although O.C.G.A. § 19-5-10 allows a court presiding over an undefended divorce case to conduct a hearing and make a determination on child support, it does not authorize a court to grant relief beyond that requested in the pleadings. Hackbart v. Hackbart, 272 Ga. 26, 526 S.E.2d 840 (2000).

Verified complaint and affidavit supported judgment of divorce and division of property. — Although a default judgment was not permissible in a divorce case, O.C.G.A. § 19-5-8, a trial court did not err in entering a judgment of divorce on the pleadings pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-5-10(a) after a wife failed to file responsive pleadings, thereby waiving notice of the hearing under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5. The trial court properly relied on the husband's verified complaint and domestic relations affidavit in dividing the parties' property. Ellis v. Ellis, 286 Ga. 625, 690 S.E.2d 155 (2010).

Award of child support. — Since the husband was a Georgia resident and was personally served, the trial court erred to the extent that the court based the refusal to award child support upon the fact that his whereabouts were unknown; because he was served in Georgia and his current location was irrelevant to the jurisdiction of the trial court to determine his obligation for the support of his child. Russ v. Russ, 272 Ga. 438, 530 S.E.2d 469 (2000).

19-5-11. Use of confession as evidence; corroboration.

The confessions of a party to acts of adultery or cruel treatment shall be received with great caution; if unsupported by corroborating circumstances and if made with a view to be evidence in the case, such confessions shall not be deemed sufficient to grant a divorce. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1674; Code 1868, § 1715; Code 1873, § 1716; Code 1882, § 1716; Civil Code 1895, § 2430; Civil Code 1910, § 2949; Code 1933, § 30-110.)

Cross references. — Criminal penalty for adultery, § 16-6-19.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Confessions of parties against themselves are admissible when there is no suspicion of collusion. Johns v. Johns, 29 Ga. 718 (1859).

Uncorroborated confessions. — Confession of the respondent as to acts of adultery since the respondent's marriage, uncorroborated by other circumstances, will not authorize the granting of a divorce. Head v. Head, 2 Ga. 191 (1847); Woolfolk v. Woolfolk, 53 Ga. 661 (1875).

Total divorce will not be granted on evidence consisting exclusively in confessions of the defendant. Buckholts v. Buckholts, 24 Ga. 238 (1858).

Incriminating admission made by spouse in third person's presence. — In a suit for divorce on the ground of adultery, an incriminating admission made by one spouse to the other in the known presence of a third person is not confidential or privileged, and the third person in whose presence the admission was made may testify to such admission on the trial of a divorce case between the parties. Cocroft v. Cocroft, 158 Ga. 714, 124 S.E. 346 (1924).

19-5-12. Form of judgment and decree.

(a) A final judgment of divorce shall be prepared so as to conform to the pleadings and the evidence and may restore a maiden or prior name, if requested. It shall be prepared in form substantially as follows:

FINAL JUDGMENT AND DECREE

Upon consideration of this case, upon evidence submitted as provided by law, it is the judgment of the court that a total divorce be granted, that is to say, a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, between the parties to the above stated case upon legal principles.

It is considered, ordered, and decreed by the court that the marriage contract heretofore entered into between the parties to this case, from and after this date, be and is set aside and dissolved as fully and effectually as if no such contract had ever been made or entered into.

Petitioner and Respondent in the future shall be held and considered as separate and distinct persons altogether unconnected by any nuptial union or civil contract whatsoever and both shall have the right to remarry.

Decree and order entered this _____ day of _____,
_____.

Judge, Superior Court

(b) Where applicable, any one or more of the following clauses shall be included in the form of the judgment:

The court restores to (Petitioner/Respondent) his/her prior or maiden name, to wit: _____.

The court awards custody of the children of the parties as follows:

_____.

The court fixes alimony as follows: _____.

(c) In any case which involves the determination of child support, the form of the judgment shall also include provisions indicating both parents' income, the number of children for which support is being provided, the presumptive amount of child support award calculation, and, if the presumptive amount of child support is rebutted, the award amount and the basis for the rebuttal award. The final judgment shall have attached to it the child support worksheet containing the calculation of the final award of child support and Schedule E pertaining to deviations. The final judgment shall specify a sum certain amount of child support to be paid.

(d) Where applicable, the court shall also include in the order the provisions of Code Section 19-6-30 concerning continuing garnishment for support and language in compliance with Code Section 19-6-32 concerning income deduction orders. (Laws 1802, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 224; Code 1863, § 3484; Code 1868, § 3507; Code 1873, § 3565; Code 1882, § 3565; Civil Code 1895, § 2438; Civil Code 1910, § 2957; Code 1933, § 30-116; Ga. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1995, p. 603, § 4, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that it is the intention of Sections 1 and 2 of that Act to encourage judges in divorce cases to require all couples involved in contested divorces to go to mediation to attempt a mutually agreeable settlement.

Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia's children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia's children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children's parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10(b)/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007.”

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Decree fixing status of parties treated as judgment quasi in rem. So far as the adjudication fixes the status of the parties, the judgment concludes both parties and strangers; but, beyond the adjudication of the status, the decree does not conclude strangers. McDonald v. McDonald, 232 Ga. 190, 205 S.E.2d 850 (1974).

Verdict construed as for plaintiff when form fails to specify. — When both parties to a divorce suit introduced evidence in support of their respective prayers for divorce, and the jury returned a verdict in the form prescribed by law, without stating whether the verdict was for the plaintiff or the defendant, the verdict would be construed to be for the plaintiff. Gardner v. Gardner, 206 Ga. 669, 58 S.E.2d 416 (1950); Fried v. Fried, 208 Ga. 861, 69 S.E.2d 862 (1952); Newman v. Newman, 223 Ga. 278, 154 S.E.2d 581 (1967).

Verdict for plaintiff is not concurrent with one for defendant and decree based upon nonconcurrent verdicts is void, and should be set aside on proper motion. Hyde v. Hyde, 200 Ga. 635, 38 S.E.2d 287 (1946).

Judgment not set aside when language used substantially conforms to section. — Verdict and judgment which was not couched in the exact language contained in the statute but the language used was substantially the same, the verdict was not subject to being set aside. De Gouras v. De Gouras, 205 Ga. 362, 53 S.E.2d 759 (1949).

Incorporation of custody judgment in divorce decree. — When custody is decided by juvenile court, it is unnecessary to incorporate custody judgment in divorce decree. Saade v. Saade, 238 Ga. 620, 234 S.E.2d 530 (1977).

Decree should accurately reflect a settlement reached by the parties; therefore, the trial court cannot be allowed to make substantive additions in voluntary agreements made before the court. Robinson v. Robinson, 261 Ga. 330, 404 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Substantially conforming to agreement. — Although a spouse alleged on appeal that a motion to set aside that portion of the divorce decree which dealt with the issue of child support, which incorporated the parties’ settlement agreement, was properly granted because the decree failed to set forth a specific baseline dollar amount for child support, as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-5-12, the decree contained stated dollar amounts which could be considered baseline payments; hence, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 as applicable at the time, the trial court properly found that the spouse was liable for paying child support for two children in the range of 23 to 28 percent of the spouse’s gross income. Scott v. Scott, 282 Ga. 36, 644 S.E.2d 842 (2007).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Settlement of property rights can be made in divorce action. Hendrix v. Hendrix, 224 Ga. 662, 163 S.E.2d 917 (1968); Stokes v. Stokes, 246 Ga. 765, 273 S.E.2d 169 (1980).

Court has ancillary jurisdiction to determine equitable interest of either spouse in real or personal property owned, either in whole or in part, by the other spouse. Stokes v. Stokes, 246 Ga. 765, 273 S.E.2d 169 (1980).

When the husband is a nonresident, served by publication, the court, having jurisdiction of the res of the marriage relation, may render a valid decree of divorce; and under the court's additional powers given by the statutes, having incidental equity jurisdiction over the res of the property within its territory, it may render a valid judgment or decree in rem with respect to such property when necessary to enforce the wife's claim to permanent alimony. Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga. 461, 192 S.E. 191 (1937).

Court or jury has authority to award property of one spouse to the other spouse based solely on an equitable division of property. Bedford v. Bedford, 246 Ga. 780, 273 S.E.2d 167 (1980).

Trier hearing an alimony case has the authority to award to one spouse real property titled in the name of the other spouse since the basis of such award is neither alimony, partitioning, trust, nor fraud, but is equitable division of property. Stokes v. Stokes, 246 Ga. 765, 273 S.E.2d 169 (1980).

Improper in personam judgment award. — When wife's failure to have received $25,000 was not the result of the husband's willful disobedience, but of the fiduciary's apparent misappropriation of the fund, the trial court erred in subsequently ordering that the husband was required to pay this sum, as this had the erroneous effect of amending the judgment to make it an in personam judgment against the husband, in the nature of an award of lump sum alimony, which was totally inconsistent with the jury's in rem award to wife of the $25,000, as a component of the equitable property division. Wagan v. Wagan, 263 Ga. 376, 434 S.E.2d 475 (1993).

Because a jury expressly declined to make an equitable division of property between the parties, and the husband did not pray for alimony, the parties' ownership interests in any marital property not addressed by the jury in its specific award of alimony to the wife remained as they were before the decree was entered. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 263 Ga. 182, 430 S.E.2d 350 (1993).

Medical license is not property. — Husband's medical school education and license may not be considered "marital property," subject to equitable division. The value of these assets is too speculative to calculate, being simply the possibility of enhanced earnings they provide. That potential may never be realized for any number of reasons. Lowery v. Lowery, 262 Ga. 20, 413 S.E.2d 731 (1992).

Value of stock in closely-held corporation. — In dividing the marital property of the parties to a divorce action, the court was not bound by the value set forth in a buy-sell provision of a stockholder agreement in placing a value on the stock of a closely-held corporation for purposes of marital division, as the buy-sell price did not reflect the true market value. Barton v. Barton, 281 Ga. 565, 639 S.E.2d 481 (2007).

Decree should carry verdict into effect, and not destroy the verdict. Gilbert v. Gilbert, 151 Ga. 520, 107 S.E. 490 (1921); Wise v. Wise, 156 Ga. 459, 119 S.E. 410 (1923).

Changes to agreement. — Final version of the settlement agreement adopted by the trial court over the objections of the defendant included several provisions either not included in the original or different than those initially agreed upon; those changes and additions to the parties agreement rendered the trial court's adoption of the subsequently drafted final version error. DeGarmo v. DeGarmo, 269 Ga. 480, 499 S.E.2d 317 (1998).

Alteration of divorce decree in contempt proceeding. — Trial court erred in finding that a husband was not in contempt of a divorce decree because of impossibility, illegality, and a reasonable desire for clarification and in substantially altering the divorce decree as the husband forfeited the husband's automatically-granted appeal of the decree by the husband's failure to pay costs; the husband never moved to set aside the decree and the contempt proceeding was not the vehicle to alter the divorce decree. Smith v. Smith, 281 Ga. 204, 636 S.E.2d 519 (2006).

Trial court erred in holding a husband in contempt for refusing to sign an agreed domestic relations order because the trial court erroneously modified a divorce decree; in supplying the missing percentage allocation of a husband's military retirement benefits, the trial court did more than construe or clarify imprecise language in the agreement because the trial court eschewed the plain language of the agreement allocating to the wife only such amounts as the Navy would “require” and substituted for that provision a fifty percent allocation. Morgan v. Morgan, 288 Ga. 417, 704 S.E.2d 764 (2011).

Spousal responsibility for paying note. — Divorce decree settling spousal responsibility for paying note is not binding upon noteholder. McDonald v. McDonald, 232 Ga. 190, 205 S.E.2d 850 (1974).

Trover and conversion relating to property awarded in divorce decree. — O.C.G.A. § 19-5-13 does not divest the state courts of jurisdiction over trover or conversion actions in which the alleged trover or conversion results from the defendant’s retention of property awarded to the plaintiff in a final divorce decree. Dunlap v. Pope, 177 Ga. App. 539, 339 S.E.2d 662 (1986).

If state court retains jurisdiction over property, federal court cannot appoint receiver. — Since a court hearing a suit for divorce and division of property asserts quasi in rem jurisdiction over the marital property, where the court’s order providing for the sale of the property and division of the proceeds had not yet been complied with, that court still had and continued to exercise quasi in rem jurisdiction over the property, and the federal district court therefore had no power to appoint a receiver to effectuate the sale of the property as required by the divorce decree. Cavalino v. Cavalino, 601 F. Supp. 74 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Equitable division when spouse conveyed property to parent prior to divorce action. — Property which a spouse conveyed by deed to the spouse’s parent before the other spouse filed for a divorce was not subject to equitable division in the divorce action brought by the other spouse because the other spouse chose to abandon the avenue for recovery that the other spouse initiated to show that the property was still subject to equitable division. Armour v. Holcombe, 288 Ga. 50, 701 S.E.2d 169 (2010).

Generic final decree upheld. — Given all of the relevant facts and circumstances regarding the parties’ marriage, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in finding that the proper disposition was to enter a generic final judgment severing the marital relationship; hence, the trial court properly chose to allow the parties’ ownership interests in any marital property to remain as they were before the decree was entered. Stanley v. Stanley, 281 Ga. 672, 642 S.E.2d 94 (2007).

Valuation of property not required. — Considering the lack of any evidence of the value of the maintenance work performed by the husband, the testimony of the wife that he was paid for this work, the fact that the husband used a portion of the property rent-free as a commercial recording studio, and the fact that the property paid for the mortgage through the property’s own rents, the trial court had evidentiary support for the court’s finding that any increased value in the property attributable to the husband’s contributions and the expenditure of marital funds was nominal, and therefore a calculation of the current market value of the property was not needed. As there was ample evidence supporting the court’s conclusion, the trial court did not abuse the court’s broad discretion to divide marital property equitably. Pina v. Pina, 290 Ga. 878, 725 S.E.2d 301 (2012).

Equitable division of marital property upheld. — Trial court did not err in denying a husband’s motion for new trial as the wife presented sufficient evidence from which an equitable division of the value of two properties at issue could have been determined at the time the property’s value began to include an element of marital property. Maddox v. Maddox, 278 Ga. 606, 604 S.E.2d 784 (2004).

Former husband failed to carry the burden of proving error in the trial court’s division of property in a divorce action; although each spouse is entitled to an allocation of the marital property based upon his or her respective equitable interest therein, an award is not erroneous simply because one party receives a seemingly greater share of the marital property. Harmon v. Harmon, 280 Ga. 118, 622 S.E.2d 336 (2005).

In a divorce proceeding, a spouse’s claim on appeal that the evidence at trial was strongly against the jury’s verdict failed because the evidence was sufficient to authorize the verdict; the jury was presented with evidence of the parties' assets and liabilities and of their disparate earning power. Moxley v. Moxley, 281 Ga. 326, 638 S.E.2d 284 (2006).

On appeal from an order equitably distributing the parties' marital property, inasmuch as the issues on appeal depended upon the factual determinations made by the trial court as fact-finder, and neither party asked the trial court to make factual findings, the Supreme Court of Georgia was unable to conclude that the trial court's equitable distribution of marital property was improper as a matter of law or as a matter of fact. Crowder v. Crowder, 281 Ga. 656, 642 S.E.2d 97 (2007).

Because conflicting evidence was presented concerning the values of the parties' assets as well as the premarital and marital contributions of each spouse, the trial court, sitting as the trier of fact, was required to determine whether and to what extent a particular asset was marital or non-marital, exercise the court's discretion, and then divide the marital property equitably; hence, inasmuch as the issues on appeal depended upon the factual determinations made by the trial court as fact finder, and neither party asked the trial court to make factual findings, the equitable distribution of marital property was not improper as a matter of law or fact. Mathis v. Mathis, 281 Ga. 865, 642 S.E.2d 832 (2007).

Pension benefits. — Trial court did not abuse court's discretion in failing to classify the employer contributions to the parties' pension accounts as marital property, and then equitably divide the parties' entire pension benefits, because inasmuch as the issues on appeal depended upon the factual determinations made by the trial court, and neither party requested that the court make factual findings, the Supreme Court of Georgia had no choice but to uphold the trial court's decision. Further, although the husband's pension was marital property, the trial court was at least authorized to find, and might have indeed found, that in light of the wife's own vested retirement benefits, the absence of certain details therein, the wife's earnings potential, and other factors, an equitable distribution could best be achieved by actually dividing only the parties' contributions as employees to their pensions. Taylor v. Taylor, 283 Ga. 63, 656 S.E.2d 828 (2008).

On appeal from an order dividing the parties' marital property, no error resulted from the trial court's order allowing one spouse to retain that spouse's separate property, as the other spouse executed a quitclaim deed to the property, and the record showed that the other spouse contributed significantly to the amount of debt secured by the property, ultimately diminishing the property's worth; moreover, given the overall distribution of assets between the parties and the detailed findings regarding the assets, no abuse resulted from allowing the one spouse to retain a retirement account. Wood v. Wood, 283 Ga. 8, 655 S.E.2d 611 (2008).

Award of certain personal property to a husband in the parties' divorce action was not an abuse of discretion because the wife failed to show that the trial court treated the wife inequitably in the court's decision regarding what constituted a fair division of the marital property between the parties; an equitable division did not necessarily require an equal division. Rumley-Miawama v. Miawama, 284 Ga. 811, 671 S.E.2d 827 (2009).

In a divorce action, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declining to apply the doctrine of judicial estoppel to defeat the wife's claim to any share of her retirement accounts because the husband failed to show that the wife's retirement accounts were not excludable or exempt from the bankruptcy estate under 11 U.S.C. § 522(d)(12). Klardie v. Klardie, 287 Ga. 499, 697 S.E.2d 207 (2010).

At least some evidence supported the jury's determination that the husband's Individual Retirement Account (IRA) was the husband's separate property because as the final arbiter of questions of fact and witness credibility, the jury was free to reject portions of the husband's testimony and conclude from the remaining evidence that the particular IRA in the husband's name could in fact have remained separate property. Curran v. Scharpf, 290 Ga. 780, 726 S.E.2d 407 (2012).

Final decree upheld. — With respect to a final divorce decree that merely included a provision that one spouse would retain title to eight parcels of real property that had been held exclusively in that spouse's name, because no transcript of the evidence admitted at trial was presented, the court had to presume that the evidence supported the trial court's award of none of the parcels to the other spouse. Dasher v. Dasher, 283 Ga. 436, 658 S.E.2d 571 (2008).

19-5-14. New trials.

New trials may be granted in actions for divorce as in other cases. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1679; Code 1868, § 1722; Code 1873, § 1723; Code 1882, § 1723; Civil Code 1895, § 2441; Civil Code 1910, § 2960; Code 1933, § 30-130.)

It is not cause for grant of new trial that verdict found generally in favor of plaintiff for a total divorce, without in express terms referring to the status of the defendant. Miller v. Miller, 139 Ga. 282, 77 S.E. 21 (1913).

Attorney with notice of trial but failing to notify client. — Former husband was not entitled to a new trial in a divorce action because the husband's attorney had actual notice of the trial date but failed to notify the husband; thus, a meritorious reason did not exist for granting a new trial. Arkwright v. Arkwright, 284 Ga. 545, 668 S.E.2d 709 (2008).

Trial court and appellate court can grant partial new trial on an issue or issues in a case that are severable from other issues in the case, and therefore it is likewise proper for a litigant to move for a partial new trial in a divorce and alimony case when the issues are severable. *Swindell v. 19-5-15. Effect of divorce.

A total divorce annuls a marriage from the time of the rendition of the decree, unless the divorce is granted for a cause rendering the marriage void originally, in which case the divorce serves to annul the marriage from its inception. However, the issue of the marriage shall not be rendered born out of wedlock by a divorce, except in cases of pregnancy of the wife by a man other than the husband at the time of the marriage, unknown to the husband. (Laws 1806, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 225; Ga. L. 1861, p. 62, § 1; Code 1863, § 1682; Code 1868, § 1725; Code 1873, § 1726; Code 1882, § 1726; Civil Code 1895, § 2444; Civil Code 1910, § 2963; Code 1933, § 30-119; Ga. L. 1988, p. 1720, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Wife ceases to be member of husband's family. — Upon dissolution of marriage by total divorce, the wife ceases to be a member of the husband's family effectually as if she were dead. Burns v. Lewis, 86 Ga. 591, 13 S.E. 123 (1891).

Upon a divorce vinculo obtained by wife, defendant ceases to be her husband and accordingly his marital rights terminate. Barclay v. Warning, 58 Ga. 86 (1877).

Final verdict of total divorce shows jury intent to dissolve marriage. — Final verdict being in favor of a total divorce for the plaintiff admits of no construction but that the jury intended the marriage should be dissolved. Chance v. Chance, 60 Ga. App. 889, 5 S.E.2d 399 (1939).

Common-law marriage. — When a former wife did not consistently claim or engage in conduct consistent with the existence of a common-law marriage, saying she was divorced or single when it was convenient for her to do so, there was insufficient proof of a common-law marriage. In re Estate of Dunn, 236 Ga. App. 211, 511 S.E.2d 575 (1999).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Previous divorce not bar to remarriage of same parties. — Previously dissolved marriage neither bars the subsequent creation of a marital relationship between the same parties nor does it serve in any way as evidence of a latter state of marriage between these parties. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-69.

19-5-17. Determination of parties' rights; disability preventing remarriage forbidden.

When a divorce is granted, the jury or the judge, as the case may be, shall determine the rights of the parties. No person shall be placed under a disability that would prevent remarriage. L. 1979, p. 466, § 5.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

“Rights and disabilities” (now “rights” only) and “divorce.” — Former Code 1933, § 30-122 did not mean that granting of divorce to one party automatically granted other party divorce as the words “rights and disabilities” (now “rights” only) and “divorce” were not synonymous terms. Schwartz v. Schwartz, 222 Ga. 460, 150 S.E.2d 809 (1966).

Reversible error as to jury charge. — It is reversible error to charge that, if the jury grants one party a divorce as a matter of law, the opposite party should also be granted a divorce; “rights and disabilities” (now “rights” only) and “divorce” are not synonymous terms. Perlotte v. Perlotte, 218 Ga. 27, 126 S.E.2d 220 (1962).

Authority of court, upon entering default judgment, to make orders for child custody or support which were not specifically requested in pleadings of prevailing party, 5 ALR5th 863.

Spouse's right to set off debt owed by other spouse against accrued spousal or child support payments, 11 ALR5th 259.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia's children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia's children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children's parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children."

19-6-1. Alimony defined; when authorized; how determined; lien on estate of party dying prior to order; certain changes in parties' assets prohibited pending determination.

(a) Alimony is an allowance out of one party's estate, made for the support of the other party when living separately. It is either temporary or permanent.

(b) A party shall not be entitled to alimony if it is established by a preponderance of the evidence that the separation between the parties was caused by that party's adultery or desertion. In all cases in which alimony is sought, the court shall receive evidence of the factual cause of the separation even though one or both of the parties may also seek a divorce, regardless of the grounds upon which a divorce is sought or granted by the court.

(c) In all other cases in which alimony is sought, alimony is authorized, but is not required, to be awarded to either party in accordance with the needs of the party and the ability of the other party to pay. In determining whether or not to grant alimony, the court shall consider evidence of the conduct of each party toward the other.

(d) Should either party die prior to the court's order on the issue of alimony, any rights of the other party to alimony shall survive and be a lien upon the estate of the deceased party.

(e) Pending final determination by the court of the right of either party to alimony, neither party shall make any substantial change in the assets of the party's estate except in the course of ordinary business affairs and except for bona fide transfers for value. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1688; Code 1868, § 1731; Code 1873, § 1736; Code 1882, § 1736; Civil Code 1895, § 2456; Civil Code 1910, § 2975; Code 1933, § 30-201; Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 4; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 6.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 6, superseded the former version of Code 1933, § 30-201, in that it changed the language of the former section to provide that alimony may be assessed against either spouse. Cases decided prior to the 1979 enactment appear to remain valid except insofar as they may imply that a wife only is entitled to receive alimony or a husband only is obligated to pay alimony.

ANALYSIS

VALID MARRIAGE REQUIRED

FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED

TEMPORARY ALIMONY

DEATH OF PARTY

General Consideration

Former language of section unconstitutional. — Statute imposed alimony obligations on husbands but not wives and violated the equal protection clause of the U.S. Const., amend. 14, and was therefore unconstitutional. Stitt v. Stitt, 243 Ga. 301, 253 S.E.2d 764 (1979).

Statute did not violate the due process clause of the state or federal Constitution because the legislative intent is clear and the statute provides "fair notice" of the statute's meaning. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Challenge to constitutionality. — Pro se litigant sued government and court officials alleging Georgia's alimony provisions, O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1 et seq., violated: (1) the right to privacy, protections of the equal protection clause, and prohibitions against involuntary servitude as contained in the U.S. Constitution; and (2) the right to privacy, due process provisions, equal protection provisions, privileges and immunities clause, prohibitions on involuntary servitude, and prohibitions against legislation based on social status as guaranteed by the Georgia Constitution. However, the federal court determined that the plaintiff must raise these constitutional challenges as part of the litigant's state divorce proceedings, and, furthermore, that Georgia had an important state interest in enforcing these provisions. Cormier v. Green, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 14034 (11th Cir. July 12, 2005) (Unpublished).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1 provides that a party shall not be entitled to alimony if separation was caused by that party's adultery, and that in alimony cases the court shall receive evidence of the factual cause of the separation and the conduct of each party toward the other. Owens v. Owens, 247 Ga. 137, 274 S.E.2d 484 (1981).

Legislation amending this statute meets single subject matter requirement of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. IV (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para III), because the legislation's provisions all relate to changes in divorce and alimony procedure necessitated by the advent of "no fault" divorce, and because the lien provision has a natural connection with the main object of the legislation. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Proceedings for divorce and alimony have always been regarded as equitable. Early v. Early, 243 Ga. 125, 252 S.E.2d 618 (1979).

Jurisdiction. — Once personal jurisdiction in divorce proceeding exists, jurisdiction continues with respect to alimony. May v. May, 162 Ga. App. 560, 290 S.E.2d 495 (1982).

No duty to determine amount when alimony not awarded. — In an action dissolving the marriage between the parties, having concluded that alimony would not be awarded, the trial court's consideration of the factors relevant to determining the amount thereof was obviated. Stanley v. Stanley, 281 Ga. 672, 642 S.E.2d 94 (2007).

Permanent alimony in conjunction with absolute divorce was unknown to common law or to the ecclesiastical courts. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Permanent alimony statutory in nature. — Right to alimony after absolute divorce, and the granting in fee of a portion of the estate of the husband to the wife as permanent alimony is derivable solely from statutory provisions. Lloyd v.

Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Alimony was introduced into divorce proceedings by early ecclesiastical courts of England, and in the early practice of these courts it was defined to be that support which the husband, on separation, is bound to provide for the wife, and is measured by the wants of the wife and the circumstances and the ability of the husband to pay. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Term "alimony" is derived from Latin word which primarily meant to nourish; that is, to supply the necessities of life. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

As general rule, meaning of "alimony" is restricted to money; and unless expressly authorized by statute, no award can be made out of the property of the husband, divesting him of title to the same. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Phrase "prior to the court's order on the issue of alimony," refers to either temporary or permanent alimony. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Purpose. — Object of alimony is the support of children as well as the wife. Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945).

Fundamental basis of the law is to require the husband to pay necessary expenses of his wife and minor children. Finch v. Finch, 213 Ga. 199, 97 S.E.2d 576 (1957).

Purpose of alimony is to provide support for wife (now either spouse) and minor children, the amount to be determined from consideration of needs and ability to pay. McCurry v. McCurry, 223 Ga. 334, 155 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Strongest governmental purpose for Georgia's alimony laws is the provision of support for a needy spouse. Sims v. Sims, 245 Ga. 680, 266 S.E.2d 493 (1980).

Alimony is never for purpose of penalizing the husband or wife for his or her misconduct. McCurry v. McCurry, 223 Ga. 334, 155 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Claim for alimony is different from ordinary debt. Kirby v. Johnson, 188 Ga. 701, 4 S.E.2d 643 (1939); Jackson v. Jackson, 203 Ga. 296, 46 S.E.2d 483 (1948).

Dischargeability in bankruptcy. — Bankruptcy Court erred in ruling that the jury award of $250,000.00 lump sum alimony was in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support and thus was nondischargeable pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523. Ackley v. Ackley, 187 Bankr. 24 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Jury award which requires appellant to pay appellee $3,000.00 per month for 84 months is not in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support and thus is dischargeable pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523. Appling v. Rees, 187 Bankr. 27 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Fact that a lump sum alimony award to a wife was non-modifiable did not negate the possibility that the award was for the wife's maintenance and support; even though a lump sum alimony award was in the "nature" of a property settlement, when the evidence showed that the lump sum award was for the wife's maintenance and support, the finding that it was for that purpose, rather than a division of property which was dischargeable in bankruptcy, was affirmed. Daniel v. Daniel, 277 Ga. 871, 596 S.E.2d 608 (2004).

Alimony is not required to be awarded in no-fault divorce cases. McElroy v. McElroy, 242 Ga. 84, 249 S.E.2d 538 (1978).

Former wife is entitled to seek permanent alimony from her husband's estate in the form of property, a lump sum award, or periodic payments until the date of death. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Lump sum installment award. — Discrete lump sum installment award by a jury can reasonably be interpreted as a recognition of pre-existing property rights based on equitable considerations, the satisfaction of a marital support obligation, which may include rehabilitation, or both. Nix v. Nix, 185 Bankr. 929 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1994).

Wife and minor children when living separate and apart from husband have legal demand upon him for support and maintenance, which is called alimony. To enforce this legal demand she may bring action and in the same proceeding move to set aside any fraudulent transfer of his property. McGahee v. McGahee, 204 Ga. 91, 48 S.E.2d 675 (1948).

Law defining alimony contemplates "allowance" by judgment or decree of court, and not a mere provision for support in a private contract between the parties, even when the contract contains a recital that it is accepted by the wife "in full settlement of all alimony" and of all liability therefor. Hayes v. Hayes, 191 Ga. 237, 11 S.E.2d 764 (1940).

Alimony distinguished from property settlement. — Provisions in a decree specifying periodic payments to be made until a sum certain has been paid is a property settlement, while provision for periodic payments over a given time, or unlimited time, with no indication of a gross amount other than by multiplying the amounts due by the number of payment periods is alimony. Taulbee v. Taulbee, 243 Ga. 52, 252 S.E.2d 481 (1979); Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

When other provisions of agreement provided specifically for weekly payments of alimony, payments of $2,000 per year for ten years irrespective of remarriage or death of either party were a property settlement rather than alimony. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

Fact that parties call payments "alimony" for income tax purposes is not controlling. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

Both temporary award pending action, and amount fixed on final trial are alimony, and each is an allowance out of the husband's (now spouse's) estate, made for the support of the wife when living separate from him. Pelot v. Pelot, 193 Ga. 316, 18 S.E.2d 548 (1942).

Hospitalization insurance for wife is element of support, and is alimony. Roberts v. Roberts, 229 Ga. 689, 194 S.E.2d 100 (1972).

Obligation of husband to pay wife's debts is element of support and is "alimony". Beach v. Beach, 224 Ga. 701, 164 S.E.2d 114 (1968).

Husband's obligation to make a lump-sum cash payment to his ex-wife could not be characterized as alimony for garnishment purposes, when the terms of the divorce decree described an exchange of assets between the parties, and it was clear that alimony was not involved. Boyd v. Boyd, 191 Ga. App. 718, 382 S.E.2d 730 (1989).

Divorce decree is ineffectual to vest in wife any interest in property acquired by husband in future as such expectation or interest cannot be a part of his estate out of which an allowance of alimony can be made. Meeks v. Kirkland, 228 Ga. 607, 187 S.E.2d 296 (1972).

Attorney's fees in divorce and alimony proceedings are not allowed as such, but as an intrinsic part of alimony awarded for the purpose of enabling the wife to contest the issues between herself and her husband. Summers v. Summers, 212 Ga. 614, 94 S.E.2d 725 (1956).

Spouse may settle claims and waive alimony. — Wife may, for a consideration, settle her claims against her husband's property by private agreement, and waive all claims for support, maintenance, or alimony. In re Smith, 436 F. Supp. 469 (N.D. Ga. 1977).

Alimony secured by promissory notes enforceable. — When in a divorce case the parties agreed upon a sum of money, payable in monthly installments, the several installments being represented by negotiable promissory notes payable to the wife and secured by a deed to land, the manifest intention of the parties was to fix a lump sum alimony, for which the husband would be unconditionally liable, and marriage of the wife to another man after obtaining a divorce would be no defense against payment of the notes and would not prevent the holder from enforcing payment as provided in the security deed. Brown v. Farkas, 195 Ga. 653, 25 S.E.2d 411 (1943).

Settlement of temporary alimony enforceable to prevent court order of same. — There is no express statutory law dealing with settlements of temporary alimony, but they are lawful and enforceable as a bar to the wife's recovering temporary alimony in court. Finch v. Finch, 213 Ga. 199, 97 S.E.2d 576 (1957).

Court may not adopt temporary settlement absent authorization in agreement. — When agreement relating to temporary alimony contained no authorization that it be made the judgment of the court, the court could not lawfully make it such. Finch v. Finch, 213 Ga. 199, 97 S.E.2d 576 (1957).

Parental obligation to support child not applicable to alimony proceedings. — Statutory provision that the parent was liable for the support of his minor child has no application to proceedings for alimony. Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945).

Award of alimony is erroneous when there is no prayer for that relief. Pray v. Pray, 223 Ga. 215, 154 S.E.2d 208 (1967).

Grant or refusal of temporary alimony is question for court; that of permanent alimony is for jury to determine. Brown v. Brown, 224 Ga. 90, 160 S.E.2d 343 (1968).

Judgment denying divorce and permanent alimony does not constitute res judicata or estoppel preventing recovery of temporary alimony for support and for the payment of attorney's fees incurred in prosecuting or defending the divorce and alimony proceeding. Chlupacek v. Chlupacek, 226 Ga. 520, 175 S.E.2d 834 (1970).

Retirement benefits. — Payments a husband was to make to his wife on his salary included retirement benefits. Guntin v. Guntin, 263 Ga. 241, 430 S.E.2d 6 (1993).

Military retirement pay. — Subjecting appellee's military pension to distribution as alimony did not conflict with the mandate of U.S. Supreme Court decision protecting military retirement benefits from distribution as community property in a divorce action, since Georgia law protects the ex-spouse by awarding alimony based on need and does not grant absolute right to one-half of such pension. Stumpf v. Stumpf, 249 Ga. 759, 294 S.E.2d 488 (1982).

Jury can hear evidence concerning all of the appellee's assets, including the appellee's military retirement pay, as relevant to an award of alimony, and the trial court erred when the court entered an order keeping evidence of such retirement pay from the jury. Stumpf v. Stumpf, 249 Ga. 759, 294 S.E.2d 488 (1982).

Trial court's order that a husband designate a wife as the beneficiary of the survivor benefit plan under the husband's military pension was proper as essentially a life insurance protecting the husband's alimony obligation to the wife, even though the husband's pension was the husband's separate pre-marital property. Hipps v. Hipps, 278 Ga. 49, 597 S.E.2d 359 (2004).

Social security, interest, and dividends derived from a variety of sources are not compensation from an employer for services rendered and thus are not included in "salary" for alimony purposes. Guntin v. Guntin, 263 Ga. 241, 430 S.E.2d 6 (1993).

Trial court's award was excessive based on an exaggerated determination of the spouse's earning capacity. Duncan v. Duncan, 262 Ga. 872, 426 S.E.2d 857 (1993).

No error when some evidence supported decision. — When some evidence supported the trial court's decision, the trial court did not err in the court's determination of the amount of spousal support to be paid by a husband, including the wife's attorney fees. Bloomfield v. Bloomfield, 282 Ga. 108, 646 S.E.2d 207 (2007).

Alimony award proper. — Alimony award was not improper because, inter alia, there was nothing in the record to show the trial court did not take into account the evidence adduced at trial; moreover, the transcript showed many questions and comments by the trial court, several of which indicated that the court considered the wife's needs, the husband's ability to pay, and the factors set forth in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5(a). Sprouse v. Sprouse, 285 Ga. 468, 678 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in setting alimony at $1,250 per month, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-1(c) and 19-6-5(a), because the trial court properly considered, inter alia, the value of the husband's pension, the overwhelming marital debt, the husband's contribution of inherited assets to the marriage, and the wife's recent promotion, accompanied by a raise in salary and benefits. Hammond v. Hammond, 290 Ga. 518, 722 S.E.2d 729 (2012).

Finding as to husband's income proper. — Trial court's findings supporting the court's child support and alimony awards were proper because the trial court considered, inter alia, the husband's personal expenses paid by the husband's companies and the husband's loan application and financial affidavit in arriving at the court's determination of the husband's income; additionally, the trial court took into account the wife's status as a stay-at-home mother since the birth of the parties' son, the husband's conduct towards the wife, and the wife's potential income from the trial court's award to the wife of one of the husband's companies. The evidence also supported the trial court's finding that no deviation from the presumptive child support award was warranted under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i) based on the alimony award. Walton v. Walton, 285 Ga. 706, 681 S.E.2d 165 (2009).

Valid Marriage Required

Existence of valid marriage is essential to recovery of alimony. Foster v. Foster, 178 Ga. 791, 174 S.E. 532 (1934); Reed v. Reed, 202 Ga. 508, 43 S.E.2d 539 (1947).

Right to recover alimony depends upon a valid, subsisting marriage between the applicant and the party out of whose estate the allowance of alimony is claimed, and this is true even though it is claimed only for the support of a child. Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945).

When marriage void due to previous marriage or legal incapacity. — On an interlocutory hearing, when it appeared conclusively from the pleadings and the evidence that no valid marriage ever existed between the parties, either because of a previously undissolved marriage or because of the legal incapacity of one of the parties to enter into the marital contract, the trial court could not properly make an award of temporary alimony and counsel fees to the wife. Reed v. Reed, 202 Ga. 508, 43 S.E.2d 539 (1947).

Grant of alimony improper when marriage void due to minority of parties. — When at the time of purported marriage, and at the time of order granting alimony on the application of the mother for the support of their child, the partner was less than 17 years of age (now 16 years of age) the grant of such judgment against him was contrary to law, since there was no valid marriage to support it, and whether the father could in some way be held liable for support of the child, he could not be subject to such liability through a claim of alimony. Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945).

Spouse not estopped to set up invalidity of marriage in alimony action.

— Although the applicant for temporary alimony and the alleged husband lived together some years after the marriage ceremony between them was performed, inasmuch as the disqualification to marry was not removed, the husband was not estopped from setting up the invalidity of his marriage to the plaintiff in the action for alimony. Reed v. Reed, 202 Ga. 508, 43 S.E.2d 539 (1947).

Factors to Be Considered

Necessities of spouse entitled to alimony, and spouse's ability to pay alimony, are controlling factors to be considered and followed in making an allowance for alimony, temporary or permanent. Robertson v. Robertson, 207 Ga. 686, 63 S.E.2d 876 (1951); Wills v. Wills, 215 Ga. 556, 111 S.E.2d 355 (1959).

Trial court did not err in awarding a wife $200,000 in lump-sum alimony, to be paid in monthly installments of $3,500 for five years because the record contained some evidence supporting the court's finding that the husband could pay the alimony awarded and that the wife needed it in as much as the husband was capable of earning a minimum of $150,000 per year, lived with a girlfriend, and had virtually no living expenses, and the wife was forced to leave the marital residence due to its foreclosure, worked part-time as a waitress and was enrolled in college, and struggled with tuition payments as well as day-to-day living expenses. Driver v. Driver, 292 Ga. 800, 741 S.E.2d 631 (2013).

Spouse's "ability to pay" may be found from his or her assets or earning capacity. Although a person's income is some evidence of that person's earning capacity, it is not the only such evidence. A college student has capacity to earn even though his or her income is less than that of a person employed full time. Gordan v. Gordan, 244 Ga. 21, 257 S.E.2d 528 (1979).

Ability to earn an income is one factor which may be considered by the jury in awarding alimony to the wife, and the jury may award alimony on this basis although the husband may be temporarily impoverished. Pierce v. Pierce, 241 Ga. 96, 243 S.E.2d 46 (1978).

Husband's enhanced and wife's suppressed income potential during marriage properly considered. — In determining the amount of child support and alimony a husband was required to pay, the trial court correctly considered the parties' income and other assets, as well as the fact that during the marriage, the husband enhanced the ability to increase the husband's income potential and suppressed the wife's ability to earn the income. McCoy v. McCoy, 281 Ga. 604, 642 S.E.2d 18 (2007).

Indebtedness of parties is one factor to be considered in determining permanent alimony. Hardy v. Hardy, 221 Ga. 176, 144 S.E.2d 172 (1965).

Portion of proceeds from future sale of nonmarital property as alimony was not error. — Award of alimony to the wife in the form of a portion of the proceeds of a future sale was proper as the award was clearly made for the wife's maintenance and support; the trial court determined that the wife's earning capacity was diminished due to an unspecified disability, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5, and it appeared that in practicality, the marital home was the only non-liquid asset from which an award of alimony could be made. Smelser v. Smelser, 280 Ga. 92, 623 S.E.2d 480 (2005).

Jury may consider husband's present income and any previous allotment voluntarily made for support of the wife since the court may always give consideration to securing for the wife the same social standing, comforts, and luxuries of life as she probably would have enjoyed had there been no separation.

Wills v. Wills, 215 Ga. 556, 111 S.E.2d 355 (1959).

Relevance of conduct evidence. — In a divorce action wherein the wife challenged the trial court's denial of the wife's claim of alimony, the wife failed to demonstrate that the trial court did not weigh the several items of conduct evidence presented as to negative behavior on the part of the husband allegedly presented, such as causing the foreclosure of the marital home thereby harming the wife's credit and causing the wife to expend sums for the support of the couple's minor child; the reviewing court found that the transcript established that the evidence was not presented to the trial court for that purpose and no objection was made on that basis. Jackson v. Jackson, 282 Ga. 459, 651 S.E.2d 92 (2007).

Wife's desertion not established. — Sole evidence of a wife's desertion, offered by the husband, was a note given to him by the wife stating that she was leaving because she "needed to get away for awhile;" the note was given to the husband approximately two months before the wife filed a complaint for divorce, and the wife's separation from the husband for the two months preceding the filing for divorce did not establish the wife's desertion by a preponderance of the evidence; the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in awarding alimony to the wife. Cormier v. Cormier, 280 Ga. 693, 631 S.E.2d 663 (2006).

Parties' conduct toward each other is relevant in cases in which alimony is sought by the wife. Bigham v. Bigham, 243 Ga. 171, 253 S.E.2d 91 (1979).

Factual causes of separation and conduct of parties is admissible on question of determining amount of alimony, even though the husband concedes that the wife is entitled to alimony in the case, and evidence of acts of misconduct occurring prior to the date of the enactment of this statute, as well as prior to the date of trial, is not void for retrospectivity. Davidson v. Davidson, 243 Ga. 848, 257 S.E.2d 269 (1979).

Wife failed to establish that a trial court manifestly abused the trial court's discretion in denying the wife's claim for alimony based on her allegations that the husband abandoned the family; failed to support the couple's minor child; and caused the marital house to go into foreclosure as there was also evidence before the trial court that the wife initiated the parties' separation; that the wife was gainfully employed and had been so throughout most of the marriage; that the wife failed to cooperate with the husband in taking steps to alleviate the family's financial problems; that the wife had mismanaged marital funds and run up extravagant bills; that the wife failed to take advantage of low-cost health insurance coverage for the couple's minor child provided by the husband's employer; and that the wife unilaterally sold or otherwise disposed of the husband's share of the couple's personal property. Jackson v. Jackson, 282 Ga. 459, 651 S.E.2d 92 (2007).

Evidence of conduct subsequent to separation is relevant to show that such conduct prevented reconciliation of the parties. Hand v. Hand, 244 Ga. 41, 257 S.E.2d 507 (1979).

Prestatute conduct should be admitted where relevant. Thus, former Code 1933, § 30-201 may be applied to pre-July 1, 1977, acts of misconduct and is not void for retrospectivity. Bryan v. Bryan, 242 Ga. 826, 251 S.E.2d 566 (1979).

Evidence of spouse's husband's adultery occurring before this statute became effective is admissible because the spouse had no vested right to commit adultery. Morris v. Morris, 244 Ga. 120, 259 S.E.2d 65 (1979).

Adultery must be shown by means other than party testimony. — To the extent that the adultery of either spouse is admissible under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1, it must be proved through evidence other than the testimony of the parties. Owens v. Owens, 247 Ga. 139, 274 S.E.2d 484 (1981).

Adultery must be cause of separation to constitute bar. — Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1 does not provide a bar in every instance of adultery. It is a bar only when the adultery has been shown to be the cause of the separation between the parties. Clements v. Clements, 255 Ga. 714, 342 S.E.2d 463 (1986).

Adultery by both parents. — Trial court did not err in finding that the wife's adultery did not cause the dissolution of the parties' marriage as there was evidence of adultery by both parties as well as evidence that the husband had physically injured the wife and that the husband's return to Ohio to work for his father caused the dissolution of the marriage; thus, even if the trial court's order that the husband pay a certain debt could be considered to be alimony, the order did not violate O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1(b). Alejandro v. Alejandro, 282 Ga. 453, 651 S.E.2d 62 (2007).

Even though adulterous spouse cannot obtain alimony, equitable property division is still permissible. Peters v. Peters, 248 Ga. 490, 283 S.E.2d 454 (1981).

Conduct of parties relevant when equitable division of property in issue. — When equitable division of property is in issue, conduct of parties, both during marriage and with reference to cause of divorce, is relevant and admissible. Peters v. Peters, 248 Ga. 490, 283 S.E.2d 454 (1981).

Recovery, as alimony, of expenses incurred in uncovering evidence of adultery. — When spouse seeking alimony incurs expenses in employing private investigator in order to uncover evidence of adultery committed by other spouse, these expenses are, at discretion of trial court, recoverable as part of alimony award. Dunham v. Belinky, 248 Ga. 479, 284 S.E.2d 397 (1981).

Adultery not proven thus no attorney's fees. — First spouse was entitled to alimony and attorney's fees as the second spouse had failed to show, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1(b), that the first spouse had engaged in adultery. Vereen v. Vereen, 284 Ga. 755, 670 S.E.2d 402 (2008).

Lump-sum alimony award was not dischargeable. — Lump-sum alimony award determined under federal law to be "actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support" is not dischargeable pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) (5), even though the award does not terminate upon the death or remarriage of the recipient. Myers v. Myers, 61 Bankr. 891 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1986).

Factors to Be Considered (Cont'd)

Distinction between periodic and lump sum alimony. — Obligation to pay periodic alimony and child support terminates at the death of either party while the obligation to pay lump sum alimony in installments over a period of time does not. Winokur v. Winokur, 258 Ga. 88, 365 S.E.2d 94 (1988).

When the words of the documents creating the obligation state the exact amount of each payment and the exact number of payments to be made without other limitations, conditions, or statements of intent, the obligation is for one lump sum payable in installments. Winokur v. Winokur, 258 Ga. 88, 365 S.E.2d 94 (1988).

Needs of child to whom payer has no responsibility. — Needs of wife's child from previous marriage cannot be taken into account in determining amount of alimony to be awarded to wife, but jury may take into account the expense of the child to the wife in determining the amount of alimony. Barber v. Barber, 257 Ga. 488, 360 S.E.2d 574 (1987).

Award of alimony erroneous because record completely devoid of any evidence of spouse's ability to pay. — Trial court's award of lump sum alimony in the amount of $36,500 was erroneous because although the spouse's need for resources to meet reasonable housing desires and expected medical bills justified an award of alimony, the record was completely devoid of any evidence of the other spouse's ability to pay the lump sum alimony award; the paying spouse's separate estate consisted solely of an asset that could not be transferred or otherwise converted into cash, and a $500 a week income. Coker v. Coker, 286 Ga. 20, 685 S.E.2d 70 (2009).

Temporary Alimony

So long as divorce litigation is pending, trial judge is authorized to exercise discretion in continuing temporary alimony. Brown v. Brown, 224 Ga. 90, 160 S.E.2d 343 (1968).

Court will not very strictly scrutinize conduct for purpose of determining right to temporary alimony. Walden v. Walden, 169 Ga. 586, 151 S.E. 22 (1929).

Judge may base grant of temporary alimony on application for permanent alimony. — When a husband and wife are living separately, and no action for divorce is pending, and the wife has instituted against the husband an action for permanent alimony, it is not illegal for the judge on her application, after the required notice to the husband, to grant temporary alimony. Pelot v. Pelot, 193 Ga. 316, 18 S.E.2d 548 (1942).

Proportion of estate to be given as permanent or temporary alimony is matter of judicial discretion; it is always less in the latter than in the former case as the court will not encourage vexatious suits by large grants to the wife. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Temporary alimony and attorney's fees are awarded to afford wife (now spouse) means of contesting all the issues between herself and the husband. Walden v. Walden, 169 Ga. 586, 151 S.E. 22 (1929), later appeal, 171 Ga. 444, 155 S.E. 919 (1930); Huggins v. Huggins, 202 Ga. 738, 44 S.E.2d 778 (1947).

Temporary alimony pending action for permanent alimony does not cease with judgment when case is appealed to Supreme Court, but continues (within the discretion of the court) until the termination of the litigation in all the courts. McKay v. McKay, 93 Ga. App. 42, 90 S.E.2d 627 (1955); Brown v. Brown, 224 Ga. 90, 160 S.E.2d 343 (1968).

Amount of temporary alimony absolute unless modified by judge. — When a judge, in the exercise of judicial discretion, has fixed and allowed temporary alimony pending the cause for divorce and alimony or for permanent alimony, the right to the amount allowed becomes absolute until the final determination of the cause, unless in the meantime the allowance be revoked or modified by the judge. Brown v. Brown, 224 Ga. 90, 160 S.E.2d 343 (1968).

Judge's discretion as to temporary alimony not disturbed absent abuse.

— Appellate court may not control the discretion of a trial judge in awarding temporary alimony and attorney fees, unless it can be clearly shown by an appellant that the trial court committed grievous error or a gross abuse of discretion. Bowman v. Bowman, 242 Ga. 259, 248 S.E.2d 654 (1978).

As a matter of law "temporary alimony" includes attorney's fees. Finch v. Finch, 213 Ga. 199, 97 S.E.2d 576 (1957).

Attorney's fees are an intrinsic part of temporary alimony awarded for the purpose of enabling the wife to contest the issues between herself and her husband. Brown v. Brown, 224 Ga. 90, 160 S.E.2d 343 (1968).

Temporary alimony, including attorney's fees and expenses of litigation, is a part of alimony which a husband is required to supply for the support of his wife. Brown v. Brown, 224 Ga. 90, 160 S.E.2d 343 (1968).

Death of Party

Lien provision of subsection (d) of former Code 1933, § 30-201 did not create new rights in wife extending beyond date of husband's death. Instead, the lien clause preserved an inchoate right to temporary or permanent alimony existing at the date of death for subsequent determination and satisfaction from the estate. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Right to support survives as lien on estate after spouse dies. — When the husband dies before an order awarding temporary alimony has been entered by the court and before a divorce has been granted, the wife's right to support during the period of separation until the date of death survives as a lien on the estate. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Alimony payments terminate on death of spouse obligated to pay. — According to the weight of authority, a decree, granted in connection with an absolute divorce, for the regular periodical payments of alimony to the wife for her maintenance and support is terminated upon the husband's death, in the absence, at least, of some stipulation in the order which would require payments after his death. Berry v. Berry, 208 Ga. 285, 66 S.E.2d 336 (1951).

Attorney fees authorized after party dies. — Trial court is authorized to award attorney fees for legal services performed on behalf of a party to a divorce action when, during the pendency of the action, the party dies. Love v. Love, 251 Ga. 846, 310 S.E.2d 504 (1984).

Property subject to division despite title change upon death. — When the issue of the division of marital assets of a former husband and wife had not been resolved at the time of the husband's death, property acquired as a direct result of the labor and investments of the former husband during the course of the marriage was subject to equitable division in spite of the fact that it was titled in the former wife's name after the former husband's death as a matter of contract law. White v. White, 253 Ga. 267, 319 S.E.2d 447 (1984).

19-6-2. Attorney’s fees; when granted; grant of final judgment;
how enforced; action by attorney.

(a) The grant of attorney’s fees as a part of the expenses of litigation, made at any time during the pendency of the litigation, whether the action is for alimony, divorce and alimony, or contempt of court arising out of either an alimony case or a divorce and alimony case, including but not limited to contempt of court orders involving property division, child custody, and child visitation rights, shall be:

- (1) Within the sound discretion of the court, except that the court shall consider the financial circumstances of both parties as a part of its determination of the amount of attorney’s fees, if any, to be allowed against either party; and
- (2) A final judgment as to the amount granted, whether the grant is in full or on account, which may be enforced by attachment for contempt of court or by writ of fieri facias, whether the parties subsequently reconcile or not.

(b) Nothing contained in this Code section shall be construed to mean that attorney’s fees shall not be awarded at both the temporary hearing and the final hearing.

(c) An attorney may bring an action in his own name to enforce a grant of attorney’s fees made to him pursuant to this Code section. (Code 1933, § 30-202.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1967, p. 591, § 1; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

ATTORNEY’S FEES

CONTEMPT

General Consideration

Law was constitutional and any modification or repeal must necessarily be made by the General Assembly of Georgia and not by the court. Murphy v. Murphy, 232 Ga. 352, 206 S.E.2d 458 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 929, 95 S. Ct. 1656, 44 L. Ed. 2d 87 (1975).

Court must consider financial circumstances. — When the trial court did not consider the financial circumstances of both parties as part of the court's determination of the amount of attorney fees, if any, to be allowed in a contempt proceeding, there was no evidence that the ex-wife was able to pay the attorney fees ordered. Thus, if she failed to pay the awarded fees, the failure would not necessarily be a refusal to abide by the court's order, but might simply arise from an inability to pay, tantamount to imprisonment for debt. Thedieck v. Thedieck, 220 Ga. App. 764, 470 S.E.2d 265 (1996).

Court's express reservation of jurisdiction. — Fact that court may expressly reserve jurisdiction to make additional award does not mean such reservation is mandatory. Richardson v. Richardson, 237 Ga. 830, 229 S.E.2d 641 (1976).

Court jurisdiction over matter of attorney fees. — Trial court does not lose jurisdiction of matter of attorney fees simply because term of court ended. Richardson v. Richardson, 237 Ga. 830, 229 S.E.2d 641 (1976).

Fee award modifiable while suit pending. — Although the grant of attorney fees is a final judgment which may be enforced by attachment or by writ notwithstanding reconciliation of the parties, this does not necessarily mean that the fee award, like other elements of temporary alimony, may not be modified by the court at any time while the suit is pending and is within the jurisdiction of the court. Haim v. Haim, 251 Ga. 618, 308 S.E.2d 179 (1983).

Words "on account" need not appear in temporary order to prevent the award of attorney fees from being final and complete. Richardson v. Richardson, 237 Ga. 830, 229 S.E.2d 641 (1976).

Oral pronouncement of fees must be reduced to writing. — Husband's concern about the interest rate of 11.25 percent imposed on an award of attorneys fees was justified under circumstances in which the husband asserted that the date of the judgment was October 1, 2007, and the applicable prime rate was 7.75 percent, while the wife argued that the applicable prime rate was 8.25 percent, the rate on July 20, 2007, the day the trial court orally pronounced the court's judgment; however, an oral pronouncement was not a judgment. It had to have been reduced to writing and entered as a judgment to have been effective. Mongerson v. Mongerson, 285 Ga. 554, 678 S.E.2d 891 (2009), overruled on other grounds, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Attorney's Fees

Georgia law permits award of attorney fees in original action for temporary or permanent alimony in an amount sufficient to ensure proper legal representation. Hilsman v. Hilsman, 245 Ga. 555, 266 S.E.2d 173 (1980).

Purpose of allowing attorney fees. — Allowance of attorney's fees in applications for divorce or alimony is a necessary provision to enable the wife to properly protect her interests. Brady v. Brady, 228 Ga. 617, 187 S.E.2d 258 (1972).

In the allowance of attorney's fees, while the financial condition of the husband must have due weight with the court, still, except in cases where the husband is unable to pay a fee, or more than merely nominal compensation, the allowance for attorney's fees should be sufficient to insure to the wife proper legal representation by a competent attorney. Brady v. Brady, 228 Ga. 617, 187 S.E.2d 258 (1972).

Purpose of allowing attorney fees to the wife is to enable her to contest issues between herself and her husband, and the amount of such fees is to be set in accord with this purpose. Richardson v. Richardson, 237 Ga. 830, 229 S.E.2d 641 (1976).

Purpose of allowing attorney fees is to ensure effective representation of both spouses so that all issues can be fully and fairly resolved. Johnson v. Johnson, 260 Ga. 443, 396 S.E.2d 234 (1990).

Attorney fees are part of alimony. McClain v. McClain, 237 Ga. 80, 227 S.E.2d 5 (1976).

Award of attorney fees in divorce proceedings constitutes alimony and therefore is nondischargeable in bankruptcy. Westmoreland, Patterson & Moseley v. Painter, 21 Bankr. 846 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1982).

Attorney fees are considered temporary alimony. Ford v. Ford, 245 Ga. 569, 266 S.E.2d 183 (1980).

Attorney fees improperly awarded in modification action when original proceedings arose out of divorce action. — Attorney fees improperly awarded in action to set aside paternity and modification of child support, as the proceedings did not arise out of the original divorce case, as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2, but arose instead out of a paternity and modification action. Cothran v. Mehosky, 286 Ga. App. 640, 649 S.E.2d 838 (2007).

Award not authorized in legitimation proceeding. — In a proceeding to legitimate a child, the trial court erred in awarding the custodial parent attorney's fees under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a) as the statute only permitted such an award in alimony and divorce cases. Appling v. Tatum, 295 Ga. App. 78, 670 S.E.2d 795 (2008).

Trial court has authority to exercise sound discretion in awarding or denying attorney's fees. Wilson v. Wilson, 243 Ga. 637, 256 S.E.2d 334 (1979).

Attorney fees in an action for non-payment of alimony and child support are within the discretion of the trial court. Aycock v. Aycock, 251 Ga. 104, 303 S.E.2d 456 (1983).

Discretion of judge as to amount of allowance will not be controlled, unless there is an abuse of discretion. Brady v. Brady, 228 Ga. 617, 187 S.E.2d 258 (1972).

Appellate court may not control the discretion of a trial judge in awarding temporary alimony and attorney fees, unless it can be clearly shown by an appellant that the trial court committed grievous error or a gross abuse of discretion. Bowman v. Bowman, 242 Ga. 259, 248 S.E.2d 654 (1978).

In a divorce action wherein both parties presented evidence regarding each parties' respective financial conditions, the trial court did not err by denying the wife's claim for attorney fees pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2; additionally, contrary to the wife's argument, the husband's alleged unwillingness to settle the divorce proceedings was irrelevant to the inquiry whether attorney fees should be awarded. Jackson v. Jackson, 282 Ga. 459, 651 S.E.2d 92 (2007).

Consideration of parties' financial circumstances. — In a divorce action, in the absence of a transcript, an appellate court had to presume that, in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1), the trial court had considered the parties' financial circumstances and did not abuse the court's discretion in not ordering one spouse to pay the other spouse's attorney's fees. Dasher v. Dasher, 283 Ga. 436, 658 S.E.2d 571 (2008).

In a divorce action, a trial court properly considered the parties' financial circumstances under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1) in awarding a former wife $16,000 in attorney's fees. Arkwright v. Arkwright, 284 Ga. 545, 668 S.E.2d 709 (2008).

In a divorce proceeding, there was no merit to a husband's contention that the trial court actually based the court's award of attorney's fees to a wife on O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 merely because the court noted the impact of the husband's litigious conduct on the reasonableness of the attorney fees the wife incurred because the trial court expressly awarded the wife attorney fees pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 and explicitly stated that the court was looking solely at the parties' financial circumstances and disregarding the husband's conduct in making the court's award. Kautter v. Kautter, 286 Ga. 16, 685 S.E.2d 266 (2009).

There was no abuse of discretion in a trial court's denial of attorney fees to either party pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1) in their divorce action as the trial court properly based the court's determination upon consideration of the parties' relative financial positions; the husband could not seek attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11. Sponsler v. Sponsler, 287 Ga. 725, 699 S.E.2d 22 (2010).

In a divorce proceeding, a trial court's failure to award attorney's fees to a former spouse under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 was not an abuse of discretion as the trial court properly considered the relative financial positions of the parties. Hunter v. Hunter, 289 Ga. 9, 709 S.E.2d 263 (2011).

In an appeal pursuant to Ga. Sup. Ct. R. 34(4), a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by considering evidence that the husband and wife received financial assistance from a close relative (their respective mothers) since there was no statutory limitation on the type of evidence of financial circumstances a trial court may consider when a trial court makes an attorney's fee award under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 and because the award of fees under § 19-6-2 was within the trial court's discretion. Jarvis v. Jarvis, 291 Ga. 818, 733 S.E.2d 747 (2012).

Direct testimony as to value of services is not required in determining attorney fees in cases involving alimony. Hilsman v. Hilsman, 245 Ga. 555, 266 S.E.2d 173 (1980).

Expert evidence as to value of attorney fees not required. — While trial court is vested with sound discretion to award or refuse to award attorney fees based on the financial condition of the parties and other circumstances of the case, it may not decline to grant attorney fees solely because no expert evidence as to their value was presented. Webster v. Webster, 250 Ga. 57, 295 S.E.2d 828 (1982).

Grant of attorney's fees may be enforced either by writ of fi. fa. or by attachment for contempt against the husband. Kay v. Vaughan, 224 Ga. 875, 165 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

Deadline for requesting attorney fees. — Attorney fees must be requested at some time prior to the entry of the final judgment in a divorce trial (i.e., prior to the conclusion of the hearing on the remaining issues); but once such a request is made, the issue of attorney fees is preserved, without further reservation by the trial judge or additional application by the parties, for a decision by the trial court. Blanchet v. Blanchet, 251 Ga. 379, 306 S.E.2d 907 (1983).

Judge may award fees after verdict. — When there has been an application for attorney's fees, a hearing thereon prior to the verdict for a divorce, and the judge has reserved decision on the question until after the verdict, an award of attorney's fees after the verdict is not invalid simply because the award was made after the verdict granting a divorce. McCurry v. McCurry, 223 Ga. 334, 155 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Improperly awarded attorney's fees for refusal to settle. — Whether a party is at "fault" for a refusal to settle is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry whether attorney fees should be awarded in the first instance, such that the trial court's decision to grant the husband's request for attorney fees was an abuse of the court's discretion. Weaver v. Weaver, 263 Ga. 56, 428 S.E.2d 79 (1993).

Attorney fees for separate litigation. — Neither the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a) nor its purpose of ensuring the adequate representation of the respective needs of both spouses in a divorce supports the inclusion of fees from separate litigation in a fee award under § 19-6-2(a); accordingly, in a divorce case the trial court erred in awarding fees for attorneys who represented the wife in a prior divorce action that was dismissed and in a proceeding before the IRS. Padilla v. Padilla, 282 Ga. 273, 646 S.E.2d 672 (2007).

Bankruptcy court denied a Chapter 13 debtor's ex-wife's request for reimbursement of attorneys' fees she incurred to obtain a judgment against the debtor which found that a state court's award of attorneys' fees in her divorce action was a debt in the nature of support that was nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5) and was entitled to priority under 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(1). Nothing in the state court's order awarding the ex-wife attorneys' fees allowed her to recover additional fees for enforcing the order, and there was no merit to the ex-wife's claims that she was entitled to the additional fees under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2, and under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 because the debtor had acted in bad faith. Owoade-Taylor v. Babatunde (In re Babatunde), No. 11-5564, 2012 Bankr. LEXIS 5053 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Oct. 10, 2012).

Alleged misconduct of husband irrelevant to attorney's fees award. — Contrary to a wife's argument, any alleged misconduct by the husband, including allegedly being disingenuous regarding sources of income during discovery and at trial, was irrelevant to the award of attorneys' fees pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2; the trial court did not err when the court failed to award the wife attorneys' fees for finding the husband in wilful contempt of the original temporary support order. Johnson v. Johnson, 284 Ga. 366, 667 S.E.2d 350 (2008).

Attorney's fees in proceeding under the Family Violence Act. — Trial court erred by applying the divorce and alimony "disparity of income" standard under paragraph (a)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 to a motion for attorney's fees filed under the Family Violence Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-13-1 et seq. Suarez v. Halbert, 246 Ga. App. 822, 543 S.E.2d 733 (2000).

Attorney fees award not excessive. — In a divorce proceeding, given the financial statements of both parties, because the record and the transcript of the final hearing established that the trial court properly considered their relative financial positions, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court awarded attorney fees to the wife. Rieffel v. Rieffel, 281 Ga. 891, 644 S.E.2d 140 (2007).

Denial of request for attorney fees in divorce case proper. — There was no error in denying a wife's request for attorney fees because the trial court found that both parties had utilized marital property to pay attorney fees, and the trial court did consider the respective financial conditions of the parties. Patel v. Patel, 285 Ga. 391, 677 S.E.2d 114 (2009).

Failure to make required findings. — Trial court erred in awarding the wife attorney fees in relation to the general divorce action because the trial court failed to make the required findings of fact. McCarthy v. Ashment-McCarthy, 295 Ga. 231, 758 S.E.2d 306 (2014).

Insufficient grounds for court's award. — Award of attorney's fees in a divorce and child custody proceeding was improper because it was not possible to determine the statutory ground for the award or whether the evidence was sufficient to support the award under the appropriate statutory ground. Accordingly, the case was remanded to the trial court for a statement of the statutory basis for the award of attorney fees and any finding that must be made to support the award. Moon v. Moon, 277 Ga. 375, 589 S.E.2d 76 (2003).

Award of attorney fees to the ex-husband was reversed as attorney fees were not authorized in an action seeking a change of custody by the noncustodial parent, even if child support was also sought; there was nothing in the record to suggest that the attorney fees were awarded under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14, as the trial court did not rule on the ex-husband's motion seeking an amendment to the order to include reference to O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 and seeking findings of fact to support the order. Thornton v. Intveldt, 272 Ga. App. 906, 614 S.E.2d 175 (2005).

Award of attorney fees to the estate, if predicated on O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14(b), was erroneous as the findings necessary to support such an award were not made; further, if the attorney's fee award was based on O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2, it was also erroneous as there was no evidence of the parties' financial circumstances that authorized such an award. Findley v. Findley, 280 Ga. 454, 629 S.E.2d 222 (2006).

Trial court's award of attorney's fees to a wife was not predicated on the parties' economic standing, but on the husband's "stubborn stance" in the proceeding, which was not consistent with an award of attorney's fees under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2. McGahee v. Rogers, 280 Ga. 750, 632 S.E.2d 657 (2006).

Because the trial court failed to make findings sufficient to support an attorney's fee award under either O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 or O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14(b), this issue had to be remanded for an explanation of the statutory basis for the award and any findings necessary to support the award. Cason v. Cason, 281 Ga. 296, 637 S.E.2d 716 (2006).

Because a review of the record showed that, after a thorough consideration of the parties' financial circumstances, the trial court denied a spouse's request for attorney's fees, the trial court did not abuse the discretion granted to the court by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1). Taylor v. Taylor, 283 Ga. 63, 656 S.E.2d 828 (2008).

In a divorce case, an award of attorney fees to the wife was reversed because the trial court did not specify whether the court was awarding fees under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 or O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 and had not made any findings in support of the court's award. Leggette v. Leggette, 284 Ga. 432, 668 S.E.2d 251 (2008).

Award of attorney's fees and expenses in a petition to modify child custody was improper because there was no evidence presented to the trial court regarding the reasonableness of the fees. Lurry v. McCants, 302 Ga. App. 184, 690 S.E.2d 496 (2010).

Trial court erred in awarding a husband attorney fees because the court merely ordered the wife to pay attorney fees to the husband without findings of fact and without any cogent evidence of the work performed by the husband's counsel and the nature thereof. Holloway v. Holloway, 288 Ga. 147, 702 S.E.2d 132 (2010).

Insufficient evidence regarding reasonableness of fees. — In a contempt proceeding and modification of visitation following a finding that a mother had repeatedly refused to allow a father visitation, an award of attorney's fees to the father was not supported by any testimony regarding the reasonableness of the fees, and no statutory basis was specified, requiring reversal. Weeks v. Weeks, 324 Ga. App. 785, 751 S.E.2d 575 (2013).

Attorney's fees award proper. — There was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's award of $50,000 in attorney's fees to the wife in a divorce case; the trial court considered evidence of the financial circumstances of the parties and evidence that the wife incurred over $75,000 in litigation expenses in her efforts to obtain necessary financial documents and to effectively present the complicated financial issues raised in the case. Walton v. Walton, 285 Ga. 706, 681 S.E.2d 165 (2009).

There was sufficient evidence regarding the husband's assets to warrant awarding the wife attorney fees for a contempt proceeding to enforce the divorce decree, but the amount had to be reexamined on remand to the extent that it was based on an erroneous award concerning the wife's share of the husband's 401(k) account. Killingsworth v. Killingsworth, 286 Ga. 234, 686 S.E.2d 640 (2009).

Record did not support a husband's claim that the trial court made an attorney fees award because the court thought it was improper for a man to seek alimony and that the case should have settled because the trial court specifically set forth in the divorce decree that in denying alimony, the court considered the conditions of the parties and that rehabilitative alimony to the husband was not warranted since the request was premised on his less-than-credible claim that the wife had agreed with his lack of employment and his being a stay-at-home parent; as to the award of fees in favor of the wife, the trial court expressly considered the parties' fiscal circumstances as the court was obligated to do under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1). Klardie v. Klardie, 287 Ga. 499, 697 S.E.2d 207 (2010).

Trial court's award of $60,000 attorney's fees to a wife under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 was upheld based on the trial court's order, which recounted several instances of the husband's misconduct during the litigation and found that they caused numerous delays, extra motions, and extra conversations, and forced the wife's counsel to make multiple requests for documents and answers and to go to otherwise unnecessary efforts to obtain needed documents. The award was also proper under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1) to ensure effective representation of both spouses. Miller v. Miller, 288 Ga. 274, 705 S.E.2d 839 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in awarding a wife attorney fees because the court considered the relative financial positions of the wife and the husband, and although the final judgment and decree did not cite a statutory basis for the attorney fee award, that omission did not mean that the basis of the award was in question; the award was made pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 because no motion for attorney fees was made pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14, and there was no indication that the trial court considered an award of attorney fees on that basis. Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Trial court did not err in awarding the wife attorney fees without citing to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 as there was no requirement that the statute be cited in the trial court's order and there was evidence that the wife's counsel charged a reasonably hourly rate for a family law attorney with the attorney's training and experience. Horn v. Shepherd, 292 Ga. 14, 732 S.E.2d 427 (2012).

Hearing proper as was subsequent award. — Husband's complaint that he was not afforded a hearing on the issue of attorney fees was without merit; the trial court began the final hearing by stating that the issues remaining for resolution at the hearing were alimony and attorney fees, and reminded the parties that testimony was regarding alimony and attorney fees only, and during the hearing, the husband's counsel argued that no award of attorney fees should be made due to the husband's financial condition. After the evidence was presented, the trial court orally announced a ruling on the issue of attorney fees and the husband voiced no objection. Mongerson v. Mongerson, 285 Ga. 554, 678 S.E.2d 891 (2009), overruled on other grounds, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Contempt

Action for contempt and modification of support and visitation. — When the ex-wife's action was not purely an action for modification of visitation, but included an action for contempt and an action to modify child support, an award of attorney fees was within the discretion of the court. McDonogh v. O'Connor, 260 Ga. 849, 400 S.E.2d 310 (1991).

Award of attorneys' fees to the mother was proper because evidence was presented regarding the reasonableness of the fees and expenses requested and the fee was predicated on the finding of contempt. Vines v. Vines, 292 Ga. 550, 739 S.E.2d 374 (2013).

Use of remedial proceeding of attachment for contempt. — Administrator of wife's estate has standing to use remedial proceeding of attachment for contempt against the husband for failure to obey the order of the court requiring the payment of attorney's fees. Kay v. Vaughan, 224 Ga. 875, 165 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

When the liability of the husband for the attorney's fees awarded to the wife had accrued prior to her death, the right to enforce such award survived her death and vested in her personal representative. Kay v. Vaughan, 224 Ga. 875, 165 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

Contempt (Cont'd)

Incarceration for contempt. — When a trial court in a civil contempt proceeding sought to obtain an ex-wife's compliance with the visitation provisions of the final divorce decree by conditioning her avoidance of, or release from, incarceration upon payment of the attorney fees award, it exceeded its authority. Thedieck v. Thedieck, 220 Ga. App. 764, 470 S.E.2d 265 (1996).

Attorney fees in contempt proceeding. — Attorney fees are not recoverable in contempt proceeding concerning only child custody or visitation rights. Smith v. Smith, 244 Ga. 230, 259 S.E.2d 480 (1979).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1) allows the recovery of attorney fees even in a contempt proceeding involving only child custody or visitation rights. Thedieck v. Thedieck, 220 Ga. App. 764, 470 S.E.2d 265 (1996).

Trial court's award of attorney's fees based on the court's finding of contempt for violating a provision of the parties' divorce agreement prohibiting cohabitation in the presence of the parties' children was reversed and remanded for the trial court to determine the parties' intended meaning of "cohabitation" when the parties included that term in the agreement, and a determination of whether the mother violated that provision. Todd v. Casciano, 256 Ga. App. 631, 569 S.E.2d 566 (2002).

Since, in the context of a contempt matter brought against the client, a husband's attorney was never given proper notice of the possibility that the attorney fees hearing could have resulted in an award against the attorney pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14(b), the award was improper; a claim for attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2 was not considered a realistic opportunity to contest the need for legal services forming the basis of an O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14(b) award because the basis for an award of fees under the two statutes was different. Williams v. Cooper, 280 Ga. 145, 625 S.E.2d 754 (2006).

Although an award of attorney fees to a wife in a declaratory judgment action brought by a husband seeking a determination of the husband's obligations under a divorce decree was not authorized by either O.C.G.A. § 9-4-9 or O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, the award was allowed by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2(a)(1) because the wife's separate contempt action based on the husband's failure to comply with the divorce decree was consolidated for disposition with the husband's declaratory judgment action, and the trial court found in favor of the wife in that declaratory judgment action. Waits v. Waits, 280 Ga. App. 734, 634 S.E.2d 799 (2006).

Trial court properly held a parent in contempt in a post-divorce matter as the parent acknowledged that the parent refused to return the parties' children to the custodial parent after summer visitation and helped the children obtain legal counsel to file a modification of custody proceeding, which was prohibited by prior trial court orders. Further, the custodial parent properly filed the contempt petition in the county wherein that parent resided and, since the custodial parent was successful in having the other parent found in contempt, the custodial parent was properly awarded attorney fees. Brochin v. Brochin, 294 Ga. App. 406, 669 S.E.2d 203 (2008).

As a final divorce decree was not yet entered when a wife refused to sell the parties' house to the husband, and moreover, the decree did not require her to sell him the house, a trial court erred in holding her in contempt and in ordering her to pay the husband's attorney fees pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-2. Farris v. Farris, 285 Ga. 331, 676 S.E.2d 212 (2009).

Because the father was prohibited in filing the counterclaim for contempt and the trial court was not authorized to consider it, the trial court was also not authorized to order the mother to pay the father's attorney fees resulting therefrom. Mullins-Leholm v. Evans, 322 Ga. App. 869, 746 S.E.2d 628 (2013).

Payment condition for purging contempt. — Trial court was authorized to award attorney fees in a contempt action arising out of a divorce and alimony case, but the court should not have made payment a condition for purging the contempt without first allowing a reasonable time to pay the fees. Gay v. Gay, 268 Ga. 106, 485 S.E.2d 187 (1997).

State court award of attorney fees is nondischargeable. — Award of attorney's fees made by the state court in connection with divorce proceedings in that forum is nondischargeable; such fees are intended as support and should be held to be nondischargeable pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) (5). Myers v. Myers, 61 Bankr. 891 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1986).

Award reversed when award altered jury's allocation of resources. — Trial court's award of a substantial sum in litigation expenses to the wife worked a change "in matter of substance" of the jury's allocation of resources between the parties necessitating reversal under

O.C.G.A. § 9-12-7, when such allocation was based upon the jury's expectation that no party would be required to pay litigation costs incurred by the other party. Stone v. Stone, 258 Ga. 716, 373 S.E.2d 627 (1988).

Error to award fees in default proceeding. — Court erred in awarding attorney fees in a default proceeding since the issue of attorney fees had never been alleged, averred, or prayed for, and since there had been no notice whatsoever to the defendant that the issue of attorney fees would arise. Jayson v. Gardocki, 221 Ga. App. 455, 471 S.E.2d 545 (1996).

19-6-3. Temporary alimony; petition and hearing; factors considered; discretion of judge; revision and enforcement of order; effect of failure to comply.

(a) Whenever an action for divorce or for permanent alimony is pending, either party may apply at any time to the presiding judge of the court in which the same is pending, by petition, for an order granting the party temporary alimony pending the issuance of a final judgment in the case. After hearing both parties and the evidence as to all the circumstances of the parties and as to the fact of marriage, the court shall grant an order allowing such temporary alimony, including expenses of litigation, as the condition of the parties and the facts of the case may justify.

(b) In arriving at a decision, the judge shall consider the peculiar necessities created for each party by the pending litigation and any evidence of a separate estate owned by either party. If the separate estate of the party seeking alimony is ample as compared with that of the other party, temporary alimony may be refused.

(c) At a hearing on the application for temporary alimony, the merits of the case are not in issue; however, the judge, in fixing the amount of alimony, may inquire into the cause and circumstances of the separation rendering the alimony necessary and in his discretion may refuse it altogether.

(d) On application, an order allowing temporary alimony shall be subject to revision by the court at any time and may be enforced either by writ of fieri facias or by attachment for contempt.

(e) A failure to comply with the order allowing temporary alimony shall not deprive a party of the right either to prosecute or to defend the case. (Orig. Law providing that alimony judgment may be enforced by writ of fi. fa. was constitutional. Wood v. Atkinson, 231 Ga. 271, 201 S.E.2d 394 (1973), appeal dismissed, 416 U.S. 901, 94 S. Ct. 1603, 40 L. Ed. 2d 106 (1974).

History of application of section. — Prior to the passage of the married woman's property act, it was the rule and practice in this state, almost as a matter of course, to grant temporary alimony to the wife in her pending divorce suit. Frankel v. Frankel, 212 Ga. 643, 94 S.E.2d 728 (1956).

Temporary alimony is common-law right; it was an established right in England when we adopted the common law, and it is no less a common-law right because it grew up under the ecclesiastical courts. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Prior to any statute on the subject, it was held that the courts had the power to provide temporary alimony for the wife as incidental to the power to grant divorce. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

"Order" of court contemplated by statute was order by court of this state and not an order of a court of a foreign state; thus, a court could not issue an alimony order by virtue of a foreign decree since the court's power was merely to issue an ordinary money judgment based on the foreign decree. Henderson v. Henderson, 86 Ga. App. 812, 72 S.E.2d 731 (1952).

As foreign alimony decrees occupy the same status as ordinary foreign money judgments so far as Georgia courts are concerned, such decrees must be reduced to judgment in this state before the decrees can be enforced in this state. When the decrees are reduced to judgment in Georgia, the decrees can only be enforced by execution as other money judgments. Henderson v. Henderson, 86 Ga. App. 812, 72 S.E.2d 731 (1952).

Two prerequisites to temporary alimony award. — Two things are necessary to entitle the plaintiff in divorce to temporary alimony, namely, marriage, and the pendency of a suit for divorce, because the duty of the husband to support his wife is based upon the existence of a marriage between them. Methvin v. Methvin, 15 Ga. 97 (1854); Frith v. Frith, 18 Ga. 273 (1855); Pennaman v. Pennaman, 153 Ga. 647, 112 S.E. 829 (1922).

Before temporary alimony can be allowed, there must be pending suit for divorce or for alimony; and, if there is neither, no allowance for temporary alimony can be made. Sellers v. Sellers, 175 Ga. 47, 164 S.E. 769 (1932).

Party against whom alimony is allowed, should have notice and an opportunity of being heard. Goss v. Goss, 29 Ga. 109 (1859); Luke v. Luke, 154 Ga. 800, 115 S.E. 666 (1923).

Existing conjugal relation. — Right to temporary alimony, including attorney's fees, rests upon existing conjugal relation; and when a final verdict and decree of divorce has been granted to the parties prior to the institution by the former wife of an ancillary motion or petition for attorney's fees, and since marital relation was entirely dissolved and destroyed, the rights of the former wife to recover and the liability of the former husband to pay temporary alimony were extinguished. Harrison v. Harrison, 208 Ga. 70, 65 S.E.2d 173 (1951).

fees, and interlocutory relief depends upon her present — not past or future — status as wife. Until a challenged divorce judgment is actually set aside, there is no pending action for divorce or permanent alimony as is required for the grant of temporary alimony or other relief. Thome v. Thome, 218 Ga. 359, 127 S.E.2d 916 (1962).

Instances in which court cannot award alimony. — Court cannot award alimony when proceedings were not under former Code 1933, § 30-204 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-3) for temporary alimony pending an action for divorce, or under former Code 1933, § 30-213 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10) for alimony when no action for divorce is pending, these being the only two instances when a court can award alimony. Henderson v. Henderson, 86 Ga. App. 812, 72 S.E.2d 731 (1952).

No final adjudication of property rights at temporary alimony hearing. — Trial court may not at temporary alimony hearing make final adjudication of property rights of those parties before it. Walton v. Walton, 223 Ga. 85, 153 S.E.2d 554 (1967).

Effect of spouse's death on right to temporary alimony. — When the husband dies before an order awarding temporary alimony has been entered by the court and before a divorce has been granted, the wife's right to support during the period of separation until the date of death survives as a lien on the estate. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

When the husband dies after a divorce has been granted but before any determination of temporary or permanent alimony has been made, the wife's inchoate right to temporary alimony from separation until the date of death survives as a lien on the estate. This determination can be made after the husband's death, and the executor may attempt to prove any disability which would deprive the wife of her right to alimony. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Judge is authorized to deny temporary alimony when there is evidence that wife voluntarily abandoned husband, or when there is evidence that the separation between the husband and wife was caused by the adultery of the wife, uncondoned by the husband. Bullock v. Bullock, 188 Ga. 699, 4 S.E.2d 630 (1939).

When wife has willfully deserted husband, it is error to award temporary alimony. Hudson v. Hudson, 189 Ga. 410, 5 S.E.2d 912 (1939).

Wife is not entitled to an award of temporary alimony or attorney's fees since it appears without dispute that she abandoned her husband and refuses to live with him without just cause. Mullikin v. Mullikin, 200 Ga. 638, 38 S.E.2d 281 (1946); Frankel v. Frankel, 212 Ga. 643, 94 S.E.2d 728 (1956).

When wife abandoned husband without just cause, it is the duty of the court to deny temporary alimony and attorney's fees. Acree v. Acree, 201 Ga. 359, 40 S.E.2d 54 (1946).

Decree for temporary alimony is rendered void by subsequent voluntary cohabitation of the parties. Embry v. Embry, 228 Ga. 468, 186 S.E.2d 104 (1971).

Visitation privileges and alimony. — Neither visitation privileges nor alimony should be conditioned upon compliance with the other. Griffin v. Griffin, 226 Ga. 781, 177 S.E.2d 696 (1970).

Spouse's right to use credit following temporary alimony award. — While the court is authorized to prohibit the wife from using the credit of the husband for necessities in an award of temporary alimony, the wife is a feme sole as to her separate estate and the court has no power to prohibit her from using credit extended solely to her in her individual capacity. Barnett v. Barnett, 231 Ga. 808, 204 S.E.2d 168 (1974).

Findings of fact and law not required in temporary alimony proceeding. — Because merits are not in issue, proceedings on temporary alimony do not require findings of fact and law. Wilbanks v. Wilbanks, 238 Ga. 660, 234 S.E.2d 915 (1977).

Grant or refusal of temporary alimony is question for the court; that of permanent alimony is for the jury to determine. Aud v. Aud, 199 Ga. 714, 35 S.E.2d 198 (1945); Powell v. Powell, 200

Ga. 379, 37 S.E.2d 191 (1946).

Judgment denying temporary alimony is appealable. Gray v. Gray, 226 Ga. 767, 177 S.E.2d 575 (1970).

Judgment for temporary alimony cannot be treated as final so long as either party has the right to have the judgment reviewed by the Supreme Court. George v. George, 233 Ga. 637, 212 S.E.2d 813 (1975).

Temporary alimony pending an action for permanent alimony does not cease with judgment in superior court, when the case is brought to the Supreme Court, but continues within the discretion of the court until the termination of the litigation in all the courts. Holleman v. Holleman, 69 Ga. 676 (1882); Aud v. Aud, 199 Ga. 714, 35 S.E.2d 198 (1945); Powell v. Powell, 200 Ga. 379, 37 S.E.2d 191 (1946); Fried v. Ed. 2d 234 (1977); Pierce v. Pierce, 241 Ga. 96, 243 S.E.2d 46 (1978).

Temporary alimony continues when awarded until final termination of the cause. McKay v. McKay, 93 Ga. App. 42, 90 S.E.2d 627 (1955).

Judgment for temporary alimony continues in force and effect until a final judgment in the case, until the termination of the litigation of all courts, and as long as the case is pending, including litigation in the Supreme Court. Chlupacek v. Chlupacek, 226 Ga. 520, 175 S.E.2d 834 (1970); George v. George, 233 Ga. 637, 212 S.E.2d 813 (1975).

Pleadings and Evidence

Requirement of pleadings and evidence of marriage. — No judgment for temporary alimony may be rendered in absence of pleadings and evidence that showed parties to be married. Powell v. Powell, 200 Ga. 379, 37 S.E.2d 191 (1946).

Fact of the marriage of the parties is a matter to be determined in the hearing on temporary alimony. The determination of this issue in a temporary alimony hearing is not binding on a jury in a subsequent annulment trial. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 231 Ga. 257, 200 S.E.2d 893 (1973).

Pleadings in alimony case stand on same footing as those in injunction proceeding. Moss v. Moss, 196 Ga. 340, 26 S.E.2d 628 (1943).

Rules of evidence need not be strictly enforced in temporary alimony hearings. Wilbanks v. Wilbanks, 238 Ga. 660, 234 S.E.2d 915 (1977).

Rules of evidence are not as strictly applied at an interlocutory hearing on an application for temporary alimony as in the final trial of the case. Gaulding v. Gaulding, 184 Ga. 689, 192 S.E. 724 (1937); Gray v. Gray, 226 Ga. 767, 177 S.E.2d 575 (1970).

On hearing for temporary alimony, judge may hear testimony either by affidavits or orally. Rogers v. Rogers, 103 Ga. 763, 30 S.E. 659 (1898); Moss v. Moss, 196 Ga. 340, 26 S.E.2d 628 (1943).

Pleadings sworn to considered in evidence without formal introduction. — On the hearing of an application for temporary alimony, pleadings sworn to from the knowledge of the affiant, and not from the affiant's own information and belief, may be considered in evidence without formal introduction. Moss v. Moss, 196 Ga. 340, 26 S.E.2d 628 (1943).

Attorney's Fees

Attorney's fees are treated as part of temporary alimony and may be allowed by the court although there was no separate prayer for those fees. Stokes v. Stokes, 127 Ga. 160, 56 S.E. 303 (1906); Durham v. Durham, 160 Ga. 586, 128 S.E. 788 (1925); McClain v. McClain, 237 Ga. 80, 227 S.E.2d 5 (1976); Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977); Ford v. Ford, 245 Ga. 569, 266 S.E.2d 183 (1980).

Statute comprehended allowance to the wife of attorney's fees for representing her in the case as a part of temporary alimony. Thomas v. Smith, 185 Ga. 243, 194 S.E. 502 (1937); Brim v. Brim, 185 Ga. 359, 195 S.E. 157 (1938).

Attorney fees are part of temporary alimony. Tucker v. Tucker, 164 Ga. App. 477, 298 S.E.2d 159 (1982).

"Expenses of litigation" referred to in statute were those incurred in divorce or alimony action. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 231 Ga. 257, 200 S.E.2d 893 (1973).

Counsel fees for representing a wife in an application for permanent alimony are allowable as expenses of litigation, as temporary alimony is allowed. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Attorney's fees may be awarded without specific award of temporary alimony. Walton v. Walton, 223 Ga. 85, 153 S.E.2d 554 (1967).

Attorney's fees not recoverable when party voluntarily ends action.

— When wife who had brought suit for divorce, permanent alimony, temporary alimony, and attorney's fees notified her attorneys in writing that she did not desire to prosecute the case any further, and requested them to dismiss the action, the judge erred in allowing her attorneys to continue the prosecution in their own behalf, in order to prove and recover attorney's fees for the services rendered in the case by them, and in view of the statutes and public policy in this state relating to the subject, the judgment awarding attorney's fees was an abuse of discretion by the judge, and would be reversed. Williams v. Williams, 188 Ga. 536, 4 S.E.2d 195 (1939).

Rationale behind award of temporary alimony. — Temporary alimony is awarded to afford wife (now either party) means of contesting all issues between herself and her husband in such a case. La Fitte v. La Fitte, 171 Ga. 404, 155 S.E. 521 (1930); Huggins v. Huggins, 202 Ga. 738, 44 S.E.2d 778 (1947); Fried v. Fried, 210 Ga. 457, 80 S.E.2d 796 (1954); White v. Bowen, 223 Ga. 94, 153 S.E.2d 706 (1967); Leonard v. Leonard, 236 Ga. 623, 225 S.E.2d 9 (1976); Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977); Gordon v. Gordon, 244 Ga. 21, 257 S.E.2d 528 (1979).

Necessity of allowance of attorney's fees. — Allowance of attorney's fees is necessary provision to enable wife (now either party) to properly protect her interest, which has been recognized from earliest times. Preston v. Preston, 160 Ga. 200, 127 S.E. 860 (1925); Maxwell v. Maxwell, 177 Ga. 483, 170 S.E. 362 (1933); Brady v. Brady, 228 Ga. 617, 187 S.E.2d 258 (1972).

Wife might be lawfully awarded temporary alimony in the form of attorney fees to enable her to prosecute her case even though she ultimately loses it. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 224 Ga. 679, 164 S.E.2d 130 (1968).

Allowance for attorney's fees should be sufficient to ensure to the wife proper legal representation by a competent attorney; and the exercise of sound legal discretion in applying these principles in the allowance of attorney's fees will not be disturbed. Brady v. Brady, 228 Ga. 617, 187 S.E.2d 258 (1972); Hodges v. Hodges, 235 Ga. 848, 221 S.E.2d 597 (1976).

Granting of allowance for attorney's fees is properly function of judge as an incident to the grant of temporary alimony for the purpose of enabling the wife to be properly represented in the litigation. Alford v. Alford, 189 Ga. 630, 7 S.E.2d 278 (1940).

Judicial discretion as to allowed sum of attorney fees. — Judge may allow as counsel fees such sum as in the judge's discretion appears proper under all the facts and circumstances of the case, although there is no evidence before the judge fixing any amount as the value of the services rendered and to be rendered by the plaintiff's counsel. Sweat v. Sweat, 123 Ga. 801, 51 S.E. 716 (1905); Preston v. Preston, 160 Ga. 200, 127 S.E. 860 (1925).

Criterion for amount of attorney's fees. — Reasonable compensation for such counsel as are necessary in the case should be the criterion in determining the amount to be allowed as expenses of litigation. Rogers v. Rogers, 103 Ga. 763, 30 S.E. 659 (1898); Preston v. Preston, 160 Ga. 200, 127 S.E. 860 (1925).

Litigation expenses may include transcription costs. — General requirement in civil cases that the cost of transcribing the evidence and the cost of the record were paid by the appellant did not prevent the appellant wife from being reimbursed these expenses by the appellee husband in divorce cases if the trial judge saw fit in the judge's discretion to award such expenses. Adderholt v. Adderholt, 240 Ga. 626, 242 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Judge is not bound to hear expert evidence as to counsel fees. Bradley v. Bradley, 233 Ga. 83, 210 S.E.2d 1 (1974).

While trial court is vested with sound discretion to award or refuse to award attorney fees based on the financial condition of parties and other circumstances of the case, the court may not decline to grant attorney fees solely because no expert evidence as to their value was presented. Webster v. Webster, 250 Ga. 57, 295 S.E.2d 828 (1982).

It is error to require husband to reimburse for fees paid to attorneys in previous litigation between the parties in another court. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 231 Ga. 257, 200 S.E.2d 893 (1973).

Fee award modifiable while suit pending. — Although the grant of attorney fees is a final judgment which may be enforced by attachment or by writ notwithstanding reconciliation of the parties, this does not necessarily mean that the fee award, like other elements of temporary alimony, may not be modified by the court at any time while the suit is pending and is within the jurisdiction of the court. Haim v. Haim, 251 Ga. 618, 308 S.E.2d 179 (1983).

Award of attorney fees as alimony is not subject to discharge in bankruptcy. Leonard v. Leonard, 236 Ga. 623, 225 S.E.2d 9 (1976).

Determining Amount of Award

Provision for temporary alimony is somewhat different in character and purpose from award of permanent alimony, inasmuch as it is designed to meet the exigencies arising out of the domestic crisis of a pending proceeding for divorce. Childs v. Childs, 203 Ga. 9, 45 S.E.2d 418 (1947); Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977).

When parties have agreed upon annuity for maintenance, no temporary alimony will be allowed. McLaren v. McLaren, 33 Ga. 99 (1864).

Court has full power and authority to make agreement between parties as to temporary alimony its judgment under the facts of the case, and it is a valid judgment not subject to change without the intervention of the court, despite provision in the agreement that it should continue until further agreement of the parties. Evans v. Evans, 62 Ga. App. 618, 9 S.E.2d 99 (1940).

Court may refuse to approve agreement if it is shown by one of the parties that the agreement was procured by fraud or duress. Williams v. Williams, 243 Ga. 6, 252 S.E.2d 404 (1979).

Trial judge is empowered to allow temporary alimony from date of separation to the date of the hearing. Shepherd v.

Shepherd, 231 Ga. 257, 200 S.E.2d 893 (1973).

Amount of temporary alimony is not limited to fair proportion of husband's income, but may trench upon the corpus of his estate. Walton v. Walton, 219 Ga. 729, 135 S.E.2d 886 (1964).

Proportion of estate to be given as temporary alimony is a matter of judicial discretion. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Available resources from which alimony might be paid. — It is proper for court to consider available resources from which alimony might be paid. Available resources is defined as either capacity to labor and earn or the ownership of property. Hannah v. Hannah, 191 Ga. 134, 11 S.E.2d 779 (1940); Walton v. Walton, 219 Ga. 729, 135 S.E.2d 886 (1964).

Necessities of wife and husband's ability to pay are controlling factors in making an allowance for alimony. Walton v. Walton, 219 Ga. 729, 135 S.E.2d 886 (1964); McCurry v. McCurry, 223 Ga. 334, 155 S.E.2d 378 (1967); Barnett v. Barnett, 231 Ga. 808, 204 S.E.2d 168 (1974); Childre v. Childre, 237 Ga. 437, 228 S.E.2d 829 (1976); Williams v. Williams, 243 Ga. 6, 252 S.E.2d 404 (1979).

Factors to consider in award. — What will be a support for the wife pendente lite depends upon the wealth of the husband, her personal income, if any, aside from his property, the number of children or others dependent upon him, and the circle of society in which she is accustomed to move; the amount is not limited to a fair proportion of income, but may trench upon the corpus of his estate. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937).

Amount of temporary alimony is determined by respective wealth and earning capacity of the parties, and the standard of living before the separation. Hall v. Hall, 220 Ga. 677, 141 S.E.2d 400 (1965).

Court may give consideration to securing for wife same social standing, comforts, and luxuries of life as she probably would have enjoyed had there been no separation. Walton v. Walton, 219 Ga. 729, 135 S.E.2d 886 (1964).

When it appears wife has separate estate, court should take into consideration the estate's present value and annual income as compared to the husband's and his obligations to support other members of the family before putting the entire burden of the wife's support upon him. Hawes v. Hawes, 66 Ga. 142 (1880). See also Methvin v. Methvin, 15 Ga. 97, 60 Am. Dec. 664 (1854).

Judicial inquiry into cause and circumstances of separation. — On hearing of application for temporary alimony, judge may inquire into cause and circumstances of the separation. Rogers v. Rogers, 103 Ga. 763, 30 S.E. 659 (1898); Ray v. Ray, 106 Ga. 260, 32 S.E. 91 (1898).

Trial court may consider the cause of separation in awarding temporary alimony. Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977).

Court has authority to award use of home and household goods to the wife as temporary alimony. Lloyd v. Lloyd, 183 Ga. 751, 189 S.E. 903 (1937); Golden v. Golden, 209 Ga. 915, 76 S.E.2d 697 (1953).

Temporary alimony in form of temporary use and possession of property. — Trial court may award temporary alimony in form of temporary use and possession of property, although in awarding temporary alimony in such form, the trial judge may not make a final adjudication of title or property rights. Williams v. Williams, 243 Ga. 6, 252 S.E.2d 404 (1979).

Reasonable allowance for temporary alimony is proper, even though husband may have no property or employment, and be merely of a robust health with an earning capacity. Taylor v. Taylor, 189 Ga. 110, 5 S.E.2d 374 (1939); Golden v. Golden, 209 Ga. 915, 76 S.E.2d 697 (1953).

Discretion of Trial Court

Temporary alimony is matter entirely within discretion of trial judge, and it was still the duty of the judge to allow a reasonable amount as temporary alimony for the support of the wife and for attorney's fees, to enable her to support herself until the final trial of the case and enable her to employ counsel to assert her rights before a jury. Brown v. Brown, 169 Ga. 580, 151 S.E. 14 (1929).

Broad judicial discretion. — In passing upon question of temporary alimony, trial judge is vested with broad discretion. Maxwell v. Maxwell, 177 Ga. 483, 170 S.E. 362 (1933).

In granting or denying temporary alimony and attorney's fees to the wife, pending a suit by or against her for divorce, the trial judge is vested with sound legal discretion. Long v. Long, 91 Ga. 606, 13 S.E.2d 349 (1941).

Matter of temporary alimony is usually within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Williams v. Williams, 243 Ga. 6, 252 S.E.2d 404 (1979).

Temporary alimony may not be arbitrarily refused. — While judge, in the judge's discretion, may refuse temporary alimony altogether, the judge may not arbitrarily refuse the temporary alimony. Maxwell v. Maxwell, 177 Ga. 483, 170 S.E. 362 (1933).

Discretion of trial court not controlled unless abused. — Supreme Court will not control the discretion of the trial court in allowing temporary alimony, unless it has been flagrantly abused. Carlton v. Carlton, 44 Ga. 216 (1871); Besore v. Besore, 49 Ga. 378 (1873); Etheridge v. Etheridge, 149 Ga. 44, 99 S.E. 37 (1919); Metcalf v. Metcalf, 153 Ga. 775, 112 S.E. 828 (1922); Osborne v. Osborne, 157 Ga. 902, 122 S.E. 877 (1924); Brown v. Brown, 159 Ga. 323, 125 S.E. 712 (1924); Preston v. Preston, 160 Ga. 200, 127 S.E. 860 (1925); Tillman v. Johnson, 236 Ga. 647, 225 S.E.2d 36 (1976).

Discretion of the trial judge in allowing or disallowing temporary alimony will not be controlled unless that discretion is shown to have been flagrantly abused. Caswell v. Caswell, 179 Ga. 676, 177 S.E. 247 (1934); Moss v. Moss, 196 Ga. 340, 26 S.E.2d 628 (1943); Cook v. Cook, 197 Ga. 703, 30 S.E.2d 479 (1944); Hightower v. Hightower, 202 Ga. 643, 44 S.E.2d 116 (1947); Brannen v. Brannen, 208 Ga. 88, 65 S.E.2d 161 (1951); Golden v. Golden, 209 Ga. 915, 76 S.E.2d 697 (1953).

Judgment will not ordinarily be disturbed. — Unless under the peculiar facts and circumstances of a case a judgment allowing or refusing temporary alimony shows abuse of the discretion vested in the judge, the judge's judgment will not be disturbed. Mathis v. Mathis, 199 Ga. 55, 33 S.E.2d 428 (1945); Frankel v. Frankel, 212 Ga. 643, 94 S.E.2d 728 (1956). See also Houston v. Houston, 186 Ga. 140, 197 S.E. 237 (1938); Childs v. Childs, 203 Ga. 9, 45 S.E.2d 418 (1947); Brady v. Brady, 228 Ga. 617, 187 S.E.2d 258 (1972); Shepherd v. Shepherd, 231 Ga. 257, 200 S.E.2d 893 (1973); Williams v. Williams, 243 Ga. 6, 252 S.E.2d 404 (1979).

When evidence conflicts. — When the testimony as to the material facts on an application for alimony is conflicting, and there is enough to support the finding of the lower court, the Supreme Court will not interfere with the judge's discretion. Glass v. Wynn, 76 Ga. 319 (1886); Heaton v. Heaton, 102 Ga. 578, 27 S.E. 677 (1897); Kelly v. Kelly, 146 Ga. 362, 91 S.E. 120 (1917).

When, on application for temporary alimony and attorney's fees, the evidence is conflicting, the discretion of the judge in allowing such amounts of alimony and fees as seem reasonable and appropriate will not be disturbed by this court. Nolan v. Nolan, 179 Ga. 677, 177 S.E. 248 (1934).

When, under the evidence, a marked conflict was presented as to the cause and circumstances of the separation of the parties, it could not be said that the refusal of the trial judge to allow temporary alimony was a flagrant abuse of discretion. Moss v. Moss, 196 Ga. 340, 26 S.E.2d 628 (1943).

When the record shows there was a conflict in the evidence which authorized the trial court to use the court's discretion in determining the amount of the court's award, the Supreme Court will not interfere with the trial court's discretion unless there is a flagrant abuse of discretion. Barnett v. Barnett, 231 Ga. 808, 204 S.E.2d 168 (1974).

When the trial judge inquires into the cause of the separation of the parties, and the evidence is conflicting as to the cause of the separation, the judge's discretion in disallowing temporary alimony, including expenses of litigation, will not be controlling. Gray v. Gray, 226 Ga. 767, 177 S.E.2d 575 (1970). See also Gaulding v. Gaulding, 184 Ga. 689, 192 S.E. 724 (1937); Hall v. Hall, 185 Ga. 502, 195 S.E. 731 (1938); Bartlett v. Bartlett, 228 Ga. 541, 186 S.E.2d 754 (1972).

Abuse of discretion is legal ground for reversing judgment for temporary alimony. Alford v. Alford, 190 Ga. 562, 9 S.E.2d 895 (1940).

Reversal of judgment. — When judge did not exercise discretion as to whether to allow temporary alimony, judgment must be reversed. Joyner v. Joyner, 197 Ga. 479, 29 S.E.2d 266 (1944).

When wife was employed and owned property, grant of temporary alimony against insolvent husband was abuse of discretion. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 174 Ga. 624, 163 S.E. 158 (1932).

Enforcement Procedures

Writ of fi. fa. — Right to temporary alimony may be enforced by writ of fi. fa. Gibson v. Patterson, 75 Ga. 549 (1885).

Alimony may be collected by garnishment unless husband shows that new conditions have arisen justifying a change in terms. Halpern v. Austin, 385 F. Supp. 1009 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Contempt and garnishment as enforcement methods. — Both contempt and garnishment are appropriate methods of enforcing temporary alimony. Morrison v. Morrison, 153 Ga. App. 818, 266 S.E.2d 521 (1980).

Both garnishment and contempt actions may be pursued simultaneously for the collection or satisfaction of the payments owed. Herring v. Herring, 138 Ga. App. 145, 225 S.E.2d 697 (1976); Brodie v. Brodie, 155 Ga. App. 593, 271 S.E.2d 725 (1980).

Alimony judgment may be enforced either by execution or by attachment for contempt against the person of the husband, and the two remedies for the judgment's enforcement may be lawfully and concurrently pursued to work a satisfaction of the judgment and neither one can be pled in abatement of the other. Lenett v. Lutz, 215 Ga. 369, 110 S.E.2d 628 (1959).

Execution for alimony may also issue at same time as proceedings for contempt are initiated, and the proceeding for contempt does not prevent or suspend the execution. Lipton v. Lipton, 211 Ga. 442, 86 S.E.2d 299 (1955).

Clerk of court is required by law to issue fi. fa. for payment of alimony on request of plaintiff; and a judgment need not be obtained from the court for that purpose. Stephens v. Stephens, 171 Ga. 590, 156 S.E. 188 (1930).

When judgment for alimony is payable in installments, no fi. fa. issued can lawfully include any amount included in previous fi. fa. but, if such is done, it is a defect which may be cured by amendment. Stephens v. Stephens, 171 Ga. 590, 156 S.E. 188 (1930).

Alimony judgments are subject to dormancy and revival statutes and any applicable statute of limitation. Bryant v. Bryant, 232 Ga. 160, 205 S.E.2d 223 (1974).

Lump-sum alimony judgment is dormant after expiration of seven years and is not subject to revival after the expiration of ten years. Bryant v. Bryant, 232 Ga. 160, 205 S.E.2d 223 (1974).

Alimony installments that became due within seven years preceding execution are collectible and enforceable. Bryant v. Bryant, 232 Ga. 160, 205 S.E.2d 223 (1974); O'Neil v. Williams, 232 Ga. 170, 205 S.E.2d 226 (1974).

Revival of dormant installment payments of alimony judgments. — Installment payments of alimony judgments that are dormant are subject to being revived through the applicable statutory revival procedure. Bryant v. Bryant, 232 Ga. 160, 205 S.E.2d 223 (1974); O'Neil v. Williams, 232 Ga. 170, 205 S.E.2d 226 (1974).

Temporary order regarding alimony pending appeal of final judgment is enforceable through contempt proceedings pending review of the divorce judgment in this court. Walker v. Walker, 239 Ga. 175, 236 S.E.2d 263 (1977).

Distinction between civil and criminal contempt for nonpayment of alimony. — Purpose of civil contempt is to coerce compliance with court order; if alimony payments are current when alleged contemnor appears in court, a coercive sentence would be inappropriate; full payment at time of hearing is not necessarily a defense to criminal contempt, however, because criminal contempt is imposed as punishment for past willful failure to obey court's order (i.e., make timely payments). Hopkins v. Jarvis, 648 F.2d 981 (5th Cir. 1981).

Law makes nonpayment of alimony contempt regardless of whether order of court commands payment of alimony. Robbins v. Robbins, 221 Ga. 627, 146 S.E.2d 628 (1966); Joyce v. Joyce, 236 Ga. 601, 225 S.E.2d 25 (1976). See also Coggins v. Coggins, 223 Ga. 421, 156 S.E.2d 40 (1967); Shepherd v. Shepherd, 223 Ga. 609, 157 S.E.2d 268 (1967); Sullivan v. Sullivan, 224 Ga. 679, 164 S.E.2d 130 (1968); Roberts v. Roberts, 229 Ga. 689, 194 S.E.2d 100 (1972); Duke v. Smith, 242 Ga. 207, 248 S.E.2d 617 (1978); Martin v. Martin, 244 Ga. 68, 257 S.E.2d 903 (1979).

When contempt is not proper remedy to compel obedience to judgment. — Contempt is not proper remedy to compel obedience to judgment that merely declares rights of parties in accordance with agreement between the parties in regard to the allowance of reasonable visitation privileges. The only portion of such a divorce and alimony decree which may be enforced by punishment for contempt is that which commands the parties to obey, and this has been construed only to extend to the payment of alimony unless the order expressly commands the parties to give full recognition of the others' rights. Palmer v. Bunn, 218 Ga. 244, 127 S.E.2d 372 (1962).

When contract setting alimony is incorporated in divorce decree, decree is enforceable by contempt. McClain v. McClain, 235 Ga. 659, 221 S.E.2d 561 (1975).

Contempt proceeding impermissible when alimony award void. — Award of temporary alimony by a court not having jurisdiction of the parties, or void for any other cause, cannot be made the basis of the valid proceeding for contempt. Hagan v. Hagan, 209 Ga. 313, 72 S.E.2d 295 (1952).

When original judgment for divorce was void for lack of jurisdiction, court erred in requiring payment of alimony and attaching respondent as for contempt. Jones v. Jones, 181 Ga. 747, 184 S.E. 271 (1936).

While the power to enforce a decree for alimony by attachment for contempt by the judges of the superior courts of this state is adequate yet, if in such a proceeding it appears that the judgment awarding alimony is void for any reason, the husband is privileged to collaterally attack the judgment, and in such case the court has no power to punish him for contempt. Allen v. Baker, 188 Ga. 696, 4 S.E.2d 642 (1939).

Defenses to contempt for failure to pay alimony. — One defense to either civil or criminal contempt for failure to pay alimony and child support would be that payments were in fact timely made, and another defense common to both civil and criminal contempt would be that alleged contemnor is financially unable to make payments; an additional defense to civil contempt would be that payments, although not timely made, are current at time of hearing. Hopkins v. Jarvis, 648 F.2d 981 (5th Cir. 1981).

Estoppel to plead void award. — When a party, in temporary alimony proceedings, contends that he is not subject to a judgment therefor because he had made a final alimony settlement with his wife by contract, under the doctrine of estoppel by judgment, he is concluded in a subsequent contempt proceeding from contending that the judgment awarding temporary alimony was void because he was never his wife's lawful husband. Powell v. Powell, 200 Ga. 379, 37 S.E.2d 191 (1946).

Contempt proceedings for refusal to abide by alimony decrees authorize only conditional punishment pending the contemnor purging oneself by paying such sums as the contemnor is able as shown by the evidence. Stanton v. Stanton, 223 Ga. 664, 157 S.E.2d 453 (1967).

Attachment for contempt was civil proceeding in nature. — Purpose of the proceeding for contempt being to compel payment of money allowed as alimony, and not solely for the purpose of vindicating the authority of the court, the attachment of the husband for contempt was in the nature of a civil proceeding. Curtright v. Curtright, 187 Ga. 122, 200 S.E. 711 (1938).

Attachment for contempt not available against nonresident. — Attachment for contempt is not an available remedy for failure to pay alimony when the husband is a nonresident. Kirchman v. Kirchman, 212 Ga. 488, 93 S.E.2d 685 (1956).

Enforcement by attachment against party resident in other county. — Superior court awarding alimony in virtue of the court's jurisdiction originally invoked by the plaintiff in a divorce suit had jurisdiction to enforce the court's payment by attachment for contempt against the plaintiff after the plaintiff had changed the plaintiff's residence to another county. Curtright v. Curtright, 187 Ga. 122, 200 S.E. 711 (1938).

Imprisonment for civil contempt in alimony case constitutionally permissible. — Imprisonment for civil contempt in a case involving alimony, when the contemnor, although ordered imprisoned, may purge oneself prior to the imprisonment, is constitutionally permissible. Kaufmann v. Kaufmann, 246 Ga. 266, 271 S.E.2d 175 (1980).

Imprisonment for criminal contempt in alimony case constitutionally permissible. — Finding of criminal contempt with the sanction of unconditional imprisonment for nonpayment of alimony is constitutionally permissible. Kaufmann v. Kaufmann, 246 Ga. 266, 271 S.E.2d 175 (1980).

Enforcement of alimony judgment by attachment for contempt is not imprisonment for debt. Heflinger v. Heflinger, 172 Ga. 889, 159 S.E. 242 (1931).

Imprisonment for contempt is always conditional and solely within sound discretion of judge and the judge may at any time, in the exercise of that discretion, discharge one so imprisoned. The Supreme Court will not interfere with the discretion vested in the trial judge unless the judge's discretion has been manifestly abused. Corriher v. McElroy, 209 Ga. 885, 76 S.E.2d 782 (1953).

When court should resort to imprisonment for contempt. — Imprisonment for contempt ought never to be resorted to, except as penal process, founded on the unwillingness of the party to obey; the moment it appears that there is inability, it would clearly be the duty of the judge to discharge the party, because it is only the contempt, the disobedience upon which the power rests. Corriher v. McElroy, 209 Ga. 885, 76 S.E.2d 782 (1953).

When uncontroverted evidence shows husband's inability to pay judgment awarded for alimony, it is error to keep him in jail under an order adjudging him in contempt; but when his ability to pay may be drawn from the evidence and reasonable deductions therefrom, it is not erroneous to decline to discharge him from confinement. The punishment of the husband for contempt by confinement in jail is a remedial process to secure to the wife the alimony awarded her. Heflinger v. Heflinger, 172 Ga. 889, 159 S.E. 242 (1931).

When the evidence showed without dispute that the defendant was financially unable to pay the sum awarded as alimony and attorney's fees, it was error to adjudge that he was in contempt of court because of his failure to pay the sums. Porter v. Porter, 178 Ga. 784, 174 S.E. 527 (1934).

Wife has no right to require that the defendant be imprisoned for contempt of court because of his failure to pay the full amount when he is unable to pay the full amount. We do not allow imprisonment for debt in this state. Corriher v. McElroy, 209 Ga. 885, 76 S.E.2d 782 (1953).

Proof by husband of inability to comply with judgment for alimony is good defense to a rule for contempt. Snider v. Snider, 190 Ga. 381, 9 S.E.2d 654 (1940).

Good faith showing. — It is not sufficient for defendant to show merely that he has no money, or property which he might convert into money, with which to satisfy the alimony installments, but it must be made to appear clearly that he has in good faith exhausted all the resources at his command and has made a diligent and bona fide effort to comply with the order of the court. Snider v. Snider, 190 Ga. 381, 9 S.E.2d 654 (1940).

Determination of whether party is in contempt for failure to pay alimony is question for discretion of judge, and the Supreme Court will not interfere with the discretion vested in the trial judge unless that discretion has been manifestly abused. Burch v. Kenmore, 206 Ga. 277, 56 S.E.2d 508 (1949).

Trial court has discretion whether or not, under the facts in a case, to adjudicate the defendant in contempt of court, and the discretion of the trial court will not be disturbed unless abused. Martin v. Martin, 209 Ga. 850, 76 S.E.2d 390 (1953).

Trial court in a contempt case has wide discretion to determine whether the court's orders have been violated. The court's determination will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion. Kaufmann v. Kaufmann, 246 Ga. 266, 271 S.E.2d 175 (1980).

Modification of divorce decree in contempt proceeding. — Trial court has no authority in contempt proceeding to modify divorce decree. Stanley v. Stanley, 244 Ga. 417, 260 S.E.2d 328 (1979).

Court may not modify a previous decree in a contempt order; however, a court may always interpret and clarify the court's own orders. The test to determine whether an order is clarified or modified is whether the clarification is reasonable or whether it is so contrary to the apparent intention of the original order as to amount to a modification. Kaufmann v. Kaufmann, 246 Ga. 266, 271 S.E.2d 175 (1980).

Revision of Order

When judge has fixed temporary alimony, right to amount allowed becomes absolute unless revoked or modified by the judge. Aud v. Aud, 199 Ga. 714, 35 S.E.2d 198 (1945); Powell v. Powell, 200 Ga. 379, 37 S.E.2d 191 (1946).

Order granting temporary alimony is always in breast of court, and the court is authorized at any time, in the exercise of sound discretion, to revise or revoke such an order. Brim v. Brim, 185 Ga. 359, 195 S.E. 157 (1938); Williams v. Williams, 194 Ga. 332, 21 S.E.2d 229 (1942).

Revision of Order (Cont'd)

Court has power to alter or revoke at any time the court's judgments awarding temporary alimony. Alford v. Alford, 190 Ga. 562, 9 S.E.2d 895 (1940). See also Banda v. Banda, 192 Ga. 5, 14 S.E.2d 479 (1941); Strickland v. Strickland, 201 Ga. 293, 39 S.E.2d 483 (1946); Golden v. Golden, 209 Ga. 915, 76 S.E.2d 697 (1953).

Trial judge has wide discretion in fixing temporary alimony, and in subsequently modifying the temporary alimony. Williams v. Williams, 206 Ga. 341, 57 S.E.2d 190 (1950).

Discretion in modifying prior order for temporary alimony is similar to discretion in granting or refusing such alimony, and an abuse of discretion in either case is legal ground for reversing the judgment. Fried v. Fried, 210 Ga. 457, 80 S.E.2d 796 (1954).

Right to revise temporary alimony not limited to instances when there is change in condition of parties. Brim v. Brim, 185 Ga. 359, 195 S.E. 157 (1938).

Power of the trial court to set aside a prior order for alimony which has not been affirmed by the Supreme Court does not depend solely upon a change of conditions subsequent to the grant of the previous order. In all cases, the trial judge's order setting aside a prior award of temporary alimony must be based upon evidence, and the exercise of the judge's discretion must be legal and not arbitrary. Fried v. Fried, 210 Ga. 457, 80 S.E.2d 796 (1954).

Court may consider party's request for revision based on inability to pay. — If, after an allowance for temporary alimony and counsel fees, the husband becomes unable to meet the payments, he is entitled to show this, and the court has jurisdiction to entertain an application for a reduction of the amounts. Taylor v. Taylor, 189 Ga. 110, 5 S.E.2d 374 (1939); Childs v. Childs, 203 Ga. 9, 45 S.E.2d 418 (1947).

Additional services rendered by attorney. — When it is shown that attorney was compelled to render additional services, court may increase temporary alimony. Snider v. Snider, 183 Ga. 734, 189 S.E. 512 (1937).

Adultery as cause for modification of temporary alimony. — Adultery on the part of the wife subsequent to the grant of temporary alimony, or prior thereto but unknown to the husband until after the granting of the order for temporary alimony, is a sufficient cause to warrant the court in modifying or revoking the order. Jennison v. Jennison, 136 Ga. 202, 71 S.E. 244, 1912C Am. Cas. 441 (1911).

Revocation or modification of previous order. — It is error, upon subsequent hearing, to revoke or modify previous order solely upon consideration of evidence adduced at previous hearing and additional evidence as to the value of the attorney's services. Brim v. Brim, 185 Ga. 359, 195 S.E. 157 (1938).

Temporary alimony award affirmed by Supreme Court. — Trial judge may not set aside award of temporary alimony when award has been affirmed by Supreme Court, in the absence of additional facts such as would authorize a revocation or modification of the prior order. Fried v. Fried, 210 Ga. 457, 80 S.E.2d 796 (1954).

After final decree in divorce and alimony action is rendered, trial court is without jurisdiction to award further counsel fees on application made subsequent to such final decree. Jones v. Jones, 221 Ga. 284, 144 S.E.2d 388 (1965).

19-6-4. When permanent alimony authorized; how enforced.

(a) Permanent alimony may be granted in the following cases:

(1) In cases of divorce;

(2) In cases of voluntary separation; or

(3) Where one spouse, against the will of that spouse, is abandoned or driven off by the other spouse.

(b) A grant of permanent alimony may be enforced either by writ of fieri facias or by attachment for contempt. (Orig. Code 1863, §§ 1691, 1693; Code 1868, §§ 1734, 1736; Code 1873, §§ 1739, 1744; Code 1882, §§ 1739, 1744; Civil Code 1895, §§ 2459, 2464; Civil Code 1910, §§ 2978, 2983; Code 1933, §§ 30-204, 30-210; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, §§ 10, 15.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1979, p. 466 amended prior law so as to provide that alimony may be assessed against either spouse. Cases decided prior to the 1979 enactment appear to remain valid except insofar as they may imply that a wife only is entitled to receive alimony or a husband only is obligated to pay the same.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Former Code 1933, §§ 30-210, 30-211, 30-212 and 30-213 plainly provided for alimony which may be sought in the wife's (now either spouse's) suit for divorce, her suit for alimony alone, or in a suit by the husband for divorce. The wife's right cannot be defeated by a failure of the husband to obtain a divorce. Ridgeway v. Ridgeway, 224 Ga. 310, 161 S.E.2d 866 (1968).

Alimony not mandatory. — Former Code 1933, §§ 30-207, 30-209, and 30-210 did not declare that alimony must or shall be granted in any case. Brown v. Brown, 230 Ga. 566, 198 S.E.2d 182 (1973).

Alimony in any form is simply support for the wife (now either spouse), supplied by the husband, and it rests entirely upon the law requiring the husband to support his wife. It makes no difference what this support is called, whether "temporary alimony" or "permanent alimony" or "necessaries." It is the same thing, and intended for the same purpose in each instance. Hudson v. Hudson, 189 Ga. 410, 5 S.E.2d 912 (1939).

Alimony need not be awarded in every case. — It is not law that in every case in which wife is granted total divorce, permanent alimony must also be awarded to her. Various other facts and circumstances may require consideration. Simmons v. Simmons, 194 Ga. 649, 22 S.E.2d 399 (1942); Brown v. Brown, 230 Ga. 566, 198 S.E.2d 182 (1973).

Action for alimony without prayer for divorce. — Wife has the right to sue her husband, residing in this state, for alimony, after a voluntary separation, without suing for divorce, and without the necessity of showing a legal residence as required in a suit for divorce. Craig v. Craig, 53 Ga. App. 632, 186 S.E. 755 (1936).

Wife (now either spouse) can bring action for alimony without prayer for divorce or she may be entitled to alimony in connection with a divorce. Sherman v. United States, 334 F. Supp. 1311 (N.D. Ga. 1971), modified, 462 F.2d 577 (5th Cir. 1972).

Failure of divorce action will not bar action for alimony. — Failure of the wife's divorce action will not bar subsequent action for permanent alimony based upon the allegation that the parties are living in a state of voluntary separation. Davenport v. Davenport, 210 Ga. 687, 82 S.E.2d 654 (1954).

Effect of foreign state decree for alimony upon Georgia action. — Fact that decree of another state was for alimony will not make Georgia action on such decree alimony case, since it is simply an action on a debt of record, and accordingly, such a suit in a Georgia court does not come within the statutes and more liberal rules as to extraordinary relief in favor of a wife, who has already filed or is about to file in this state an action for divorce and alimony or alimony alone, and who needs such additional equitable protection against threatened conveyances by the husband until the termination of the question of alimony. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 196 Ga. 204, 26 S.E.2d 283 (1943).

Full force and effect given to contracts for payment of alimony. — Contracts for payment of alimony should be given full force and effect and continue for the period provided by the contract which may be beyond the death of the husband. Sherman v. United States, 334 F. Supp. 1311 (N.D. Ga. 1971), modified, 462 F.2d 577 (5th Cir. 1972).

Agreement to pay alimony is enforceable when obligation is part of overall settlement. Sherman v. United States, 334 F. Supp. 1311 (N.D. Ga. 1971), modified, 462 F.2d 577 (5th Cir. 1972).

Alimony improper if no legal marriage existed between parties. — In this state a judge of the superior court has no power to grant a judgment awarding alimony, if at the time of the institution of suit therefor the relationship of husband and wife does not exist between the parties, by reason of the marriage being void ab initio or by reason of a total divorce theretofore granted between the parties. Allen v. Baker, 188 Ga. 696, 4 S.E.2d 642 (1939).

Alimony improper when evidence shows common-law marriage did not exist. — When the evidence demanded a finding that the plaintiff did not enter into a common-law marriage de praesenti with the defendant, which is a valid married status in this state, and there being in this state no common-law marriage de futuro cum copula, the court erred in allowing alimony and attorney's fees on either theory of alleged common-law marriage between the parties. Peacock v. Peacock, 196 Ga. 441, 26 S.E.2d 608 (1943).

Wife properly denied permanent alimony when guilty of willful desertion. — If willful desertion by the wife demands a denial of temporary alimony in such a judgment, to allow her permanent alimony in the same case after a jury has determined that the facts show she is guilty of the identical wrong for which she was denied temporary alimony would be an inconsistency that could not be justified. Hudson v. Hudson, 189 Ga. 410, 5 S.E.2d 912 (1939).

Alimony denied to wife. — Alimony should not be awarded to wife who abandons husband without just cause. Mullikin v. Mullikin, 200 Ga. 638, 38 S.E.2d 281 (1946).

Abandonment as ground for alimony is not required to continue for specific period of time. Shivers v. Shivers, 215 Ga. 536, 111 S.E.2d 376 (1959).

When husband obtains divorce for cruel treatment, jury determines whether they will allow wife permanent alimony, and a charge restricting the right of the wife to alimony to a verdict solely in her favor is error. Shivers v. Shivers, 215 Ga. 536, 111 S.E.2d 376 (1959).

When prior maintenance award is entirely superseded. — When trial court adjudicates issue of permanent alimony, prior maintenance award is entirely superseded. Browne v. Browne, 242 Ga. 107, 249 S.E.2d 594 (1978).

Court hearing a divorce case has the authority, if alimony is sought and the court sees fit to do so, to enter a permanent alimony award which will supersede a prior separate maintenance judgment. Browne v. Browne, 242 Ga. 107, 249 S.E.2d 594 (1978).

When no valid divorce granted, decree awarding alimony will be set aside without prejudice to plaintiff wife and the minor children. Harmon v. Harmon, 209 Ga. 474, 74 S.E.2d 75 (1953).

Distinction between civil and criminal contempt for nonpayment of alimony. — Purpose of civil contempt is to coerce compliance with court order; if alimony payments are current when alleged contemnor appears in court, a coercive sentence would be inappropriate; full payment at time of hearing is not necessarily a defense to criminal contempt, however, because criminal contempt is imposed as punishment for past willful failure to obey the court's order (i.e., make timely payments). Hopkins v. Jarvis, 648 F.2d 981 (5th Cir. 1981).

Defenses to contempt for failure to pay alimony. — One defense to either civil or criminal contempt for failure to pay alimony and child support would be that payments were in fact timely made and another defense common to both civil and criminal contempt would be that alleged contemnor is financially unable to make payments; an additional defense to civil contempt would be that payments, although not timely made, are current at time of hearing. Hopkins v. Jarvis, 648 F.2d 981 (5th Cir. 1981).

Lump-sum alimony award was not dischargeable. — Lump-sum alimony award determined under federal law to be “actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support” is not dischargeable pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5), even though the award does not terminate upon the death or remarriage of the recipient. Myers v. Myers, 61 Bankr. 891 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1986).

19-6-5. Factors in determining amount of alimony; effect of remarriage on obligations for alimony.

(a) The finder of fact may grant permanent alimony to either party, either from the corpus of the estate or otherwise. The following shall be considered in determining the amount of alimony, if any, to be awarded:

- (1) The standard of living established during the marriage;
- (2) The duration of the marriage;
- (3) The age and the physical and emotional condition of both parties;
- (4) The financial resources of each party;
- (5) Where applicable, the time necessary for either party to acquire sufficient education or training to enable him to find appropriate employment;
- (6) The contribution of each party to the marriage, including, but not limited to, services rendered in homemaking, child care, education, and career building of the other party;
- (7) The condition of the parties, including the separate estate, earning capacity, and fixed liabilities of the parties; and
- (8) Such other relevant factors as the court deems equitable and proper.

(b) All obligations for permanent alimony, however created, the time for performance of which has not arrived, shall terminate upon remarriage of the party to whom the obligations are owed unless otherwise provided. (Laws 1806, Cobb's 1851 Digest, pp. 224, 225; Code 1863, § 1676; Code 1868, § 1719; Code 1873, § 1720; Code 1882, § 1720; Civil Code 1895, § 2435; Civil Code 1910, § 2954; Code 1933, § 30-209; Ga. L. 1966, p. 160, § 1; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 14; Ga. L. 1981, p. 615, § 1; Ga. L. 1982, p. 3, § 19.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1979, p. 466 amended prior law so as to provide that alimony may be assessed against either spouse. Cases decided prior to the 1979 enactment appear to remain valid except insofar as they may imply that a wife only is entitled to receive alimony or a husband only is obligated to pay the same.

ANALYSIS

FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED
EFFECT OF REMARRIAGE

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Former Code 1933, § 30-209 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5), insofar as it undertook to affect the obligations of a valid contract in existence at the time of statute's passage so as to provide for the duration of alimony is null and void as violative of Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. II (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X) and U.S. Const., Art. I, Sec. 10, Cl. 1. Candler v. Wilkerson, 223 Ga. 520, 156 S.E.2d 358 (1967).

Statute was strictly construed, and the effect should not be extended beyond its terms. Landis v. Sanner, 146 Ga. 606, 91 S.E. 688 (1917).

Statute did not declare that alimony must or shall be granted in any case, although it has been held that when the wife has no separate estate or means of support and the husband is able to support her, a verdict granting a divorce but denying alimony is contrary to law as to the latter feature. Simmons v. Simmons, 194 Ga. 649, 22 S.E.2d 399 (1942); Brown v. Brown, 230 Ga. 566, 198 S.E.2d 182 (1973).

Statute was a restraint upon alienation of property, and the statute's effect on title, when the husband has conveyed pending a suit for divorce and alimony, should be strictly construed. Perry v. First Mut. Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 174 Ga. 914, 164 S.E. 804 (1932).

Statute was applicable to wife's remarriage to anyone, thus the wife may retain the property previously awarded her as permanent alimony regardless of her remarriage to her former husband or to anyone else. Travis v. Travis, 227 Ga. 406, 181 S.E.2d 61 (1971).

"Alimony" in its strict or technical sense contemplates money payments at regular intervals. Hamilton v. Finch, 238 Ga. 78, 230 S.E.2d 881 (1976).

Alimony may be awarded either from husband's earnings or from corpus of his estate as by granting to the wife the title or use of property in the possession of the husband. Jones v. Jones, 220 Ga. 753, 141 S.E.2d 457 (1965).

No duty to determine amount when alimony not awarded. — In an action dissolving the marriage between the parties, having concluded that alimony would not be awarded, the trial court's consideration of the factors relevant to determining the amount thereof was obviated. Stanley v. Stanley, 281 Ga. 672, 642 S.E.2d 94 (2007).

No requirement that findings be included in decree. — Alimony award was not improper because, inter alia, with respect to alimony, there was no statutory requirement that findings be included in the decree. Sprouse v. Sprouse, 285 Ga. 468, 678 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

It was not valid objection to award of alimony that husband had no "estate" out of which it can be paid because the award may be "from the corpus of the estate or otherwise." Poppell v. O'Quinn, 131 Ga. App. 223, 205 S.E.2d 509 (1974).

Husband's enhanced and wife's suppressed income potential during marriage properly considered. — In determining the amount of child support and alimony a husband was required to pay, the trial court correctly considered the parties' income and other assets, as well as the fact that during the marriage, the husband enhanced his ability for increase in income potential and suppressed the wife's ability for increased income potential. McCoy v. McCoy, 281 Ga. 604, 642 S.E.2d 18 (2007).

It was not a valid objection that alimony award payment is to be made at future time; because otherwise there would be no continuing liability for future sums. Poppell v. O'Quinn, 131 Ga. App. 223, 205 S.E.2d 509 (1974).

Purpose of alimony is to provide support for wife (now either party) and minor children, the amount to be determined from consideration of needs and ability to pay. McCurry v. McCurry, 223 Ga. 334, 155 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Alimony is never for the purpose of penalizing husband or wife for his or her misconduct. McCurry v. McCurry, 223 Ga. 334, 155 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Alimony should never be excessive; and, with proper regard for the husband's ability, it should never be inadequate or insufficient for his wife's support in keeping with the family standard of living established by the husband. Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954).

No error when some evidence supported decision. — When some evidence supported the trial court's decision, the trial court did not err in the court's determination of the amount of spousal support to be paid by a husband, including the wife's attorney fees. Bloomfield v. Bloomfield, 282 Ga. 108, 646 S.E.2d 207 (2007).

Consent judgments for alimony have been uniformly recognized in this state, and have been given the same force and effect as judgments rendered in due course of litigation upon findings by a jury. Estes v. Estes, 192 Ga. 94, 14 S.E.2d 681 (1941).

Parties cannot change or alter decree of permanent alimony. Martin v. Martin, 209 Ga. 850, 76 S.E.2d 390 (1953).

Dischargeability in bankruptcy. — Bankruptcy Court erred in ruling that the jury award of $250,000.00 lump sum alimony was in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support and thus was nondischargeable pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523. Ackley v. Ackley, 187 Bankr. 24 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Agreement to pay insurance premiums. — Portion of a settlement agreement creating an obligation to pay insurance premiums constitutes periodic alimony rather than equitable property division, which, absent a manifest intention of the parties to the contrary, the obligation to pay periodic alimony terminates on the death of the paying spouse or of the surviving spouse. Gray v. Higgins, 205 Ga. App. 52, 421 S.E.2d 341 (1992).

Court may order that spouse receive insurance policy when order in accord with verdict. — When the decision that the plaintiff-wife receive the policy of life insurance is in full accord with the undisputed evidence and the verdict of the jury in a divorce case, the trial court did not err in inserting provisions requiring the husband to carry out the purpose and intent of that verdict. Ritchea v. Ritchea, 244 Ga. 476, 260 S.E.2d 871 (1979).

Obligation to maintain life insurance terminated. — Because the cost to the husband and the value to the wife of the requirement that he maintain $100,000 in life insurance for her benefit for 12 years were indefinite when the decree was entered, as the amount of that award depended on how long the husband would live, the award was periodic alimony as a matter of law; and, as permanent periodic alimony, the husband's life insurance obligation terminated upon the wife's remarriage because the divorce decree did not expressly provide otherwise. White v. Howard, 295 Ga. 210, 758 S.E.2d 824 (2014).

Military retirement pay. — Trial court's order that a husband designate a wife as the beneficiary of the survivor benefit plan under the husband's military pension was proper, as essentially a life insurance protecting the husband's alimony obligation to the wife, even though the husband's pension was the husband's separate pre-marital property. Hipps v. Hipps, 278 Ga. 49, 597 S.E.2d 359 (2004).

Alimony obligation ambiguous. — If the alimony obligation is ambiguous, it is the function of the trial court to resolve that ambiguity and determine the intent of the parties following the ordinary rules of construction. Fisher v. Fredrickson, 262 Ga. 229, 416 S.E.2d 512 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Andrews v. Whitaker, 265 Ga. 76, 433 S.E.2d 735 (1995).

Order to pay hospital costs as part of alimony too vague. — In action for permanent alimony, portion of verdict that defendant “shall pay the total cost of the operation and hospitalization of plaintiff” was too vague and indefinite to authorize a decree as to these items, the pleadings being equally as indefinite in reference to operation and hospitalization, and the court erred in overruling the motion to arrest the judgment, so far as the judgment applied to these subjects. Martin v. Martin, 183 Ga. 787, 189 S.E. 843 (1937).

Jury may grant sum certain as alimony. — Rendering of a money judgment for a sum certain as alimony is within the power of the jury. Roberson v. Roberson, 199 Ga. 627, 34 S.E.2d 836 (1945).

Lump sum installment award. — Discrete lump sum installment award by a jury can reasonably be interpreted as a recognition of pre-existing property rights based on equitable considerations, the satisfaction of a marital support obligation, which may include rehabilitation, or both. Nix v. Nix, 185 Bankr. 929 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1994).

Estate not liable for continued alimony to wife. — Since a provision in the parties’ separation agreement entitling the wife to alimony until she remarried or died did not evidence a manifest intention to reverse the normal rule that the death of the obligor terminated the obligation to pay alimony, and the settlement agreement lacked a clear expression of intent to extend alimony payments beyond the death of the ex-husband, the trial court properly denied the wife’s motion to hold the estate responsible for the alimony obligation. Findley v. Findley, 280 Ga. 454, 629 S.E.2d 222 (2006).

Jury instructions. — When, in a divorce suit resulting in the divorce of both parties, the wife prays for permanent alimony and the jury awards her none, a ground of her motion for new trial which complains that the court nowhere in the court’s charge instructed the jury as to what is permanent alimony, or under what circumstances the jury would in the jury’s discretion be authorized to grant the alimony, is meritorious and affords cause for the grant of a new trial, since the evidence is such as to justify the jury in granting permanent alimony. Alford v. Alford, 189 Ga. 630, 7 S.E.2d 278 (1940).

Motion to set aside judgment sustained when alimony award grossly inadequate. — When verdict for permanent alimony was grossly inadequate and insufficient the motion to vacate it and set the judgment aside for that reason should have been sustained. Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954).

Unacceptable stipulation as to alimony. — Trial court’s failure to inform the parties during the trial that their stipulation as to alimony was unacceptable, or to afford the parties an opportunity in a later hearing to address the issue with evidence, was reversible error. Hodges v. Hodges, 261 Ga. 843, 413 S.E.2d 191 (1992).

Following obligations in a divorce agreement were deemed dischargeable in bankruptcy proceedings: (1) the obligation to pay additional “alimony” of $432.69 per month for 12 years, regardless of remarriage or death, to cover the monthly first mortgage payments on the former marital home; (2) the assumption of a second mortgage on the home; (3) the assumption of a bank note secured by the ex-spouse’s car; and (4) payment of the ex-spouse’s law school expenses. Bedingfield v. Bedingfield, 42 Bankr. 641 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Evidence of unvested retirement funds was relevant and admissible on the issue of alimony. Courtney v. Courtney, 256 Ga. 97, 344 S.E.2d 421 (1986).

Discovery of information regarding trust. — When the husband was a beneficiary and cotrustee of a trust, the sole asset of which was stock in a company owned by members of his family, the wife was entitled to production at a deposition of certain evidence, including testimony and documents regarding the formation of the trust, the value and financial records of the company, and the compensation and benefits that the husband received from the company, although the company was entitled to an order which would provide reasonable protection for the company’s legitimate proprietary concerns regarding the company's financial information. McGinn v. McGinn, 273 Ga. 292, 540 S.E.2d 604 (2001).

Trust to fund future payments authorized. — Discretion accorded trial courts under the child support guidelines included authorizing the use of a trust to secure unaccrued child support obligations. Henry v. Beacham, 301 Ga. App. 160, 686 S.E.2d 892 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0537, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 350 (Ga. 2010).

Child support order properly created a trust to secure unaccrued child support obligations because it was in the child's best interests since the father had numerous other child support obligations, he had been in arrears of a temporary support order, and he spent large amounts of money while having large debts. Henry v. Beacham, 301 Ga. App. 160, 686 S.E.2d 892 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0537, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 350 (Ga. 2010).

Factors to be Considered

Question of alimony cannot be determined by mathematical formula as the facts and circumstances in each case are different. Worrell v. Worrell, 242 Ga. 44, 247 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

In absence of any mathematical formula, jurors are given wide latitude in fixing the amount of alimony and child support, and to this end jurors are to use their experience as enlightened persons in judging the amount necessary for support under the evidence as disclosed by the record and all the facts and circumstances of the case. McNally v. McNally, 223 Ga. 246, 154 S.E.2d 209 (1967); Worrell v. Worrell, 242 Ga. 44, 247 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Alimony should be adjusted to wife's necessities and consistent with husband's ability to pay. Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954).

Necessities of the wife, when entitled to alimony, and the husband's ability to pay alimony, are the controlling factors to be considered and followed in making an allowance for alimony; thus, awards therefor which are substantially disproportionate to either should not be permitted to stand. Fried v. Fried, 211 Ga. 149, 84 S.E.2d 576 (1954); Childs v. Childs, 224 Ga. 531, 163 S.E.2d 693 (1968); Baldwin v. Baldwin, 226 Ga. 680, 177 S.E.2d 85 (1970); Moon v. Moon, 237 Ga. 635, 229 S.E.2d 440 (1976).

Controlling factors to be considered by the jury in making an award of permanent alimony and child support are the necessities of the wife and the husband's ability to pay. McCarthy v. McCarthy, 225 Ga. 326, 168 S.E.2d 164 (1969).

Two controlling factors in determining whether or not an alimony or child support award is excessive are the wife's and children's need for the award and the husband's ability to pay the award. Worrell v. Worrell, 242 Ga. 44, 247 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Ability to earn income is one factor which may be considered by the jury in awarding alimony to the wife, and it may award alimony on this basis although the husband may be temporarily impoverished. Worrell v. Worrell, 242 Ga. 44, 247 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Expert may testify regarding a husband's future earning capacity to the extent the wife contends that differs from his present income. Lowery v. Lowery, 262 Ga. 20, 413 S.E.2d 731 (1992).

Property as well as income of husband is considered in determining ability to pay alimony. Weiner v. Weiner, 219 Ga. 44, 131 S.E.2d 561 (1963).

Portion of proceeds from future sale of nonmarital property as alimony was not error. — Award of alimony to the wife in the form of a portion of the proceeds of a future sale was proper as the award was clearly made for the wife's maintenance and support; the trial court determined that the wife's earning capacity was diminished due to an unspecified disability, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5, and it appeared that in practicality, the marital home was the only non-liquid asset from which an award of alimony could be made. Smelser v. Smelser, 280 Ga. 92, 623 S.E.2d 480 (2005).

Evidence of husband's debts is relevant in determining his financial status; evidence of a wife's debts is also relevant to a proper determination of alimony. Kosikowski v. Kosikowski, 240 Ga. 381, 240 S.E.2d 846 (1977).

Reasonable allowance under all circumstances is proper even though husband has no property or employment. Mulcay v. Mulcay, 223 Ga. 309, 154 S.E.2d 607 (1967).

Jury is authorized to consider wife's separate estate. This has reference to the estate's size and amount at the time of the dissolution of the marriage. Howard v. Howard, 228 Ga. 760, 187 S.E.2d 868 (1972).

Separate estate and earning capacity of the wife should be considered by the jury in determining alimony. Moon v. Moon, 237 Ga. 635, 229 S.E.2d 440 (1976).

Source of wife's estate is not relevant to any issue which the jury must decide. Howard v. Howard, 228 Ga. 760, 187 S.E.2d 868 (1972).

Jury may also take account of spouse's sacrifice of earning potential. — If, to please the husband, the wife devotes her energy and time to the home and family, thereby sacrificing her public earning potential, the jury should be able to take these factors into consideration in awarding alimony to her. Moon v. Moon, 237 Ga. 635, 229 S.E.2d 440 (1976).

Wife's manner of living, her material resources, and her income, if any, are factors jury may consider in determining what amount may be necessary for the support and maintenance of the wife. Kosikowski v. Kosikowski, 240 Ga. 381, 240 S.E.2d 846 (1977).

Given that the financial statements of both parties and the transcript of the final hearing established that the trial court considered the length of the marriage, the wife's absence from the labor market while giving birth to and raising six children, and the disadvantages associated with the wife's late arrival into employment outside the home, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in awarding the wife 12 years of alimony. Rieffel v. Rieffel, 281 Ga. 891, 644 S.E.2d 140 (2007).

Jury may take into account wife's former position in community as the wife of the defendant husband, her manner of living, her material resources and her income, if any. Moon v. Moon, 237 Ga. 635, 229 S.E.2d 440 (1976).

Jury may consider social standing and luxuries of life which spouse had been enjoying and would have continued to enjoy had there been no separation. Bodrey v. Bodrey, 246 Ga. 122, 269 S.E.2d 14 (1980).

In determining amount of alimony, jury may also consider such factors as age and health of the parties involved. Worrell v. Worrell, 242 Ga. 44, 247 S.E.2d 847 (1978).

Age, health, mental resources, and other factors considered. — On the husband's ability to pay, the jury may take into consideration his age, the condition of his health, his material resources, his present income, and any previous allowance voluntarily made by the husband for the support of the wife. Fried v. Fried, 211 Ga. 149, 84 S.E.2d 576 (1954).

In determining what amount may be necessary for the support and maintenance of the wife, the jury may take into consideration the wife's age, the condition of her health, her former position in the community as the wife of the defendant and her manner of living, her material resources, and her income, if any. Fried v. Fried, 211 Ga. 149, 84 S.E.2d 576 (1954).

Obligation by one spouse concerning child may be relevant in deciding alimony. Kosikowski v. Kosikowski, 240 Ga. 381, 240 S.E.2d 846 (1977).

Questions of innocence or guilt are irrelevant in fixing amount of alimony. Such matters are proper considerations in deciding whether to grant or deny alimony, but not in fixing alimony's amount. Hall v. Hall, 220 Ga. 677, 141 S.E.2d 400 (1965).

Jury is not authorized to consider the conduct or misconduct of either party in a suit for alimony as to the question of the amount of alimony. McCurry v. McCurry, 223 Ga. 334, 155 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Lump sum alimony amount excessive when no evidence of spouse's present or future ability to pay. — Judgment for alimony in a lump sum for the benefit of the wife, which, from all the evidence, the husband could not presently pay, and under all reasonable inferences authorized by the evidence could not be paid in the future from his anticipated income was without evidence to support it, excessive and contrary to law. Weatherford v. Weatherford, 204 Ga. 553, 50 S.E.2d 323 (1948).

Military retirement pay as subject to alimony. — Subjecting the appellee's military pension to distribution as alimony did not conflict with the mandate of U.S. Supreme Court decision protecting military retirement benefits from distribution as community property in a divorce action since Georgia law protects the ex-spouse by awarding alimony based on need and does not grant absolute right to one-half of such pension. Stumpf v. Stumpf, 249 Ga. 759, 294 S.E.2d 488 (1982).

Jury can hear evidence concerning all of the appellee's assets, including the appellee's military retirement pay, as relevant to an award of alimony, and the trial court erred when the court entered an order keeping evidence of such retirement pay from the jury. Stumpf v. Stumpf, 249 Ga. 759, 294 S.E.2d 488 (1982).

Contingent fee agreements are too remote, speculative, and uncertain to be considered marital assets in making an equitable division of property. Goldstein v. Goldstein, 262 Ga. 136, 414 S.E.2d 474 (1992).

Wife's caring for dependent child is relevant in estimating income available from her separate estate. — Wife's manner of living, her material resources, and her income, if any, are factors the jury may take into consideration in determining what amount may be necessary for her support and maintenance, thus wife's fulfilling of her maternal obligations to a dependent adult son is relevant to her manner of living and pertains directly to estimating any income she might have available from her separate estate. McDonald v. McDonald, 248 Ga. 702, 285 S.E.2d 711 (1982).

Burden of showing alimony obligation. — When the settlement agreement in a divorce provided that the husband would pay the wife $200 per month alimony for six years, and would thereafter pay $100 in alimony "permanently," and the wife subsequently remarried, the word "permanently" as used in this agreement was ambiguous and therefore insufficient to meet the exception to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5 that when "otherwise provided" an alimony obligation does not terminate upon remarriage (obligation created prior to decision in Daopoulos v. Daopoulos, 257 Ga. 71, 354 S.E.2d 828 (1987)). Edwards v. Benefield, 260 Ga. 236, 392 S.E.2d 1 (1990).

Retirement benefits considered. — Trial court did not err in considering a husband's future retirement benefits under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974, 45 U.S.C. § 231 et seq., as income to the husband for purposes of determining an adequate alimony award pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5; there was no violation of the Supremacy Clause of U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 2, as there was no conflict with federal law by the state court's consideration of the benefits in a family law context. Lanier v. Lanier, 278 Ga. 881, 608 S.E.2d 213 (2005).

Denial of alimony upheld. — Wife failed to establish that a trial court manifestly abused the trial court's discretion in denying the wife's claim for alimony based on her allegations that the husband abandoned the family; failed to support the couple's minor child; and caused the marital house to go into foreclosure as there was also evidence before the trial court that the wife initiated the parties' separation; that the wife was gainfully employed and had been so throughout most of the marriage; that the wife failed to cooperate with the husband in taking steps to alleviate the family's financial problems; that the wife had mismanaged marital funds and run up extravagant bills; that the wife failed to take advantage of low-cost health insurance coverage for the couple's minor child provided by the husband's employer; and that the wife unilaterally sold or otherwise disposed of the husband's share of the couple's personal property. Jackson v. Jackson, 282 Ga. 459, 651 S.E.2d 92 (2007).

Award of lump-sum alimony upheld on appeal. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by failing to consider the factors set forth under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5 because a review of the bench trial transcript showed that, prior to entering a lump-sum alimony in one spouse's favor, the trial court considered extensive testimony regarding all of the relevant factors set forth in § 19-6-5(a), including both parties' employment, assets, debts, income streams, and potential for future earnings; moreover, despite the other spouse's contrary claim, the award was not entered in order to prevent the other spouse from discharging the award in bankruptcy. Wood v. Wood, 283 Ga. 8, 655 S.E.2d 611 (2008).

Award of alimony appropriate based on consideration of factors. — Alimony award of $1,000 in a divorce action was appropriate because the trial court properly considered, under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5(a), each parties' gross income and living conditions, the duration of the marriage, and the age and physical conditions of the parties. Arkwright v. Arkwright, 284 Ga. 545, 668 S.E.2d 709 (2008).

Lump sum alimony award to a wife of monthly payments of $5,000 for the first year, $4,000 for the following two years, and $3,000 for the final year was proper because there was evidence supporting the trial court's finding that the wife was capable of updating skills and reentering the work force, and the trial court's consideration of the parties' respective financial resources. Patel v. Patel, 285 Ga. 391, 677 S.E.2d 114 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in setting alimony at $1,250 per month, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-1(c) and 19-6-5(a), because the trial court properly considered, inter alia, the value of the husband's pension, the overwhelming marital debt, the husband's contribution of inherited assets to the marriage, and the wife's recent promotion, accompanied by a raise in salary and benefits. Hammond v. Hammond, 290 Ga. 518, 722 S.E.2d 729 (2012).

Award of alimony erroneous because record completely devoid of any evidence of spouse's ability to pay. — Trial court's award of lump sum alimony in the amount of $36,500 was erroneous because although the spouse's need for resources to meet reasonable housing desires and expected medical bills justified an award of alimony, the record was completely devoid of any evidence of the other spouse's ability to pay the lump sum alimony award; the paying spouse's separate estate consisted solely of an asset that could not be transferred or otherwise converted into cash, and a $500 a week income. Coker v. Coker, 286 Ga. 20, 685 S.E.2d 70 (2009).

Court free to consider parties entire relationship including cohabitation period. — Alimony award was not improper because, inter alia, under the catchall provision of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5(a)(8), the trial court was free to consider the parties' entire relationship, including periods of premarital cohabitation, in determining alimony. Sprouse v. Sprouse, 285 Ga. 468, 678 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

Effect of Remarriage

Right to receive alimony ceases upon remarriage. Woodward v. Woodward, 245 Ga. 550, 266 S.E.2d 170 (1980).

Summary judgment was properly granted to a former husband in his declaratory judgment action, seeking a determination that his obligation to make "periodic alimony" payments to his former wife pursuant to the parties' divorce settlement agreement ceased upon the wife's remarriage pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5(b) as the settlement agreement was clear and unambiguous in its designation of certain payments as a form of periodic alimony rather than as equitable distribution; contract interpretation principles under O.C.G.A. §§ 13-2-2(4) and 13-2-3 supported that interpretation of the agreement. Crosby v. Lebert, 285 Ga. 297, 676 S.E.2d 192 (2009).

Statute dealt with remarriage and did not apply to husband's obligations under contract between the parties, made the judgment of the court in a divorce decree, which constituted a part of the "property settlement" between the parties. Vereen v. Arp, 237 Ga. 241, 227 S.E.2d 331 (1976); Hollandsworth v. Hollandsworth, 242 Ga. 790, 251 S.E.2d 532 (1979).

The 1966 amendment to former Code 1933, § 30-209 refers only to "permanent alimony" and did not apply to "property settlement," and would not, therefore, be applicable to the provisions of a contract making property divisions. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 223 Ga. 609, 157 S.E.2d 268 (1967).

Provision in statute for termination of alimony on remarriage was not applicable to property settlement. Newell v. Newell, 237 Ga. 708, 229 S.E.2d 449 (1976).

Alimony in lump sum is in nature of property settlement, whether designated as such or as alimony. Newell v. Newell, 237 Ga. 708, 229 S.E.2d 449 (1976); Hamilton v. Finch, 238 Ga. 78, 230 S.E.2d 881 (1976); Elliott v. Elliott, 243

Ga. 160, 253 S.E.2d 88 (1979).

Lump sum award for alimony is not divested by remarriage when the jury has not specified otherwise. Davis v. Welch, 220 Ga. 515, 140 S.E.2d 199 (1965).

Statute releasing a husband from his obligation to pay permanent alimony has reference only to installment payments in the future and not to a lump sum obligation. Eastland v. Candler, 226 Ga. 588, 176 S.E.2d 89 (1970).

Remarriage prior to awarding of alimony bars payment of lump sum and periodic payments of alimony. Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977).

Any lump sum or periodic alimony is barred by remarriage if the former wife remarries prior to the entry of the final judgment. Kristensen v. Kristensen, 240 Ga. 670, 242 S.E.2d 132 (1978).

Settlement agreement of parties, incorporated into divorce decree, is property settlement agreement. Elliott v. Elliott, 243 Ga. 160, 253 S.E.2d 88 (1979).

It was not necessary for agreement incorporated into decree to provide expressly that alimony shall cease upon remarriage because the statute expressly provided that such obligations cease upon remarriage unless otherwise provided. Burns v. Rivers, 244 Ga. 631, 261 S.E.2d 581 (1979).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5 basically applies to unperformed obligations to make installment payments of alimony. Moore v. Moore, 249 Ga. 27, 287 S.E.2d 185 (1982).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5 does not apply to unperformed obligations to effectuate property settlements. Moore v. Moore, 249 Ga. 27, 287 S.E.2d 185 (1982).

Installment payments under lump sum agreement incorporated in decree are due even after remarriage. Hamilton v. Finch, 238 Ga. 78, 230 S.E.2d 881 (1976).

Periodic payments to be made until sum certain has been paid is property settlement, and remarriage will not terminate the husband's responsibility to continue making the payments. Wimpey v. Pope, 246 Ga. 545, 272 S.E.2d 278 (1980).

When installments relate to real property, the installments are items of property settlement, not terminable upon wife's remarriage. Solomon v. Solomon, 241 Ga. 188, 244 S.E.2d 2 (1978).

Payment of mortgage. — When the agreement between the parties does not provide for any alimony payments for the support of the wife, but is more in the nature of a property settlement, and the agreement sub judice provides for a sum certain by providing that the monthly payments "shall continue until the mortgage is full paid," the obligation to make the mortgage payments is a lump sum settlement to be paid in installments and is not permanent alimony. Bennett v. Bennett, 236 Ga. 764, 225 S.E.2d 264 (1976).

Section not applicable when evidence shows intent that payments continue despite remarriage. — When it appeared from the agreement itself that the parties contemplated payments made would coincide with the period of time when the children were to be supported and would survive the wife's remarriage, even though the payments were in the nature of alimony to the wife, under the facts the parties themselves provided otherwise to allow the payments to continue, and the provisions of the statute which would automatically terminate the payments upon the wife's remarriage did not apply. Wiley v. Wiley, 243 Ga. 271, 253 S.E.2d 750 (1979).

Express inclusion of gross amount is indicative of intent that recipient receive it without termination in the event of remarriage, etc., whereas the contrary intent is indicated when no gross amount is given. Nash v. Nash, 244 Ga. 749, 262 S.E.2d 64 (1979).

Provision that alimony not cease upon remarriage authorized. — Trial court was authorized to provide in a final divorce decree that alimony obligations would not cease upon wife's remarriage. Allen v. Allen, 265 Ga. 53, 452 S.E.2d 767 (1995).

Jury verdict different from decree. — Even though the jury's verdict did not specify that the husband's alimony obligations terminated upon the wife's remarriage, inclusion of such provision in the final decree was not erroneous under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5. Metzler v. Metzler, 267 Ga. 892, 485 S.E.2d 459 (1997).

Court construes alimony obligation. — In deciding whether the alimony obligation terminated upon the former spouse's remarriage, the trial court must construe the alimony obligation to determine whether the parties have "provided otherwise" to avoid termination of alimony on remarriage. Fisher v. Fredrickson, 262 Ga. 229, 416 S.E.2d 512 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Andrews v. Whitaker, 265 Ga. 76, 433 S.E.2d 735 (1995).

Alimony obligation did not survive the wife's remarriage when the settlement agreement did not contain language from which it could be concluded that the alimony obligation would continue following the wife's remarriage, nor language creating an ambiguity regarding the issue. Crosby v. Tomlinson, 263 Ga. 522, 436 S.E.2d 8 (1993).

Resulting trust is not alimony, and right to claim the trust is not barred by remarriage of one of the parties. Price v. Price, 243 Ga. 4, 252 S.E.2d 402 (1979).

Father's duty to provide support and maintenance for minor children does not cease with wife's remarriage. Wimpey v. Pope, 246 Ga. 545, 272 S.E.2d 278 (1980).

Defendant's payments on mobile home which are in nature of support for children are not "periodic alimony." Wimpey v. Pope, 246 Ga. 545, 272 S.E.2d 278 (1980).

Attorney's fees are part of temporary alimony, and remarriage does not preclude such award. Kristensen v. Kristensen, 240 Ga. 670, 242 S.E.2d 132 (1978).

Effect of remarriage on I.R.S. presumption of alimony's deductibility. — In Georgia, the remarriage of a former wife operates to deprive a divorced husband of the I.R.S.'s presumption of tax deductible alimony status for lump-sum payments unless the divorce decree specifically provides for the continuation of alimony. Strealdorf v. Commissioner, 726 F.2d 1521 (11th Cir. 1984).

Property set aside as wife's separate property remains such, notwithstanding parties' remarriage to each other. — Property which, on granting of divorce, was set aside to wife and became her sole and separate property remains her separate estate, notwithstanding divorced parties are subsequently remarried to each other. Moore v. Moore, 249 Ga. 27, 287 S.E.2d 185 (1982).

Burden of showing alimony obligation after remarriage. — In order for a court to hold that an instrument "provides otherwise" than the general rule that remarriage terminates permanent alimony obligations within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-5, it must expressly refer to remarriage of the recipient and specify that event shall not terminate the permanent alimony obligations created thereby and be clear and unequivocal. Daopoulos v. Daopoulos, 257 Ga. 71, 354 S.E.2d 828 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Separation agreement not addressing alimony. — Since the separation agreement entered into between the deceased and his common-law wife did not address the issue of alimony, O.C.G.A. § 19-6-7 does not apply; the agreement contained mutual promises regarding visitation, child support, and the division of the real and personal property of the parties, yet did not specifically address any matters regarding alimony or spousal maintenance. Beals v. Beals, 203 Ga. App. 81, 416 S.E.2d 301, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 301 (1992).

Regular periodical payments of alimony are terminated upon husband's death, in the absence, at least, of some stipulation in the order which would require payments after the husband's death. Berry v. Berry, 208 Ga. 285, 66 S.E.2d 336 (1951), for comment, see 14 Ga. B.J. 240 (1951).

When alimony is awarded solely to the wife by a decree of court, and the decree does not specifically provide that the alimony payments shall continue after the death of the husband, the wife's claim for alimony is terminated upon the husband's death. Ramsay v. Sims, 209 Ga. 228, 71 S.E.2d 639 (1952), overruled on other grounds, Dolvin v. Dolvin, 248 Ga. 439, 284 S.E.2d 254 (1981).

Obligation to pay alimony terminates upon the death of the obligor, absent, of course, a clear express agreement to the contrary. Dolvin v. Dolvin, 248 Ga. 439, 284 S.E.2d 254 (1981).

Valid contracts settling property enforceable after death of party. — Valid and enforceable contract may be made by a husband and wife, when they are living in a bona fide state of separation, settling all issues as to alimony for the wife, and providing for the support of minor children. When such a contract is made, providing for the settlement of questions pertaining to the joint property, and provision is made for the support of minor children, it is a general rule that such contracts are valid and enforceable after the death of the husband. Ramsay v. Sims, 209 Ga. 228, 71 S.E.2d 639 (1952), overruled on other grounds, Dolvin v. Dolvin, 248 Ga. 439, 284 S.E.2d 254 (1981).

Doctrine of virtual or equitable legitimation. — When decedent's actions indicated that he was in the process of taking all the necessary steps to ensure that the child whom he and the appellant cohabitant had conceived would be born into a legitimate family environment, and everything necessary for his divorce from his estranged wife was complete except for the final decree, and there was clear and convincing evidence that decedent intended for his unborn child to be born into a legitimate family environment, his unexpected death will not defeat the claim of the child, who may inherit under the doctrine of virtual legitimation. Simpson v. King, 259 Ga. 420, 383 S.E.2d 120 (1989).

Allowance of permanent alimony bars wife of her rights to year's support from her husband's estate. Stewart v. Stewart, 43 Ga. 294 (1871); Harris v. Davis, 115 Ga. 950, 42 S.E. 266 (1902); Hall v. First Nat'l Bank, 89 Ga. App. 853, 81 S.E.2d 522, cert. denied, 348 U.S. 896, 75 S. Ct. 215, 99 L. Ed. 704 (1954).

If permanent alimony is either granted by judgment of a court, or the alimony suit is settled by contract between the parties, whereby she accepts money or property in settlement of the claim for permanent alimony, and such contract is not annulled by subsequent cohabitation and reconciliation, it bars her of her right of year's support from her husband's estate, and she ceases to have any further interest in his estate in her right as wife. McKie v. McKie, 213 Ga. 582, 100 S.E.2d 580 (1957).

Effect of settlement contract executed in lieu of alimony. — When there was a valid contract between husband and wife, "in settlement of all claims for alimony, attorney's fees, and support of herself, which have accrued or may accrue afterwards," and when it was stipulated in the same contract that the wife released the husband from "any and all obligations to make further provision for her support," the wife had no further interest in the husband's estate for year's support. Gore v. Plair, 173 Ga. 88, 159 S.E. 698 (1931).

Claim sustainable under oral agreement. — O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-7 and 19-6-8 did not apply to bar surviving husband's claim of year's support against wife's estate because they do not encompass oral agreements that fail to provide or otherwise address alimony or support issues. Bird v. Bishop, 207 Ga. App. 11, 427 S.E.2d 301 (1993).

19-6-8. Voluntary separation, abandonment, or driving off of spouse — Agreement for support as bar to alimony.

In cases of voluntary separation or in cases where one spouse, against the will of that spouse, is abandoned or driven off by the other spouse, a party voluntarily, by contract or other written agreement made with his spouse, may make an adequate provision for the support and maintenance of such spouse, consistent with the means of the party and the former circumstances of the spouse. Such an agreement shall be a bar to the right of the spouse to permanent alimony. (Orig. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability of section. — Statute had no application to cases after parties' agreement was made court's judgment of permanent alimony. Stanton v. Stanton, 223 Ga. 664, 157 S.E.2d 453 (1967).

Provisions of statute must not be confused with temporary alimony settlements. Finch v. Finch, 213 Ga. 199, 97 S.E.2d 576 (1957).

Voluntary deed as bar to permanent alimony is limited to two instances, voluntary separation or when the wife, against her will, is abandoned or driven off by the husband, and it contemplates the release of the husband from the wife's claims for permanent alimony. Stanton v. Stanton, 223 Ga. 664, 157 S.E.2d 453 (1967).

Action by wife based solely upon contract for support is not action for alimony or an "alimony case" within the constitutional provision relating to jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Hayes v. Hayes, 191 Ga. 237, 11 S.E.2d 764 (1940).

Agreement for separate support allowance to wife. — Valid agreement may be made between husband and wife, contemplating immediate separation, for a separate allowance to the wife for her support. Green v. Starling, 203 Ga. 10, 45 S.E.2d 188 (1947).

Support contract valid whether made after separation or immediately before. — Contract providing for the wife's support which is made after a separation has taken place, or immediately before a separation which has already been determined upon, is valid and enforceable. Richards v. Richards, 85 Ga. App. 605, 69 S.E.2d 911 (1952).

Separation agreement void when provisions tend to promote dissolution of marriage. — Agreement pleaded by husband as a bar to the right of wife to be awarded alimony, containing provision that either party "may at any time bring his or her action for divorce, and the same will not be contested, provided the proceeding is based upon some other lawful ground than that which will involve the character or chastity of either party of this agreement," rendered the agreement void as tending to promote a dissolution of the marriage relation, and constituted no bar to the claim of the wife for alimony in a divorce proceeding subsequently instituted by the husband. Law v. Law, 186 Ga. 113, 197 S.E. 272 (1938).

Estoppel when one accepts benefits under separation agreement. — When one accepts benefits under separation agreement, one is estopped to set aside divorce decree which gave rise to the agreement. Sikes v. Sikes, 231 Ga. 105, 200 S.E.2d 259 (1973).

Effect of voluntary cohabitation upon support agreement. — Upon subsequent voluntary cohabitation, a separation support agreement shall be annulled and set aside. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Return of property received under agreement. — It is not necessary for wife to return property received under agreement in order for the subsequent voluntary cohabitation to render the agreement a nullity. The husband effectually gave his consent to annulling the agreement by resuming the marital status. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Contract for installment payments enforceable by executor. — When the husband promises to pay a lump sum for the wife's support, payable in installments, and the wife dies before all the installments are paid, her executor may sue for the unpaid installments as they severally mature. Melton v. Hubbard, 135 Ga. 128, 68 S.E. 1101 (1910).

Decree should accurately reflect a settlement reached by the parties; therefore, the trial court cannot be allowed to make substantive additions in voluntary agreements made before the court. Robinson v. Robinson, 261 Ga. 330, 404 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Claim sustainable under oral agreement. — O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-7 and 19-6-8 did not apply to bar surviving husband's claim of year's support against wife's estate because they do not encompass oral agreements that fail to provide or otherwise address alimony or support issues. Bird v. Bishop, 207 Ga. App. 11, 427 S.E.2d 301 (1993).

19-6-9. Voluntary separation, abandonment, or driving off of spouse — Equity may compel support.

Absent the making of a voluntary contract or other agreement, as provided in Code Section 19-6-8, and on the application of a party, the court, exercising its equitable powers, may compel the spouse of the party to make provision for the support of the party and such minor children as may be in the custody of the party. (Orig. Code 1863, § 1695; Code 1868, § 1738; Code 1873, § 1746; Code 1882, § 1746; Civil Code 1895, § 2466; Civil Code 1910, § 2985; Code 1933, § 30-212; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 17.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Statute was constitutional and any modification or repeal must necessarily be made by the General Assembly of Georgia and not by the court. Murphy v. Murphy, 232 Ga. 352, 206 S.E.2d 458 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 929, 95 S. Ct. 1656, 44 L. Ed. 2d 87 (1975).

Statute plainly provides for alimony which may be sought in the wife’s suit for divorce, her suit for alimony alone, or in a suit by the husband for divorce. The wife’s right cannot be defeated by a failure of the husband to obtain a divorce. Ridgeway v. Ridgeway, 224 Ga. 310, 161 S.E.2d 866 (1968).

Right to sue for alimony without suing for divorce. — Wife has right to sue her husband for alimony, after voluntary separation, without suing for divorce, and without the necessity of showing a legal residence as required in a suit for divorce. Craig v. Craig, 53 Ga. App. 632, 186 S.E. 755 (1936).

Court may render judgment affecting property to enforce alimony claims. — Under additional powers given by the statutes, having incidental equity jurisdiction over the res of property within its territory, a court may render a valid judgment in rem with respect to such property when necessary to enforce the wife's claim to permanent alimony. Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga. 461, 192 S.E. 191 (1937).

Personal jurisdiction over nonresident in former spouse's action to terminate alimony. — Action of nonresident wife in bringing suit in Georgia to domesticate foreign divorce decree does not constitute the "transaction of business" so as to permit Georgia courts to assert in personam jurisdiction over her in husband's subsequent actions to terminate alimony. Stone v. Stone, 254 Ga. 519, 330 S.E.2d 887 (1985).

19-6-10. Voluntary separation, abandonment, or driving off of spouse — Petition for alimony or child support when no divorce pending — Notice; hearing; order and enforcement; equitable remedies; decree in equity; effect of filing for divorce.

When spouses are living separately or in a bona fide state of separation and there is no action for divorce pending, either party, on the party's own behalf or on the behalf of the minor children in the party's custody, if any, may institute a proceeding by petition, setting forth fully the party's case. Upon three days' notice to the other party, the judge may hear the same and may grant such order as he might grant were it based on a pending petition for divorce, to be enforced in the same manner, together with any other remedy applicable in equity, such as appointing a receiver and the like. Should the petition proceed to a hearing before a jury, the jury may render a verdict which shall provide the factual basis for equitable relief as in Code Section 19-6-9. However, such proceeding shall be held in abeyance when a petition for divorce is filed bona fide by either party and the judge presiding has made his order on the motion for alimony. When so made, the order shall be a substitute for the aforesaid decree in equity as long as the petition is pending and is not finally disposed of on the merits. (Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

VOLUNTARY SEPARATION

DETERMINING ALIMONY AND CHILD SUPPORT

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Act of October 28, 1870, from which Ga. L. 1870, p. 413, was taken, was not unconstitutional as referring to more than one subject matter, or as containing matter different from that expressed in its title. An examination of the Act will show that alimony and custody of children was the only subject matter referred to therein. Halleman v. Halleman, 65 Ga. 476 (1880).

Intention of legislature was to deny alimony actions when divorce was pending in this state, but not to deny the right to maintain such action when a divorce action was pending in another state. Ward v. Ward, 223 Ga. 868, 159 S.E.2d 81 (1968).

It was clearly the legislative intention that questions of alimony shall be determined in a divorce action, if one was pending; and that an application for permanent alimony could be filed only in those instances when no divorce action was pending. Ward v. Ward, 223 Ga. 868, 159 S.E.2d 81 (1968).

Action for permanent alimony and action for divorce have different purposes but both grow out of the marriage relationship, and relate to the same subject matter. Ward v. Ward, 223 Ga. 868, 159 S.E.2d 81 (1968).

Former Code 1933, § 30-213 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10) was to be construed and applied in connection with former Code 1933, §§ 30-202, 30-203, 30-204, and 30-205 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-3), which authorized the judge to grant temporary alimony in actions for divorce or actions for permanent alimony where the parties are living in a bona fide state of separation. When so considered and applied, former Code 1933, § 30-213 (see O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10) authorized the judge, on application of the wife upon three days' notice to the husband, to grant alimony. Evans v. Evans, 191 Ga. 752, 14 S.E.2d 95 (1941).

Former Code 1933, § 30-213 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10) should be construed and applied in connection with former Code 1933, §§ 30-211 and 30-212 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-8 and 19-6-9), which authorize a husband by deed to make provision for his wife in lieu of alimony, but on failure to make such provision voluntarily he may be compelled to do so in equity. Evans v. Evans, 191 Ga. 752, 14 S.E.2d 95 (1941).

Statute plainly provided for alimony which may be sought in action for alimony alone. The wife's right cannot be defeated by a failure of the husband to obtain a divorce. Ridgeway v. Ridgeway, 224 Ga. 310, 161 S.E.2d 866 (1968).

Statute did not operate to deny maintenance of alimony action when divorce was pending in another state at the time the proceeding for alimony was filed in this state. Hicks v. Hicks, 226 Ga. 798, 177 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

Statute, insofar as the statute required personal service upon the other party, applied only when no divorce was pending at the time such action for alimony was filed and when an original action for alimony was filed and when the original action for alimony and separate maintenance was brought by the wife against the husband while the parties are living separate and apart. Walker v. Walker, 228 Ga. 615, 187 S.E.2d 289 (1972).

Court cannot award alimony if proceedings were not under former Code 1933, § 30-202 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-3) for temporary alimony pending divorce under former Code 1933, § 30-213 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10) for alimony if no action for divorce was pending, these being the only two instances when a court can award alimony. Henderson v. Henderson, 86 Ga. App. 812, 72 S.E.2d 731 (1952).

Cause of separation was immaterial in a suit under this statute. Glass v. Wynn, 76 Ga. 319 (1886).

That cause of separation is immaterial does not establish inviolable rule that the mere fact of separation (not mutually voluntary) will give to the wife the right of alimony. Coley v. Coley, 128 Ga. 654, 58 S.E. 205 (1907); Sikes v. Sikes, 143 Ga. 314, 85 S.E. 193 (1915).

Wife cannot maintain proceeding under statute against husband who was minor, without a guardian ad litem. Huley v. Huley, 154 Ga. 321, 114 S.E. 184 (1922).

Joinder of parties. — In a proceeding for alimony, injunction and receiver and other necessary relief may be granted, and to this end all necessary parties may be joined as defendants with the husband. Price v. Price, 90 Ga. 244, 15 S.E. 774 (1892); Kirchman v. Kirchman, 212 Ga. 488, 93 S.E.2d 685 (1956).

General provisions regarding service of process did not apply to proceeding for alimony. In such cases there are special statutory methods of service, and in them there are no provisions for service upon the opposite party by leaving a copy at that person's place of residence or most notorious place of abode. In these instances, personal service was necessary. Strickland v. Willingham, 49 Ga. App. 355, 175 S.E. 605 (1934).

Notice required by statute must be served upon defendant personally, and not upon defendant's counsel, and the service must be personal, and made by the sheriff or a deputy in order to confer upon the court jurisdiction of the defendant and the subject-matter. Stallings v. Stallings, 127 Ga. 464, 56 S.E. 469 (1907); Chapman v. Chapman, 157 Ga. 330, 121 S.E. 328 (1924).

Leaving notice at defendant's most notorious place of abode is insufficient to give the court jurisdiction. Baldwin v. Baldwin, 116 Ga. 471, 42 S.E. 727 (1902).

Voluntary Separation

Wife has right to sue for alimony, after voluntary separation, without suing for divorce, and without the necessity of showing a legal residence as required in a suit for divorce. Craig v.

Craig, 53 Ga. App. 632, 186 S.E. 755 (1936).

By the terms of the statute, provision was made for the grant of alimony when the husband and wife shall be living separate, or shall be bona fide in a state of separation, and there shall be no action for divorce pending. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 236 Ga. 425, 223 S.E.2d 818 (1976).

Action for separate maintenance was separate from divorce action. — Although an action for separate maintenance and an action for divorce both grow out of the marriage relationship and relate to the same subject matter, they have different purposes and raise different questions. An action for separate maintenance is authorized when spouses are living separately or in a bona fide state of separation and there is no action for divorce pending, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10. Pampattiwar v. Hinson, 326 Ga. App. 163, 756 S.E.2d 246 (2014).

Agreement to live apart constitutes voluntary separation. — When a husband and wife agreed that she should live at her sister's (he living at a different place), and that he would support her, it amounted to a voluntary separation, and a petition for alimony could be brought. Hawes v. Hawes, 66 Ga. 142 (1880).

Spouse need not show grounds for divorce if bona fide voluntary separation shown. — If a wife brings an action for temporary and permanent alimony without a prayer for divorce, under former Code 1933, § 30-213 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10), and the undisputed evidence shows not only a bona fide state of separation, but that the original separation arose by mutual agreement of the parties, it was unnecessary for the wife to show cruel treatment or some other legal ground for a divorce, or that her husband had "abandoned" her or "driven her from the home," as provided by former Code 1933, §§ 30-204 and 30-210 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-4), or that acts of the husband and not of herself caused the separation, in order to authorize the judge to exercise the judge's discretion and allow temporary alimony. Fulenwider v. Fulenwider, 188 Ga. 856, 5 S.E.2d 20 (1939).

Determining Alimony and Child Support

In actions for alimony without divorce, judges are empowered to determine care and custody of minor children pending the litigation, and judges are empowered to provide for their permanent custody thereafter. Kniepkamp v. Richards, 192 Ga. 509, 16 S.E.2d 24 (1941).

Alimony granted shall be suspended "when a petition for divorce is filed bona fide by either party and the judge presiding has made his order on the motion for alimony." Shepard v. Shepard, 236 Ga. 425, 223 S.E.2d 818 (1976).

Grant of alimony when the husband and wife shall be living separate, or shall be bona fide in a state of separation, and there shall be no action for divorce pending shall be suspended when a petition for divorce shall be filed bona fide by either party, and the judge presiding shall have made the judge's order on the motion for alimony. Tobin v. Tobin, 93 Ga. App. 568, 92 S.E.2d 304 (1956).

Separate maintenance orders superseded by divorce decree. — Trial court's order setting aside prior separate maintenance orders on the basis of the husband's concession as to cohabitation with the wife was superfluous since the orders that were entered in connection with the prior separate maintenance action were superseded by a final divorce decree. Southworth v. Southworth, 265 Ga. 671, 461 S.E.2d 215 (1995).

Custody award not necessarily superseded by divorce action. — When permanent child custody has been awarded to a party in a separate maintenance proceeding, the other party is not necessarily entitled to obtain a change of custody in a subsequent divorce action because the Child Custody Intrastate Jurisdiction Act, O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 9, T. 19, acts as a constraint. Thompson v. Thompson, 241 Ga. App. 616, 526 S.E.2d 576 (1999).

Prior maintenance award superseded by permanent alimony award in divorce action. — When, in a divorce case, the trial court adjudicates the issue of permanent alimony, a prior maintenance award is entirely superseded.

Browne v. Browne, 242 Ga. 107, 249 S.E.2d 594 (1978).

When a petition for divorce is filed after a separate maintenance order has been entered, an order for alimony entered in the divorce case shall be a substitute for the separate maintenance order. Browne v. Browne, 242 Ga. 107, 249 S.E.2d 594 (1978).

When divorce decree silent as to alimony. — When such alimony as provided for by statute had been granted the wife, and subsequently a total divorce granted the husband, but the divorce decree was silent as to alimony, the divorce decree did not have the effect of rendering the alimony decree functus officio. Tobin v. Tobin, 93 Ga. App. 568, 92 S.E.2d 304 (1956); Shepard v. Shepard, 236 Ga. 425, 223 S.E.2d 818 (1976).

Subsequent divorce without alimony order not defense to liability for permanent alimony previously ordered. — When a final decree of permanent alimony has been entered, to which no exception was taken, it is no defense to the husband's liability therefor that subsequently to that judgment one of the parties obtained a total divorce, in the decree for which no reference was made to alimony. Tobin v. Tobin, 93 Ga. App. 568, 92 S.E.2d 304 (1956).

Lump sum award part of separate estate. — Lump sum alimony or property division made in a separate maintenance action becomes part of the separate estate of the party to whom it is awarded; only a periodic alimony award is affected by the subsequent award of alimony in a divorce case. Goodman v. Goodman, 253 Ga. 281, 319 S.E.2d 455 (1984).

Assets acquired after separate-maintenance judgment not subject to equitable division. — Employer and employee contributions to the husband's deferred-compensation accounts, stock-option plans, and other assets acquired after a 1980 separate-maintenance judgment were not marital property subject to equitable division, regardless of whether they were categorized as newly acquired assets or as appreciation of previously awarded assets. Goodman v. Goodman, 257 Ga. 63, 355 S.E.2d 62 (1987).

Previous award of alimony, whether temporary or permanent, is not abated by mere filing of divorce action by the wife. Roberts v. Roberts, 212 Ga. 770, 95 S.E.2d 689 (1956).

Dismissal of permanent alimony action does not bar wife's right to past due temporary alimony. — Dismissal of the action for alimony does not terminate the right of the wife to enforce the installments of temporary alimony which became due before such dismissal. Williams v. Williams, 194 Ga. 332, 21 S.E.2d 229 (1942).

Previous award of right to temporary alimony terminates on dismissal of action. — When a wife's petition for permanent and temporary alimony was dismissed for want of prosecution, a previous award of temporary alimony to the wife, based upon such petition, terminates with such dismissal. Williams v. Williams, 194 Ga. 332, 21 S.E.2d 229 (1942).

Until there is proceeding by petition, judge has no jurisdiction to grant alimony under this statute. That statute contemplated a suit with process duly issued. Wilson v. Wilson, 170 Ga. 340, 153 S.E. 9, later appeal, 170 Ga. 341, 153 S.E. 10 (1930).

Consolidation of husband's divorce action with wife's alimony action, did not eliminate separate suit under former Code 1933, § 30-213 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-10) and become merely a suit for divorce or divorce and alimony under former Code 1933, §§ 30-204 and 30-210 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-4) since the granting of a divorce was necessary to sustain a verdict for alimony. Craddock v. Foster, 205 Ga. 534, 54 S.E.2d 406 (1949).

Prior decree refusing divorce no bar. — Verdict and decree against the wife in the suit for divorce was no bar to the allowance of alimony to her in a subsequent proceeding brought under the statute. King v. King, 151 Ga. 361, 106 S.E. 906 (1921); Brisendine v. Brisendine, 152 Ga. 745, 111 S.E. 22 (1922).

Action could proceed for alimony alone when prayer for divorce stricken. — In an action in which the petitioner prayed for divorce, equitable relief, temporary and permanent alimony, and when in the course of the proceeding the prayer for divorce was stricken, the petition as amended could proceed as to alimony. Estes v. Estes, 192 Ga. 94, 14 S.E.2d 681 (1941).

When action for permanent alimony has been dismissed for want of prosecution, no further relief can be granted thereon. A petition "supplementary" to and expressly made a part of the first petition will not authorize a grant of permanent alimony or additional temporary alimony to the wife. Williams v. Williams, 194 Ga. 322, 21 S.E.2d 229 (1942).

Error to fail to instruct on what constitutes cruel treatment justifying separation and alimony. — Trial court erred in failing to instruct the jury as to what would constitute such cruel treatment as would justify the wife in leaving her husband's home and thereby bring about a state of separation so as to entitle her to permanent alimony. Atha v. Atha, 210 Ga. 540, 81 S.E.2d 454 (1954).

After a suit was brought for permanent alimony, based on a bona fide state of separation under former Code 1933, §§ 30-2504, 30-210, and 30-213 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-4 and 19-6-10), and the wife complained that she was compelled to leave her husband's home on account of cruel treatment, the most important part of the court's instructions must necessarily relate to the character of the acts and the conduct on the part of the husband which the jury would be authorized to find amounted to cruel treatment. Atha v. Atha, 210 Ga. 540, 81 S.E.2d 454 (1954).

The subsequent voluntary cohabitation of spouses, where there has been no total divorce between them, shall annul and set aside all provision made either by deed or decree for permanent alimony; provided, however, that the rights of children under any deed of separation or voluntary provision or decree for alimony shall not be affected by such subsequent voluntary cohabitation of the spouses. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Statute applies when two events occur: when parties (1) while married to each other, (2) voluntarily cohabit with each other. Travis v. Travis, 227 Ga. 406, 181 S.E.2d 61 (1971).

When section not applicable. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-12 is not applicable to cohabitation of a former husband and wife. Upton v. Duck, 249 Ga. 267, 290 S.E.2d 92 (1982).

Voluntary cohabitation subsequent to entry of separate maintenance judgment. — Court rejected the contention that, under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-12, the voluntary cohabitation of spouses, not divorced, subsequent to entry of a separate maintenance judgment, annuls and sets aside all provisions made by the deed or decree in the separate maintenance action (except as to the rights of any children). Goodman v. Goodman, 254 Ga. 703, 334 S.E.2d 179 (1985).

Statute is not applicable to situations involving total divorce and remarriage of the same parties. Travis v. Travis, 227 Ga. 406, 181 S.E.2d 61 (1971).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-12 operates so as to annul provisions for permanent alimony only if there has been subsequent voluntary cohabitation of husband and wife during their first marriage. It does not annul permanent alimony provisions if parties obtain divorce and subsequently remarry and cohabit with each other. Moore v. Moore, 249 Ga. 27, 287 S.E.2d 185 (1982).

Property set aside as wife's separate property remains such. — Property which, on granting of divorce, was set aside to wife and became her sole and separate property remains her separate estate, notwithstanding divorced parties are subsequently remarried to each other. Moore v. Moore, 249 Ga. 27, 287 S.E.2d 185 (1982).

Statute was applicable to temporary alimony, and the order for temporary alimony should be revoked on motion and proof of subsequent cohabitation. Weeks v. Weeks, 160 Ga. 369, 127 S.E. 772 (1925).

Subsequent voluntary cohabitation will render void a judgment for temporary alimony and attorney's fees for representing the wife in the alimony proceedings. Mosely v. Mosely, 181 Ga. 543, 182 S.E. 849 (1935).

"Cohabitation" means dwelling or being together as man and wife. Colvin v. Colvin, 211 Ga. 592, 87 S.E.2d 390 (1955).

Voluntary cohabitation without living in common place of abode. — If there was reconciliation in good faith upon the part of the husband and wife, and it was their intention to cohabit as husband and wife, and acting upon that reconciliation and intention, they resumed their marital status and lived together as husband and wife, there was cohabitation within the meaning of the statute. Colvin v. Colvin, 211 Ga. 592, 87 S.E.2d 390 (1955).

"Deed" includes all contracts or agreements whereby wife (now spouse) has bona fide released her husband from her claims against him for permanent alimony which she acquired by virtue of the marriage relation. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Upon subsequent voluntary cohabitation of the husband and wife all provisions made for permanent alimony, whether by deed as used in the strict sense of a land conveyance, or in its broader sense of any written instrument under seal, simple contract, or decree of court, shall be annulled and set aside. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Effect of subsequent voluntary cohabitation on permanent alimony. — Subsequent voluntary cohabitation annuls and sets aside all provisions made for permanent alimony for the wife (now either spouse). Brown v. Brown, 210 Ga. 233, 78 S.E.2d 516 (1953).

When estranged spouses reconcile and voluntarily resume cohabitation, they have restored their original marital status as fully as if the separation had not occurred, and with it they assume all the duties, obligations, and liabilities imposed by law incidental to the relation including the husband's obligation to support and maintain his wife. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Voluntary cohabitation insufficient to annul earlier property settlement. — Voluntary cohabitation was insufficient to annul an earlier separation agreement since there was no evidence showing that such settlement was in the nature of alimony, and the separation agreement itself foreclosed any award of alimony to the parties; O.C.G.A. § 19-6-12 provided authority to set aside a provision made in a separation agreement for permanent alimony alone upon cohabitation after the execution of the agreement and before total divorce. Adcock v. Adcock, 259 Ga. App. 514, 577 S.E.2d 842 (2003).

Good faith required for cohabitation to annul separation agreement. — To annul separation agreement, cohabitation relied upon must have been entered into in good faith and not as a scheme merely to avoid payment of alimony. Hill v. Guest, 216 Ga. 679, 119 S.E.2d 19 (1961).

Effect of cohabitation upon award of attorney's fees. — Cohabitation will annul decree, not only as to alimony, but also as to attorney's fees. In this respect there is no difference between permanent and temporary alimony and incidental allowance of attorney's fees. Hamby v. Pye, 195 Ga. 366, 24 S.E.2d 201 (1943).

Property need not be returned for cohabitation to render agreement void. — It is not necessary to return property received under agreement for voluntary cohabitation to render it null. The husband effectually gave his consent to annulling the agreement by resuming the marital status. Powell v. Powell, 196 Ga. 694, 27 S.E.2d 393 (1943).

Deed made in consideration of wife's agreement to resume marital relations was not rendered void by the subsequent cohabitation of the husband and wife, under the provisions of the statute. Lemon v. Lemon, 141 Ga. 448, 81 S.E. 118 (1914); Young v. Young, 150 Ga. 515, 104 S.E. 149 (1920); McClain v. McClain, 237 Ga. 80, 227 S.E.2d 5 (1976).

Cases when spouses adjust alimony, without resuming marital relation, do not fall within the statute since those cases do not involve the same principle of public policy. Hamby v. Pye, 195 Ga. 366, 24 S.E.2d 201 (1943).

Illicit relation between former spouses after divorce will not invalidate decree for alimony. Hamby v. Pye, 195 Ga. 366, 24 S.E.2d 201 (1943).

Transfer of property not annulled when not alimony. — Since there was no evidence appearing in the record that husband transferred the residence as alimony, the parties' subsequent reconciliation would not annul the conveyance. McKissick v. McKissick, 244 Ga. 425, 260 S.E.2d 334 (1979).

When the husband and wife entered into a separation agreement that created a trust for the minor children of the parties without any right to revoke retained, this created an executory trust irrevocable without the beneficiaries' consent, and the subsequent cohabitation of husband and wife cannot affect the rights of the children. Watkins v. Watkins, 64 Ga. App. 344, 13 S.E.2d 100 (1941).

Effect of subsequent cohabitation of spouses upon rights of children. — Subsequent cohabitation of spouses does not affect rights of children under any deed of separation or voluntary provisions for alimony. Kiser v. Kiser, 214 Ga. 402, 105 S.E.2d 220 (1958).

Deed cannot be canceled as a conveyance for support of the children, even though the alleged subsequent cohabitation of the grantor and grantee annulled and set aside the deed as to the alimony arrangement for the wife. Kiser v. Kiser, 214 Ga. 402, 105 S.E.2d 220 (1958).

Remainder interest vested in children not affected by reconciliation. — When a man who has separated from his wife executes a deed conveying land to her for her life, with remainder over to their children, in consideration of the wife's agreement to make no further claim for alimony, and such deed is duly recorded, the remainder estate is vested, and the rights of the children as remaindermen are not affected by subsequent resumption of the marital relations between the husband and the wife. Nor is such remainder affected by subsequent possession of the land by the husband for a number of years exceeding the statutory prescriptive period. Clary v. Thornton, 177 Ga. 833, 171 S.E. 704 (1933).

Proceeding to set aside alimony judgment after cohabitation resumed. — Proceeding to avoid and set aside a verdict and decree for permanent alimony upon the ground that the married pair have resumed cohabitation and are not living in a state of bona fide separation is properly instituted by a petition addressed to the superior court in which such verdict and decree was rendered. Henderson v. Henderson, 170 Ga. 457, 153 S.E. 182 (1930).

Separate maintenance orders superseded by divorce decree. — Trial court's order setting aside prior separate maintenance orders on the basis of husband's concession as to cohabitation with wife was superfluous since the orders that were entered in connection with the prior separate maintenance action were superseded by a final divorce decree. Southworth v. Southworth, 265 Ga. 671, 461 S.E.2d 215 (1995).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose and intent of statute was to relieve father (now both spouses) of common-law liability to support minor child or children, and substitute therefor a liability by virtue of a court decree. Thomas v. Holt, 209 Ga. 133, 70 S.E.2d 595 (1952); Booker v. Booker, 219 Ga. 358, 133 S.E.2d 353 (1963); Clark v. Clark, 228 Ga. 838, 188 S.E.2d 487 (1972).

What are "necessaries" is question for determination of jury according to the circumstances and condition of life of the children. Madden v. Keith, 146 Ga. App. 13, 245 S.E.2d 350 (1978).

Necessary hospital and medical services and ordinary funeral expenses are "necessaries" for which the child's parent is liable, in the absence of any special contract by which those services are furnished on the account of another. Blue Ridge Park Nurseries v. Owen, 41 Ga. App. 98, 152 S.E. 485 (1930).

Measure of award for period prior to paternity adjudication. — When the court denied a request by the mother of a child for an award of back support from the father for those periods during the child's life, before paternity was established, when she had not been receiving public assistance benefits, the amount of the back support to which she was entitled was not to be measured by the father's ability to pay during the periods in question, but by the expenses actually incurred by the mother on the child's behalf. Weaver v. Chester, 195 Ga. App. 471, 393 S.E.2d 715 (1990).

Husband's responsibility for children's support did not extend to awarding title to property. He was not required to settle an estate upon them. Clark v. Clark, 228 Ga. 838, 188 S.E.2d 487 (1972).

Creditor has no lien. — One furnishing the wife with necessities as set out in statute stood on the same plane as any other creditor of the husband, and had no lien which he can assert on property of the husband sold to a bona fide purchaser for value before his claim has been reduced to judgment. Lamar v. Jennings, 69 Ga. 392 (1882).

Alleging cause of action. — Allegation that a husband and father failed to supply his wife and daughter with necessaries, and that they were furnished by the plaintiff at the request of the wife and mother, set forth a cause of action under the statute. Humphreys v. Bush, 118 Ga. 628, 45 S.E. 911 (1903).

19-6-14. Child support and custody pending final divorce; effect on liability to third persons for necessities.

Pending a final judgment in an action for divorce, the judge presiding may grant as alimony a sum sufficient for the support of the children of the parties. The judge may also hear and determine who shall be entitled to the care and custody of the children until the final judgment in the case. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Statute was constitutional and any modification or repeal must necessarily be made by the General Assembly of Georgia and not by the court. Murphy v. Murphy, 232 Ga. 352, 206 S.E.2d 458 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 929, 95 S. Ct. 1656, 44 L. Ed. 2d 87 (1975).
Former Code 1933, § 30-202 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-3 and 19-6-14) construed together, authorized applications for temporary alimony, when a suit for divorce was pending, and such a petition did not require a new process returnable to any other term of court. Luke v. Luke, 154 Ga. 800, 115 S.E. 666 (1923).

Section does not preclude order nisi. — There was nothing in the statute that required ruling that judge could not grant order nisi when the petition was presented to the judge and was duly filed on the following day. Sellers v. Sellers, 175 Ga. 47, 164 S.E. 769 (1932).
Superior courts of this state have subject matter jurisdiction over issues of child custody. Foltz v. Foltz, 238 Ga.

193, 232 S.E.2d 66 (1977).

Child custody determined by judge.

— Judges of superior courts are empowered to determine who shall be entitled to care and custody of the minor children pending the litigation. Kniepkamp v. Richards, 192 Ga. 509, 16 S.E.2d 24 (1941).

Judge has proper jurisdiction to award temporary custody although defendant resides in different county.

— Under proper construction of order of the court at interlocutory hearing, awarding custody of children to wife, such disposition was temporary and not permanent, and judge at chambers, and in a county other than that in which the defendant resides, has jurisdiction in an action for divorce and custody of children, when proper notice has been given to the defendant, to award custody of the children pending the litigation. Moody v. Moody, 193 Ga. 699, 19 S.E.2d 504 (1942).

Court not bound by previous judgment in habeas corpus. — Judge, in determining custody of children, is not bound by previous judgment in habeas corpus between the same parties. Zachry v. Zachry, 140 Ga. 479, 79 S.E. 115 (1913).

Discretion given trial judge in temporary award of custody pending divorce is broad as long as the case is in the bosom of the court and no permanent custody has been granted as in the final divorce. Therefore, the trial judge may, on the judge's own motion, change the custody of the children even in a hearing set to hear contempt. Mathews v. Mathews, 230 Ga. 779, 199 S.E.2d 179 (1973).

Court's award of custody not disturbed unless discretion abused. — Award of temporary alimony, attorney's fees, and custody of the children, although made on conflicting evidence, will not be disturbed if it does not appear that the discretion of the trial court was abused. Moody v. Moody, 193 Ga. 699, 19 S.E.2d 504 (1942).

Duration of trial judge jurisdiction over child custody matters. — Trial judge can exercise power regarding custody only during period divorce is pending. When the case is terminated without a divorce being granted to either of the parties, the court cannot exercise this power. This power is one incident to the divorce proceeding. Brinson v. Jenkins, 207 Ga. 218, 60 S.E.2d 440 (1950).

Enforcement of temporary child support and custody order through contempt proceedings. — Temporary order regarding child support and custody binding parties pending decision is enforceable through contempt proceedings pending review of the divorce judgment in this court. Walker v. Walker, 239 Ga. 175, 236 S.E.2d 263 (1977).

Until final decree is entered, judge may modify orders and transfer possession of children from the persons to whom custody was originally granted and commit them into the care of other and different parties. Graham v. Graham, 219 Ga. 193, 132 S.E.2d 66 (1963).

Judgment denying temporary alimony is appealable and error may be assigned on temporary custody order included in the same order, without reference to the appealability of the custody order standing alone. Gray v. Gray, 226 Ga. 767, 177 S.E.2d 575 (1970).

Children need not be brought personally into court. — It is not necessary, at an interlocutory hearing in an action for divorce, to entitle the court to award the custody of children of the parties, that such children be brought personally into court. Moody v. Moody, 193 Ga. 699, 19 S.E.2d 504 (1942).

When judge places children in possession of third parties, such parties are not parties to divorce, but are mere temporary custodians of the children, agents of the court, appointed for the convenience of the judge to aid the judge in seeing that the children are adequately cared for until the judge's further order. The revocation of such an order by one subsequently entered, while the divorce case is still pending, cannot be made the subject of an appeal by the parties to whom the children were temporarily entrusted. Graham v. Graham, 219 Ga. 193, 132 S.E.2d 66 (1963).

Final award of custody can ordinarily be made only after divorce has been granted. Brinson v. Jenkins, 207 Ga. 218, 60 S.E.2d 440 (1950).

When settlement between parties not bar to support under section. — Settlement entered into between husband and wife whereby the husband was released from all future claims for temporary and permanent alimony, but making no provisions for a minor child, will not operate as a bar to an action for support of such minor child. Johnson v. Johnson, 131 Ga. 606, 62 S.E. 1044 (1908); Norrell v. Norrell, 138 Ga. 64, 74 S.E. 757 (1912).

19-6-15. Child support in final verdict or decree; guidelines for determining amount of award; continuation of duty to provide support; duration of support.

(a) Definitions. As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) Reserved.

(2) "Adjusted income" means the determination of a parent's monthly income, calculated by deducting from that parent's monthly gross income one-half of the amount of any applicable self-employment taxes being paid by the parent, any preexisting order for current child support which is being paid by the parent, and any theoretical child support order for other qualified children, if allowed by the court. For further reference see paragraph (5) of subsection (f) of this Code section.

(3) "Basic child support obligation" means the monthly amount of support displayed on the child support obligation table which corresponds to the combined adjusted income and the number of children for whom child support is being determined.

(4) "Child" means child or children.

(5) Reserved.

(6) "Child support obligation table" means the chart in subsection (o) of this Code section.

(6.1) "Child support services" means the agency within the Department of Human Services which provides and administers child support services.

(7) "Combined adjusted income" means the amount of adjusted income of the custodial parent added to the amount of adjusted income of the noncustodial parent.

(8) "Court" means a judge of any court of record or an administrative law judge of the Office of State Administrative Hearings.

(9) "Custodial parent" means the parent with whom the child resides more than 50 percent of the time. Where a custodial parent has not been designated or where a child resides with both parents an equal amount of time, the court shall designate the custodial parent as the parent with the lesser support obligation and the other parent as the noncustodial parent. Where the child resides equally with both parents and neither parent can be determined as owing a greater amount than the other, the court shall determine which parent to designate as the custodial parent for the purpose of this Code section.

(10) "Deviation" means an increase or decrease from the presumptive amount of child support if the presumed order is rebutted by evidence and the required findings of fact are made by the court pursuant to subsection (i) of this Code section.

(11) "Final child support order" means the presumptive amount of child support adjusted by any deviations.

(12) "Gross income" means all income to be included in the calculation of child support as set forth in subsection (f) of this Code section.

(13) "Health insurance" means any general health or medical policy. For further reference see paragraph (2) of subsection (h) of this Code section.

(14) "Noncustodial parent" means the parent with whom the child resides less than 50 percent of the time or the parent who has the greater payment obligation for child support. Where the child resides equally with both parents and neither parent can be determined as owing a lesser amount than the other, the court shall determine which parent to designate as the noncustodial parent for the purpose of this Code section.

(15) "Nonparent custodian" means an individual who has been granted legal custody of a child, or an individual who has a legal right to seek, modify, or enforce a child support order.

(16) "Parent" means a person who owes a child a duty of support pursuant to Code Section 19-7-2.

(17) "Parenting time deviation" means a deviation allowed for the noncustodial parent based upon the noncustodial parent's court ordered visitation with the child. For further reference see subsections (g) and (i) of this Code section.

(18) "Preexisting order" means:

(A) An order in another case that requires a parent to make child support payments for another child, which child support the parent is actually paying, as evidenced by documentation as provided in division (f)(5)(B)(iii) of this Code section; and

(B) That the date and time of filing with the clerk of court of the initial order for each such other case is earlier than the date and time of filing with the clerk of court of the initial order in the case immediately before the court, regardless of the age of any child in any of the cases.

(19) "Presumptive amount of child support" means the basic child support obligation including health insurance and work related child care costs.

(20) "Qualified child" or "qualified children" means any child:

(A) For whom the parent is legally responsible and in whose home the child resides;

(B) That the parent is actually supporting;

(C) Who is not subject to a preexisting order; and

(D) Who is not before the court to set, modify, or enforce support in the case immediately under consideration.

Qualified children shall not include stepchildren or other minors in the home that the parent has no legal obligation to support.

(21) "Split parenting" can occur in a child support case only if there are two or more children of the same parents, where one parent is the custodial parent for at least one child of the parents, and the other parent is the custodial parent for at least one other child of the parents. In a split parenting case, each parent is the custodial parent of any child spending more than 50 percent of the time with that parent and is the noncustodial parent of any child spending more than 50 percent of the time with the other parent. A split parenting situation shall have two custodial parents and two noncustodial parents, but no child shall have more than one custodial parent or noncustodial parent.

(22) "Theoretical child support order" means a hypothetical child support order for qualified children calculated as set forth in subparagraph (f)(5)(C) of this Code section which allows the court to determine the amount of child support as if a child support order existed.

(23) “Uninsured health care expenses” means a child’s uninsured medical expenses including, but not limited to, health insurance copayments, deductibles, and such other costs as are reasonably necessary for orthodontia, dental treatment, asthma treatments, physical therapy, vision care, and any acute or chronic medical or health problem or mental health illness, including counseling and other medical or mental health expenses, that are not covered by insurance. For further reference see paragraph (3) of subsection (h) of this Code section.

(24) “Work related child care costs” means expenses for the care of the child for whom support is being determined which are due to employment of either parent. In an appropriate case, the court may consider the child care costs associated with a parent’s job search or the training or education of a parent necessary to obtain a job or enhance earning potential, not to exceed a reasonable time as determined by the court, if the parent proves by a preponderance of the evidence that the job search, job training, or education will benefit the child being supported. The term shall be projected for the next consecutive 12 months and averaged to obtain a monthly amount. For further reference see paragraph (1) of subsection (h) of this Code section.

(25) “Worksheet” or “child support worksheet” means the document used to record information necessary to determine and calculate monthly child support. For further reference see subsection (m) of this Code section.

(b) Process of calculating child support. Pursuant to this Code section, the determination of monthly child support shall be calculated as follows:

(1) Determine the monthly gross income of both the custodial parent and the noncustodial parent. Gross income may include imputed income, if applicable. The determination of monthly gross income shall be entered on the Child Support Schedule A — Gross Income;

(2) Adjust each parent’s monthly gross income by deducting the following from the parents’ monthly gross income and entering it on the Child Support Schedule B — Adjusted Income if any of the following apply:

- (A) One-half of the amount of self-employment taxes;
- (B) Preexisting orders; and

(C) Theoretical child support order for qualified children, if allowed by the court;

(3) Add each parent's adjusted income together;

(4) Locate the basic child support obligation by referring to the child support obligation table. Using the figure closest to the amount of the combined adjusted income, locate the amount of the basic child support obligation. If the combined adjusted income falls between the amounts shown in the table, then the basic child support obligation shall be based on the income bracket most closely matched to the combined adjusted income. The basic child support obligation amount stated in subsection (o) of this Code section shall be rebuttably presumed to be the appropriate amount of child support to be provided by the custodial parent and the noncustodial parent prior to consideration of health insurance, work related child care costs, and deviations;

(5) Calculate the pro rata share of the basic child support obligation for the custodial parent and the noncustodial parent by dividing the combined adjusted income into each parent's adjusted income to arrive at each parent's pro rata percentage of the basic child support obligation;

(6) Find the adjusted child support obligation amount by adding the additional expenses of the costs of health insurance and work related child care costs, prorating such expenses in accordance with each parent's pro rata share of the obligation and adding such expenses to the pro rata share of the basic child support obligation. The monthly cost of health insurance premiums and work related child care costs shall be entered on the Child Support Schedule D — Additional Expenses. The pro rata share of the monthly basic child support obligation and the pro rata share of the combined additional expenses shall be added together to create the monthly adjusted child support obligation;

(7) Determine the amount of child support for the custodial parent and the noncustodial parent resulting in a monthly sum certain payment due to the custodial parent by assigning or deducting credit for actual payments for health insurance and work related child care costs from the basic child support obligation;

(8) In accordance with subsection (i) of this Code section, deviations subtracted from or added to the presumptive amount of child support shall be applied, if applicable, and if supported by the required findings of fact and application of the best interest of the child standard. The proposed deviations shall be entered on the Child Support Schedule E — Deviations. In the court's or the jury's discretion, deviations may include, but shall not be limited to, the following:

- (A) High income;
- (B) Low income;
- (C) Other health related insurance;
- (D) Life insurance;
- (E) Child and dependent care tax credit;
- (F) Travel expenses;
- (G) Alimony;
- (H) Mortgage;
- (I) Permanency plan or foster care plan;
- (J) Extraordinary expenses;
- (K) Parenting time; and
- (L) Nonspecific deviations;

(9) Any benefits which the child receives under Title II of the federal Social Security Act shall be applied against the final child support order. The final child support amount for each parent shall be entered on the child support worksheet, together with the information from each of the utilized schedules;

(10) The parents shall allocate the uninsured health care expenses which shall be based on the pro rata responsibility of the parents or as otherwise ordered by the court. Each parent's pro rata responsibility for uninsured health care expenses shall be entered on the child support worksheet; and

(11) In a split parenting case, there shall be a separate calculation and final child support order for each parent.

(c) Applicability and required findings.

(1) The child support guidelines contained in this Code section are a minimum basis for determining the amount of child support and shall apply as a rebuttable presumption in all legal proceedings involving the child support responsibility of a parent. This Code section shall be used when the court enters a temporary or permanent child support order in a contested or noncontested hearing or order in a civil action filed pursuant to Code Section 19-13-4. The rebuttable presumptive amount of child support provided by this Code section may be increased or decreased according to the best interest of the child for whom support is being considered, the circumstances of the parties, the grounds for deviation set forth in subsection (i) of this Code section, and to achieve the state policy of affording to children of unmarried parents, to the extent possible, the same economic standard of living enjoyed by children living in intact families consisting of parents with similar financial means.

(2) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply with respect to any divorce case in which there are no minor children, except to the limited extent authorized by subsection (e) of this Code section. In the final judgment or decree in a divorce case in which there are minor children, or in other cases which are governed by the provisions of this Code section, the court shall:

(A) Specify in what sum certain amount and from which parent the child is entitled to permanent support as determined by use of the worksheet;

(B) Specify as required by Code Section 19-5-12 in what manner, how often, to whom, and until when the support shall be paid;

(C) Include a written finding of the parent's gross income as determined by the court or the jury;

(D) Determine whether health insurance for the child involved is reasonably available at a reasonable cost to either parent. If the health insurance is reasonably available at a reasonable cost to the parent, then the court shall order that the child be covered under such health insurance;

(E) Include written findings of fact as to whether one or more of the deviations allowed under this Code section are applicable, and if one or more such deviations are applicable as determined by the court or the jury, the written findings of fact shall further set forth:

(i) The reasons the court or the jury deviated from the presumptive amount of child support;

(ii) The amount of child support that would have been required under this Code section if the presumptive amount of child support had not been rebutted; and

(iii) A finding that states how the court's or the jury's application of the child support guidelines would be unjust or inappropriate considering the relative ability of each parent to provide support and how the best interest of the child who is subject to the child support determination is served by deviation from the presumptive amount of child support;

(F) Specify the amount of the noncustodial parent's parenting time as set forth in the order of visitation;

(G) Include a written finding regarding the use of benefits received under Title II of the federal Social Security Act in the calculation of the amount of child support; and

(H) Specify the percentage of uninsured health care expenses for which each parent shall be responsible.

(3) When child support is ordered, the party who is required to pay the child support shall not be liable to third persons for necessities furnished to the child embraced in the judgment or decree.

(4) In all cases, the parties shall submit to the court their worksheets and schedules and the presence or absence of other factors to be considered by the court pursuant to the provisions of this Code section.

(5) In any case in which the gross income of the custodial parent and the noncustodial parent is determined by a jury, the court shall charge the provisions of this Code section applicable to the determination of gross income. The jury shall be required to return a special interrogatory determining gross income. The court shall determine adjusted income, health insurance costs, and work related child care costs. Based upon the jury's verdict as to gross income, the court shall determine the presumptive amount of child support in accordance with the provisions of this Code section. The court shall inform the jury of the presumptive amount of child support and the identity of the custodial and noncustodial parents. In the final instructions to the jury, the court shall charge the provisions of this Code section applicable to the determination of deviations and the jury shall be required to return a special interrogatory as to deviations and the final award of child support. The court shall include its findings and the jury's verdict on the child support worksheet in accordance with this Code section and Code Section 19-5-12.

(6) Nothing contained within this Code section shall prevent the parties from entering into an enforceable agreement contrary to the presumptive amount of child support which may be made the order of the court pursuant to review by the court of the adequacy of the child support amounts negotiated by the parties, including the provision for medical expenses and health insurance; provided, however, that if the agreement negotiated by the parties does not comply with the provisions contained in this Code section and does not contain findings of fact as required to support a deviation, the court shall reject such agreement.

(7) In any case filed pursuant to Chapter 11 of this title, relating to the "Child Support Recovery Act," the "Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act," or the "Uniform Interstate Family Support Act," the court shall make all determinations of fact, including gross income and deviations, and a jury shall not hear any issue related to such cases.

(d) Nature of guidelines; court's discretion. In the event of a hearing or trial on the issue of child support, the guidelines enumerated in this Code section are intended by the General Assembly to be guidelines only and any court so applying these guidelines shall not abrogate its responsibility in making the final determination of child support based on the evidence presented to it at the time of the hearing or trial.

(e) Duration of child support responsibility. The duty to provide support for a minor child shall continue until the child reaches the age of majority, dies, marries, or becomes emancipated, whichever first occurs; provided, however, that, in any temporary, final, or modified order for child support with respect to any proceeding for divorce, separate maintenance, legitimacy, or paternity entered on or after July 1, 1992, the court, in the exercise of sound discretion, may direct either or both parents to provide financial assistance to a child who has not previously married or become emancipated, who is enrolled in and attending a secondary school, and who has attained the age of majority before completing his or her secondary school education, provided that such financial assistance shall not be required after a child attains 20 years of age. The provisions for child support provided in this subsection may be enforced by either parent, by any nonparent custodian, by a guardian appointed to receive child support for the child for whose benefit the child support is ordered, or by the child for whose benefit the child support is ordered.

(f) Gross income.

(1) Inclusion to gross income.

(A) Attributable income. Gross income of each parent shall be determined in the process of setting the presumptive amount of child support and shall include all income from any source, before deductions for taxes and other deductions such as preexisting orders for child support and credits for other qualified children, whether earned or unearned, and includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- (i) Salaries;
- (ii) Commissions, fees, and tips;
- (iii) Income from self-employment;
- (iv) Bonuses;
- (v) Overtime payments;
- (vi) Severance pay;
- (vii) Recurring income from pensions or retirement plans including, but not limited to, United States Department of Veterans Affairs, Railroad Retirement Board, Keoghs, and individual retirement accounts;

- (viii) Interest income;
- (ix) Dividend income;
- (x) Trust income;
- (xi) Income from annuities;
- (xii) Capital gains;

(xiii) Disability or retirement benefits that are received from the Social Security Administration pursuant to Title II of the federal Social Security Act;

(xiv) Disability benefits that are received pursuant to the federal Veterans' Benefits Act of 2010, 38 U.S.C. Section 101, et seq.;

(xv) Workers' compensation benefits, whether temporary or permanent;

(xvi) Unemployment insurance benefits;

(xvii) Judgments recovered for personal injuries and awards from other civil actions;

(xviii) Gifts that consist of cash or other liquid instruments, or which can be converted to cash;

(xix) Prizes;

(xx) Lottery winnings;

(xxi) Alimony or maintenance received from persons other than parties to the proceeding before the court;

(xxii) Assets which are used for the support of the family; and (xxiii) Other income.

(B) Self-employment income. Income from self-employment includes income from, but not limited to, business operations, work as an independent contractor or consultant, sales of goods or services, and rental properties, less ordinary and reasonable expenses necessary to produce such income. Income from self-employment, rent, royalties, proprietorship of a business, or joint ownership of a partnership, limited liability company, or closely held corporation is defined as gross receipts minus ordinary and reasonable expenses required for self-employment or business operations. Ordinary and reasonable expenses of self-employment or business operations necessary to produce income do not include:

- (i) Excessive promotional, travel, vehicle, or personal living expenses, depreciation on equipment, or costs of operation of home offices; or

(ii) Amounts allowable by the Internal Revenue Service for the accelerated component of depreciation expenses, investment tax credits, or any other business expenses determined by the court or the jury to be inappropriate for determining gross income.

In general, income and expenses from self-employment or operation of a business should be carefully reviewed by the court or the jury to determine an appropriate level of gross income available to the parent to satisfy a child support obligation. Generally, this amount will differ from a determination of business income for tax purposes.

(C) Fringe benefits. Fringe benefits for inclusion as income or “in kind” remuneration received by a parent in the course of employment, or operation of a trade or business, shall be counted as income if the benefits significantly reduce personal living expenses. Such fringe benefits might include, but are not limited to, use of a company car, housing, or room and board. Fringe benefits shall not include employee benefits that are typically added to the salary, wage, or other compensation that a parent may receive as a standard added benefit, including, but not limited to, employer paid portions of health insurance premiums or employer contributions to a retirement or pension plan.

(D) Variable income. Variable income such as commissions, bonuses, overtime pay, military bonuses, and dividends shall be averaged by the court or the jury over a reasonable period of time consistent with the circumstances of the case and added to a parent’s fixed salary or wages to determine gross income. When income is received on an irregular, nonrecurring, or one-time basis, the court or the jury may, but is not required to, average or prorate the income over a reasonable specified period of time or require the parent to pay as a one-time support amount a percentage of his or her nonrecurring income, taking into consideration the percentage of recurring income of that parent.

(E) Military compensation and allowances. Income for a parent who is an active duty member of the regular or reserve component of the United States armed forces, the United States Coast Guard, the merchant marine of the United States, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service or the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Guard, or the Air National Guard shall include:

- (i) Base pay;
- (ii) Drill pay;
- (iii) Basic allowance for subsistence, whether paid directly to the parent or received in-kind; and

(iv) Basic allowance for housing, whether paid directly to the parent or received in-kind, determined at the parent's pay grade at the without dependent rate, but shall include only so much of the allowance that is not attributable to area variable housing costs.

Except as determined by the court or jury, special pay or incentive pay, allowances for clothing or family separation, and reimbursed expenses related to the parent's assignment to a high cost of living location shall not be considered income for the purpose of determining gross income.

(2) Exclusions from gross income. Excluded from gross income are the following:

(A) Child support payments received by either parent for the benefit of a child of another relationship;

(B) Benefits received from means-tested public assistance programs such as, but not limited to:

(i) PeachCare for Kids Program, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Program, or similar programs in other states or territories under Title IV-A of the federal Social Security Act;

(ii) Food stamps or the value of food assistance provided by way of electronic benefits transfer procedures by the Department of Human Services;

(iii) Supplemental security income received under Title XVI of the federal Social Security Act;

(iv) Benefits received under Section 402(d) of the federal Social Security Act for disabled adult children of deceased disabled workers; and

(v) Low-income heating and energy assistance program payments;

(C) Foster care payments paid by the Department of Human Services or a licensed child placing agency for providing foster care to a foster child in the custody of the Department of Human Services; and

(D) A nonparent custodian's gross income.

(3) Social Security benefits.

(A) Benefits received under Title II of the federal Social Security Act by a child on the obligor's account shall be counted as child support payments and shall be applied against the final child support order to be paid by the obligor for the child.

(B) After calculating the obligor's monthly gross income, including the countable social security benefits as specified in division (1)(A)(xiii) of this subsection, and after calculating the amount of child support, if the presumptive amount of child support, as increased or decreased by deviations, is greater than the social security benefits paid on behalf of the child on the obligor's account, the obligor shall be required to pay the amount exceeding the social security benefit as part of the final child support order in the case.

(C) After calculating the obligor's monthly gross income, including the countable social security benefits as specified in division (1)(A)(xiii) of this subsection, and after calculating the amount of child support, if the presumptive amount of child support, as increased or decreased by deviations, is equal to or less than the social security benefits paid to the nonparent custodian or custodial parent on behalf of the child on the obligor's account, the child support responsibility of that parent shall have been met and no further child support shall be paid.

(D) Any benefit amounts under Title II of the federal Social Security Act as determined by the Social Security Administration sent to the nonparent custodian or custodial parent by the Social Security Administration for the child's benefit which are greater than the final child support order shall be retained by the nonparent custodian or custodial parent for the child's benefit and shall not be used as a reason for decreasing the final child support order or reducing arrearages.

(4) Reliable evidence of income.

(A) Imputed income. When establishing the amount of child support, if a parent fails to produce reliable evidence of income, such as tax returns for prior years, check stubs, or other information for determining current ability to pay child support or ability to pay child support in prior years, and the court or the jury has no other reliable evidence of the parent's income or income potential, gross income for the current year shall be determined by imputing gross income based on a 40 hour workweek at minimum wage.

(B) Modification. When cases with established orders are reviewed for modification and a parent fails to produce reliable evidence of income, such as tax returns for prior years, check stubs, or other information for determining current ability to pay child support or ability to pay child support in prior years, and the court or jury has no other reliable evidence of such parent's income or income potential, the court or jury may increase the child support of the parent failing or refusing to produce evidence of income by an increment of at least 10 percent per year of such parent's gross income for each year since the final child support order was entered or last modified and shall calculate the basic child support obligation using the increased amount as such parent's gross income.

(C) Rehearing. If income is imputed pursuant to subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the party believing the income of the other party is higher than the amount imputed may provide within 90 days, upon motion to the court, evidence necessary to determine the appropriate amount of child support based upon reliable evidence. A hearing shall be scheduled after the motion is filed. The court may increase, decrease, or leave unchanged the amount of current child support from the date of filing of either parent's initial filing or motion for reconsideration. While the motion for reconsideration is pending, the obligor shall be responsible for the amount of child support originally ordered. Arrearages entered in the original child support order based upon imputed income shall not be forgiven. When there is reliable evidence to support a motion for reconsideration of the amount of income imputed, the party seeking reconsideration shall not be required to prove the existence of grounds for modification of an order pursuant to subsection (k) of this Code section.

(D) Willful or voluntary unemployment or underemployment. In determining whether a parent is willfully or voluntarily unemployed or underemployed, the court or the jury shall ascertain the reasons for the parent's occupational choices and assess the reasonableness of these choices in light of the parent's responsibility to support his or her child and whether such choices benefit the child. A determination of willful or voluntary unemployment or underemployment shall not be limited to occupational choices motivated only by an intent to avoid or reduce the payment of child support but can be based on any intentional choice or act that affects a parent's income. In determining willful or voluntary unemployment or underemployment, the court may examine whether there is a substantial likelihood that the parent could, with reasonable effort, apply his or her education, skills, or training to produce income. Specific factors for the court to consider when determining willful or voluntary unemployment or underemployment include, but are not limited to:

- (i) The parent's past and present employment;
- (ii) The parent's education and training;
- (iii) Whether unemployment or underemployment for the purpose of pursuing additional training or education is reasonable in light of the parent's responsibility to support his or her child and, to this end, whether the training or education may ultimately benefit the child in the case immediately under consideration by increasing the parent's level of support for that child in the future;

(iv) A parent's ownership of valuable assets and resources, such as an expensive home or automobile, that appear inappropriate or unreasonable for the income claimed by the parent;

(v) The parent's own health and ability to work outside the home; and

(vi) The parent's role as caretaker of a child of that parent, a disabled or seriously ill child of that parent, or a disabled or seriously ill adult child of that parent, or any other disabled or seriously ill relative for whom that parent has assumed the role of caretaker, which eliminates or substantially reduces the parent's ability to work outside the home, and the need of that parent to continue in the role of caretaker in the future. When considering the income potential of a parent whose work experience is limited due to the caretaker role of that parent, the court shall consider the following factors:

(I) Whether the parent acted in the role of full-time caretaker immediately prior to separation by the married parties or prior to the divorce or annulment of the marriage or dissolution of another relationship in which the parent was a full-time caretaker;

(II) The length of time the parent staying at home has remained out of the work force for this purpose;

(III) The parent's education, training, and ability to work; and

(IV) Whether the parent is caring for a child who is four years of age or younger. If the court or the jury determines that a parent is willfully or voluntarily unemployed or underemployed, child support shall be calculated based on a determination of earning capacity, as evidenced by educational level or previous work experience. In the absence of any other reliable evidence, income may be imputed to the parent pursuant to a determination that gross income for the current year is based on a 40 hour workweek at minimum wage.

A determination of willful and voluntary unemployment or underemployment shall not be made when an individual is activated from the National Guard or other armed forces unit or enlists or is drafted for full-time service in the armed forces of the United States.

(5) Adjustments to gross income.

(A) Self-employment. One-half of the self-employment and Medicare taxes shall be calculated as follows:

(i) Six and two-tenths percent of self-employment income up to the maximum amount to which federal old age, survivors, and disability insurance (OASDI) applies; plus

(ii) One and forty-five one-hundredths of a percent of self-employment income for Medicare and this amount shall be deducted from a self-employed parent's monthly gross income.

(B) Preexisting orders. An adjustment to the parent's monthly gross income shall be made on the Child Support Schedule B — Adjusted Income for current preexisting orders for a period of not less than 12 months immediately prior to the date of the hearing or such period that an order has been in effect if less than 12 months prior to the date of the hearing before the court to set, modify, or enforce child support.

(i) In calculating the adjustment for preexisting orders, the court shall include only those preexisting orders meeting the criteria set forth in subparagraph (a)(18)(B);

(ii) The priority for preexisting orders shall be determined by the date and time of filing with the clerk of court of the initial order in each case. Subsequent modifications of the initial support order shall not affect the priority position established by the date and time of the initial order. In any modification proceeding, the court rendering the decision shall make a specific finding of the date, and time if known, of the initial order of the case;

(iii) Adjustments shall be allowed for current preexisting support only to the extent that the payments are actually being paid as evidenced by documentation including, but not limited to, payment history from a court clerk, the child support services' computer data base, the child support payment history, or canceled checks or other written proof of payments paid directly to the other parent. The maximum credit allowed for a preexisting order is an average of the amount of current support actually paid under the preexisting order over the past 12 months prior to the hearing date;

(iv) All preexisting orders shall be entered on the Child Support Schedule B — Adjusted Income for the purpose of calculating the total amount of the credit to be included on the child support worksheet; and

(v) Payments being made by a parent on any arrearages shall not be considered payments on preexisting orders or subsequent orders and shall not be used as a basis for reducing gross income.

(C) Theoretical child support orders. In addition to the adjustments to monthly gross income for self-employment taxes provided in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph and for preexisting orders provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, credits for either parent's other qualified child living in the parent's home for whom the parent owes a legal duty of support may be considered by the court for the purpose of reducing the parent's gross income. To consider a parent's other qualified children for determining the theoretical child support order, a parent shall present documentary evidence of the parent-child relationship to the court. Adjustments to income pursuant to this subparagraph may be considered in such circumstances in which the failure to consider a qualified child would cause substantial hardship to the parent; provided, however, that such consideration of an adjustment shall be based upon the best interest of the child for whom child support is being awarded. If the court, in its discretion, decides to apply the qualified child adjustment, the basic child support obligation of the parent for the number of other qualified children living with such parent shall be determined based upon that parent's monthly gross income. Except for self-employment taxes paid, no other amounts shall be subtracted from the parent's monthly gross income when calculating a theoretical child support order under this subparagraph. The basic child support obligation for such parent shall be multiplied by 75 percent and the resulting amount shall be subtracted from such parent's monthly gross income and entered on the Child Support Schedule B — Adjusted Income.

(D) Multiple family situations. In multiple family situations, the priority of adjustments to a parent's monthly gross income shall be calculated in the following order:

(i) Preexisting orders according to the date and time of the initial order as set forth in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph; and

(ii) Application of any credit for a parent's other qualified children using the procedure set forth in subparagraph (C) of this paragraph.

(g) Parenting time deviation. The court or the jury may deviate from the presumptive amount of child support as set forth in subparagraph (i)(2)(K) of this Code section.

(h) Adjusted support obligation. The child support obligation table does not include the cost of the parent's work related child care costs, health insurance premiums, or uninsured health care expenses. The additional expenses for the child's health insurance premiums and work related child care costs shall be included in the calculations to determine child support. A nonparent custodian's expenses for work related child care costs and health insurance premiums shall be taken into account when establishing a final child support order.

(1) Work related child care costs.

(A) Work related child care costs necessary for the parent's employment, education, or vocational training that are determined by the court to be appropriate, and that are appropriate to the parents' financial abilities and to the lifestyle of the child if the parents and child were living together, shall be averaged for a monthly amount and entered on the child support worksheet in the column of the parent initially paying the expense. Work related child care costs of a nonparent custodian shall be considered when determining the amount of this expense.

(B) If a child care subsidy is being provided pursuant to a means-tested public assistance program, only the amount of the child care expense actually paid by either parent or a nonparent custodian shall be included in the calculation.

(C) If either parent is the provider of child care services to the child for whom support is being determined, the value of those services shall not be an adjustment to the basic child support obligation when calculating the support award.

(D) If child care is provided without charge to the parent, the value of these services shall not be an adjustment to the basic child support obligation. If child care is or will be provided by a person who is paid for his or her services, proof of actual cost or payment shall be shown to the court before the court includes such payment in its consideration.

(E) The amount of work related child care costs shall be determined and added as an adjustment to the basic child support obligation as "additional expenses" whether paid directly by the parent or through a payroll deduction.

(F) The total amount of work related child care costs shall be divided between the parents pro rata to determine the presumptive amount of child support and shall be included in the worksheet and written order of the court.

(2) Cost of health insurance premiums.

(A)(i) The amount that is, or will be, paid by a parent for health insurance for the child for whom support is being determined shall be an adjustment to the basic child support obligation and prorated between the parents based upon their respective incomes. Payments made by a parent's employer for health insurance and not deducted from the parent's wages shall not be included. When a child for whom support is being determined is covered by a family policy, only the health insurance premium actually attributable to that child shall be added.

(ii) The amount of the cost for the child's health insurance premium shall be determined and added as an adjustment to the basic child support obligation as "additional expenses" whether paid directly by the parent or through a payroll deduction.

(iii) The total amount of the cost for the child's health insurance premium shall be divided between the parents pro rata to determine the total presumptive amount of child support and shall be included in the Child Support Schedule D — Additional Expenses and written order of the court together with the amount of the basic child support obligation.

(B)(i) If either parent has health insurance reasonably available at reasonable cost that provides for the health care needs of the child, then an amount to cover the cost of the premium shall be added as an adjustment to the basic child support obligation. A health insurance premium paid by a nonparent custodian shall be included when determining the amount of health insurance expense. In determining the amount to be added to the order for the health insurance cost, only the amount of the health insurance cost attributable to the child who is the subject of the order shall be included.

(ii) If coverage is applicable to other persons and the amount of the health insurance premium attributable to the child who is the subject of the current action for support is not verifiable, the total cost to the parent paying the premium shall be prorated by the number of persons covered so that only the cost attributable to the child who is the subject of the order under consideration is included. The amount of health insurance premium shall be determined by dividing the total amount of the insurance premium by the number of persons covered by the insurance policy and multiplying the resulting amount by the number of children covered by the insurance policy. The monthly cost of health insurance premium shall be entered on the Child Support Schedule D — Additional Expenses in the column of the parent paying the premium.

(iii) Eligibility for or enrollment of the child in Medicaid or PeachCare for Kids Program shall not satisfy the requirement that the final child support order provide for the child's health care needs. Health coverage through PeachCare for Kids Program and Medicaid shall not prevent a court from ordering either or both parents to obtain other health insurance.

(3) Uninsured health care expenses.

(A) The child's uninsured health care expenses shall be the financial responsibility of both parents. The final child support order shall include provisions for payment of the uninsured health care expenses; provided, however, that the uninsured health care expenses shall not be used for the purpose of calculating the amount of child support. The parents shall divide the uninsured health care expenses pro rata, unless otherwise specifically ordered by the court.

(B) If a parent fails to pay his or her pro rata share of the child's uninsured health care expenses, as specified in the final child support order, within a reasonable time after receipt of evidence documenting the uninsured portion of the expense:

(i) The other parent or the nonparent custodian may enforce payment of the expense by any means permitted by law; or

(ii) Child support services shall pursue enforcement of payment of such unpaid expenses only if the unpaid expenses have been reduced to a judgment in a sum certain amount.

(i) Grounds for deviation.

(1) General principles.

(A) The amount of child support established by this Code section and the presumptive amount of child support are rebuttable and the court or the jury may deviate from the presumptive amount of child support in compliance with this subsection. In deviating from the presumptive amount of child support, primary consideration shall be given to the best interest of the child for whom support under this Code section is being determined. A nonparent custodian's expenses may be the basis for a deviation.

(B) When ordering a deviation from the presumptive amount of child support, the court or the jury shall consider all available income of the parents and shall make written findings or special interrogatory findings that an amount of child support other than the amount calculated is reasonably necessary to provide for the needs of the child for whom child support is being determined and the order or special interrogatory shall state:

(i) The reasons for the deviation from the presumptive amount of child support;

(ii) The amount of child support that would have been required under this Code section if the presumptive amount of child support had not been rebutted; and

(iii) How, in its determination:

(I) Application of the presumptive amount of child support would be unjust or inappropriate; and

(II) The best interest of the child for whom support is being determined will be served by deviation from the presumptive amount of child support.

(C) No deviation in the presumptive amount of child support shall be made which seriously impairs the ability of the custodial parent to maintain minimally adequate housing, food, and clothing for the child being supported by the order and to provide other basic necessities, as determined by the court or the jury.

(D) If the circumstances which supported the deviation cease to exist, the final child support order may be modified as set forth in subsection (k) of this Code section to eliminate the deviation.

(2) Specific deviations.

(A) High income. For purposes of this subparagraph, parents are considered to be high-income parents if their combined adjusted income exceeds $30,000.00 per month. For high-income parents, the court shall set the basic child support obligation at the highest amount allowed by the child support obligation table but the court or the jury may consider upward deviation to attain an appropriate award of child support for high-income parents which is consistent with the best interest of the child.

(B) Low income.

(i) If the noncustodial parent can provide evidence sufficient to demonstrate no earning capacity or that his or her pro rata share of the presumptive amount of child support would create an extreme economic hardship for such parent, the court may consider a low-income deviation.

(ii) A noncustodial parent whose sole source of income is supplemental security income received under Title XVI of the federal Social Security Act shall be considered to have no earning capacity.

(iii) The court or the jury shall examine all attributable and excluded sources of income, assets, and benefits available to the noncustodial parent and may consider all reasonable expenses of the noncustodial parent, ensuring that such expenses are actually paid by the noncustodial parent and are clearly justified expenses.

(iv) In considering a request for a low-income deviation, the court or the jury shall then weigh the income and all attributable and excluded sources of income, assets, and benefits and all reasonable expenses of each parent, the relative hardship that a reduction in the amount of child support paid to the custodial parent would have on the custodial parent's household, the needs of each parent, the needs of the child for whom child support is being determined, and the ability of the noncustodial parent to pay child support.

(v) Following a review of the noncustodial parent's gross income and expenses, and taking into account each parent's basic child support obligation adjusted by health insurance and work related child care costs and the relative hardships on the parents and the child, the court or the jury, upon request by either party or upon the court's initiative, may consider a downward deviation to attain an appropriate award of child support which is consistent with the best interest of the child.

(vi) For the purpose of calculating a low-income deviation, the noncustodial parent's minimum child support for one child shall be not less than $100.00 per month, and such amount shall be increased by at least $50.00 for each additional child for the same case for which child support is being ordered.

(vii) A low-income deviation granted pursuant to this subparagraph shall apply only to the current child support amount and shall not prohibit an additional amount being ordered to reduce a noncustodial parent's arrears.

(viii) If a low-income deviation is granted pursuant to this subparagraph, such deviation shall not prohibit the court or jury from granting an increase or decrease to the presumptive amount of child support by the use of any other specific or nonspecific deviation.

(C) Other health related insurance. If the court or the jury finds that either parent has vision or dental insurance available at a reasonable cost for the child, the court may deviate from the presumptive amount of child support for the cost of such insurance.

(D) Life insurance. In accordance with Code Section 19-6-34, if the court or the jury finds that either parent has purchased life insurance on the life of either parent or the lives of both parents for the benefit of the child, the court may deviate from the presumptive amount of child support for the cost of such insurance by either adding or subtracting the amount of the premium.

(E) Child and dependent care tax credit. If the court or the jury finds that one of the parents is entitled to the Child and Dependent Care Tax Credit, the court or the jury may deviate from the presumptive amount of child support in consideration of such credit.

(F) Travel expenses. If court ordered visitation related travel expenses are substantial due to the distance between the parents, the court may order the allocation of such costs or the jury may by a finding in its special interrogatory allocate such costs by deviation from the presumptive amount of child support, taking into consideration the circumstances of the respective parents as well as which parent moved and the reason for such move.

(G) Alimony. Actual payments of alimony shall not be considered as a deduction from gross income but may be considered as a deviation from the presumptive amount of child support. If the court or the jury considers the actual payment of alimony, the court shall make a written finding of such consideration or the jury, in its special interrogatory, shall make a written finding of such consideration as a basis for deviation from the presumptive amount of child support.

(H) Mortgage. If the noncustodial parent is providing shelter, such as paying the mortgage of the home, or has provided a home at no cost to the custodial parent in which the child resides, the court or the jury may allocate such costs or an amount equivalent to such costs by deviation from the presumptive amount of child support, taking into consideration the circumstances of the respective parents and the best interest of the child.

(I) Permanency plan or foster care plan. In cases where the child is in the legal custody of the Department of Human Services, the child protection or foster care agency of another state or territory, or any other child-caring entity, public or private, the court or the jury may consider a deviation from the presumptive amount of child support if the deviation will assist in accomplishing a permanency plan or foster care plan for the child that has a goal of returning the child to the parent or parents and the parent's need to establish an adequate household or to otherwise adequately prepare herself or himself for the return of the child clearly justifies a deviation for this purpose.

(J) Extraordinary expenses. The child support obligation table includes average child rearing expenditures for families given the parents' combined adjusted income and number of children. Extraordinary expenses are in excess of average amounts estimated in the child support obligation table and are highly variable among families. Extraordinary expenses shall be considered on a case-by-case basis in the calculation of support and may form the basis for deviation from the presumptive amount of child support so that the actual amount of the expense is considered in the calculation of the final child support order for only those families actually incurring the expense. Extraordinary expenses shall be prorated between the parents by assigning or deducting credit for actual payments for extraordinary expenses.

(i) Extraordinary educational expenses. Extraordinary educational expenses may be a basis for deviation from the presumptive amount of child support. Extraordinary educational expenses include, but are not limited to, tuition, room and board, lab fees, books, fees, and other reasonable and necessary expenses associated with special needs education or private elementary and secondary schooling that are appropriate to the parent's financial abilities and to the lifestyle of the child if the parents and the child were living together.

(I) In determining the amount of deviation for extraordinary educational expenses, scholarships, grants, stipends, and other cost-reducing programs received by or on behalf of the child shall be considered; and

(II) If a deviation is allowed for extraordinary educational expenses, a monthly average of the extraordinary educational expenses shall be based on evidence of prior or anticipated expenses and entered on the Child Support Schedule E — Deviations.

(ii) Special expenses incurred for child rearing. Special expenses incurred for child rearing, including, but not limited to, quantifiable expense variations related to the food, clothing, and hygiene costs of children at different age levels, may be a basis for a deviation from the presumptive amount of child support. Such expenses include, but are not limited to, summer camp; music or art lessons; travel; school sponsored extracurricular activities, such as band, clubs, and athletics; and other activities intended to enhance the athletic, social, or cultural development of a child but not otherwise required to be used in calculating the presumptive amount of child support as are health insurance premiums and work related child care costs. A portion of the basic child support obligation is intended to cover average amounts of special expenses incurred in the rearing of a child. In order to determine if a deviation for special expenses is warranted, the court or the jury shall consider the full amount of the special expenses as described in this division; and when these special expenses exceed 7 percent of the basic child support obligation, then the additional amount of special expenses shall be considered as a deviation to cover the full amount of the special expenses.

(iii) Extraordinary medical expenses. In instances of extreme economic hardship involving extraordinary medical expenses not covered by insurance, the court or the jury may consider a deviation from the presumptive amount of child support for extraordinary medical expenses. Such expenses may include, but are not limited to, extraordinary medical expenses of the child or a parent of the child; provided, however, that any such deviation:

(I) Shall not act to leave a child unsupported; and

(II) May be ordered for a specific period of time measured in months.

When extraordinary medical expenses are claimed, the court or the jury shall consider the resources available for meeting such needs, including sources available from agencies and other adults.

(K) Parenting time.

(i) The child support obligation table is based upon expenditures for a child in intact households. The court may order or the jury may find by special interrogatory a deviation from the presumptive amount of child support when special circumstances make the presumptive amount of child support excessive or inadequate due to extended parenting time as set forth in the order of visitation or when the child resides with both parents equally.

(ii) If the court or the jury determines that a parenting time deviation is applicable, then such deviation shall be included with all other deviations and be treated as a deduction.

(iii) In accordance with subsection (d) of Code Section 19-11-8, if any action or claim for parenting time or a parenting time deviation is brought under this subparagraph, it shall be an action or claim solely between the custodial parent and the noncustodial parent, and not any third parties, including child support services.

(3) Nonspecific deviations. Deviations from the presumptive amount of child support may be appropriate for reasons in addition to those established under this subsection when the court or the jury finds it is in the best interest of the child.

(j) Involuntary loss of income.

(1) In the event a parent suffers an involuntary termination of employment, has an extended involuntary loss of average weekly hours, is involved in an organized strike, incurs a loss of health, or similar involuntary adversity resulting in a loss of income of 25 percent or more, then the portion of child support attributable to lost income shall not accrue from the date of the service of the petition for modification, provided that service is made on the other parent. It shall not be considered an involuntary termination of employment if the parent has left the employer without good cause in connection with the parent's most recent work.

(2) In the event a modification action is filed pursuant to this subsection, the court shall make every effort to expedite hearing such action.

(3) The court may, at its discretion, phase in the new child support award over a period of up to one year with the phasing in being largely evenly distributed with at least an initial immediate adjustment of not less than 25 percent of the difference and at least one intermediate adjustment prior to the final adjustment at the end of the phase-in period.

(k) Modification.

(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, a parent shall not have the right to petition for modification of the child support award regardless of the length of time since the establishment of the child support award unless there is a substantial change in either parent's income and financial status or the needs of the child.

(2) No petition to modify child support may be filed by either parent within a period of two years from the date of the final order on a previous petition to modify by the same parent except where:

(A) A noncustodial parent has failed to exercise the court ordered visitation;

(B) A noncustodial parent has exercised a greater amount of visitation than was provided in the court order; or

(C) The motion to modify is based upon an involuntary loss of income as set forth in subsection (j) of this Code section.

(3)(A) If there is a difference of at least 15 percent but less than 30 percent between a new award and a Georgia child support order entered prior to January 1, 2007, the court may, at its discretion, phase in the new child support award over a period of up to one year with the phasing in being largely evenly distributed with at least an initial immediate adjustment of not less than 25 percent of the difference and at least one intermediate adjustment prior to the final adjustment at the end of the phase-in period.

(B) If there is a difference of 30 percent or more between a new award and a Georgia child support order entered prior to January 1, 2007, the court may, at its discretion, phase in the new child support award over a period of up to two years with the phasing in being largely evenly distributed with at least an initial immediate adjustment of not less than 25 percent of the difference and at least one intermediate adjustment prior to the final adjustment at the end of the phase-in period.

(C) All child support service's case reviews and modifications shall proceed and be governed by Code Section 19-11-12. Subsequent changes to the child support obligation table shall be a reason to request a review for modification from child support services to the extent that such changes are consistent with the requirements of Code Section 19-11-12.

(4) A petition for modification shall be filed under the same rules of procedure applicable to divorce proceedings. The court may allow, upon motion, the temporary modification of a child support order pending the final trial on the petition. An order granting temporary modification shall be subject to revision by the court at any time before the final trial. A jury may be demanded on a petition for modification but the jury shall only be responsible for determining a parent's gross income and any deviations. In the hearing upon a petition for modification, testimony may be given and evidence introduced relative to the change of circumstances, income and financial status of either parent, or in the needs of the child. After hearing both parties and the evidence, the court may modify and revise the previous judgment, in accordance with the changed circumstances, income and financial status of either parent, or in the needs of the child, if such change or changes are satisfactorily proven so as to warrant the modification and revision and such modification and revisions are in the child's best interest. The court shall enter a written order specifying the basis for the modification, if any, and shall include all of the information set forth in paragraph (2) of subsection (c) of this Code section.

(5) In proceedings for the modification of a child support award pursuant to the provisions of this Code section, the court may award attorney's fees, costs, and expenses of litigation to the prevailing party as the interests of justice may require. Where a custodial parent prevails in an upward modification of child support based upon the noncustodial parent's failure to be available and willing to exercise court ordered visitation, reasonable and necessary attorney's fees and expenses of litigation shall be awarded to the custodial parent.

(l) Split parenting. In cases of split parenting, a worksheet shall be prepared separately for the child for whom the father is the custodial parent and for the child for whom the mother is the custodial parent, and that worksheet shall be filed with the clerk of court. For each split parenting custodial situation, the court shall determine:

- (1) Which parent is the obligor;
- (2) The presumptive amount of child support;
- (3) The actual award of child support, if different from the presumptive amount of child support;
- (4) How and when the sum certain amount of child support owed shall be paid; and
- (5) Any other child support responsibilities for each parent.

(m) Worksheets.

(1) Schedules and worksheets shall be prepared by the parties for purposes of calculating the amount of child support. In child support services cases in which neither parent prepared a worksheet, the court may rely on the worksheet prepared by child support services as a basis for its order. Information from the schedules shall be entered on the child support worksheet. Code Commission notes. — The amendment of this Code section by Ga. L. 2006, p. 72, § 19, irreconcilably conflicted with and was treated as superseded by Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 4. See County of Butts v. Strahan, 151 Ga. 417 (1921).

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 1979, p. 466,

§ 12 amended the prior version of this Code section to provide that either parent may be liable for child support. Cases decided prior to the 1979 enactment appear to remain valid except insofar as they may imply that the father only may be liable for such support.

Ga. L. 1995, p. 603, § 4, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that it is the intention of Sections 1 and 2 of that Act to encourage judges in divorce cases to require all couples involved in contested divorces to go to mediation to attempt a mutually agreeable settlement.

Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: “The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia’s children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia’s children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children’s parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children.”

Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10(b)/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007.”

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

ROLE OF JURY

MODIFICATION OF AWARD

WRITING REQUIREMENT

EDUCATION OF CHILDREN

General Consideration

Purpose of statute was to relieve father of common-law liability to support minor children, and substitute therefor a liability by virtue of a court decree. Thomas v. Holt, 209 Ga. 133, 70 S.E.2d 595 (1952); Booker v. Booker, 219 Ga. 358, 133 S.E.2d 353 (1963).

Purpose of statute was to substitute for a father's common-law liability to support his children a liability by virtue of a court decree, whereby he is required to contribute a specified amount at fixed intervals. Clark v. Clark, 228 Ga. 838, 188 S.E.2d 487 (1972); Newsome v. Newsome, 237 Ga. 221, 227 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

Constitutionality. — Statutory child support guidelines under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 were not unconstitutionally violative of the constitutional guarantees of due process, equal protection, and privacy, when inherent classifications and distinctions therein were required in order to ensure fairness and equity between the parents and that the welfare of the children were protected; a rational basis existed to ensure that adequate support was provided for Georgia's children whose parents have divorced or separated. Ga. Dep't of Human Res. v. Sweat, 276 Ga. 627, 580 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 966, 124 S. Ct. 432, 157 L. Ed. 2d 310 (2003).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 is not unconstitutional under the Supremacy Clause. Ward v. McFall, 277 Ga. 649, 593 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 818, 125 S. Ct. 57, 160 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2004).

Applicability of 1992 amendment. — Plain language of subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 precludes a divorce decree entered before July 1, 1992, from being modified under subsections (e) and (f). Honey v. Honey, 263 Ga. 722, 438 S.E.2d 87 (1994).

Plain language of subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 itself precludes a divorce decree intended before July 1, 1992, from being modified under subsections (e) and (f). Cote v. Waldrop, 263 Ga. 752, 438 S.E.2d 630 (1994).

Applicability of 2005 amendment. — Trial court's nunc pro tunc order, referencing the court's original order dated before the effective date of the 2005 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, was held to have not actually applied to the amended statute as the appellant failed to show otherwise through evidence contained in the record on appeal. Sebby v. Costo, 290 Ga. App. 61, 658 S.E.2d 830 (2008).

Application. — Statutory framework for establishing child support obligations is set forth in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, and paragraph (k)(1) provides that a parent may seek a modification of a prior child support decision when there is a substantial change in either parent's income and financial status or the needs of the child. Stoddard v. Meyer, 291 Ga. 739, 732 S.E.2d 439 (2012).

Use of guidelines mandatory. — Guidelines for computing the amount of child support found in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b) and (c), known as the "Child Support Guidelines," are the expression of the legislative will regarding the calculation of child support and must be considered by any court setting the child support. Pruitt v. Lindsey, 261 Ga. 540, 407 S.E.2d 750 (1991).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in calculating child support without determining the mother's gross income. Gordy v. Gordy, 246 Ga. App. 802, 542 S.E.2d 536 (2000).

While the trial court's failure to identify every fact that could qualify as a special circumstance under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c) was not error per se: (1) the court failed to actually consider whether ordering a parent to pay 20 percent of that parent's gross income each month was excessive when coupled with other financial obligations under the order; (2) no evidence existed as to the actual future costs of the parent's additional financial obligations under the order, nor did the court place any limitations on how much the parent would be required to pay toward these expenses; and (3) the court made no written findings as to whether the parent had the financial resources to pay these obligations in addition to the child support obligation. Hence, the court's order was vacated, and the matter was remanded for the trial court to make an express determination of whether the parent's presumptive child support amount was excessive under the circumstances presented, and, if so, to reduce the presumptive amount accordingly. Weil v. Paseka, 282 Ga. App. 403, 638 S.E.2d 833 (2006).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(6) does not limit the support obligations to current obligations to minor children. Betty v. Betty, 274 Ga. 194, 552 S.E.2d 846 (2001).

Under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(6), a trial court was permitted to deviate from the child support guidelines set forth under § 19-6-15(b) if a trial court found that a party's support obligations to another household made the presumptive amount of support either excessive or inadequate; the mere fact of additional children did not justify a reduction in the guideline range. Betty v. Betty, 274 Ga. 194, 552 S.E.2d 846 (2001).

Statute authorized lump sum child support awards. — Trial court did not err in ordering a husband to pay his entire child support obligation for the next 13 years in a single payment because nothing in the child support guidelines statute, O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, expressly precluded lump-sum child support awards; the statute as amended explicitly authorizes trial courts to exercise discretion in setting the manner and timing of payment, and the language of § 19-6-15(c)(2)(B), which requires trial courts to specify in what manner, how often, to whom, and until when the support shall be paid is certainly broad enough to encompass an order to pay a child support obligation all at once. Mullin v. Roy, 287 Ga. 810, 700 S.E.2d 370 (2010).

Inclusion of second child, solely for calculation, proper. — Consideration of the existence of a second child in calculating the level-of-support payment was proper, although the order was for only one child, the subject of a paternity suit, in which suit the other child was not involved; the legislature intended that the trial courts would consider the totality of the circumstances in setting the level of support, and not be bound by the recommended guidelines. Batterson v. Groves, 204 Ga. App. 52, 418 S.E.2d 373, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 418 S.E.2d 373 (1992).

Use of guidelines in criminal proceedings. — It would not be improper to use the guidelines for computation of a child support award in civil proceedings as a condition in a criminal abandonment action since the child support award is neither a part of the sentence nor a punishment. Vogel v. State, 196 Ga. App. 514, 396 S.E.2d 262 (1990).

Noncustodial parent paying child support. — Georgia General Assembly has not specified that only non-custodial parents are to pay child support. Williamson v. Williamson, 293 Ga. 721, 748 S.E.2d 679 (2013).

Legislature did not specify that only noncustodial parents are to pay child support. James v. James, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 151 (1980).

Trial court's express finding about the father's income at the time the father and mother divorced should have been used to determine whether the father's income had changed significantly in the five years between entry of the parties' divorce decree and the mother's filing of a petition to modify the father's child support obligation; thus, the trial court erred by not using that express finding, but instead using the father's tax returns that showed the father earned significantly more income around the time the divorce decree was entered than was reflected in the divorce decree's finding. Hulett v. Sutherland, 276 Ga. 596, 581 S.E.2d 11 (2003).

By law, father was responsible for support of his minor children and this may include providing for their education. Collins v. Collins, 231 Ga. 683, 203 S.E.2d 524 (1974).

There is no legal requirement that father support his children once they reach majority. Newton v. Newton, 222 Ga. 175, 149 S.E.2d 128 (1966) (decided prior to the 1992 amendment, which added subsections (e) and (f)).

Requirement to provide support beyond age of majority may not, as matter of law, be imposed. Clavin v. Clavin, 238 Ga. 421, 233 S.E.2d 151 (1977); Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977) (decided prior to the 1992 amendment, which added subsections (e) and (f)).

Construed with § 19-6-19(a). — In an action to modify child support, the computational reference of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 may be applied only after the finder of fact first finds that the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a) have been satisfied. Willingham v. Willingham, 216 Ga. 674, 410 S.E.2d 98 (1991).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 19-5-12. — Although a spouse alleged on appeal that a motion to set aside that portion of the divorce decree which dealt with the issue of child support, which incorporated the parties' settlement agreement, was properly granted because the decree failed to set forth a specific baseline dollar amount for child support, as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-5-12, the decree contained stated dollar amounts which could be considered baseline payments; hence, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 as applicable at the time, the trial court properly found that the spouse was liable for paying child support for two children in the range of 23 to 28 percent of the spouse's gross income. Scott v. Scott, 282 Ga. 36, 644 S.E.2d 842 (2007).

Theoretical child support order does not require written findings. — To the extent that Adame v. Herndandez, 327 Ga. App. 869 (2014) holds that the trial court must support with written findings the court's exercise of discretion and consideration of the best interest of the child for whom child support is being awarded when applying a theoretical child support order under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(5)(C), that decision is hereby overruled. Neal v. Hibbard, 770 S.E.2d 600, No. S14A1673, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 183 (2015).

Children are entitled to be supported commensurate with their proven customary needs and the father's financial ability to provide for them. Clavin v. Clavin, 238 Ga. 421, 233 S.E.2d 151 (1977).

Father cannot provide bare subsistence existence for his children and consider that he has done his duty; his support, as far as he is able, must be appropriate to the children's situation. Clavin v. Clavin, 238 Ga. 421, 233 S.E.2d 151 (1977).

Father's duty to provide support and maintenance for minor children does not cease with former wife's remarriage. Vereen v. Arp, 237 Ga. 241, 227 S.E.2d 331 (1976).

Obligation for future child support. — Trial court erred in failing to issue an award establishing the defendant's obligation for future child support when by the defendant's failure to file a timely answer, the defendant admitted the allegation in Georgia Department of Human Resources (DHR's) petition that the defendant was obligated to provide for the future support of the defendant's minor child as the defendant's ability permitted. Department of Human Resources v. Hedgepath, 204 Ga. App. 755, 420 S.E.2d 638 (1992).

Uncertainty of children's future expenses did not show departure from guidelines. — Requirement in an order modifying a final judgment and decree of divorce that the former spouses alternate years in paying for their children's clothing, uniforms, school fees, and similar items was not improperly vague and indefinite; the inherent uncertainty of the future expenses of the children did not, at the time of the award, show that the award departed from the statutory guidelines. Facey v. Facey, 281 Ga. 367, 638 S.E.2d 273 (2006).

Future uninsured medical and counseling expenses. — Trial court did not err in the amount of the child support obligation that the court bestowed upon the mother when the father was given custody of the children because the mere possibility of the parties' children incurring amounts of uninsured medical expenses and uninsured counseling expenses so as to constitute extraordinary medical costs was not sufficient at that juncture to support a finding that the award of child support departed from the Georgia Child Support Guidelines. Moon v. Moon, 277 Ga. 375, 589 S.E.2d 76 (2003).

Medical expenses. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in requiring a husband to pay the entire cost of the child's medical insurance and uncovered medical expenses because the child support worksheet incorporated into the trial court's order clearly showed that an adjustment to the presumptive amounts of child support had been made to account for the expense of the premiums for the child's insurance coverage; in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(h)(2)(A), and using the wife's pro rata share of the parties' combined income, 26 percent of the amount of the health insurance premium had been deducted from the husband's basic child support obligation and added to the wife's obligation. Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Child care expenses. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in ordering the husband to reimburse the wife up to $250 per month for work-related childcare expenses instead of allowing the husband to watch the children because the parties' younger child was diagnosed with high-functioning autism and needed some special care; a few times when the younger child was solely in the husband's care, the child wandered off and was left alone in situations where the child could have been hurt; and the wife testified that the children's daycare provided the special care, attention, and consistency the younger child needed while allowing the younger child to stay in the company of the older brother who had a calming effect on the younger child. Sahibzada v. Sahibzada, 294 Ga. 783, 757 S.E.2d 51 (2014).

Expenses of nanny not excessive. — Court upheld an increase in child support owed by a mother, finding that the costs of a nanny were reasonable work-related child care expenses for the father, although he worked from home, considering the young age of the children, that the costs of a nanny were small in comparison to the father's monthly income, and the nanny's qualifications. Taylor v. Taylor, 293 Ga. 615, 748 S.E.2d 873 (2013).

Support amount from deceased father based on these guidelines. — Guidelines for child support established by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 provide the best means of estimating the amount of support a child born out of wedlock had a reasonable expectation of receiving from the child's deceased father. In re Adventure Bound Sports, Inc., 858 F. Supp. 1192 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Child support is part of alimony, and right to receive alimony ceases upon death of husband unless the decree expressly provides to the contrary. Veal v. Veal, 226 Ga. 285, 174 S.E.2d 435 (1970).

With respect to a divorced father and a child support decree, absent some express, voluntary provision in the decree, the decree will not be enforced after the death of the father. Clavin v. Clavin, 238 Ga. 421, 233 S.E.2d 151 (1977).

In making decisions about child support, trial court is charged with considering child's welfare. James v. James, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 151 (1980).

Court to compare need and ability to pay. — When the existence and terms of an agreement between the parties are disputed, and the sufficiency of child support is called into question, the record should reflect the trial court's comparison of need and ability to pay and the record should reflect an award that is consistent with that comparison. Arrington v. Arrington, 261 Ga. 547, 407 S.E.2d 758 (1991).

Earning capacity in lieu of a finding of gross income. — Evidence showing that the father had a mechanical engineering degree from the University of Alabama and had recently earned sums in excess of $50,000 per year was sufficient to support the trial court's findings as to earning capacity in lieu of a finding of gross income under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15. Walker v. Walker, 248 Ga. App. 177, 546 S.E.2d 315 (2001).

Earning capacity rather than gross income may be used to determine the amount of child support in certain circumstances, including the absence of any evidence as to actual income. Russ v. Russ, 272 Ga. 438, 530 S.E.2d 469 (2000).

Superior court properly based a child support award on one spouse's earning capacity rather than the income the spouse stated in a financial affidavit when the spouse admitted to making thousands of dollars more than was stated in the affidavit and additional evidence established that the spouse owned a stucco company, that some employees of the company earned more than the income the spouse stated in the affidavit, and that the parties had multiple real estate holdings. Banciu v. Banciu, 282 Ga. 616, 652 S.E.2d 552 (2007).

Trial court did not err in imputing income of $1,100 to a father, although the father was disabled and unemployed; the father represented himself at the trial, could drive, received substantial, unsupervised visitation with his four-year-old daughter, and could obtain family assistance benefits and part-time employment. Larizza v. Larizza, 286 Ga. 461, 689 S.E.2d 306 (2010).

Trial court properly imputed income to the mother when calculating child support because the evidence showed that the mother was making $32,000 and had health insurance available when the mother apparently made the decision to quit a job in Florida and move to Georgia to live with the mother's parents, and there was no evidence that the mother involuntarily left that employment. Caldwell v. Meadows, 312 Ga. App. 70, 717 S.E.2d 668 (2011).

K-1 income is self-employment income. — Because Internal Revenue Service Schedule K-1 income is categorized as self-employment income, O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(1)(B), that income is not subject to the requirements set forth in § 19-6-15(f)(1)(D) for variable income. Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Understatement of income. — Trial court properly found that the term "gross income" in the parties' divorce settlement agreement was ambiguous, and, in construing the agreement against the father as the obligor, that the parties intended for child support to be based on Georgia's Child Support Guidelines, and that, by assigning earned income to the father's professional corporation, thereby substantially understating the father's gross income, the father wilfully violated the conditions of the settlement agreement; the father's "gross income" significantly exceeded Form W-2 wages, and the father's computation of child support based only on the father's Form W-2 salary created a child support deficiency. Pate v. Pate, 280 Ga. 796, 631 S.E.2d 103 (2006).

Imputed income. — Trial court did not err by imputing income of $4,180 per month to a father in addition to the $1,320 in monthly unemployment benefits received based on evaluating the reasonableness of the father's occupational choices, the father's past employment, current assets, current monthly receipts, and self-imposed salary restrictions regarding a job search, which supported a finding that the father was willfully unemployed or underemployed under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(4)(D). Friday v. Friday, 294 Ga. 687, 755 S.E.2d 707 (2014).

When considering wilful unemployment or underemployment under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(4)(D), the statute does not require a trial court to make written findings as to why it decided to impute income to a spouse. Friday v. Friday, 294 Ga. 687, 755 S.E.2d 707 (2014).

Imputation of income upheld. — In modifying a father's child support obligation, the court did not err by imputing income as the court was authorized to consider not only the father's income of record, but also the assets owned, which showed that the father owned four real properties, that the law office practice had declined, a car purchase was made with an attendant monthly payment of $2,036.00, and $2,500.00 per month was being paid in rent, and it was proven that monthly income was understated by more than $10,000 in prior years. Neal v. Hibbard, 770 S.E.2d 600, No. S14A1673, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 183 (2015).

No imputed income found from gift. — Without some evidence of the amount of regular, ongoing gift income to the father, attributing to him a monthly lump-sum gift income of $3,000 was not supported by the record. Dodson v. Walraven, 318 Ga. App. 586, 734 S.E.2d 428 (2012).

Imputed income from job change. — Determination that there had been a substantial change in the husband's income was not an abuse of discretion as the husband was employed in the mortgage industry, which had been unstable, downsizing, and affected by the recession, and while the husband earned $48,000, rather than the $75,000 imputed to the husband at the time of the divorce, the trial court imputed income of $ 52,500 to the husband because the husband accepted a lower base salary in exchange for the chance of advancement. Strunk v. Strunk, 294 Ga. 280, 749 S.E.2d 701 (2013).

Military housing allowance properly applied. — In a child support case, the trial court properly included only $702 of the military father's $3,555 basic allowance for housing (BAH) in calculating the father's gross income because the difference was based on the father's deployment to Bahrain, and under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(1)(E)(iv), BAH was to include only so much of the allowance that was not attributable to area variable housing costs. Wallace v. Wallace, 296 Ga. 307, 766 S.E.2d 452 (2014).

Capital gains properly included in gross income. — When a mother sought to increase the father's child support under earlier provisions of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a) based on his increased income, the trial court properly included capital gains realized by reselling real property in the father's gross income; earlier provisions of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 stated that gross income included "all other income" except for public assistance, and 26 U.S.C. § 61(a)(3) included "gains derived from dealings in property" in gross income. Sharpe v. Perkins, 284 Ga. App. 376, 644 S.E.2d 178 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 509 (Ga. 2007).

Inquiry into evidence of income. — In a divorce case when the wife was awarded child support, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in overruling the husband's objection to the wife's questions regarding checks that had been paid to him but that he had not deposited into his bank account. The wife was entitled to inquire whether the deposited and undeposited checks matched the amount of income reported by the husband. Leggette v. Leggette, 284 Ga. 432, 668 S.E.2d 251 (2008).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in calculating a father's gross income for purposes of a child support award because the court considered the gross revenue of a certain company, without accounting for business expenses and other deductions or the fact that the father only owned a one percent share of the company. Harrell v. Ga. Dep't of Human Res., 300 Ga. App. 497, 685 S.E.2d 441 (2009).

It is within judge's discretion to whom child support shall be paid. Mathews v. Mathews, 123 Ga. App. 81, 179 S.E.2d 547 (1970).

Trial court may properly order custodial parent to pay for support of minor children while visiting with the noncustodial parent. James v. James, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 151 (1980).

Trial court is not bound by an agreement between the parties regarding child support, nor is the court's obligation satisfied by simply adopting the agreement. The court is obligated to consider whether such support is sufficient based on the children's needs, and the parent's ability to pay. Arrington v. Arrington, 261 Ga. 547, 407 S.E.2d 758 (1991).

Agreement for payments exceeding guidelines. — Contractual agreement for modification providing for child support payments that exceed the statutory guidelines did not contravene O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 or the public policy of the state.

Kendrick v. Childers, 267 Ga. 98, 475 S.E.2d 604 (1996).

Support obligation below the minimum percentage in the guidelines. — Evidence supported the presence of special circumstances that provided sufficient justification for the court's reduction of the mother's child support obligation below the minimum percentage in the guidelines. Walker v. Walker, 248 Ga. App. 177, 546 S.E.2d 315 (2001).

Support obligation exceeding guidelines. — Even though under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b)(5), the range of percentages of gross income to be considered for child support was 17 percent to 23 percent, the jury's award of periodic child support in the amount of approximately 40 percent of the father's gross income was proper and was affirmed because the jury found that this upward variation from the percentage table was justified by the fact that the mother had no income, and found that the father's ability to pay the amount ordered as permanent child support was shown by the fact that the father had been paying the same amount as temporary child support and alimony. Ward v. Ward, 268 Ga. App. 394, 601 S.E.2d 851 (2004).

Because the jury was presented with sufficient evidence via a husband's deposition and trial testimony supporting the jury's determination of the husband's monthly gross income, which included income from two landscaping businesses and a salary from the sheriff's department, which in turn supported a finding of special circumstances warranting an upward modification of child support, the husband was not entitled to a new trial. Dyals v. Dyals, 281 Ga. 894, 644 S.E.2d 138 (2007).

Superior court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court deviated from the child support guidelines in former O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b) based on the specific finding that special circumstances existed in that one spouse's gross income was approximately $90,000 per year while the other spouse had an income of only $325 per month, and the parties were sharing custody of their three children.

Banciu v. Banciu, 282 Ga. 616, 652 S.E.2d 552 (2007).

No deviation from guidelines. — Based on the applicable version of the revised child support guidelines under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, the trial court properly exercised the court's discretion when the court imposed the presumptive amount of child support on a wife without applying a discretionary deviation under § 19-6-15(c)(2)(E) and (i)(1)(B); since no deviation was made, there was no requirement that an explanation be given of how that decision was reached. Rumley-Miawama v. Miawama, 284 Ga. 811, 671 S.E.2d 827 (2009).

Trial court's findings supporting the court's child support and alimony awards were proper because the trial court considered, inter alia, the husband's personal expenses paid by the husband's companies and the husband's loan application and financial affidavit in arriving at the court's determination of the husband's income; additionally, the trial court took into account the wife's status as a stay-at-home mother since the birth of the parties' son, the husband's conduct towards the wife, and the wife's potential income from the trial court's award to the wife of one of the husband's companies. The evidence also supported the trial court's finding that no deviation from the presumptive child support award was warranted under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i) based on the alimony award. Walton v. Walton, 285 Ga. 706, 681 S.E.2d 165 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declining to make a deviation to the presumptive amount of child support because under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(2)(E)(iii) the trial court stated that the court did not find that the presumptive amount of child support was excessive or inadequate, or that it was unjust or inappropriate under the circumstances and also did not find that a downward deviation in the husband's support amount would be in the child's best interests; in order to grant any deviation, the trial court must find that the application of the presumptive amount of child support would be unjust or inappropriate and that the best interest of the child for whom support is being determined will be served by deviation from the presumptive amount of child support under § 19-6-15(c)(2)(E)(iii). Willis v. Willis, 288 Ga. 577, 707 S.E.2d 344 (2010).

In a mother's paternity suit to establish the legitimation, custody, and support of her minor child by the father who worked as an NFL football player, the trial court did not err in failing to allow for a high income deviation under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i)(2)(A). The trial court considered the fact that the combined adjusted income of the parents exceeded $30,000 per month by $1,261.50, but exercised the court's discretion not to provide for a high income deviation. Jackson v. Irvin, 316 Ga. App. 560, 730 S.E.2d 48 (2012).

Payment of life insurance policies. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by declining to consider the cost of the life insurance in calculating the parent's child support obligation because the evidence indicated that a parent's company, rather than the parent, paid the premiums on the parent's life insurance policies. Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Non-custodial parent should not receive child support. — Trial court erred by incorrectly starting with the father's presumptive amount of child support and incorrectly applying a parenting time deviation available only to the noncustodial parent under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b)(1)-(7) when the court ordered the father to pay the non-custodial mother child support per month. Williamson v. Williamson, 293 Ga. 721, 748 S.E.2d 679 (2013).

Child support from prior marriage excluded from gross income. — Former spouse's gross income was incorrectly calculated under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(2)(A) for the purposes of determining the spouse's child support obligation because the spouse's gross income included monthly child support received for a child from a previous marriage. Hammond v. Hammond, 282 Ga. 456, 651 S.E.2d 95 (2007).

Amount allowed for support not disturbed when evidence indicates reasonableness. — When that part of the verdict which made an allowance for the support of the defendant's minor children has the approval of the trial judge, the Supreme Court has no right to disturb it on the ground of excessiveness when its reasonableness as to the amount awarded has some support in the evidence. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 214 Ga. 294, 104 S.E.2d 451 (1958).

It is presumed that judgment for child support is based on sufficient evidence. Nichols v. Nichols, 209 Ga. 811, 76 S.E.2d 400 (1953).

Verdict need not state names and ages of children when petition lists. — When the petition for divorce and alimony lists the names and ages of the minor children, and the verdict and decree awarding alimony states definitely how much alimony is to be paid each month for each child until the child attained the age of 18 years, it is not necessary that the verdict and decree should restate the names and ages of the children; and certainly such objection to the verdict and decree cannot be raised for the first time in defense of a proceeding for contempt of court for failure to pay the alimony decreed. Kirby v. Johnson, 188 Ga. 49, 2 S.E.2d 640 (1939).

When award is to group as family unit, Supreme Court could not attempt to separate amounts awarded to the mother from the amounts awarded to the children. Blalock v. Blalock, 214 Ga. 586, 105 S.E.2d 721 (1958).

Consent judgments have been uniformly recognized in this state, and have been given the same force and effect as judgments rendered in due course of litigation upon findings by a jury. Estes v. Estes, 192 Ga. 94, 14 S.E.2d 681 (1941).

Content of settlement agreement. — Trial courts, in determining whether to incorporate a marital settlement agreement into a final verdict or divorce decree, are required to make specific written findings as to the gross income of the husband and the wife, and the presence or absence of special circumstances justifying a departure from the percentages set out in the child support guidelines; however, a parties' marital settlement agreement called for the wife not to pay child support, and, instead, have her receive a lesser amount of alimony in lieu of paying child support as the right to child support belonged to the child and could not be waived by agreement of the parents. Swanson v. Swanson, 276 Ga. 566, 580 S.E.2d 526 (2003).

Noncustodial parent entitled to social security credit payable after execution of settlement agreement. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(3)(A), a non-custodial parent was entitled to a credit against that parent's child support obligation for social security retirement benefits which became payable to the parent's dependent children following the execution of a settlement agreement as the parent earned the benefits and the agreement did not evidence a contrary intent; thus, the trial court erred in finding otherwise. Scarborough v. Scarborough, 282 Ga. 427, 651 S.E.2d 42 (2007).

Parents cannot by subsequent voluntary settlement nullify or modify final decree so as to deprive the child of the support to which the child is entitled by the verdict and decree. Glaze v. Strength, 186 Ga. 613, 198 S.E. 721 (1938); Hardy v. Pennington, 187 Ga. 523, 1 S.E.2d 667 (1939); Corriher v. McElroy, 209 Ga. 885, 76 S.E.2d 782 (1953).

Other children considered to vary final award. — Guideline percentage is to be computed on the basis of the number of children for whom support is being determined in a particular case and, after that calculation is made, the final award can be adjusted on the basis of other children to whom the obligor owes support. Ehlers v. Ehlers, 264 Ga. 668, 449 S.E.2d 840 (1994); Hoodenpyl v. Reason, 268 Ga. 10, 485 S.E.2d 750 (1997).

Husband was entitled to a credit as a result of a child born to the husband and the husband's new wife. Strunk v. Strunk, 294 Ga. 280, 749 S.E.2d 701 (2013).

Social security disability payments received for benefit of children should be credited toward the father's obligation under an alimony decree. Perteet v. Summer, 246 Ga. 182, 269 S.E.2d 453 (1980).

Workers' compensation lump sum settlement is gross income. — Because a lump settlement of a workers' compensation claim is primarily for future lost wages, it is within the scope of gross income and should be considered in calculating the child support obligation. Cromer v. Denmark, 273 Ga. 290, 540 S.E.2d 183 (2001).

Husband failed to establish that a trial court abused the court's discretion in awarding child support to his wife because in the court's order and attached schedules, the trial court made all of the specific written findings required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, and the final decree gave the husband substantial, unsupervised visitation with his child, which was inconsistent with the husband's claims of a disability so severe as to render him utterly incapable of part-time employment. Larizza v. Larizza, 286 Ga. 461, 689 S.E.2d 306 (2010).

Trust fund established in decree is to be paid during a child's minority. Use contemplated which clearly extends beyond the age of 18 is an attempt to circumvent the statutory limitations on the duty to support and is void and unenforceable. Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977).

Award of alimony to child of full amount of husband's earning capacity is excessive. Johnson v. Johnson, 131 Ga. 606, 62 S.E. 1044 (1908).

Trial court's award excessive based on exaggerated determination of spouse's earning capacity. Duncan v. Duncan, 262 Ga. 872, 426 S.E.2d 857 (1993).

Husband's responsibility for support did not extend to awarding title to property. He was not required to settle an estate upon his children. Clark v. Clark, 228 Ga. 838, 188 S.E.2d 487 (1972).

Former spouse not entitled to pre-judgment garnishment. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(h)(3) did not entitle a former spouse to collect an alleged debt for health care and extracurricular activity expenses of the parties' children through garnishment of the other spouse's wages without first reducing the alleged debt to a judgment. The amounts allegedly due for these expenses could not be computed from the terms of the divorce decree but required reference to evidence of specific expenditures and reimbursements. Stoker v. Severin, 292 Ga. App. 870, 665 S.E.2d 913 (2008).

Agreement to pay fixed sum to all children provides for lump sum payment. — Agreement whereby one parent was obliged to pay to the other a fixed sum per month for the maintenance and support of minor children, continuing each month thereafter until the children reach majority, or die, or marry before the age, provides for a lump sum payment rather than an allocation for each child which would be reduced as each child became emancipated. Martin v. Martin, 254 Ga. 376, 329 S.E.2d 503 (1985).

Providing a home is child support. — Provision in both the jury verdict and the final judgment requiring the husband to provide a home for his children is in the nature of child support. Scherberger v. Scherberger, 260 Ga. 635, 398 S.E.2d 363 (1990).

Fringe benefits properly excluded in gross income. — Trial court properly excluded a husband's fringe benefits, including the husband's employer's contributions for life insurance, medical insurance, and a retirement plan, in calculating the husband's gross income for the purpose of determining a child support obligation because the benefits were not part of the husband's gross income for income tax purposes, and were not for daily personal living expenses; the decision was consistent with the 2005 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, which has a delayed effective date of July 1, 2006. Hayes v. Hayes, 279 Ga. 741, 620 S.E.2d 806 (2005).

Fringe benefits properly included in gross income. — Trial court did not improperly include in a husband's gross income a company's payment on the loan for the husband's company-owned truck, the company's coverage of vehicle expenses, including gas, tags, insurance and repairs, the company's payment for the husband's cell phone, and the husband's use of a company-issued credit card because those benefits were properly considered fringe benefits and included in gross income under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(1)(C) because those payments significantly reduced personal living expenses. Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Job-related moving expenses excluded. — In calculating child support under earlier requirements of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, the trial court erred in including as part of the husband's gross income sums he had received from his employer as reimbursement for job-related moving expenses; reimbursement for moving expenses did not improve an obligor's financial position but merely maintained the status quo by offsetting the unusual and often significant costs incurred as part of a job-related move. Padilla v. Padilla, 282 Ga. 273, 646 S.E.2d 672 (2007).

Book royalties improperly excluded from gross income. — Trial court erred in failing to include the book royalties a husband received in calculating the husband's gross income for the purpose of determining a child support obligation because O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b)(2) required that the trial court include compensation for personal services and all other income when calculating a party's obligation for child support. Hayes v. Hayes, 279 Ga. 741, 620 S.E.2d 806 (2005).

Income from medical practice not counted twice in child support and property division awards. — Trial court did not erroneously count a husband's income twice by awarding portions of his business in the child support awards and again in the property division as "business alimony". Under both capitalization methods, the wife's expert deducted a reasonable salary expense for the husband. With the separate bases for the alimony award and the property division clearly acknowledged before the court, there was no double dipping. Miller v. Miller, 288 Ga. 274, 705 S.E.2d 839 (2010).

Economic in-kind benefits may be excluded in gross income. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b)(1) and (2) do not address economic in-kind benefits and thus do not require the inclusion of such benefits in gross income; O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b)(4), however, does specifically address such benefits and provides only that those benefits may be included in calculating the obligor's gross monthly income. Hayes v. Hayes, 279 Ga. 741, 620 S.E.2d 806 (2005).

Deviation from guidelines. — Trial court properly deviated from the child support guidelines under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c) based on the court's finding that the husband earned an average of $1 million per year during the marriage and continued to have the potential to earn this sum; the trial court took into account the income and earning potential of both spouses as well as the historical needs of the children. Bloomfield v. Bloomfield, 282 Ga. 108, 646 S.E.2d 207 (2007).

Trial court erred in denying a wife's motion for a new trial, which argued that a divorce decree contained a deviation from the child support guidelines without including any findings stating why the deviation was appropriate because the separation agreement between the wife and her husband, as well as the trial court's order incorporating that agreement, contained a deviation since there was, at least, an $18 difference in the amount of child support mandated by the child support guidelines and that which was actually being paid by the parties, and the trial court's order contained none of the findings required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15; because the parties' separation agreement did not comply with the provisions contained in § 19-6-15 and did not contain findings of fact as required to support a deviation, the trial court should have rejected the agreement. Holloway v. Holloway, 288 Ga. 147, 702 S.E.2d 132 (2010).

In determining a father's child support obligation, the trial court erred in applying a nonspecific deviation from the presumptive amount of child support to account for his support obligations to another child because the current version of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 does not contemplate a specific variance of a child support award based on a party's support obligations to another household. The record failed to show that the father was paying any support for the subsequent child, and his ability to pay all of his child support obligations was a matter of speculation. Jackson v. Irvin, 316 Ga. App. 560, 730 S.E.2d 48 (2012).

Trial court abused the court's discretion by ordering a deviation for life insurance premiums because the court failed to justify the deviation by setting forth the court's findings; thus, a remand was required on that issue. Black v. Black, 292 Ga. 691, 740 S.E.2d 613 (2013).

Deviation for visitation-related travel expenses was not an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court because the mother had the option to remain with the children in the marital home for which the father was financially responsible, but chose instead to move to New York and incur unnecessary expenses. Black v. Black, 292 Ga. 691, 740 S.E.2d 613 (2013).

Trial court not required to calculate a discounted present value. — Trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion in setting the amount of a child support award because nothing in the child support guidelines statute, O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, mandated that the trial court calculate a discounted present value, and a husband did not propose or provide supporting evidence of a discount rate that better reflected the economic outlook; the trial court recognized the court's discretion to engage in a present value calculation but declined to do so, explaining that the husband failed to show that such a reduction would be appropriate in light of the current economic climate, one in which even the most secure financial investments offer extremely low rates of return. Mullin v. Roy, 287 Ga. 810, 700 S.E.2d 370 (2010).

Consideration of insurance premiums. — Trial court properly set child support at 30 percent of the husband's earnings as under earlier provisions of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b)(5) the applicable percentage range was 25 to 32 percent, and the trial court clearly applied a correct percentage; the court was not required to reduce the award of child support due to health insurance premiums or to eliminate the insurance requirement. Messaadi v. Messaadi, 282 Ga. 126, 646 S.E.2d 230 (2007).

Trial court erred by ordering a parent to maintain health insurance on the parent's minor child because the court failed to account for the parent's payment of health insurance in calculating the parent's child support obligation. Dupree v. Dupree, 287 Ga. 319, 695 S.E.2d 628 (2010).

Gross income does not include employee benefits that are typically added to the salary, wage, or other compensation that a parent may receive as a standard added benefit including, but not limited to, employer paid portions of health insurance premiums. Hendry v. Hendry, 292 Ga. 1, 734 S.E.2d 46 (2012).

Husband was properly awarded a credit for the cost of providing health insurance for the children. Strunk v. Strunk, 294 Ga. 280, 749 S.E.2d 701 (2013).

Determination of gross income proper. — Findings that a husband's income was $65,000 per year for the purposes of calculating child support were not clearly erroneous as evidence was presented that the husband often would not take business engagements unless the husband could make at least $10,000 and the husband testified that the husband's gross earnings varied from $67,000 to $88,000 per year. Vereen v. Vereen, 284 Ga. 755, 670 S.E.2d 402 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in the court's review of a husband's history of Internal Revenue Service Schedule K-1 income because other amounts not actually received, e.g., payroll taxes, were included in gross income under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(1)(A); the statutory guidelines provide only that income from a closely held corporation "should be carefully reviewed" when determining an appropriate level of gross income to use in calculating child support pursuant to § 19-6-15(f)(1)(B). Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Computation of child support proper. — Because the trial court properly found that the monthly net business profit listed on a husband's child support worksheet was the most credible calculation of his monthly income, and because a child's competitive cheerleading expenses were not a "necessity," the trial court properly awarded child support to the wife pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(1)(B) and (i)(2)(J)(ii). Ellis v. Ellis, 290 Ga. 616, 724 S.E.2d 384 (2012).

Dismissal of modification petition adjudication on the merits. — Superior court erred in attempting to recast the court's dismissal of a husband's first petition for modification of child support as "simply a sanction" and not an adjudication on the merits so as to render the dismissal outside the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(2) because in dismissing the husband's first petition for modification, the superior court did not specify that the order was not an adjudication on the merits, and under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b), it was a final order on the claim for downward modification of child support. Bagwell v. Bagwell, 290 Ga. 378, 721 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Improper use of erroneous facts on worksheets. — Mother was entitled to reversal of the trial court's order awarding no child support because the child support worksheets contained erroneous facts and the nonspecific deviations were erroneous; inaccurate factual data was plugged into the worksheets for the purpose of arriving at a pre-determined result that the trial judge announced at the hearing, to "zero out" any child obligations of the parties to each other. Parker v. Parker, 293 Ga. 300, 745 S.E.2d 605 (2013).

Contempt finding. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by finding that a father was in contempt for the failure to meet a support obligation because, under the decree, the father was to pay $2,000 per month in child support and after December 15, 2010, following an involuntary job termination, the father was to pay $1,040 per month, but did not do so, paying only $179 per month, or $1,821 less than the original figure. Friday v. Friday, 294 Ga. 687, 755 S.E.2d 707 (2014).

Claims of error on appeal were rejected. — On appeal from a child support and visitation order, because a parent failed to support claims of error regarding the order, including the trial court's application of the revised child support guidelines under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 et seq., with any citation of authority or argument, and failed to provide the appeals court with a transcript of the proceedings below, that parent's claims were rejected and the orders entered by the trial court had to be affirmed. Sebby v. Costo, 290 Ga. App. 61, 658 S.E.2d 830 (2008).

Final order required. — Since a parent's children were found to be deprived and were placed temporarily with relatives, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(c)(2)(A), the trial court had jurisdiction to order the parent to pay temporary support. However, the court lacked jurisdiction to enter a final award of support under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 as no final order was entered disposing of the case. In the Interest of R.F., 295 Ga. App. 739, 673 S.E.2d 108 (2009).

Motion for new trial for failure to make findings. — Trial court erred in failing to hold a hearing as required by Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.3 on a husband's post-trial motion for a new trial on the basis of the trial court's failure to make child support findings as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15. The husband was not required to file a written request for oral argument. Kuriatnyk v. Kuriatnyk, 286 Ga. 589, 690 S.E.2d 397 (2010).

Only one party can be prevailing party in determining attorney's fees. — In a child support modification action that resulted in an increase in the father's child support, even if not to the extent requested by the mother, the mother was the prevailing party under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(5), and only the mother could be awarded attorney's fees; the trial court erred in finding that there could be, and were, two prevailing parties. Mironov v. Mironov, 296 Ga. 114, 765 S.E.2d 326 (2014).

Role of Jury

It is duty of jury to fix amount minor children shall be entitled to for their permanent support. Hardy v. Pennington, 187 Ga. 523, 1 S.E.2d 667 (1939).

Jury is vested with discretion as to amount, character, and duration of permanent support to be awarded to the child or children of the unsuccessful marriage, and an instruction, that if the jury found in favor of the children, the jury should fix an allowance that would be sufficient to provide for their maintenance, protection, and education until their majority is erroneous. Mell v. Mell, 190 Ga. 508, 9 S.E.2d 756 (1940).

Factors jury should not "discount." — In determining husband's gross income, the jury was not entitled to "discount" amounts such as retirement pay awarded to the wife, the minor child's college costs, insurance premiums, etc. Franz v. Franz, 268 Ga. 465, 490 S.E.2d 377 (1997).

Factors jury may consider. — On the husband's ability to pay, the jury may take into consideration his age, the condition of his health, his material resources, his present income, and any previous allowance voluntarily made by the husband for the support of the wife. Fried v. Fried, 211 Ga. 149, 84 S.E.2d 576 (1954) (decided prior to the 1989 amendment establishing guidelines for child support awards).

Settlement between husband and wife, in which no provision is made for child, is not considered by jury in estimating the allowance to a child which had not been previously awarded to her by decree of the court. Johnson v. Johnson, 131 Ga. 606, 62 S.E. 1044 (1908).

Jury must award specific amount and not percentage of income. — Jury award which based child support solely on a percentage computation of the father's income, without setting a flat sum for which he was liable, did not comply with the requirement of the statute that a definite amount be specified. Newsome v. Newsome, 237 Ga. 221, 227 S.E.2d 347 (1976); Wilcox v. Wilcox, 242 Ga. 598, 250 S.E.2d 465 (1978).

Jury authorized to grant support until children reach majority. — When viewed in connection with the remedy provided in former Code 1933, § 30-207 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15), the principle of former Code 1933, § 74-105 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2) operates to authorize, though it does not require, the jury to find a support for the minor children until their majority. Mell v. Mell, 190 Ga. 508, 9 S.E.2d 756 (1940).

Amount found by jury may or may not be calculated to support children until majority. Mell v. Mell, 190 Ga. 508, 9 S.E.2d 756 (1940).

Modification of Award

Enforceability of agreement between parties. — While parties may enter into an agreement concerning modification of child support, the agreement becomes an enforceable agreement only when made an order of the court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. Pearson v. Pearson, 265 Ga. 100, 454 S.E.2d 124 (1995).

Extension of support period. — When the original child support decree provided for a reduction of child support upon the oldest child's majority, thus providing an ending time for that portion of the parent's support obligation relating to the oldest child, the trial court in a modification action had no authority to extend the period for which the parent would be required to pay child support for three children. Eubanks v. Rabon, 281 Ga. 708, 642 S.E.2d 652 (2007).

Retroactive application of guidelines. — Guidelines added by the 1989 amendment may be applied retroactively to a petition to modify child support provisions in a decree entered before the effective date of the amendment. Walker v. Walker, 260 Ga. 442, 396 S.E.2d 235 (1990).

Child support guidelines of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 apply to child support modification actions and to divorce actions seeking to establish an initial obligation of child support. That section can be applied retroactively to modify a 1983 divorce judgment. Riggs v. Darsey, 260 Ga. 487, 396 S.E.2d 905 (1990).

Child-support guidelines are applicable to a modification action (Riggs v. Darsey, 260 Ga. 487, 396 S.E.2d 905 (1990)), and the trial court must review the agreement in light of the child support amounts contained in the child-support guidelines. Pearson v. Pearson, 265 Ga. 100, 454 S.E.2d 124 (1995).

Modification was not retroactive to the filing of the petition. — Trial court did not err in imputing income of $2,500 to an unemployed parent based on the parent's training and experience as a paralegal and the trial court's finding that the parent had failed to show efforts to obtain employment and was choosing not to work. The downward adjustment by the trial court was not retroactive to the date of the petition for modification; O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(j) did not apply to this case, in which only modification of child support was sought. Galvin v. Galvin, 288 Ga. 125, 702 S.E.2d 155 (2010).

Petition for modification time-barred. — Parent's petition for downward modification of the parent's child support obligation should have been dismissed because the parent did not invoke the exception contained in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(2)(C) in the parent's successive petition; the relevant time frame for the parent's alleged loss of income in excess of the statutory exception was from the date of the prior modification ruling, and the material allegations of the petition were essentially that of the prior petition for modification. Bagwell v. Bagwell, 290 Ga. 378, 721 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Future modification must be tied to finances. — Trier of fact may place a time limit on child support but only if the court ties it to some financial consideration. Scherberger v. Scherberger, 260 Ga. 635, 398 S.E.2d 363 (1990).

Award of a home to the wife and the children until the youngest child turns 18 or the wife remarries constitute an illegal future modification of child support not tied to income fluctuation. Scherberger v. Scherberger, 260 Ga. 635, 398 S.E.2d 363 (1990).

Modification procedure not dependent upon public assistance. — When the Department of Human Resources (DHR) petitions the superior court to adopt the Department's recommendation, the court is not required to find a need for additional support but, without regard to whether a child is receiving public assistance, may increase child support based solely on a significant inconsistency between an existing order and the amount which would result from application of the child support guidelines; the Child Support Recovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-11-1 et seq., does not contain any basis for continuing to distinguish between the procedure available since the child is receiving public assistance and that which is available in the absence of any such assistance. The trial court erred in concluding that evidence of the need for additional support was necessary and that DHR lacked standing, and in failing to apply child support guidelines and to justify any departure therefrom. Falkenberry v. Taylor, 278 Ga. 842, 607 S.E.2d 567 (2005).

In a child support modification action, the trial court erred in concluding that evidence of the need for additional support was necessary and that the Department of Human Resources (DHR) lacked standing to file a modification action on behalf of a child not receiving public assistance unless the court could show the child's need for additional support, and in failing to apply the child support guidelines of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 and to justify any departure therefrom; by express statutory amendment, the General Assembly no longer reserved for the private bar those modification actions which involved children who did not receive public assistance and needed no additional support, but whose court-ordered provider enjoyed an enhanced financial status. Falkenberry v. Taylor, 278 Ga. 842, 607 S.E.2d 567 (2005) (Unpublished).

Trial court erred by requiring that an ex-wife refrain from applying for any government assistance for the children while the ex-wife receives child support from the ex-husband because it was an effort to make a predetermined finding with respect to a potential future modification and was unauthorized under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15. Singh v. Hammond, 292 Ga. 579, 740 S.E.2d 126 (2013).

Modification outside range of guidelines. — Trial court's order modifying child support outside the range of the Georgia Child Support Guidelines was required to state the amount of support that would have been required under the guidelines and to contain a written finding as to the father's gross income. Faulkner v. Frampton, 216 Ga. App. 785, 456 S.E.2d 88 (1995).

Order that the father pay increased child support based on a substantial change in the father's financial condition was reversed because although the jury checked several special circumstances listed on the verdict form, the jury failed to explicitly state whether an award under the guidelines was excessive; the special circumstances checked did not imply that the jury thought the award was excessive, in fact, the checked circumstances supported an inference that the guideline award was inadequate and that the jury intended for the father to pay more, not less. Lewis v. Scruggs, 261 Ga. App. 573, 583 S.E.2d 240 (2003).

Wife was entitled to an upward modification of child support because the wife presented evidence that the husband's gross monthly income had increased from $8,898 to $10,700.91 during the period between entry of the final divorce decree and the filing of the petition for modification and there was evidence that the husband's net worth had increased by almost three million dollars. That evidence supported the trial court's finding of a substantial change in income and financial status sufficient to authorize modification of the support award and supported the trial court's deviation from the presumptive amount of child support based on a parent's financial ability to provide for private school education. Odom v. Odom, 291 Ga. 811, 733 S.E.2d 741 (2012).

Modification below guidelines permitted, but no forgiveness of arrearages. — While the trial court did not erroneously set a mother's child support obligation at a percentage well below the guidelines, the court lacked the authority to completely forgive the mother's arrearage as the General Assembly did not intend to permit forgiveness of past-due child support arrearage, regardless of whether the modification proceeding fell under the general statutory scheme or the Child Support Recovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-11-1 et seq. Ga. Dep't of Human Res. v. Prater, 278 Ga. App. 900, 630 S.E.2d 145 (2006).

In modifying a father's child support obligation, the trial court erred in increasing support above the amount in the guidelines without making a finding of special circumstances warranting such a deviation; furthermore, the trial court erred in not applying the guidelines to the father's counterclaim for an increase of the support the mother was to pay the father during the summer. Eubanks v. Rabon, 281 Ga. 708, 642 S.E.2d 652 (2007).

Modification of a child support obligation in a garnishment action, rather than a petition to modify, was erroneous. Twineham v. Daniel, 223 Ga. App. 25, 476 S.E.2d 814 (1996).

Prejudgment garnishment not authorized. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(h)(3)(B)(i) does not authorize garnishment for uninsured health care expenses that have not been reduced to a money judgment without compliance with the requirements of the more restrictive prejudgment garnishment procedure set out in O.C.G.A. § 18-4-40. Stoker v. Severin, 292 Ga. App. 870, 665 S.E.2d 913 (2008).

In a proceeding to legitimate a child, the trial court did not err in calculating the petitioning parent's child support obligation to be $2,200 per month as the trial court relied on the testimony of the petitioning parent's accountant, the ex-spouse who remained a business partner, and the petitioning parent's tax returns and self-employment income documentation. Appling v. Tatum, 295 Ga. App. 78, 670 S.E.2d 795 (2008).

Consideration of father's new household. — In increasing a remarried father's child support obligation based on increased income, the trial court properly considered his support obligation to his child by his new wife; the trial court had considered the father's income as well as his current wife's income and ultimately decided that based on his obligations to his current household, the father was entitled to reduce the upward modification of child support payments. Sharpe v. Perkins, 284 Ga. App. 376, 644 S.E.2d 178 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 509 (Ga. 2007).

Modifications following custody change. — Following a change of custody from mother to father, it was error to include child support formerly paid by the father in the mother's income for purposes of calculating her child support obligation. Martin v. Greco, 225 Ga. App. 752, 484 S.E.2d 789 (1997).

Modification must be tied to guidelines. — Since the parties' settlement agreement modified custody so each would be the residential custodian of one child, the trial court erred by approving a provision in the agreement that neither would pay the other child support because the court did not determine whether this provision complied with the child support guidelines. Ford v. Hanna, 293 Ga. App. 863, 668 S.E.2d 271 (2008).

Trial court did not address whether there had been a change in the financial circumstances of the husband since the original child support award. If the husband's financial status had not substantially changed, then no modification was appropriate, if modification was appropriate, then the court was required to use the child support guidelines to calculate the new amount. Wetherington v. Wetherington, 291 Ga. 722, 732 S.E.2d 433 (2012).

Trial court's child support award was reversed and the case was remanded for reconsideration because the trial court's award of child support was predicated on the court's decision to change custody of the parties' son, which change was vacated. Blue v. Hemmans, 327 Ga. App. 353, 759 S.E.2d 72 (2014).

Temporary child support judgment was reversed and the case remanded for entry of an order that complied with O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(4)(D) because the order showed on the order's face that the guidelines were not used and that the trial court was unable to calculate various items relating to child support and arrears; if modification was appropriate, then the trial court was required to use the child support guidelines to calculate the new amount. Neal v. Hibbard, 770 S.E.2d 600, No. S14A1673, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 183 (2015).

Modification with deviation from guidelines prohibited. — In the mother's petition to modify child support, there was no articulated basis for application of a specified discretionary deviation from the presumptive child support obligation because the history of the parties was not a ground for deviation in child support, and the modified physical custody awarded the father fell far short of being substantially equal to that with the mother. Crook v. Crook, 293 Ga. 867, 750 S.E.2d 334 (2013).

Delay in effective date of modification improper. — A 15-month delay in the effective date of an upward modification of child support was improper under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(3)(B). When a modification award involved at least a 30% difference, as in the instant case, the new child support award could be phased in over a period of up to two years with at least an initial immediate adjustment of not less than 25 percent of the difference. Hampton v. Nesmith, 294 Ga. App. 514, 669 S.E.2d 489 (2008).

Child support available even though child reached age 18. — Trial court could properly award child support to a parent who filed a petition for change of custody and child support, even though the child had reached the age of 18 by the time the petition was considered. The parent was not divested of the right to seek child support for the period of time between the filing of the petition and the date on which the child turned 18, and as the child had not yet completed high school, an order for support beyond the child's 18th birthday could be entered. Wade v. Corinthian, 283 Ga. 514, 661 S.E.2d 532 (2008).

Failure to show that discretionary parenting-time deviation applied. —

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to apply discretionary parenting-time deviation from the presumptive child support amount set forth in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i)(2)(K) as sought by a parent because the parent failed to show a special circumstance showing the presumptive amount of support excessive or that the child's best interest would be served by subtracting from the presumptive amount. Hamlin v. Ramey, 291 Ga. App. 222, 661 S.E.2d 593 (2008).

Monetary gifts count as income and impact ability to modify. — Parent did not prove entitlement to a modification of child support because, even assuming the money the parent received from a trust of which the parent and the children's grandparent were the sole beneficiaries was a gift, it had to be included in the parent's gross income under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(1)(A)(xvii). In the Interest of R.F., 295 Ga. App. 739, 673 S.E.2d 108 (2009).

Modification properly denied. — When a parent agreed to child support in excess of the O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 support guidelines and did not subsequently show a reduction in the parent's financial status and income, a downward modification of child support under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a) was properly denied. Moccia v. Moccia, 277 Ga. 571, 592 S.E.2d 664 (2004).

Because two years had not elapsed from a prior court order disposing of an earlier petition for support modification filed by one parent, the trial court did not err when the court dismissed under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(2) the portion of a petition seeking modification of the child-support award. Avren v. Garten, 289 Ga. 186, 710 S.E.2d 130 (2011).

Mother required to pay support to father. — Trial court properly designated a father as the custodial parent pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(a)(9), and required the mother to pay child support to the father because it was undisputed that the child was spending equal time with the parents and that the mother had the higher income. Stoddard v. Meyer, 291 Ga. 739, 732 S.E.2d 439 (2012).

Trial court did not err by imputing income to the mother because there was evidence that the mother and new husband had determined that it was to the advantage of their children that the mother not work outside the home. Carr-MacArthur v. Carr, 296 Ga. 30, 764 S.E.2d 840 (2014).

Evidence did not support upward modification. — Trial court record was devoid of evidence that a parent had the ability or means to earn an amount found by the trial court, such that the court's grant of the other parent's request for an upward modification of the parent's child support obligation could not stand; the evidence was uncontroverted that the parent's income and earning capacity had dramatically decreased. Herrin v. Herrin, 287 Ga. 427, 696 S.E.2d 626 (2010).

Increase of child support obligation improper. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in increasing a mother's child support obligation because the court failed to determine whether her income had substantially changed from the entry of the divorce decree pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(4), and even if the trial court correctly disregarded the reduction in the mother's income, the evidence failed to show an increase in the mother's income since her divorce; while it appeared that the trial court modified the child support award consistent with existing child support guidelines, the court had no valid basis to do so. Harris v. Williams, 304 Ga. App. 390, 696 S.E.2d 131 (2010), overruled on other grounds, Viskup v. Visкуп, 291 Ga. 103, 727 S.E.2d 97 (2012).

Annual payment of child support based on commissions. — Trial court, by including an additional child support provision requiring a father to pay an annual payment of 25 percent of his gross commissions on top of the presumptive child support amount, circumvented the requirement that a court only may deviate from the presumptive amount after making the necessary findings in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i)(1)(B). Stowell v. Huguenard, 288 Ga. 628, 706 S.E.2d 419 (2011).

Consideration of new spouse's income erroneous. — Child support award was reversed because nothing in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 authorized the trial court to consider the income or other resources of the father's new spouse as a part of the calculation of the child support obligation as his new wife had no legal obligation to contribute, directly or indirectly, to the support of the parties' three children. Blumenshine v. Hall, 329 Ga. App. 449, 765 S.E.2d 647 (2014).

Judicial notice. — It was error for the trial court in modifying a child support award to take judicial notice of an increase in the needs of the children because the question of whether there had been such an increase would be a matter of proof if it had been placed in issue; the error was harmless, however, as the modification order did not expressly mention an increase in the children's needs as a basis for increasing the child support. Eubanks v. Rabon, 281 Ga. 708, 642 S.E.2d 652 (2007).

Accrual pending modification petition. — Father's child support obligation did not continue to accrue at the same rate after the mother was served with the father's petition to modify child support. Under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(j), support due before the entry of a modification order did not accrue to the extent that the obligation was based on the father's income from employment from which the father had been involuntarily terminated. Morgan v. Bunzendahl, 316 Ga. App. 338, 729 S.E.2d 476 (2012).

No duty to pay miscellaneous expenses when whole support order modified. — Since the modification order encompassed and modified the entire child support obligation including the duty to pay miscellaneous expenses, and the order modified child support without deviation for miscellaneous expenses, the order did not leave the prior miscellaneous expense provision in full force and effect and the father could not be in contempt for failure to pay those expenses. East v. Stephens, 292 Ga. 604, 740 S.E.2d 156 (2013).

Remand of attorney fee award required. — In a child custody modification proceeding, the trial court erred by awarding attorney fees to the father in the amount of $4,000 under O.C.G.A. § 19-9-3 as the award was not supported by the record since the trial court did not explain the statutory basis for the award and did not enter any findings necessary to support the award as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(5). Kuehn v. Key, 325 Ga. App. 512, 754 S.E.2d 103 (2014).

Writing Requirement

Written findings required. — Trial court, upon modifying an award of child support, must enter written findings of special circumstances in order to deviate, up or down, from the child support guidelines. Ehlers v. Ehlers, 264 Ga. 668, 449 S.E.2d 840 (1994).

Award of child support in the case sub judice being beyond the range of statutory guidelines, the trial court erred in failing to provide the required written findings. Kennedy v. Adams, 218 Ga. App. 120, 460 S.E.2d 540 (1995).

Even though O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 was amended since the finding in Ehlers v. Ehlers, 264 Ga. 668, 449 S.E.2d 840 (1994), the requirement for written findings remains. Department of Human Resources v. Wilcox, 219 Ga. App. 757, 466 S.E.2d 662 (1996).

Trial court erred in setting aside a father's child support obligation because the trial court failed to make a written finding of the gross income of the father and the mother as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(a), or of the presence or absence of special circumstances justifying a departure from the guidelines applicable range as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c). Eleazer v. Eleazer, 275 Ga. 482, 569 S.E.2d 521 (2002).

Trial court erred in not fully adopting the recommendation of the Department of Human Resources to reduce a father's child support obligation to $718 per month and in ordering that the father's child support obligation be reduced to $1,000 per month because the trial court's written order failed to state how application of the presumptive amount of child support would be unjust or inappropriate and how the best interest of the children for whom support was being determined would be served by the deviation pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(2)(E) and (i)(1)(B); O.C.G.A. § 19-11-12(e) does not authorize the trial court to refrain from written findings or any other compliance with § 19-6-15 because like § 19-6-15(d), § 19-11-12(e) serves to emphasize that the qualitative determinations of whether special circumstances make the presumptive amount of child support excessive or inadequate and whether deviating from the presumptive amount serves the best interest of the child are committed to the discretion of the court. Spurlock v. Dep't of Human Res., 286 Ga. 512, 690 S.E.2d 378 (2010).

Juvenile court erred in awarding child support without making the written findings required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(2), including a determination of the parents' gross income and certain findings regarding the child's health insurance coverage and apportionment of the child's uninsured health care expenses. Roberts v. Tharp, 286 Ga. 579, 690 S.E.2d 404 (2010).

When a final child support order included a specific deviation for extraordinary educational expenses under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i)(2)(J)(i), but the trial court failed to make the statutorily required written findings necessary to support the deviation, remand was required for a redetermination of the order, with any deviation to be based upon proper written findings. Brogdon v. Brogdon, 290 Ga. 618, 723 S.E.2d 421 (2012).

Order of modification deviating from the presumptive child support obligation was flawed because the modification failed to comply with the statutory requirements of supporting findings and documentation for a discretionary downward deviation in the amount of child support. Crook v. Crook, 293 Ga. 867, 750 S.E.2d 334 (2013).

In a child support case, although both parties waived findings of fact, the trial court in deviating from the child support guidelines was nevertheless required to set forth how application of the guidelines would be unjust or inappropriate, or how the best interests of the children would be served by a deviation, under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(2)(E). Wallace v. Wallace, 296 Ga. 307, 766 S.E.2d 452 (2014).

Written finding of fact not required when the court orders the statutory presumptive amount. If no deviation applies and the trial court or jury decides not to deviate from the presumptive amount of child support, then the order need not explain how the trial court or jury reached that decision. Hamlin v. Ramey, 291 Ga. App. 222, 661 S.E.2d 593 (2008).

Father failed to show that a trial court's determination that the mother had no monthly gross income constituted a "deviation" that required the trial court to make findings of fact under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15. The statute contemplated that a deviation was an increase or decrease from the presumptive amount of child support. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 309 Ga. App. 590, 711 S.E.2d 103 (2011).

In a divorce action in which the mother earned $5,097 monthly and the father earned $54,732 monthly, the trial court in granting a $2,000 upward deviation from the presumptive amount of support failed to explain how the guidelines amount would be unjust or inappropriate and how the best interest of the children was served by deviation as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(2)(E)(iii); remand was required for such written findings. Fladger v. Fladger, 296 Ga. 145, 765 S.E.2d 354 (2014).

Trial court erred by failing to include findings in the court's child support award as to the court's deviation from the presumptive amount of child support based on the parent's military deployment. Carr-MacArthur v. Carr, 296 Ga. 30, 764 S.E.2d 840 (2014).

Written finding as to the gross incomes required. — Award was vacated and the case remanded after the trial court awarded child support without making a written finding as to the gross incomes of the child's parents, without applying the applicable statutory percentage range, and without making a written finding of special circumstances justifying the departure from the guidelines' applicable range. Urquhart v. Urquhart, 272 Ga. 548, 533 S.E.2d 80 (2000).

Georgia Supreme Court has noted that an award of child support may be based on the earning capacity of the obligor and not on gross income in certain circumstances; but it is also apparent that the obligor's gross income is the starting point for a child support determination under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b). However, an order awarding child support was vacated since the trial court failed to determine the father's gross income, but made a child support award based on the earning capacity of the father; therefore, the section of the child support award as to attorney fees and the fees of the guardian ad litem was also vacated inasmuch as the trial court made these determinations in the context of the court's ruling awarding child support. Eldridge v. Ireland, 259 Ga. App. 44, 576 S.E.2d 44 (2002).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(a) requires a divorce decree to include a written finding of the gross income of the father and the mother; when the decree included a finding of the husband's income, but did not include a finding of the wife's income, it was necessary that the case be remanded to the trial court with direction to make a finding of the wife's income, to reconsider the award of child support based on that finding, and to amend the decree accordingly. Southerland v. Southerland, 278 Ga. 188, 598 S.E.2d 442 (2004).

Because the trial court's order failed to specify the amount of child support to be paid, include a written finding of the gross income of each parent, and discuss the presence or absence of special circumstances in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c), the failure to include these requisite findings constituted reversible error. Simmons v. Williams, 290 Ga. App. 644, 660 S.E.2d 435 (2008).

Findings not required if court adheres to child support obligation table. — Trial court adhered to the child support obligation table and, thus, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i)(1)(B), was not required to make any fact findings or explain the court's decision to forego applying the children's private school tuition to the child support calculations. Johnson v. Johnson, 284 Ga. 366, 667 S.E.2d 350 (2008).

Court erred in not making best interests findings in modification. — Although in making adjustments to a mother's income for other qualified children, the trial court was not required to make the type of findings that would support a deviation from presumptive child support, the trial court erred in not making findings regarding the child's best interests under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(f)(5)(C). Wheeler v. Akins, 327 Ga. App. 830, 761 S.E.2d 383 (2014).

Writing Requirement (Cont'd)

Education of Children

Court may include in decree provision for educational funds including expenses for attending a college during minority when the circumstances of the case warrant it. Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977).

Providing for education acceptable. — Jury is not prohibited from providing for the education of minor children of an unsuccessful marriage. Bateman v. Bateman, 224 Ga. 20, 159 S.E.2d 387 (1968).

Extraordinary educational expenses not required to be factored into child support calculation. — Trial court did not err in leaving the children's private school tuition out of the court's child support calculations because, under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(i)(2)(J)(i), extraordinary educational expenses were not required to be factored into that calculation. Johnson v. Johnson, 284 Ga. 366, 667 S.E.2d 350 (2008).

Verdict merely finding amount for education of child is contrary to law. While it would scarcely be possible to educate a child without supporting the child, such a verdict leaves the question of support undecided and in such case a new trial should be granted. Flynn v. Flynn, 149 Ga. 693, 101 S.E. 806 (1920); Bateman v. Bateman, 224 Ga. 20, 159 S.E.2d 387 (1968).

Award of tuition outside of support award without necessary findings was unexplained deviation. — Trial court's order regarding child support did not comply with O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(c)(2)(E) and (i)(1)(B) because the order failed to include the necessary findings; the trial court's award of tuition outside of the support award was an unexplained deviation. Johnson v. Ware, 313

Ga. App. 774, 723 S.E.2d 18 (2012).

Obligation for educational expenses terminates on majority or marriage. — Any obligation to pay educational expenses of a child imposed by the decree terminates when the child reaches majority or marries. Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977).

Indirect costs considered to vary final award. — In determining the amount of child support to be paid, the trial court can give consideration to indirect costs paid by the obligor, e.g., health insurance premiums, in departing from guidelines, but such indirect payments can be considered only to vary the final award. Ehlers v. Ehlers, 264 Ga. 668, 449 S.E.2d 840 (1994).

Modification due to continuing education. — Modification action to extend support payments to allow a child who had reached the age of majority to complete a secondary school education was not required to be filed before the child's 18th birthday. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 267 Ga. 886, 485 S.E.2d 475 (1997).

In order to extend support payments to allow a child who had reached the age of majority to complete a secondary school education, it was not required that provision for such possibility have been made in the temporary or final support order. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 267 Ga. 886, 485 S.E.2d 475 (1997).

Continuous full-time student. — Because the superior court erroneously focused on a son's absences, tardiness, and failure to attend summer school when the court concluded that the son was not a "continuous full time student" when the son reached the age of majority, the decision was not in accord with the parties' agreement or the legislative purpose of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15. Bullard v. Swafford, 279 Ga. 577, 619 S.E.2d 665 (2005).

Trial court erred when the court determined that a father's child-support obligation terminated because the child was not enrolled in and attending school on a full-time basis between June and August because the agreement between the father and the mother did not require the child's continuous attendance in school during the summer months but required only the child's full-time attendance in school; full-time school does not require attendance in school during the summer months. Draughn v. Draughn, 288 Ga. 734, 707 S.E.2d 52 (2011).

Child enrolled in online courses. — Trial court erred in finding that a child's enrollment in online courses did not satisfy a modification order's requirement that the child "attend" school in order to have the father pay child support beyond the child's attainment of majority; once a child enrolls in approved online courses in an effort to graduate from a secondary school, the child's online attendance constitutes "attending school" for purposes of extending child support beyond the child's attainment of the age of majority. Draughn v. Draughn, 288 Ga. 734, 707 S.E.2d 52 (2011).

Custodial parent to pay education expenses. — Res judicata did not bar a father's claim for interpretation and enforcement of child support provisions in the parties' settlement agreement; the agreement clearly gave the father final authority over the children's school and the mother, as custodial parent, was obligated to pay the children's tuition from the support she received. Hardman v. Hardman, 295 Ga. 732, 763 S.E.2d 861 (2014).

19-6-16. Enforcement of child support orders, decrees, or verdicts.

413, § 3; Code 1873, § 1743; Code 1882, § 1743; Civil Code 1895, § 2463; Civil Code 1910, § 2982; Code 1933, § 30-208; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 13.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

No right to enforce past due part of alimony judgment is vested in children. Levine v. Seley, 217 Ga. 384, 123 S.E.2d 1 (1961).

Right to enforce child's support payment vested in parent. — Right to enforce a judgment for alimony either for the wife alone, or for herself and her minor children who are in her custody or only for her minor children when she has custody of them is vested exclusively in the mother. The same rule applies to the enforcement of an award for attorney fees in an alimony case. Levine v. Seley, 217 Ga. 384, 123 S.E.2d 1 (1961).

Adult child improper party for enforcement. — Adult daughter was not the proper party to bring an action against the father to recover child support arrearages and to revive a dormant child support decree. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources ex rel. Holland v. Holland, 263 Ga. 885, 440 S.E.2d 9 (1994).

Remedy available to wife when husband fails to pay support. — Wife is entitled to institute contempt proceeding against husband for failure to pay support of parties' minor children, custody of which was awarded by divorce decree to wife, notwithstanding the fact that payment of support was directed to be made to the children's grandmother. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 201 Ga. 793, 41 S.E.2d 519 (1947).

Trial court properly found a father in willful contempt of court for failure to make child support payments pursuant to the court's order legitimating the child, upon a mother's application, as the father's failure to make those payments was undisputed in the record, the father owned significant assets, and in contemplation of the contempt hearing, the father transferred some of the assets; however, an unsupported attorney-fee award to the mother was reversed, and an evidentiary hearing was ordered on remand. Webb v. Watkins, 283 Ga. App. 385, 641 S.E.2d 611 (2007).

Judgment ordering alimony for benefit of child sufficient basis for contempt proceeding. — In a decree of final divorce, a judgment and decree rendered against a father that he pay to the mother the sum of $50 per month as alimony for the support of their minor son until he reached eighteen years of age is sufficient to form the basis of a contempt proceeding against the father if he did not make the required payments. Morris v. Myers, 219 Ga. 278, 133 S.E.2d 22 (1963).

Party charged with contempt bears burden to show good faith attempt at compliance. — In a contempt proceeding, the burden is on one who fails and refuses to pay an award for alimony or child support and maintenance to show that he has in good faith exhausted all of the resources at his command and has made a diligent and bona fide effort to comply with the decree awarding alimony or child support. Fambrough v. Cannon, 221 Ga. 289, 144 S.E.2d 335 (1965).

Essence of civil contempt involved in a proceeding to enforce payment of an alimony or child support award is willful disobedience of the court's order. Costa v. Costa, 249 Ga. 494, 292 S.E.2d 73 (1982).

Requirement of showing good faith effort to comply. — It is not sufficient for the defendant to show merely that the defendant has no money, or property which the defendant might convert into money, with which to satisfy the alimony installments, but it must be made to appear clearly that the defendant has in good faith exhausted all the resources at the defendant's command and has made a diligent and bona fide effort to comply with the order of the court. Snider v. Snider, 190 Ga. 381, 9 S.E.2d 654 (1940).

Imprisonment for contempt is matter of judicial discretion. — Because imprisonment for contempt is a matter solely within the sound discretion of the judge and the judge may at any time, in the exercise of that discretion, discharge one so imprisoned, the Supreme Court will not interfere with the discretion vested in the trial judge unless the discretion has been manifestly abused. Corriher v. McElroy, 209 Ga. 885, 76 S.E.2d 782 (1953).

Finding of ability to pay required. — Person may not be imprisoned for failure to pay child support unless it is first found that the person has the ability to pay but merely refuses to do so. Pittman v. Pittman, 179 Ga. App. 454, 346 S.E.2d 594 (1986).

Temporary residence by child in Alabama could not excuse the father's deliberate refusal to support the child in accordance with the court's order in the divorce decree. Fennell v. Fennell, 209 Ga. 815, 76 S.E.2d 387 (1953).

19-6-17. Application for child support following custody award; service of petition; hearing; review; modification of order; enforcement; judgment.

(a) Whenever the custody of a minor child or children has been lawfully awarded by any court having jurisdiction thereof to:

(1) Any person other than a parent of the children at any time subsequent to the rendition of a final divorce decree between the father and mother of the children; or

(2) A parent as part of the final divorce decree where the court awarding the decree was unable to obtain jurisdiction over the parent without custody for purposes of a determination as to whether the parent should be bound for support of the child or children and the court's decree contains no specific provisions binding the parent without custody for the support of the child or children, the parent or other person to whom the custody of the child or children is awarded may apply by petition to the superior court in the county where the parent without custody of the child or children resides for an order and judgment fixing the amount of support money that the parent without custody shall provide in order to fulfill the parent's natural duty to supply the necessities of life for the child or children.

(b) The procedure provided for in this Code section shall be available in cases in which the parent with custody of the children is the petitioner, notwithstanding the fact that the divorce decree and judgment may have been rendered in favor of the parent without custody.

(c) The petition shall be served upon the respondent; it shall be heard by the court, unless a jury trial is demanded by either party to the case. The judgment shall be reviewable as in other cases. The order or judgment shall likewise be subject to modification in the event of changed circumstances, under the same terms and conditions as are provided for in other cases of permanent alimony for the support of children granted in connection with the rendition of a final decree in divorce cases.

(d) The order and judgment of the court shall remain in effect, except as limited by its own restrictions and subsection (c) of this Code section, so long as the petitioner remains in lawful custody of the child or children and until they become of age. Execution may be granted to the petitioner for any sums past due under the order and judgment, in accordance with procedures in other cases of judgments for alimony.

(e) Any payment or installment of support under any child support order is, on and after the date due:

(1) A judgment by operation of law, with the full force and effect and attributes of a judgment of this state, including the ability to be enforced;

(2) Entitled as a judgment to full faith and credit; and

(3) Not subject to retroactive modification. (Ga. L. 1958, p. 204, § 1; Ga. L. 1977, p. 619, § 1; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 32; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1613, § 6.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Venue. — In a divorce proceeding, in which the order did not determine an award of child support, a petition for child support must be brought as a separate action in the superior court of the county where the defendant to the petition resides. Eaddy v. Thomas, 190 Ga. App. 15, 378 S.E.2d 147 (1989).

Children need not be destitute to receive child support. — Ga. L. 1958, p. 204, § 1 does not require, as condition precedent to fixing child support, that children be in destitute condition because of the failure of the father to provide the children with necessities. Murphey v. Murphey, 215 Ga. 19, 108 S.E.2d 872 (1959).

No right to credit for voluntary overpayment of child support. — Party with obligation of child support payments has no right to credit for voluntary overpayment of the child support due without the request or consent of the party to whom it is owed; nor can the parties by private agreement modify the terms of a divorce decree regarding child support. Peyton v. Peyton, 243 Ga. 846, 257 S.E.2d 268 (1979).

Modification below guidelines permitted, but no forgiveness of arrearages. — While the trial court did not erroneously set a mother’s child support obligation at a percentage well below the guidelines, the court lacked the authority to completely forgive the mother’s arrearage as the General Assembly did not intend to permit forgiveness of past-due child support arrearage, regardless of whether the modification proceeding fell under the general statutory scheme or the Child Support Recovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-11-1 et seq. Ga. Dep’t of Human Res. v. Prater, 278 Ga. App. 900, 630 S.E.2d 145 (2006).

Contracts settling child support and maintenance, approved by court, are enforceable. — When parties separate and by contract settle right of their minor children for support and maintenance and such contract is approved by trial judge and made part of final divorce decree, courts will enforce the contract as made by the parties. Halpern v. Anoff, 247 Ga. 735, 279 S.E.2d 226 (1981).

No authority to grant or modify support in contempt proceeding. — In a divorce case, the trial court has no authority to grant or modify child support in a contempt proceeding. Eaddy v. Thomas, 190 Ga. App. 15, 378 S.E.2d 147 (1989).

In a contempt proceeding brought by the Georgia Department of Human Resources, the trial court erred in modifying a parent’s child support obligation and in forgiving a portion of the arrearage because the court lacked authority to modify support orders in contempt proceedings and O.C.G.A. § 19-6-17(e)(1)-(3) precluded retroactive modification of child support. Ga. Dep’t of Human Res. v. Gamble, 297 Ga. App. 509, 677 S.E.2d 713 (2009).

Retroactive arrearage judgment was not permitted. — Child support arrearage judgment of $2,844 was reversed because the judgment was based on the amount that the mother would have paid from the time the father was granted custody to the date the mother was ordered to start paying child support; such a retroactive modification of child support was not permitted. Wheeler v. Akins, 327 Ga. App. 830, 761 S.E.2d 383 (2014).

Action for child support can be brought in addition to divorce action. — Although the complaint in the divorce action did not seek child support, the custodial spouse was not barred from enforcing the responsibility of the non-custodial spouse to support the child, and the custodial spouse may institute an original action for an award of child support. Hackbart v. Hackbart, 272 Ga. 26, 526 S.E.2d 840 (2000).

19-6-18. Revision of judgment rendered prior to July 1, 1977, for permanent alimony and child support; when authorized; petition and hearing; expenses for defense of litigation.

(a) The judgment of a court providing permanent alimony for the support of a wife or child or children, or both, rendered prior to July 1, 1977, shall be subject to revision upon petition filed by either the husband or the wife showing a change in the income and financial status of the husband. The petition shall be filed and returnable under the same rules of procedure applicable to divorce proceedings. The petition shall be filed in the proper venue provided by law in civil cases. No petition may be filed by the wife under this Code section within a period of two years from the date of the filing of a previous petition by the wife under this Code section. No petition may be filed by the husband under this Code section within a period of two years from the date of the filing of a previous petition by the husband under this Code section. After hearing both parties and the evidence, the jury, or the judge where a jury is not demanded, may modify and revise the previous judgment so as to provide for the wife or child or children, or both, in accordance with the changed income and financial status of the husband, if such a change in the income and financial status of the husband is satisfactorily proved so as to warrant the modification and revision. In the hearing upon a petition filed as provided in this Code section, testimony may be given and evidence introduced relative to the income and financial status of the wife.

(b) Upon an application as authorized in subsection (a) of this Code section, the merits of whether the wife, or child or children, or both, are entitled to alimony and support are not in issue, but only whether there has been such a substantial change in the income and financial status of the husband as to warrant either a downward or upward revision and modification of the permanent alimony judgment.

(c) An application authorized in subsection (a) of this Code section can be filed only where the husband has been ordered by the final judgment in an alimony or divorce and alimony action to pay permanent alimony in weekly, monthly, annual, or similar periodic payments, and not where the wife, or child or children, or both, have been given an award from the corpus of the husband’s estate in lieu of such periodic payment.

(d) Where an application authorized in subsection (a) of this Code section is filed by the husband, the court may require the husband to pay reasonable expenses of litigation as may be incurred by the wife, either for herself or the child or children, or both, in defense thereof. General Consideration Constitutionality. — See Bugden v. Bugden, 225 Ga. 413, 169 S.E.2d 337 (1969).

Section does not violate equal protection principles. Dill v. Dill, 232 Ga. 231, 206 S.E.2d 6 (1974).

Section subordinate to U.S. Constitution. — Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1, being statutory only, is subordinate to U.S. Const., Art. IV, Sec. I, the full faith and credit clause. Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34 and subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18 compared. — See Hudson v. State, 248 Ga. 397, 283 S.E.2d 271 (1981).

Automatic future modification of alimony or child support. — When definite amount of alimony or child support is awarded, automatic future modification is not invalid. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Modification of judgment based on agreement not unconstitutional impairment of contractual obligation. — Modification of judgment incorporating contract between husband and wife governing property and alimony rights between them pursuant to Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18) is not an unconstitutional impairment of obligation of contracts in violation of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. VII (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X). This is so because, technically, what is being modified is a judgment of the court and not a contract. Kitfield v. Kitfield, 237 Ga. 184, 227 S.E.2d 9 (1976).

Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18) does not offend U.S. Const., Art. I, Sec. X, Cl. I or Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. VII (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X), which provides that no law impairing an obligation of contracts shall be enacted, and this is true even though the amount of alimony or support so awarded by the judgment, as well as the time during which judgment was to be paid, was agreed to in writing by the parties. Nelson v. Roberts, 216 Ga. 741, 119 S.E.2d 545 (1961).

Purpose of statute. — See McGuire v. McGuire, 228 Ga. 782, 187 S.E.2d 859 (1972).

Section was passed to permit both parties to seek modification. — Statute was passed to give parties to Georgia divorce decree statutory power to seek modification of provisions of decree relating to permanent alimony support on petition of either party. McGuire v. McGuire, 228 Ga. 782, 187 S.E.2d 859 (1972).

Law reflects public policy of state in relation to its subject matter. Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Agreement based on 1976 version of section cannot be legislatively modified by amendments which change law and law's application. Shure v. Shure, 245 Ga. 36, 262 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

Section is inapplicable to judgments rendered prior to its passage. — Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, §§ 1-4 neither expressly nor by implication shows legislative intent that it should be applied to alimony judgments rendered prior to the law's passage. Anthony v. Penn, 212 Ga. 292, 92 S.E.2d 14 (1956).

No modification of permanent alimony judgments prior to section's enactment. — Prior to enactment of Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, §§ 1-4, a final decree for permanent alimony not excepted to passed beyond discretionary control of the trial judge, and the judge thereafter had no authority to modify the judgment's terms unless authority to do so was reserved in the decree. Ethridge v. Echols, 212 Ga. 597, 94 S.E.2d 377 (1956).

Exception to rule that decrees not within this provision cannot be modified. — Generally, decrees not coming within provisions of Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, §§ 1-4 cannot be modified or revised by the trial court. This general rule is subject to exception in those instances when: (1) case was tried before court without jury, and matter of permanent alimony was settled by agreement of parties, which agreement was incorporated in and made part of final judgment and decree; and (2) authority to change or modify decree as to alimony was reserved to the court by the consent of the parties. Daniel v. Daniel, 216 Ga. 567, 118 S.E.2d 369 (1961).

Section provides exclusive method for modifying support obligations. — Trial court has no authority save that provided by this statute to revise or otherwise modify child support decree after term in which such judgment was rendered has expired. Davis v. Davis, 218 Ga. 250, 127 S.E.2d 296 (1962); Mullins v. Mullins, 219 Ga. 816, 136 S.E.2d 379 (1964).

After rendition of final divorce decree containing award for alimony in periodic payments, the only way to alter alimony award is pursuant to Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1. Bradley v. Dockery, 232 Ga. 692, 208 S.E.2d 496 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007); Meredith v. Meredith, 238 Ga. 595, 234 S.E.2d 510 (1977); Skinner v. Skinner, 252 Ga. 512, 314 S.E.2d 897 (1984).

Jury verdict stating fixed sum of alimony per calendar month is final and is subject to change only upon showing under Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1. Fitts v. Fitts, 231 Ga. 528, 202 S.E.2d 414 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977); Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Original decree is res judicata of obligation pending modification. — Until proceedings are instituted to modify alimony award, and judgment decreasing amount of alimony is duly entered, original alimony decree is res judicata of amount father must pay for support of children. Roberts v. Mandeville, 217 Ga. 90, 121 S.E.2d 150 (1961); Vickers v. Vickers, 220 Ga. 258, 138 S.E.2d 308 (1964).

When parties have entered into valid alimony contract, which might have provided that it was to terminate upon remarriage of wife, but which did not so provide, and such contract was made judgment of court, the judgment is binding and enforceable until modified, vacated, or set aside. Holland v. Holland, 221 Ga. 418, 144 S.E.2d 753 (1965).

Until a petition under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18 or O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 is brought, the original permanent decree is res judicata as to the amount a father is obligated to pay for the support of his children. Bisno v. Biloon, 161 Ga. App. 351, 291 S.E.2d 66 (1982), overruled on other grounds, State ex rel. McKenna v.

McKenna, 253 Ga. 6, 315 S.E.2d 885 (1984).

Trial judge on contempt proceeding lacks discretion to modify decree for divorce and alimony. Roberts v. Mandeville, 217 Ga. 90, 121 S.E.2d 150 (1961); Vickers v. Vickers, 220 Ga. 258, 138 S.E.2d 308 (1964); Meredith v. Meredith, 238 Ga. 595, 234 S.E.2d 510 (1977).

In a contempt citation as opposed to a suit for alimony modification, trial court has no authority to reduce amount awarded in former divorce decree. Balasco v. Balasco, 235 Ga. 214, 219 S.E.2d 104 (1975).

On hearing of rule for contempt, court is without authority to modify original decree by providing that husband may make future payments, even for one year period, in lesser amount than he was required to make under original decree. Deese v. Deese, 230 Ga. 105, 196 S.E.2d 16 (1973).

Trial judge in contempt proceeding for failure to pay child support was without authority to forgive portion of amount that father had failed to pay on judgment for support of minor children; and had no right to reduce amount that would be due in future since no proceeding had been brought for that purpose. Hall v. Hall, 230 Ga. 873, 199 S.E.2d 798 (1973).

Court approval of modification agreement. — If parties to decree agree to modification, the parties must present agreement to court for approval. Meredith v. Meredith, 238 Ga. 595, 234 S.E.2d 510 (1977).

Statute has been interpreted as being permissive; thus, the question on appeal is whether evidence demands revision. Barker v. Barker, 233 Ga. 170, 210 S.E.2d 705 (1974); Trippe v. Trippe, 237 Ga. 159, 227 S.E.2d 46 (1976).

Right of modification is entirely dependent on entry of original alimony judgment. No new action would accrue merely because of change in income and financial status if alimony judgment had not been previously rendered. Ivey v. Ivey, 234 Ga. 532, 216 S.E.2d 827 (1975).

Applicability of section. — Statute applies only to modification of Georgia final decrees as to permanent alimony. Slowik v. Knorr, 222 Ga. 669, 151 S.E.2d 726 (1966); Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga.

App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969); McGuire v. McGuire, 228 Ga. 782, 187 S.E.2d 859 (1972).

Georgia court cannot modify final decree of foreign state court awarding permanent alimony for support of minor children. McGuire v. McGuire, 228 Ga. 782, 187 S.E.2d 859 (1972).

Foreign court decree cannot be ignored or set aside as contrary to public policy. Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Statute provides for jury trial of issue of modification of previous alimony judgment. Johnston v. Still, 225 Ga. 222, 167 S.E.2d 646 (1969).

Section permits modification of judgment only as to amount payable. — Statute confers authority and power on court rendering alimony or child support judgment to revise and modify the judgment either downward or upward and in no other respect. The court has no legal authority to revise and modify the original judgment in any respect except as to the amount the court required to be paid each month. Kendrick v. Kendrick, 218 Ga. 284, 127 S.E.2d 379 (1962).

Statute confers no legal authority upon trial court to revise or modify original child support judgment in any respect except as to amount court requires husband to pay. Gallant v. Gallant, 223 Ga. 397, 156 S.E.2d 61 (1967).

Change of custody authorizes revision of alimony judgment. — If custody of child should be changed from mother to father, who would then provide for the child's support, this would be such a change in his financial status as would authorize revision of judgment which provided permanent alimony to wife for child's support. Perry v. Perry, 213 Ga. 847, 102 S.E.2d 534 (1958).

Situations in which section is inapplicable. — Section is inapplicable in situations where child support payments are terminated contemporaneous to a custody change from mother to father. Hasty v. Duncan, 239 Ga. 797, 239 S.E.2d 7 (1977).

Termination of support payments by father upon obtaining child custody is not a "modification and revision" of child support and thus Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1 does not apply. Hasty v. Duncan, 239 Ga. 797, 239 S.E.2d 7 (1977).

Construction of two-year petition limitation. — Proper construction of statute prohibits filing of petition for modification of alimony or child support within two years of filing of previous petition for modification of alimony or child support by same party. Wilde v. Wilde, 239 Ga. 750, 239 S.E.2d 3 (1977).

Two-year petition limitation not applicable to petition for custody change. — Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18) relates strictly to petitions for modification of alimony or child support, and should not be read so as to prohibit filing of such petition within two years of filing of petition for change of custody by same party under former Code 1933, § 30-127 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-9-1). Wilde v. Wilde, 239 Ga. 750, 239 S.E.2d 3 (1977).

Modification cannot be obtained through URESA action. — See Ray v. Ray, 247 Ga. 467, 277 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

Order pursuant to URESA proceeding does not supersede support order. — Any order of support issued by a court of this state, entered in an action filed under O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19 (Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act), shall not supersede any previous order of support issued in a divorce or separate maintenance action, and the latter order will not constitute a modification of the former order; thus, amounts for a particular period paid pursuant to either order shall be credited against amounts accruing or accrued for the same period under both. Ray v. Ray, 247 Ga. 467, 277 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

Evidence of an informal change in custody is not admissible in an action for nonpayment of child support since any modifications of the settlement must be made through O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18. Coley v. Coley, 169 Ga. App. 426, 313 S.E.2d 129 (1984).

Consent judgment subjects both parties to two year bar. — Considerations of judicial economy dictate that parties to a contempt proceeding be allowed to present the court with a binding consent judgment settling the matter of future child support payments. However, neither party to such a consent judgment may file another action seeking modification within two years of the filing of what began as a contempt action. Moody v. Moody, 252 Ga. 210, 312 S.E.2d 330 (1984).

Two-year limitation invoked by unsuccessful action for increase under URESA. — When a party has unsuccessfully brought an action seeking increased child support under Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19, (Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act) that party may not seek an increase in child support under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18 within two years. Ray v. Ray, 247 Ga. 467, 277 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

No equity jurisdiction for garnishment. — Trial court has no authority to modify the child support provisions of a final judgment and divorce decree in a garnishment action; such a modification must be accomplished by the filing of a petition in superior court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18 or O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. In addition, the court lacks equity jurisdiction in garnishment cases, even under unusual and exceptional circumstances. Davis v. Davis, 220 Ga. App. 745, 470 S.E.2d 268 (1996).

Award providing for automatic adjustments based on changes in Consumer Price Index is valid. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Provision for automatic adjustments based on changes in Consumer Price Index does not preclude either party from seeking modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Procedure for Modification

Exercise of right to petition for modification of child support. — Right to petition for modification of child support is a right which belongs to the child or children involved which may be exercised at the election of the mother or other person having legal custody of the children under the terms of the divorce decree. Crosby v. Crosby, 249 Ga. 569, 292 S.E.2d 814 (1982).

Proceeding to modify alimony judgment is a new action, not a continuation of a divorce case. Slowik v. Knorr, 222 Ga. 669, 151 S.E.2d 726 (1966); Bugden v. Bugden, 224 Ga. 517, 162 S.E.2d 719 (1968).

Proceeding to modify alimony judgment is subject to venue requirements. — Because a proceeding to modify an alimony judgment is a new action and not a continuation of a divorce case, it is subject to constitutional provisions respecting venue just as any other civil case. Bugden v. Bugden, 224 Ga. 517, 162 S.E.2d 719 (1968).

County in which modification actions must proceed. — Actions to modify alimony and divorce decrees must proceed in the county where the defendant currently resides. Buckholts v. Buckholts, 251 Ga. 58, 302 S.E.2d 676 (1983).

Supreme court jurisdiction over divorce and alimony cases. — Proceeding for modification of alimony judgment is an alimony case within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. IV (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VI, Para. II, III, V; Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VIII; Art. VI, Sec. V, Para. V), giving the Supreme Court jurisdiction of divorce and alimony cases. Perry v. Perry, 213 Ga. 847, 102 S.E.2d 534 (1958).

Rules of procedure applicable to divorce proceedings apply to modification petition. — Law makes prayer for process necessary in petition for divorce.

It follows that a petition to alter and revise a final decree fixing an amount of permanent alimony must pray for process and not be filed as a mere pleading or motion in original divorce suit. Davis v. Davis, 218 Ga. 250, 127 S.E.2d 296 (1962).

County in which action filed. — Action to modify decree awarding alimony must be filed in county of defendant's residence. Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969); Hill v. Harper, 230 Ga. 246, 196 S.E.2d 397 (1973).

Action to modify decree against nonresident served only by publication. — Court which renders alimony judgment does not have jurisdiction of action to modify judgment against nonresident of state who has been served only by publication, and who has not waived personal service. Slowik v. Knorr, 222 Ga. 669, 151 S.E.2d 726 (1966).

Consents to and compliance with modification irrelevant if court lacked jurisdiction. — Fact that defendant consents to modification of original decree and acquiesces therein by making payments thereunder for several months is irrelevant if the court was wholly without authority to modify the original judgment and decree and was without jurisdiction of the subject matter. Ethridge v. Echols, 212 Ga. 597, 94 S.E.2d 377 (1956).

Petitions pursuant to this section are subject to § 19-5-8. — Petition under Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18) for modification of alimony judgment was governed by provision of former Code 1933, § 30-113 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-5-8) that no verdict by default shall be taken in divorce cases. Johnston v. Still, 225 Ga. 222, 167 S.E.2d 646 (1969).

No time lapse requirement for filing modification petition. — No particular time need elapse after judgment as prerequisite to petition for modification. Welch v. Welch, 213 Ga. 589, 100 S.E.2d 431 (1957).

Child is not indispensable party to support modification agreement. — When husband and wife enter into contract for support of wife and a minor, and contract is made part of final decree of divorce, failure of former husband to make child a party to proceedings for modification does not subject his petition to dismissal because the minor child is not an indispensable party to an action to revise the decree. Dalon v. Dalon, 219 Ga. 185, 132 S.E.2d 195 (1963).

Petition for modification must show facts relied upon to authorize relief desired, and must show that facts and circumstances relied upon have occurred since the date of alimony judgment, in case of first petition for revision, and since date of former application, in case of subsequent petition. Welch v. Welch, 213 Ga. 589, 100 S.E.2d 431 (1957).

Language "satisfactorily proved" does not reduce burden of proof to less than preponderance of evidence. Instead, a party must "satisfactorily prove" his or her case by a preponderance of the evidence. Stiltz v. Stiltz, 236 Ga. 308, 223 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

Appeal of decision supported by "some evidence." — Trial judge's decision on petition for modification not disturbed on appeal if supported by "some evidence." Berkowitz v. Berkowitz, 239 Ga. 1, 236 S.E.2d 7 (1977).

Modification of a child support obligation in a garnishment action, rather than a petition to modify, was erroneous. Twineham v. Daniel, 223 Ga. App. 25, 476 S.E.2d 814 (1996).

Waiver of Right to Modification

Statutory modification right may be waived by appropriate contract language but courts will not find language waived absent very clear waiver language. Kitfield v. Kitfield, 237 Ga. 184, 227 S.E.2d 9 (1976).

Waiver of right to modification must be in clear, unambiguous language. — Waiver of right to modification of judgment which incorporated contract between parties governing property and alimony rights between them has not occurred if language does not provide in clear and unambiguous language, needing no parol explanation, that the appellant waived the right to modify the alimony award. Kitfield v. Kitfield, 237 Ga. 184, 227 S.E.2d 9 (1976).

As to permanent alimony, a decree cannot be modified if there is an agreement between the parties, incorporated in a decree, which waives the right of modification. However, such waiver must be clearly intended and expressed by the person so waiving. Garcia v. Garcia, 232 Ga. 869, 209 S.E.2d 201 (1974).

Phrase "full, complete and final settlement" does not operate as waiver. — Use of term "full, complete, and final settlement" in divorce agreement which was made part of final judgment, alone, does not have effect of constituting waiver of right to seek modification. McLoughlin v. McLoughlin, 234 Ga. 259, 214 S.E.2d 925 (1975).

Mother may waive right to revise alimony, but not child support. — Statutory right to petition for a revision of alimony and child support payments insofar as it relates to alimony belongs to the wife and may be waived. But, insofar as it relates to child support, it is a right which belongs to the child or children involved which may be exercised at election of mother or other person having legal custody of children under terms of divorce decree. Since this right belongs to the children and not to the mother, she cannot waive the right. Livsey v. Livsey, 229 Ga. 368, 191 S.E.2d 859 (1972).

Divorced wife cannot waive right of minor children to increased support in accordance with improved financial condition of former husband. Foreman v. Foreman, 234 Ga. 646, 217 S.E.2d 257 (1975).

Mother cannot waive child support award. — Right to child support belongs to child, not to mother, and after award has become part of court's judgment she has no authority to waive the award. Johnson v. Johnson, 233 Ga. 664, 212 S.E.2d 835 (1975).

Right to petition for modification of child support belongs to the children and cannot be waived by the mother. Crosby v. Crosby, 249 Ga. 569, 292 S.E.2d 814 (1982).

Mother cannot barter away child support in return for elimination of father's privileges. Johnson v. Johnson, 233 Ga. 664, 212 S.E.2d 835 (1975).

Change in Income or Financial Status

Alimony judgments rendered prior to 1977. — Party in alimony action in which final judgment was entered prior to enactment of Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1, has vested right in judgment not being subject to modification because of change in income of recipient since law in effect at time of judgment did not permit modification on such change. McClain v. McClain, 241 Ga. 422, 246 S.E.2d 187 (1978).

Change in financial status of husband since award is prerequisite to modification. Griffin v. Griffin, 226 Ga. 781, 177 S.E.2d 696 (1970).

Husband's pending inheritance. — Evidence of the husband's pending inheritance from the husband's deceased parents could be considered for purposes of awarding alimony to a wife. Searcy v. Searcy, 280 Ga. 311, 627 S.E.2d 572 (2006).

Statute allows revision in child support payments as financial condition of parties changes over time. Johnson v. Johnson, 233 Ga. 664, 212 S.E.2d 835 (1975).

To authorize modification requires substantial change in husband's income or in his financial status so as to warrant an upward or downward revision of alimony or child support. Berkowitz v. Berkowitz, 239 Ga. 1, 236 S.E.2d 7 (1977).

Legislature did not intend to require showing of change in both income "and" financial status, but rather a change in husband's income "or" financial status. Perry v. Perry, 213 Ga. 847, 102 S.E.2d 534 (1958).

In order to carry out what the judiciary interprets to be intended by the legislature in Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18), the judiciary reads word "and" as "or," and word "or" is substituted for "and" between words "income" and "financial status" in that statute. Perry v. Perry, 213 Ga. 847, 102 S.E.2d 534 (1958).

There is no provision for modification or revision of child support judgment except if there has been a substantial change in income "or" financial status of father subsequent to rendition of such judgment.

Hooks v. Avret, 219 Ga. 743, 135 S.E.2d 899 (1964).

Only issue on application for modification. — Upon trial of application for modification of alimony decree, the only issue is whether there has been such change in the income or financial status of husband as to warrant a modification and revision of the original decree, either upward or downward, as the case may be. McBrayer v. McBrayer, 227 Ga. 224, 179 S.E.2d 772 (1971).

"Financial status" is much more comprehensive term than "income," and pertains to conditions or circumstances in which a person stands with regard to that person's income and property. McClinton v. McClinton, 217 Ga. 283, 122 S.E.2d 112 (1961).

Determination of change in financial status. — In order to determine whether there has been a change in financial status between the two pertinent dates, a comparison must be made between the plaintiff's financial status at the time of judgment and the plaintiff's financial status at the time of the petition. McWilliams v. McWilliams, 216 Ga. 270, 116 S.E.2d 215 (1960).

Substantial change in husband's ability to pay is issue involved. — To authorize modification of alimony, the crux of the matter is whether or not there has been a substantial change in the husband's ability to pay alimony required by the original decree. Schuster v. Schuster, 221 Ga. 614, 146 S.E.2d 636 (1966).

Change in ability to pay. — The legislature intended that the original alimony judgment could be revised upon a change in the husband's ability to pay, and there might be change in his ability to pay by reason of change in his financial status without any actual change in his income. Perry v. Perry, 213 Ga. 847, 102 S.E.2d 534 (1958); McClinton v. McClinton, 217 Ga. 283, 122 S.E.2d 112 (1961); Parker v. Dyal, 237 Ga. 598, 229 S.E.2d 370 (1976).

Petition may allege change in financial status without alleging change in income. McWilliams v. McWilliams, 216 Ga. 270, 116 S.E.2d 215 (1960).

There must be change in a party's net worth. — In regard to the statute, the legislature meant that irrespective of change in income of husband, there should also be a change in his net worth, affecting his inability to pay the previously prescribed amount or affecting his ability to pay more than the previously prescribed amount. Parker v. Dyal, 237 Ga. 598, 229 S.E.2d 370 (1976).

Change may be shown by decreased financial obligations or other changed conditions even if there has been no increase in income. Livsey v. Livsey, 234 Ga. 53, 214 S.E.2d 520 (1975); Spivey v. Schneider, 234 Ga. 687, 217 S.E.2d 251 (1975).

Ten percent increase in hourly wages may warrant modification. — It cannot be held as a matter of law that 10 percent increase in former husband's hourly wages is not a substantial change so as to authorize a change in support payments. Rolader v. Pendleton, 231 Ga. 16, 200 S.E.2d 108 (1973).

Indebtedness incurred in acquisition of assets. — Man might become heavily indebted in order to acquire assets for himself, and such indebtedness would be no cause for reduction in alimony payments to support former wife and minor children. Welch v. Welch, 213 Ga. 589, 100 S.E.2d 431 (1957).

Substantial decrease in husband's income or financial status may warrant, but not demand, decrease of alimony. Potts v. Potts, 229 Ga. 827, 194 S.E.2d 471 (1972); White v. White, 233 Ga. 289, 210 S.E.2d 817 (1974); Trippe v. Trippe, 237 Ga. 159, 227 S.E.2d 46 (1976).

Adjustment based on changes in Consumer Price Index. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18 does not preclude adjustment based on changes in Consumer Price Index to award of fixed amount of alimony. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Increased expenses resulting from remarriage does not authorize termination of support. — Fact that the father, subsequent to a divorce decree, voluntarily assumed additional obligation of a second family by marriage did not authorize termination of obligation to the daughter by his former marriage, and especially since it was shown that the income of the father had substantially increased since the date of the alimony decree. Strickland v. Strickland, 220 Ga. 69, 137 S.E.2d 31 (1964).

Amount of original award must be considered. — While under the provisions of the statute, the trial court is not concerned with whether the wife or children are entitled to alimony or child support, when evidence of change in the husband's income or financial status is disclosed, the court of necessity is concerned with the amount originally awarded, and such fact must be considered in determining if a modification is appropriate under the evidence. Rolader v. Pendleton, 231 Ga. 16, 200 S.E.2d 108 (1973).

Subsection (b) excludes consideration of merits of alimony award. — Provision of subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1 to the effect that the only issue is the change in the former husband's income or financial status is intended merely to exclude consideration of "merits of whether the wife, or child or children, or both, are entitled in alimony and support," and not to exclude the issue of the former wife's income or financial status, evidence relative to which was specifically made admissible by the legislature in subsection (a). Butterworth v. Butterworth, 227 Ga. 301, 180 S.E.2d 549 (1971).

Evidence regarding increased earnings of wife alone does not authorize or require change in the amount of alimony which she is entitled to receive in absence of evidence as to change in the income or financial status of the husband. McBrayer v. McBrayer, 227 Ga. 224, 179 S.E.2d 772 (1971); Butterworth v. Butterworth, 227 Ga. 301, 180 S.E.2d 549 (1971).

Relevancy of evidence of wife's financial status. — Legislature intended that the prerequisite of revision of child support, either downward or upward, is proof of substantial change in the income or financial status of the former husband, and once this essential fact has been shown, evidence relative to the former wife's income or financial status is relevant, hence admissible, for purpose of equitably determining how much the amount of child support should be modified. Butterworth v. Butterworth, 227 Ga. 301, 180 S.E.2d 549 (1971).

Change in Income or Financial Status (Cont'd)

Once evidence is introduced showing change in the former husband's income or financial status, it is proper to consider evidence of the former wife's income or financial status. Rolader v. Pendleton, 231 Ga. 16, 200 S.E.2d 108 (1973).

Unless there is evidence of substantial change in the husband's ability to pay, evidence of the wife's income and financial status becomes immaterial. Stiltz v. Stiltz, 236 Ga. 308, 223 S.E.2d 689 (1976).

Wife's indulgence in illicit relations is irrelevant. — Whether or not the evidence showed that the wife has indulged in illicit relations with a man to whom she was not married was not relevant to any issues as to whether alimony awarded by a previous decree should be continued. McBrayer v. McBrayer, 227 Ga. 224, 179 S.E.2d 772 (1971).

Petition must plainly, fully, and distinctly allege facts relied upon. — Petition for modification of alimony judgment must show facts relied on to authorize relief desired, and it must be shown by facts alleged that a change has occurred in the financial status of the husband since the former adjudication. McWilliams v. McWilliams, 216 Ga. 270, 116 S.E.2d 215 (1960).

Petition to modify and revise judgment must plainly, fully, and distinctly allege facts upon which the petitioner relies for such relief; otherwise, the petition is subject to general demurrer (now motion to dismiss). Perry v. Williamson, 219 Ga. 701, 135 S.E.2d 412 (1964).

Amount awarded not inadequate. — Trial court's final award of alimony in the amount of $1,000.00 a month, for a period of three years was upheld on appeal, despite the wife's claims that such was inadequate given the court's temporary award of $2,130.00 a month as the wife held a doctoral degree in education, failed to make tremendous efforts to become self-sufficient during the pendency of the suit, and should be self-supporting in a real estate business in three to four years. Hadden v. Hadden, 283 Ga. 424, 659 S.E.2d 353 (2008).

What Constitutes Permanent Alimony Judgment

Statute is inapplicable to award from corpus of husband's estate in lieu of periodic alimony payments. Daniel v. Daniel, 216 Ga. 567, 118 S.E.2d 369 (1961).

Test for determining whether judgment is one for permanent alimony. — Test as to applicability of statute is not whether periodic payments will continue in the same amount, but whether payments will continue at periodic intervals as opposed to an award from the corpus of the husband's estate. Foreman v. Foreman, 234 Ga. 646, 217 S.E.2d 257 (1975).

Escalation feature of agreement providing for possible increases is not award from husband's estate. The escalation feature of an agreement merely provides for possible increase in periodic payments, which is no more an award from the corpus of the husband's estate than the per month minimum award. Foreman v. Foreman, 234 Ga. 646, 217 S.E.2d 257 (1975).

Expenses of Litigation

When wife initiates action, subsection (d) is inapplicable. — When the former wife and not the former husband seeks modification of an alimony award, attorney's fees are not allowable. Griffin v. Griffin, 226 Ga. 781, 177 S.E.2d 696 (1970).

Subsection (d) of statute does not permit award of attorney's fees to the former wife when it is she and not her former husband who seeks modification of the alimony award. Spivey v. Schneider, 234 Ga. 687, 217 S.E.2d 251 (1975).

Subsection (d) is inapplicable to action to increase visitation rights. — Subsection (d) allows award to wife of attorney's fees only when the husband has initiated action to modify a permanent alimony judgment, and not in an action seeking increased visitation rights. Gallant v. Gallant, 223 Ga. 397, 156 S.E.2d 61 (1967).

Subsection (d) is inapplicable to action for change of custody. — Subsection (d) authorizes award of attorney's fees to the wife when the husband has filed an action to modify a permanent alimony judgment, but not in an action by the husband for a change of custody. Wilkins v. Wilkins, 234 Ga. 404, 216 S.E.2d 302 (1975).

Subsection (d) does not apply if child support payments are terminated contemporaneous with custody change. Hasty v. Duncan, 239 Ga. 797, 239 S.E.2d 7 (1977).

Motion to set aside modification not tantamount to filing action. — Filing of a motion by a husband to set aside judgment of the trial court modifying an original divorce decree is not tantamount to filing an action under this statute. Herring v. Herring, 233 Ga. 484, 211 S.E.2d 893 (1975).

Appeal from modification awarded is not equivalent to filing action. — Appeal by a husband from judgment for a wife upon her successful application for alimony modification does not constitute an “application ... filed by the husband” within the meaning of the statute. Spivey v. Schneider, 234 Ga. 687, 217 S.E.2d 251 (1975).

Court need not award wife’s costs of preparing record for appeal. — When the trial court has awarded attorney’s fees to the former wife it is not an abuse of discretion to refuse to grant the wife an additional amount for purposes of preparing a record for appeal. Parrott v. Parrott, 224 Ga. 801, 164 S.E.2d 811 (1968).

Subsection (d) does not require payment of such expenses as condition precedent to maintaining of litigation by the defendant. Wayman v. Wayman, 222 Ga. 535, 150 S.E.2d 840 (1966).

Editor’s notes. — Research references dealing with this subject matter have been placed with annotations for § 19-6-19, dealing with same subject, but by its terms confined to application in cases based on judgments rendered after July 1, 1977.

19-6-19. Revision of judgment for permanent alimony generally — When authorized; petition and hearing; cohabitation with third party as ground for revision; attorney’s fees; temporary modification pending final trial.

(a) The judgment of a court providing permanent alimony for the support of a spouse rendered on or after July 1, 1977, shall be subject to revision upon petition filed by either former spouse showing a change in the income and financial status of either former spouse. A petition shall be filed and returnable under the same rules of procedure applicable to divorce proceedings. No petition may be filed by either former spouse under this subsection within a period of two years from the date of the final order on a previous petition by the same former spouse. After hearing both parties and the evidence, the jury, or the judge where a jury is not demanded by either party, may modify and revise the previous judgment, in accordance with the changed income and financial status of either former spouse in the case of permanent alimony for the support of a former spouse, or in accordance with the changed income and financial status of either former spouse if such a change in the income and financial status is satisfactorily proved so as to warrant the modification and revision. In the hearing upon a petition filed as provided in this subsection, testimony may be given and evidence introduced relative to the income and financial status of either former spouse.

(b) Subsequent to a final judgment of divorce awarding periodic payment of alimony for the support of a spouse, the voluntary cohabitation of such former spouse with a third party in a meretricious relationship shall also be grounds to modify provisions made for periodic payments of permanent alimony for the support of the former spouse. As used in this subsection, the word “cohabitation” means dwelling together continuously and openly in a meretricious relationship with another person, regardless of the sex of the other person. In the event the petitioner does not prevail in the petition for modification on the ground set forth in this subsection, the petitioner shall be liable for reasonable attorney’s fees incurred by the respondent for the defense of the action.

(c) When an action for revision of a judgment for permanent alimony under this Code section is pending, the court in its discretion may allow, upon motion, the temporary modification of such a judgment, pending the final trial on the petition. In considering an application for temporary modification under this subsection, the court shall consider evidence of any changed circumstances of the parties and the reasonable probability of the petitioner obtaining revision upon final trial. The order granting temporary modification shall be subject to revision by the court at any time before final trial.

(d) In proceedings for the modification of alimony for the support of a spouse pursuant to the provisions of this Code section, the court may award attorneys’ fees, costs, and expenses of litigation to the prevailing party as the interests of justice may require. (Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, § 1; Ga. L. 1964, p. 713, § 1; Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 23; Ga. L. 1984, p. 606, §§ 1, 2; Ga. L. 1985, p. 279, § 1; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1259, § 1; Ga. Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1985, “judgement” was changed to “judgment” in subsection (b).

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 1984, p. 606, § 3, not codified by the General Assembly, provided that the provisions of § 1 of that Act, which section amended subsection (a) of this Code section, would apply to judgments providing permanent alimony for the support of a spouse rendered on or after July 1, 1984, and to judgments providing permanent alimony for the support of a child or children rendered on or after July 1, 1984.

Ga. L. 1986, p. 1259, § 3, not codified by the General Assembly, provided: “This Act shall become effective July 1, 1986. The provisions of this Act shall apply to judgments providing permanent alimony for the support of a child or children rendered on or after July 1, 1986.”

Ga. L. 1993, p. 1091, § 2, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the 1993 amendment was applicable with respect to judgments entered before or after July 1, 1993.

Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: “The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia’s children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia’s children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children’s parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children.”

Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10(b)/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007.”

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — For additional cases dealing with the same subject matter, but decided prior to the 1977 amendment to this Code section, see § 19-6-18.

Alimony is subject to modification. Taulbee v. Taulbee, 243 Ga. 52, 252 S.E.2d 481 (1979).

Section remedial in nature. — Modification statute is not law under which grant of alimony is made to a wife nor is it law which fails to provide opportunity for a husband to sue for alimony. The modification statute is merely a remedial act which allows either the former wife or former husband to seek relief from the terms of the previous alimony judgment according to the ability of provider of alimony to pay. Summerlin v. Summerlin, 247 Ga. 5, 274 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

Statute provided exclusive method for modifying or revising alimony provisions of divorce decree. Lindwall v. Lindwall, 242 Ga. 13, 247 S.E.2d 752 (1978); Fuller v. Squires, 242 Ga. 475, 249 S.E.2d 261 (1978).

Modification of a child support obligation in a garnishment action, rather than a petition to modify, was erroneous. Twineham v. Daniel, 223 Ga. App. 25, 476 S.E.2d 814 (1996).

Modification action as exclusive remedy for obtaining additional support. — When the divorce decree does, at the very least, address a question concerning the liability of the noncustodial parent for child-support-obligation items, a modification action under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 is the custodial parent's exclusive remedy in regard to supplementing the decree with a provision obligating the noncustodial parent to pay additional child support. Conley v. Conley, 259 Ga. 68, 377 S.E.2d 663 (1989).

Former wife, or the wife's father as assignee, could not enforce a note signed by the former husband that allegedly represented the husband's additional child support obligation since the note had not been mentioned or incorporated into the parties' settlement agreement or divorce decree, and the wife had not sought recourse by way of modification of the husband's child support obligation pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. Cawley v. Bennett, 293 Ga. App. 46, 666 S.E.2d 438 (2008).

Enactment of guidelines insufficient to warrant modification. — Trial court erred by determining that the enactment of the guidelines of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(b) alone was sufficient to justify modifying a father's support obligation without any threshold showing by the mother of a substantial change in financial circumstances. Willingham v. Willingham, 216 Ga. 674, 410 S.E.2d 98 (1991).

Proper scope of the trial court's consideration is whether there had been, as alleged by the appellant, such a change in the financial status of each parent as would support a reconsideration of the level of the appellant's obligation to provide financial support for the parties' child. Miller v. Tashie, 265 Ga. 147, 454 S.E.2d 498 (1995).

Construction with § 19-11-12. — Fact that jury trials are allowed in private child support modification proceedings under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19, but denied in agency modification proceedings under O.C.G.A. § 19-11-12, does not create a separate classification for litigants in proceedings under the latter provision in violation of equal protection rights. Kelley v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources ex rel. Kelley, 269 Ga. 384, 498 S.E.2d 741 (1998).

Section permissive as to modifications due to financial status changes. — Change in father's income or financial status does not mandate revision in child support; statute merely permits such revision. Ivester v. Ivester, 242 Ga. 386, 249 S.E.2d 69 (1978).

O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34 and subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 compared. See Hudson v. State, 248 Ga. 397, 283 S.E.2d 271 (1981).

Effect of violating divorce decree.

— Failure of the father to comply with terms of the divorce decree requiring him to provide health insurance for the children did not act as a bar to his petition for modification of child support. Scott v. Perkins, 230 Ga. App. 496, 497 S.E.2d 21 (1998).

Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act actions not limited.

— Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 are not intended to and do not provide any limitation on the filing of subsequent Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (URESA) actions. Department of Human Resources v. Westmoreland, 210 Ga. App. 603, 436 S.E.2d 706 (1993).

Modification cannot be obtained through URESA action.

— Purpose of O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19 (Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act) is to improve enforcement of duty of support, not to impair that duty; if an intrastate support obligor wants modification of child support provisions of a divorce and alimony decree, the obligor can bring a suit for modification, but the obligor is not entitled to precipitate a URESA action in order to obtain modification. Ray v. Ray, 247 Ga. 467, 277 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

Order pursuant to URESA proceeding does not supersede support order.

— Any order of support issued by court of this state, entered in action filed under O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19 (Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act), shall not supersede any previous order of support issued in a divorce or separate maintenance action, and the latter order will not constitute a modification of the former order; thus, amounts for a particular period paid pursuant to either order shall be credited against amounts accruing or accrued for the same period under both. Ray v. Ray, 247 Ga. 467, 277 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

No equity jurisdiction for garnishment.

— Trial court has no authority to modify the child support provisions of a final judgment and divorce decree in a garnishment action; such a modification must be accomplished by the filing of a petition in superior court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-18 or O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. In addition, the court lacks equity jurisdiction in garnishment cases, even under unusual and exceptional circumstances. Davis v. Davis, 220 Ga. App. 745, 470 S.E.2d 268 (1996).

Discretion to modify award lies with trier of fact.

— Final decision of whether to modify award is within discretion of trier of fact. Marsh v. Marsh, 243 Ga. 742, 256 S.E.2d 442 (1979).

Obligation remains static until modified.

— Although wife's receipt of social security benefits might constitute grounds for husband's obtaining future modification of alimony provisions of the parties' divorce decree, either on a discretionary basis under the statute, or as a matter of right, until the parties' divorce decree is so modified the decree remains a valid judgment binding on parties and enforceable according to the decree's terms. Kight v. Kight, 242 Ga. 563, 250 S.E.2d 451 (1978).

One seeking modification must initiate proceeding.

— Even though evidence of former spouse's voluntary cohabitation with another subsequent to final judgment of divorce awarding periodic payment of alimony is grounds to modify provisions made for periodic payments of permanent alimony, this does not preclude holding obligor in contempt for arrearages in alimony payments due, when previously decreed provisions have not been modified by separate proceeding instituted by petition for modification. Lindwall v. Lindwall, 242 Ga. 13, 247 S.E.2d 752 (1978).

Modification proceeding is new in personam proceeding.

— Action for modification of child support is not part of the original divorce action but is a new in personam proceeding for purposes of establishing jurisdiction over parties and venue. Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 244 Ga. 313, 260 S.E.2d 47 (1979).

Modification proceedings must be brought in respondent's county of residence, and this is so regardless of the fact that the decree may be modified by the court other than the court which rendered the decree. Austin v. Austin, 245 Ga. 487, 265 S.E.2d 788 (1980).

Actions to modify alimony and divorce decrees must proceed in the county where the defendant currently resides.

Buckholts v. Buckholts, 251 Ga. 58, 302 S.E.2d 676 (1983).

Modification of spouse support judgments only by raising or lowering payments. — Cases holding that judgment for child support may be modified only by raising or lowering amount of payments, and that while periodic payments for child support can be changed from a group award to a per capita award in a modification action, other terms and conditions of the original judgment cannot be changed, apply equally to spouse support as well as child support. Fender v. Fender, 249 Ga. 765, 294 S.E.2d 472 (1982).

Modification may reduce support to zero. — When the financial circumstances of the parties so warrant, it is not error in a modification action for the amount of alimony payments to be lowered to zero. Reduction of the amount of alimony payments to zero does not terminate the alimony award in that it does not preclude the possibility of future modification. Temples v. Temples, 262 Ga. 779, 425 S.E.2d 851 (1993).

Retroactive modification of an alimony obligation would vitiate the finality of the judgment obtained as to each past due installment. Therefore, a judgment modifying an alimony obligation can be effective no earlier than the date of the judgment. Hendrix v. Stone, 261 Ga. 874, 412 S.E.2d 536 (1992).

Trial court may not retroactively modify an alimony obligation. Donaldson v. Donaldson, 262 Ga. 231, 416 S.E.2d 514 (1992).

Modification of child support was proper. — In appeals filed by both former spouses from a trial court order modifying visitation and child support provisions in their final judgment and decree of divorce, neither party was correct in claiming that the petitions were inadequate to permit the relief granted; the petition of one of the spouses for a change in custody and a corresponding change in child support embraced the change in visitation because visitation rights were a part of custody, and that spouse's request for a modification of child support met the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a). Facey v. Facey, 281 Ga. 367, 638 S.E.2d 273 (2006).

No modification of lump sum award. — Trial court did not err in dismissing a former spouse's motion for modification of alimony because the award was a lump sum settlement of property rights not subject to modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a) or lump sum alimony not subject to modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-21. Rivera v. Rivera, 283 Ga. 547, 661 S.E.2d 541 (2008).

Findings supported downward modification of child support. — Findings made by a trial court that a former spouse's income had decreased significantly since the entry of a final judgment and decree of divorce directing the former spouse to pay child support of 25 percent of the former spouse's gross income as a photographer were sufficient to constitute the required findings under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 and to support a downward modification. Facey v. Facey, 281 Ga. 367, 638 S.E.2d 273 (2006).

Future modification must be tied to finances. — Award of a home to the wife and the children until the youngest child turns 18 or the wife remarries constitutes an illegal future modification of child support not tied to income fluctuation. Scherberger v. Scherberger, 260 Ga. 635, 398 S.E.2d 363 (1990).

No modification to extend beyond original termination date. — Award of periodic alimony for a specified number of years may not be modified to extend beyond the termination date in the original judgment. Howard v. Howard, 262 Ga. 144, 414 S.E.2d 203 (1992).

Purpose of a modification action is to decide whether the existing alimony or child support comports with the current financial circumstances. To make this determination, the modification jury must find a present change in financial conditions. Because the verdict of the jury must rest upon this limited evidence, it cannot reach into speculative future circumstances. Therefore, any modification award which attempts to reach that far by changing the time frames established in the original decree cannot stand. Howard v. Howard, 262 Ga. 144, 414 S.E.2d 203 (1992).

Mother is mere trustee of alimony for support of children. — When alimony is awarded for the support of minor children, the mother acquires no interest in the funds, and when the funds are paid to her she is a mere trustee charged with the duty of seeing that they are applied solely for the benefit of the children. She cannot consent to a reduction or remission of the alimony, and ordinarily her conduct cannot relieve the father of paying the alimony as directed by the court. Law Office of Tony Center v. Baker, 185 Ga. App. 809, 366 S.E.2d 167 (1988).

Revised child support in change of custody proceeding. — When the plaintiff brings suit for change of custody in county other than county of his residence, he submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court in which suit is filed for purpose of allowing the defendant to file a counterclaim for revision of child support. Ledford v. Bowers, 248 Ga. 804, 286 S.E.2d 293 (1982).

Counterclaim for increased child support in visitation modification proceeding. — When divorced nonresident had voluntarily submitted himself to jurisdiction of court in order to assert his claims to modify visitation rights, mother is not required to state her claim requesting increase in child support in an independent and separate action. Houck v. Houck, 248 Ga. 419, 284 S.E.2d 12 (1981).

Alimony obligation to pay indebtedness secured by automobile. — Husband's obligation (labeled as alimony in the parties' settlement agreement) to make payment on indebtedness secured by an automobile was not subject to revision. Stone v. Stone, 254 Ga. 519, 330 S.E.2d 887 (1985).

Not necessary for bankruptcy court to determine level of support. — Once the bankruptcy court concluded that alimony payments were "actually in the nature of alimony," and thereby nondischargeable, the court's task was at an end. There was no necessity for a precise investigation of the spouse's circumstances to determine the appropriate level of need or support. Harrell v. Sharp, 754 F.2d 902 (11th Cir. 1985).

Testimony as to amount paid pursuant to temporary order. — It was error to permit a mother to testify in an action to modify child support payments as to the amount of money the father was paying her as alimony and child support pursuant to a temporary order, which payments were an increase over the amount of the order the mother was attempting to modify. Haselden v. Haselden, 255 Ga. 366, 338 S.E.2d 257 (1986).

Applicability of § 9-11-55 default provisions to modification of alimony. — Default provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 have no application to proceedings for modification of alimony. McElroy v. McElroy, 252 Ga. 553, 314 S.E.2d 893 (1984).

Dischargeability in bankruptcy. — Fact that a lump sum alimony award to a wife was non-modifiable did not negate the possibility that the award was for the wife's maintenance and support; even though a lump sum alimony award was in the "nature" of a property settlement since the evidence showed that the lump sum award was for the wife's maintenance and support, the finding that it was for that purpose, rather than a division of property which was dischargeable in bankruptcy, was affirmed. Daniel v. Daniel, 277 Ga. 871, 596 S.E.2d 608 (2004).

Right of parties to contract regarding fixed property rights. — When modification under the statutory procedure is available, court-approved modification must be sought; but, once property rights have become fixed or perfected those rights may not be modified by the court, and the parties are free to contract with each other regarding that property. Such dealings between former spouses are governed by contract law rather than domestic relations law. Spivey v. McClellan, 259 Ga. 181, 378 S.E.2d 123 (1989).

Incorporation of private agreement in court order. — While parties may enter into an agreement concerning modification of child support, the agreement becomes an enforceable agreement only when made an order of the court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. Pearson v. Pearson, 265 Ga. 100, 454 S.E.2d 124 (1995).

Before a private agreement which includes child support may be incorporated into a court order, the trial court has an obligation to consider whether the agreed-upon support is sufficient based on the child's needs and the parents' ability to pay. Pearson v. Pearson, 265 Ga. 100, 454 S.E.2d 124 (1995).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 is not authority for the modification or revision of judgments for equitable division of property. Douglas v. Cook, 266 Ga. 644, 469 S.E.2d 656 (1996).

Overpayment is not a basis for modification of child support. Rather, the focus must be on a change in circumstances. Gowins v. Gary, 288 Ga. App. 409, 654 S.E.2d 162 (2007).

Garten*, 289 Ga. 186, 710 S.E.2d 130 (2011).

Effect of Recent Amendments to Section

Distinction between 1976 and 1979 versions of section. — The 1979 version of these provisions is dissimilar to the 1976 version because it allows the income and financial status of the former wife to be considered along with the income and financial status of the former husband, whereas the law in 1976 allowed only consideration of the income and financial status of the former husband. Shure v. Shure, 245 Ga. 36, 262 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

Applicable modification statute is that statute in effect at time of divorce. Summerlin v. Summerlin, 247 Ga. 5, 274 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

The 1977 amendment to Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1 did not apply retroactively and thus was not applicable to alimony judgments rendered prior to the effective date of the 1977 amendment. Jowers v. Jowers, 242 Ga. 208, 248 S.E.2d 618 (1978).

Basis for modification action prior to 1977. — Until 1977, only a change in the former husband's financial status could form the basis for a modification action. Summerlin v. Summerlin, 247 Ga. 5, 274 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

Agreement based on 1976 version of Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1 cannot be legislatively modified by amendments which change the law and the law's application. Shure v. Shure, 245 Ga. 36, 262 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

Alimony judgments rendered prior to 1977 amendment to section. — Party in an alimony action in which a final judgment was entered prior to the 1977 amendment to Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1 had a vested right in the judgment not being subject to modification because of a change in income of the recipient because the law in effect at the time of the judgment did not permit modification on such change. McClain v. McClain, 241 Ga. 422, 246 S.E.2d 187 (1978).

No alimony to husband prior to 1979. — Prior to 1979, there could have been no judgments for alimony to husband. Summerlin v. Summerlin, 247 Ga. 5, 274 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

Women awarded permanent alimony before July 1, 1977, are not permitted to seek temporary modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(c). Young v. Young, 252 Ga. 564, 315 S.E.2d 878 (1984).

Waiver of Right to Modification

Waiver of right to modification is not void as against public policy. Daniel v. Daniel, 250 Ga. 849, 301 S.E.2d 643 (1983).

Alimony judgment based on agreement is subject to revision unless this right is waived by the parties by appropriate contract language in the agreement. Varn v. Varn, 242 Ga. 309, 248 S.E.2d 667 (1978).

Waiver must be clear and refer to right of modification. — In alimony agreements entered into after November 23, 1978, parties to the agreement may obtain modification unless the agreement expressly waives the right of modification by referring specifically to that right; the right to modification will be waived by agreement of the parties only in very clear waiver language which refers to the right of modification. Varn v. Varn, 242 Ga. 309, 248 S.E.2d 667 (1978).

Language incorporated in a divorce decree that “[t]he parties expressly waive their right to petition for any modification of the terms of this [settlement] agreement” did not waive the obligor parent’s right to seek a downward modification of child support payments since the language did not refer specifically to the right to seek modification, nor describe such right as statutory. Nelson v. Mixon, 265 Ga. 441, 457 S.E.2d 669 (1995).

Example of proper waiver. — In waiving the right to modify an alimony agreement the following waiver language will be deemed to comply with the requirement of express waiver: “The parties hereby waive their statutory right to future modifications, up or down, of the alimony payments provided for herein, based upon a change in the income or financial status of either party.” Varn v. Varn, 242 Ga. 309, 248 S.E.2d 667 (1978).

Party’s intent in premarital agreement clear. — Trial court properly dismissed the husband’s petition for alimony modification as the waiver language employed in the parties’ premarital agreement was plain and unambiguous, and the reference to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 clarified that the parties intended to waive alimony revision under all subsections of the statute. Carlos v. Lane, 275 Ga. 762, 571 S.E.2d 735 (2002).

Settlement and release language in divorce agreement couched in present tense does not waive right to modification. Sims v. Sims, 245 Ga. 680, 266 S.E.2d 493 (1980).

Parent may waive right to seek reduction of child support payments. — While neither wife nor parents may waive or bargain away right of child to seek periodic child support payments, despite original decree which provides none, and when father has not relinquished all parental rights, he may waive right to seek reduction of periodic child support payments. Forrester v. Buerger, 241 Ga. 34, 244 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Contract waiver of alimony modification did not waive child support modification. — Settlement agreement providing that parties “expressly waive any and all rights that they may have under § 30-220(a) (now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19) to seek a revision of the Judicial Decree with respect to permanent alimony for Wife,” did not waive right to modification of child support obligation. Beard v. Beard, 250 Ga. 449, 298 S.E.2d 495 (1983).

Language in separation agreement constituted waiver of future modification. — Language in separation agreement that husband and wife expressly waived “their right to petition for any modification of ... future alimony payments in accordance with the existing or future laws and statutes” of Georgia or any other state constituted a valid waiver of any right to seek modification pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. Daniel v. Daniel, 250 Ga. 849, 301 S.E.2d 643 (1983).

Waiver language held ambiguous and unenforceable. — See Parker v. Parker, 254 Ga. 188, 326 S.E.2d 451 (1985).

Right not waived. — Since the written agreement between the parties which was incorporated into their final divorce decree provided: “10. MODIFICATION. The provisions of this agreement shall not be modified or changed except by mutual consent and agreement of the parties, expressed in writing," the waiver language in the agreement did not refer to the right of modification of alimony, or to any waiver of that right, and was therefore not sufficient to meet the test that the right to modification will be waived by agreement of the parties only in very clear waiver language which refers to the right of modification. Brenizer v. Brenizer, 257 Ga. 427, 360 S.E.2d 250 (1987).

Because there was no evidence to support a trial court's decision to deem void a husband's waiver in the parties' original agreement of downward modification below a pre-determined "floor amount" of alimony in the form of child support, the trial court erred by relieving the husband of the husband's obligations imposed by the agreement and in reducing the husband's child support below the agreed-upon "floor amount." Jones v. Jones, 280 Ga. 712, 632 S.E.2d 121 (2006).

Two-year Petition Limitation

One purpose of two-year limitation is to protect parties from excessive litigation over same issues within two-year period. Griffin v. Griffin, 248 Ga. 743, 285 S.E.2d 710 (1982).

Applicability of two-year petition limitation. — General Assembly intended for the two-year petition limitation to apply only to modification actions grounded upon financial and income changes; the two-year limitation does not apply to the live-in lover provision of subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 23. Sims v. Sims, 245 Ga. 680, 266 S.E.2d 493 (1980).

Limitation period did not apply to a father's petition for a change in child custody. Petry v. Romo, 249 Ga. App. 99, 547 S.E.2d 736 (2001).

Multiple petitions for modification. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 should be strictly applied to multiple petitions for modification filed within this state. Thomas v. Whaley, 208 Ga. App. 362, 430 S.E.2d 655 (1993).

Previous adjudication in another state. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 does not apply if the previous adjudication occurred in another state. Thomas v. Whaley, 208 Ga. App. 362, 430 S.E.2d 655 (1993).

Dismissal of petition for lack of jurisdiction does not preclude filing in appropriate court. Harrison v. Speidel, 244 Ga. 643, 261 S.E.2d 577 (1979).

Effect of filing and dismissal without prejudice of modification petition. — While it is true that O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 and cases applying that statute hold that filing date, rather than date of any order, controls, this does not mean that mere filing of modification petition, which is subsequently dismissed without prejudice prior to entry of any order thereon, would per se bar filing of subsequent petition within two-year period. Rather, filing date is merely used to compute time interval between viable petition upon which final orders have been entered. A contrary construction would result in a litigant being deprived of the litigant's day in court upon either petition merely because of the litigant's perhaps inadvertent filing of a second petition. Griffin v. Griffin, 248 Ga. 743, 285 S.E.2d 710 (1982).

Voluntary dismissal of prior modification petition. — When the first modification action, which was voluntarily dismissed, resulted in significant litigation and in the entry of a temporary, but binding order lowering the husband's alimony obligation, a second modification petition filed by the husband was barred by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. Wilson v. Wilson, 270 Ga. 479, 512 S.E.2d 255 (1999).

Petition for revision under Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. — Petition for revision cannot be brought under Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19) within two years of action under Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (URESA) (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19) seeking the same relief, but the converse does not hold true since Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1, by its terms, imposes no limitation upon bringing of subsequent actions under URESA. Konscol v. Konscol, 151 Ga. App. 696, 261 S.E.2d 438 (1979), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 875, 101 S. Ct. 218, 66 L. Ed. 2d 97 (1980).

When a party has unsuccessfully brought an action seeking an increased child support under O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19 (Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act) that party may not seek an increase in child support under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 within two years. Ray v. Ray, 247 Ga. 467, 277 S.E.2d 495 (1981).

Limitation applied when prior order involved change of custody. — Father's action for modification of child support would not lie until two years had passed since the entry of an order on his first petition in which he sought and obtained a change of custody and, although he had also sought an award of child support, he failed to invoke a ruling on the latter issue. Taylor v. Taylor, 182 Ga. App. 412, 356 S.E.2d 236 (1987).

Husband was not precluded from filing a complaint for the modification of child support two months after a final divorce decree since the judgment of divorce was not a "final order on a previous petition" for modification. Thorp v. Thorp, 258 Ga. 220, 367 S.E.2d 232 (1988); Gaultney v. Gaultney, 258 Ga. 602, 372 S.E.2d 814 (1988).

Modification petition filed within two years of divorce decree. — Two-year proscription did not bar the wife's modification petition filed within two years of a divorce decree since the proscription would only apply when a petition for modification had been filed within two years of a previous petition for modification. McAlpine v. Leveille, 258 Ga. 422, 369 S.E.2d 907 (1988).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 did not bar a husband's petition for modification when the petition was filed within two years of a consent judgment and decree of divorce entered into after the husband's motion for a new trial was consented to by the parties and granted by the court; the second final judgment of divorce was not a "modification" of the original decree. Wood v. Wood, 263 Ga. 566, 436 S.E.2d 478 (1993).

Changes Warranting Modification

Modification of permanent award of child support requires showing of a change in the income and financial status of either former spouse or in the needs of the child or children; it is not necessary to show both a change in financial status as well as a change in the child's needs. Wingard v. Paris, 270 Ga. 439, 511 S.E.2d 167 (1999).

Substantial change in either spouse's income. — Decrease of alimony and child support payments may be warranted, but is not demanded by substantial increase in former wife's income or financial status since the date of the divorce decree or a substantial decrease in the former husband's income or financial status in such period. Cowan v. Cowan, 243 Ga. 25, 252 S.E.2d 454 (1979).

Upon change in income and financial status of obligor, child support judgment may be revised. Revision of child support judgment under such circumstances is not, however, mandatory. Marsh v. Marsh, 243 Ga. 742, 256 S.E.2d 442 (1979).

Child support requirement bestowed upon a parent did not preclude the parent from seeking downward modification of the parent's support obligation should the parent experience in the future a reduction in income that made the parent's child support payments fall outside the Georgia Child Support Guidelines. Moon v. Moon, 277 Ga. 375, 589 S.E.2d 76 (2003).

Child support award may be revised upon change in obligor's ability to pay. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

Ability to pay is function of income and recognized expenses. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

Capital gains properly included in gross income. — When a mother sought to increase the father's child support under earlier provisions of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a) based on his increased income, the trial court properly included capital gains realized by reselling real property in the father's gross income; earlier provisions of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 stated that gross income included "all other income" except for public assistance, and 26 U.S.C. § 61(a)(3) included "gains derived from dealings in property" in gross income. Sharpe v. Perkins, 284 Ga. App. 376, 644 S.E.2d 178 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 509 (Ga. 2007).

Changes Warranting Modification (Cont'd)

Determination of change in income or financial status of obligor. — To determine if there has been a change in income and financial status of supporting spouse, a comparison must be made between the supporting spouse's financial status at the time of the original decree and at the time of trial. Marsh v. Marsh, 243 Ga. 742, 256 S.E.2d 442 (1979).

Changes in asset valuation. — Increase in value of an asset allocated in a property settlement is not a change in financial status warranting modification of alimony or child support under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. Williams v. Williams, 268 Ga. 126, 485 S.E.2d 772 (1997).

Increased expenses resulting from remarriage and additional child. — Increased expenses resulting from spouse's new wife and child are not such a change in financial status as would authorize a jury to reduce child support payments a father is obligated to pay. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

Remarriage of former spouse was not sufficient to support modification of divorce decree provisions regarding tax exemptions and responsibility for health care. Douglas v. Cook, 266 Ga. 644, 469 S.E.2d 656 (1996).

Because the cost to the husband and the value to the wife of the requirement that he maintain $100,000 in life insurance for her benefit for 12 years were indefinite when the decree was entered, as the amount of that award depended on how long the husband will live, the award was periodic alimony as a matter of law; and, as permanent periodic alimony, the husband's life insurance obligation terminated upon the wife's remarriage because the divorce decree did not expressly provide otherwise. White v. Howard, 295 Ga. 210, 758 S.E.2d 824 (2014).

Award may be increased if income has increased. — If obligor's income has increased from the time of divorce, increased expenses resulting from the spouse's new wife and child will not preclude trier of fact from exercising the court's discretion so as to increase the child support payments that the spouse is obligated to pay. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

Capital gain derived from child support. — In finding that a mother's financial situation improved for purposes of modifying the child support she received, the trial court did not err in considering a capital gain since the original source of the investment was derived from child support. The income generated was not a direct child support payment but was a return on the investment derived from the child support payments; moreover, there was no merit to the argument that a one-time, non-recurring capital gain could not qualify as gross income in a child support modification action. Gowins v. Gary, 288 Ga. App. 409, 654 S.E.2d 162 (2007).

Automatic future modification is valid when a fixed amount of alimony is awarded, and the variable award is contingent upon a specified change in income. Cabaniss v. Cabaniss, 251 Ga. 177, 304 S.E.2d 65 (1983).

Automatic future modification is invalid when it is not based upon a specified change in income, but is based upon the passage of time and the possibility of a change in income during that time. Cabaniss v. Cabaniss, 251 Ga. 177, 304 S.E.2d 65 (1983).

Appropriate comparison for measuring change is between the relevant factors existing at the time of the original judgment or from the most recent judgment revising child support and the relevant factors existing at the time of the hearing on the current petition for revision. When a petition for revision does not result in a judgment of revision it is not a proper point from which to measure change. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 258 Ga. 208, 367 S.E.2d 540 (1988).

Future improvement of an obligor's financial condition as a result of termination of child support obligations is a change in "income" so as to render valid a verdict requiring an automatic future alimony modification. Wood v. Wood, 257 Ga. 598, 361 S.E.2d 819 (1987).

Financial improvement of receiving parent. — It was error to modify a child support award of $28,000 per month for twins to $5,000 on the grounds that the award was excessive and that the mother's financial situation had improved. Even if the payment was excessive, there was no proof that the twins' needs had changed; the mere appreciation of the mother's house did not constitute a change in financial circumstances; the mother's unemployment had not changed since the trial court enforced the $28,000 payment; the mother's receipt of child support could not be treated as a change in her financial condition; and the mother's improved credit rating was not an appropriate consideration unless it was linked to a change of income or financial status. Gowins v. Gary, 288 Ga. App. 409, 654 S.E.2d 162 (2007).

Extrajudicial agreement to modify child support invalid. — It is clear that the extrajudicial agreements concerning child support payments entered into by defendant and plaintiff subsequent to the Georgia decree would not be recognized by the courts of this state as a viable modification of defendant's obligation for support payments otherwise established by a judicial decree. Earley v. Earley, 165 Ga. App. 483, 300 S.E.2d 814 (1983).

Support for emancipated daughter demonstrated ability to pay. — Virginia court order reducing father's child support payments to zero after finding that the father had no real income was changed less than two years later by the Georgia court because of an improvement in his financial status and ability to pay demonstrated by his having provided financial support for his 21-year-old daughter. Thomas v. Whaley, 208 Ga. App. 362, 430 S.E.2d 655 (1993).

Effect of parent's incarceration. — Child support obligor's imprisonment for voluntary criminal acts was not grounds for a downward modification of child support obligations; the parent's motion to decrease or suspend the parent's child support based on the parent's incarceration for drug possession was properly denied. Staffon v. Staffon, 277 Ga. 179, 587 S.E.2d 630 (2003).

Inadequate justification for modification. — After a parent agreed to child support in excess of the O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 support guidelines and did not subsequently show a reduction in the parent's financial status and income, a downward modification of child support under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a) was properly denied. Moccia v. Moccia, 277 Ga. 571, 592 S.E.2d 664 (2004).

Live-in Lover Provision

Classification by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b) is rational and furthers legitimate governmental objectives.

— Classification of former spouses who have elected voluntarily to cohabit with a third party of a different sex in a meretricious relationship is a rational classification which furthers legitimate governmental objectives. Sims v. Sims, 245 Ga. 680, 266 S.E.2d 493 (1980).

Law fosters legitimate government objective of encouraging stability of marriage and family. Sims v. Sims, 245 Ga. 680, 266 S.E.2d 493 (1980).

Intended scope of subsection (b). — General Assembly intended O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b) to include those instances in which persons of the opposite sex dwell together continuously and openly in a relationship similar or akin to marriage (including either sexual intercourse or the sharing of living expenses) albeit they are not husband and wife in contemplation of the law. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 249 Ga. 74, 287 S.E.2d 19 (1982).

Applicability of subsection (b). — Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 applies upon proof of sexual intercourse between former spouse and third party although no proof is offered tending to establish that former spouse received from, gave to, or shared with third party, expenses of their cohabitation. Conversely, subsection (b) also applies upon proof that former spouse received from, gave to, or shared with third party, expenses of their cohabitation although no proof is offered tending to establish sexual intercourse between former spouse and third party. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 249 Ga. 74, 287 S.E.2d 19 (1982).

Subsection (b) inapplicable to same sex relationship. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b) does not permit, in accordance with the statute's plain language, the modification of alimony when a former spouse is living in a homosexual meretricious cious relationship. Van Dyck v. Van Dyck, 262 Ga. 720, 425 S.E.2d 853 (1993).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b) not limited to relationships in which a former spouse derives economic benefit from cohabitation with a third party. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 249 Ga. 74, 287 S.E.2d 19 (1982).

Definition of cohabitation in subsection (b) is clear and is not unconstitutional for vagueness. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

Failure to show continuous and open relationship. — Since the record on appeal reveals no evidence that the appellee and her “live-in lover” dwelled together continuously, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the appellee. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 259 Ga. 405, 383 S.E.2d 134 (1989).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b) plainly requires a two-element relationship. — Relationship must be meretricious and it must be continuous and open. Since the constitutionality of the subsection depends upon the meretricious relationship being one of marriage, it follows that the cohabitation must go beyond periodic, physical interludes. Reiter v. Reiter, 258 Ga. 101, 365 S.E.2d 826 (1988).

Relationship failed to meet the standard authorizing a modification of permanent alimony under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b) since, although the evidence supported a finding of periodic sexual encounters, there was no evidence that the parties dwelled together continuously or openly. Daniels v. Daniels, 258 Ga. 791, 374 S.E.2d 735 (1989).

“Third party.” — Purpose of the “live-in lover” statute would not be served by interpreting the words “third party” to include the first and second parties. Upton v. Duck, 249 Ga. 267, 290 S.E.2d 92 (1982).

Neither party has vested right to continued full alimony while contemporaneously sharing living quarters with another mate. Morris v. Morris, 244 Ga. 120, 259 S.E.2d 65 (1979).

Retroactive application of subsection (b). — Alimony judgments entered prior to effective date of subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1 are not immune from modification based upon live-in lover laws. Morris v. Morris, 244 Ga. 120, 259 S.E.2d 65 (1979); Sims v. Sims, 245 Ga. 680, 266 S.E.2d 493 (1980).

Evidence of “living in” existing at and prior to effective dates of section is admissible. Sims v. Sims, 245 Ga. 680, 266 S.E.2d 493 (1980).

Right to terminate payments under subsection (b) in 1975. — Right to terminate alimony payments under subsection (b), having come into existence in 1977, could not have been a “known right” in 1975 when settlement agreement was made part of divorce decree. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

Termination of periodic alimony not mandated. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b), which provides that “voluntary cohabitation of such former spouse with a third party in a meretricious relationship shall ... be grounds to modify provisions for periodic payments of permanent alimony,” does not mandate the termination of periodic alimony. Hurley v. Hurley, 249 Ga. 220, 290 S.E.2d 70 (1982); Allen v. Allen, 265 Ga. 53, 452 S.E.2d 767 (1995).

Finding of a meretricious relationship under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b) does not mandate reduction of periodic alimony, and a jury charge forcing the jury to either reduce or terminate alimony upon such a finding was in error. Berman v. Berman, 253 Ga. 298, 319 S.E.2d 846 (1984).

Retroactive modification of alimony based on meretricious relationship. — Evidence that the former wife engaged in a meretricious relationship was not relevant to retroactively excuse the former husband’s failure to pay alimony since the parties’ settlement agreement did not state that alimony would cease upon the commencement of a meretricious relationship by the former wife and, instead, stated that alimony would cease upon the cessation of the former wife’s entitlement to alimony under the statute. Brown v. Brown, 269 Ga. 724, 506 S.E.2d 108 (1998).

Agreement of parties to terminate alimony upon cohabitation. — Nothing in O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 provides that divorcing parties themselves cannot contract for the automatic termination of the alimony obligation of one party upon the cohabitation of the other. Quillen v. Quillen, 265 Ga. 779, 462 S.E.2d 750 (1995).

Agreements regarding cohabitation. — Because there was no agreement that husband's alimony obligation would terminate upon wife's cohabitation, the trial court erred by including in the final divorce decree a provision for the prospective termination of alimony in that event. Metzler v. Metzler, 267 Ga. 892, 485 S.E.2d 459 (1997).

Future standard of conduct intrusive and unauthorized. — After the trial court found that the former wife was not cohabitating with a third party in a meretricious relationship, but the trial court's order attempted to set forth a future standard of conduct on the part of the former wife which would automatically trigger a modification of alimony, this standard for modification set by the trial court was not only unreasonably intrusive, it was also unauthorized. Donaldson v. Donaldson, 262 Ga. 231, 416 S.E.2d 514 (1992).

Application

Modification of child support arising out of a Department of Human Resources review under O.C.G.A. § 19-11-12 invokes the supreme court's divorce and alimony jurisdiction because appeals from orders in proceedings for modification of a child support award which arose from a prior divorce or alimony action, regardless of the code section under which the modification was pursued, are subject to the jurisdiction of the supreme court, and an action for child support modification under § 19-11-12 is neither inconsistent with, nor materially distinguishable from, a modification action under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19, such that the former, unlike the latter, does not invoke the supreme court's jurisdiction; an award of child support always constitutes alimony if it is made in a divorce decree proceeding, but it may or may not represent alimony outside the divorce context, and the supreme court has jurisdiction over a case involving an original claim for child support that arose in either a divorce or alimony proceeding. Spurlock v. Dep't of Human Res., 286 Ga. 512, 690 S.E.2d 378 (2010).

Parties cannot by private agreement foreclose court from exercising judgment regarding questions of alimony to be awarded in a divorce decree. It would be anomalous indeed if the parties, by private agreement after decree, could modify the terms of judgment which they had no power to dictate to the court in the first place. If the parties to a divorce decree agree to a modification of alimony, they must present their agreement to the court for the court's approval. Fuller v. Squires, 242 Ga. 475, 249 S.E.2d 261 (1978).

Trial court did not improperly attempt to retain jurisdiction. — Trial court did not improperly attempt to retain jurisdiction over post-divorce proceedings by directing the parties to follow an established mechanism to resolve disputes concerning the children, to alternate annual expenses such as the cost of uniforms, or to give the trial court a status report when the youngest child reached the age of 18; the order established permanent awards, and nothing in the language of the status report provision provided that the trial court could issue a modification of custody, visitation, or child support without a petition being properly filed by one of the parties under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-19 and 19-9-23. Facey v. Facey, 281 Ga. 367, 638 S.E.2d 273 (2006).

Consideration of "compromise" agreement improper. — In a proceeding for modification of child support, the trial court erred in considering evidence of a "compromise" agreement by the parties in calculating the amount of arrearage owed by the father. Robertson v. Robertson, 266 Ga. 516, 467 S.E.2d 556 (1996).

Court must approve modification agreement. — Parties to divorce decree agreeing to modification of alimony must present agreement to the court for approval. McLure v. McLure, 159 Ga. App. 18, 282 S.E.2d 674 (1981).

Termination of support obligation. — Obligation of father under law to support his children terminates at age 18.

Application (Cont'd)

Jones v. Jones, 244 Ga. 32, 257 S.E.2d 537 (1979).

Extent beyond which court cannot alter voluntary obligation. — Court cannot alter voluntary obligation undertaken by parent beyond the parent's legal obligation. Jones v. Jones, 244 Ga. 32, 257 S.E.2d 537 (1979).

When automatic future modification is valid. — When definite amount of alimony or child support is awarded, automatic future modification is not invalid. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Automatic adjustments based on changes in Consumer Price Index. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 does not preclude award providing for automatic adjustments based on changes in Consumer Price Index. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Automatic adjustment provision does not preclude modification. — Automatic adjustment provision does not preclude either party from seeking modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Provision stating change never be downward. — Provision requiring that an ex-husband's child-support obligation be modified annually based on his annual gross income, providing that the change never be downward, did not improperly prohibit the ex-husband from exercising his right under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 to seek a downward modification of child support based on a change in his financial status. Jarrett v. Jarrett, 259 Ga. 560, 385 S.E.2d 279 (1989).

Retroactive modification. — Effect of a retroactive award of child support in a West German Government judgment is not significantly different from a temporary modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19, since both provide an increased level of support for the period while the proceeding for modification is pending. Knothe v. Rose, 195 Ga. App. 7, 392 S.E.2d 570 (1990).

Credit for social security benefits. — In determining liability for child support payments, credit should be given for social security benefits received by custodial spouse for the benefit of minor children. Kight v. Kight, 242 Ga. 563, 250 S.E.2d 451 (1978).

Order requiring payment of reasonable medical expenses may be entered in modification proceeding, although there is no such provision in a divorce decree because the essence of such order is that child support merely is being increased in amount, albeit perhaps, in an indefinite amount. Price v. Dawkins, 242 Ga. 41, 247 S.E.2d 844 (1978).

Court may modify group award into per capita award. — When in an alimony modification proceeding brought pursuant to Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1 it has been shown that there has been a change in income or financial status of a former spouse sufficient to warrant revision of alimony or child support payable to a group, then as an incident of the modification proceeding the court may modify the group award into a per capita award according to the needs of the recipients. Nash v. Nash, 244 Ga. 749, 262 S.E.2d 64 (1979).

Per capita reduction of group award. — Son's selection of the father as custodial parent, when custody had originally been awarded to the mother, is a factor which may be considered in a claim for modification of child support based on changed financial conditions, but the father is not entitled as a matter of right to a per capita reduction of child support awarded to a group of children. Ivester v. Ivester, 242 Ga. 386, 249 S.E.2d 69 (1978).

Distinction between alimony and division of property. — Unless decree or alimony trial transcript shows to the contrary: (a) a decree specifying periodic payments for an uncertain time (e.g., until death or remarriage) with no indication of gross amount is alimony and is revisable; (b) a decree specifying periodic payments for a given time with no indication of gross amount other than by multiplying the amount due by the number of payment periods is alimony and is revisable; (c) a decree specifying periodic payments to be made until a given sum (i.e., an amount stated) has been paid is division of property or payment of corpus and is not revisable. Nash v. Nash, 244 Ga. 749, 262 S.E.2d 64 (1979).

Fact that parties call payments “alimony” for income tax purposes is not controlling. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

Agreement specifying annual payments for 10 years constituted property settlement. — When other provisions of agreement provided specifically for weekly payments of alimony, payments of $2,000.00 per year for 10 years irrespective of remarriage or death of either party were a property settlement rather than alimony. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

Antenuptial agreement unenforceable. — Because an antenuptial agreement failed to disclose a husband’s income and a wife waived the right to alimony as a part of the agreement, the husband’s income was material to the antenuptial agreement and would have been a critical factor in the wife’s decision to waive alimony, and thus a trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in finding the agreement unenforceable. Corbett v. Corbett, 280 Ga. 369, 628 S.E.2d 585 (2006).

Periodic payments over given time as alimony. — Periodic payments over a given time, with no indication of a lump sum payment or in gross payment other than by multiplying amount due by number of times it is to be paid, constitute alimony. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 246 Ga. 233, 271 S.E.2d 147 (1980).

Award of use of home as lump-sum alimony. — When a wife was awarded title to the marital home until she remarried, sold the home, or died, the award of the house to the wife was an award of lump sum alimony and was not subject to modification. Estlund v. Estlund, 260 Ga. 225, 391 S.E.2d 763 (1990); McLendon v. McLendon, 262 Ga. 657, 424 S.E.2d 283 (1993).

Payment in exchange for release from permanent alimony. — When parties in a divorce enter into agreement whereby wife releases husband from permanent alimony payment in exchange for $15,000 to be paid in periodic installments, such installments are in the nature of a property settlement and not permanent alimony subject to revision under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. McLure v.

McLure, 159 Ga. App. 18, 282 S.E.2d 674 (1981).

Modification in context of legitimation proceeding. — Even though a petition for modification of child support could be brought in the context of a legitimation proceeding, a showing of changed circumstances is required before an existing award may be modified. Department of Human Resources v. Jones, 215 Ga. App. 322, 450 S.E.2d 339 (1994).

No application to lump sum alimony award. — Husband’s obligation to the wife was one for lump sum alimony rather than periodic alimony because the alimony provision stated the exact amount of each payment and the exact number of payments without other limitations, conditions, or statements of intent; thus, O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 did not apply. The trial court awarded the wife monthly alimony of $5,000 for the first year, $4,000 for the following two years, and $3,000 for the final year. Patel v. Patel, 285 Ga. 391, 677 S.E.2d 114 (2009).

Attorney’s Fees

Attorney’s lien not enforceable against child support payments. — Attorney’s charging lien should not be allowed to nullify an award determined to be necessary to assure the support of a child and is not enforceable against child support payments. Law Office of Tony Center v. Baker, 185 Ga. App. 809, 366 S.E.2d 167 (1988).

Effect of date of underlying decree. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(d) will be applied to modification petitions filed after the statute’s effective date, without regard to the date of the underlying decree. Crecelius v. Brooks, 258 Ga. 372, 369 S.E.2d 743 (1988).

Designation of prevailing party. — Although O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(d) gives the court discretion whether to award attorney fees to a prevailing party, the statute does not authorize the court to designate who is the prevailing party. That determination is made by the trier of fact. Shapiro v. Lipman, 259 Ga. 85, 377 S.E.2d 673 (1989).

Trial court’s award of attorney fees to the wife, based on an erroneous determination that she was the prevailing party, did not need to be reversed since the court would have been authorized in the court's discretion to award her fees under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-22. Shapiro v. Lipman, 259 Ga. 85, 377 S.E.2d 673 (1989).

Husband was not the prevailing party because the jury's award was less than he had offered in settlement and because the modification would have resulted ultimately in a net loss to the wife. Thus, the husband could not have been awarded attorney's fees. Keeler v. Keeler, 263 Ga. 151, 430 S.E.2d 5 (1993).

When the former wife filed a complaint for domestication of a foreign judgment and modification of a child support order and dismissed the action without prejudice, since no trier of fact heard the merits of the claim, the former husband could not acquire prevailing party status, and the trial court erred in awarding attorney's fees to the husband. Morris v. Morris, 222 Ga. App. 617, 475 S.E.2d 676 (1996).

Prevailing party is entitled to attorney fees regardless of whether parties ever married. — Even though

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(d) uses the term "former spouse," it authorizes an award of attorney fees to a prevailing party in a child support modification action, regardless of whether the child's parents were ever married because, for purposes of O.C.G.A. T. 19, Ch. 6, the term "former spouse" is equated with "parent" when considering issues of child support; accordingly, the trial court did not err in granting a mother who prevailed on her claim for modification of child support an award of attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(d) even though she and her child's father were never married. Monroe v. Taylor, 259 Ga. App. 600, 577 S.E.2d 810 (2003).

Parties' settlement agreement, not § 19-6-19(d), controlled. — Trial court did not exceed the court's discretion in awarding reasonable and appropriate attorney fees to the prevailing spouse as the court's decision was dictated by the parties' settlement agreement, and not O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(d), as the attorney-fee clause in the settlement agreement made no reference to § 19-6-19(d). Haley v. Haley, 282 Ga. 204, 647 S.E.2d 10 (2007).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Two-year limitation on filing of modification petitions discussed. See 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U80-46.

Construed with § 19-11-12. — O.C.G.A. § 19-11-12 and the statute's provisions did not prejudice or otherwise affect a right to employ the modification of child support remedy available under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19. 1990 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U90-24.

19-6-20. Revision of judgment for permanent alimony, generally — Merits not at issue.

In the trial on a petition authorized in subsection (a) of Code Section 19-6-19, the merits of whether a party is entitled to alimony are not an issue. The only issue is whether there has been such a substantial change in the income and financial status of either former spouse, in cases of permanent alimony for the support of a former spouse, as to warrant either a downward or upward revision or modification of the permanent alimony judgment. (Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, § 2; Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 2; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 24; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1259, § 2; Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 7/HB 221; Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 8/SB 382.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1986, p. 1259, § 3, not codified by the General Assembly, provided: "This Act shall become effective July 1, 1986. The provisions of this Act shall apply to judgments providing permanent alimony for the support of a child or children rendered on or after July 1, 1986."

Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia's children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia's children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children's parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10(b)/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Legislative intent. — General Assembly intended by the enactment of Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, § 2 and other amending legislation to allow an alimony judgment for the support of a child to be revised upon a change in the liable former spouse’s ability to pay. Ability to pay, however, is a function of income and recognized expenses. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

The 1979 amendment, changing “and modification” to “or modification” in the second sentence of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-20 was not intended to expand the scope of modification proceedings. Fender v. Fender, 249 Ga. 765, 294 S.E.2d 472 (1982).

O.C.G.A. § 19-6-20 does not preclude adjustment based on changes in Consumer Price Index to award of fixed amount of alimony. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Modification of spouse support judgments only by raising or lowering payments. — Cases holding that judgment for child support may be modified only by raising or lowering amount of payments, and that while periodic payments for child support can be changed from a group award to a per capita award in a modification action, other terms and conditions of the original judgment cannot be changed apply equally to spouse support as well as child support. Fender v. Fender, 249 Ga. 765, 294 S.E.2d 472 (1982).

Substantial increase or decrease in income. — Decrease of alimony and child support may be warranted by substantial increase in former wife’s income or financial status since the date of the divorce decree or a substantial decrease in the former husband’s income or financial status in such period. Cowan v. Cowan, 243 Ga. 25, 252 S.E.2d 454 (1979).

Increased expenses resulting from spouse’s new wife and child are not change in financial status as would authorize a jury to reduce the child support payments the father was obligated to pay. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

Increased expenses will not preclude increased order of child support. — When the liable former spouse’s income has increased from the time of the divorce, increased expenses resulting from said spouse’s new wife and child will not preclude the trier of fact from exercising the court’s discretion so as to increase the child support payments that spouse is obligated to pay. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

Evidence of original divorce decree. — Trial court presiding over an action for modification of alimony erred in refusing to allow the introduction into evidence of the original divorce decree. Cotton v. Cotton, 272 Ga. 276, 528 S.E.2d 255 (2000).

The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia's children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia's children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children's parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10(b)/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Periodic payments distinguished from lump sum award. — Unless the decree or alimony trial transcript shows to the contrary: (a) a decree specifying periodic payments for an uncertain time (e.g., until death or remarriage) with no indication of gross amount is alimony and is revisable; (b) a decree specifying periodic payments for a given time with no indication of gross amount other than by multiplying the amount due by the number of payment periods is alimony and is revisable; (c) a decree specifying periodic payments to be made until a given sum (i.e., an amount stated) has been paid is division of property or payment of corpus and is not revisable. Nash v. Nash, 244 Ga. 749, 262 S.E.2d 64 (1979).

In a divorce case when the plain language of the parties' agreement manifests an intent to provide a home for the children, with the custodian making the payments, until such time as both parties agree in writing to sell the home and divide the equity, this is clearly an award of lump sum alimony and is not subject to modification. Lyons v. Lyons, 244 Ga. 619, 261 S.E.2d 395 (1979).

One-time payments not subject to modification. — One-time payments, whether alimony, payments of corpus or divisions of separate property of parties, are not subject to revision. Nash v. Nash, 244 Ga. 749, 262 S.E.2d 64 (1979).

Exercise of right to petition for modification of child support. — Right to petition for modification of child support belongs to the child or children involved which may be exercised at the election of the mother or other person having legal custody of the children under the terms of the divorce decree. Crosby v. Crosby, 249 Ga. 569, 292 S.E.2d 814 (1982).

Children possess right to petition for modification of child support. — Right to petition for modification of child support belongs to the children and cannot be waived by the mother. Crosby v. Crosby, 249 Ga. 569, 292 S.E.2d 814 (1982).

Automatic adjustments based on changes in Consumer Price Index. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19 does not preclude award providing for automatic adjustments based on changes in Consumer Price Index. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Automatic adjustment provision does not preclude either party from seeking modification. Hayes v. Hayes, 248 Ga. 526, 283 S.E.2d 875 (1981).

Dischargeability in bankruptcy. — Bankruptcy Court erred in ruling that the jury award of $250,000.00 lump sum alimony was in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support and thus was nondischargeable pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523. Ackley v. Ackley, 187 Bankr. 24 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Fact that a lump sum alimony award to a wife was non-modifiable did not negate the possibility that the award was for the wife's maintenance and support; even though a lump sum alimony award was in the "nature" of a property settlement since the evidence showed that the lump sum award was for the wife's maintenance and support, the finding that it was for that purpose, rather than a division of property which was dischargeable in bankruptcy, was affirmed. Daniel v. Daniel, 277 Ga. 871, 596 S.E.2d 608 (2004).

No modification of lump sum award. — Trial court did not err in dismissing a former spouse's motion for modification of alimony because the award was a lump sum settlement of property rights not subject to modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(a) or lump sum alimony not subject to modification under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-21. Rivera v. Rivera, 283 Ga. 547, 661 S.E.2d 541 (2008).

19-6-22. Revision of judgment for permanent alimony — Expenses for defense of litigation.

Where a petition authorized by subsection (a) of Code Section 19-6-19 is filed by a party obligated to pay alimony, the court may require the party to pay the reasonable expenses of litigation as may be incurred by the party's former spouse on behalf of the former spouse in defense thereof. (Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, § 4; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 26; Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 9/HB 221; Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 8/SB 382.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia's children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia's children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children's parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Counterclaim is petition for purposes of Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 26 and will support a trial court's award of reasonable compensation for those attorney fees incurred solely in defense of the liable former spouse's counterclaim. Wright v. Wright, 246 Ga. 81, 268 S.E.2d 666 (1980).

Award of reasonable attorney fees to spouse contesting modification. — Spouse contesting modification sought by one obligated to pay may be awarded reasonable attorney fees during the pendency of the litigation, including an interlocutory award. Hilsman v. Hilsman, 245 Ga. 555, 266 S.E.2d 173 (1980).

Discretion of court. — Trial court's discretion in making an award under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-22 is not limited to a consideration of the financial circumstances of the party opposing modification. Shapiro v. Lipman, 259 Ga. 85, 377 S.E.2d 673 (1989).

Trial court may grant attorney fees if such fees are determined necessary to insure a proper defense, and upon consideration of the present financial circumstances of the parties. Hilsman v. Hilsman, 245 Ga. 555, 266 S.E.2d 173 (1980).

While an award of attorney fees in a modification action is not mandatory or a condition precedent to bringing an application, the trial judge may in the exercise of judicial discretion, award attorney's fees and expenses of litigation incurred during the pendency of the proceedings. Hilsman v. Hilsman, 245 Ga. 555, 266 S.E.2d 173 (1980).

Attorney fees in action for change of custody. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-22 does not authorize an award of attorney fees for an action for a change of custody. Haselden v. Haselden, 255 Ga. 366, 338 S.E.2d 257 (1986); Owen v. Owen, 183 Ga. App. 472, 359 S.E.2d 229 (1987).

Code Section 19-6-18 or Code Sections 19-6-19 through 19-6-22, as applicable, shall be effective and shall apply to any judgment of a court providing permanent alimony for support, unless rendered prior to March 9, 1955, in which case Code Section 19-6-24 shall apply. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Retroactive application of alimony modification statute unconstitutional. — Although Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1 and Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 23 provided that the court could take cognizance of a petition seeking a change of alimony on the basis of a change in the income and financial condition of either spouse (rather than husband only), the retroactive application of the alimony modification statute is unconstitutional. Sovern v. Sovern, 156 Ga. App. 752, 275 S.E.2d 791 (1980).

Legislature's intent. — Under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-23, General Assembly expressed the legislature's intention to make curative statute retrospective. Summerlin v. Summerlin, 247 Ga. 5, 274 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

Amendments cannot be applied so as to impair alimony agreements. — Despite expressed legislative intent, amendments cannot be applied so as to impair alimony agreements entered into before the amendments, though incorporated into the court's final judgment and decree of divorce. Shure v. Shure, 245 Ga. 36, 262 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

No claim for modification of pre-1977 decree stated. — When the sole ground asserted by the appellant for a modification of alimony was a change in the financial condition of his ex-wife, and the decree was entered in 1968, when the only basis for modification of alimony was a change in the income and financial status of the husband, the appellant's claim for modification failed to state a claim for which relief could be granted. Sovern v. Sovern, 156 Ga. App. 752, 275 S.E.2d 791 (1980).

Party in an alimony action in which a final judgment was entered prior to Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253, § 1, amending Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, § 1 (resulting in O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-18 and 19-6-19) had a vested right in the judgment not being subject to modification because of a change in the income of the wife since the law in effect at the time of the judgment did not permit a modification on such change. McClain v. McClain, 241 Ga. 422, 246 S.E.2d 187 (1978).

Trial court did not improperly attempt to retain jurisdiction. — Trial court did not improperly attempt to retain jurisdiction over post-divorce proceedings by directing the parties to follow an established mechanism to resolve disputes concerning the children, to alternate annual expenses such as the cost of uniforms, or to give the trial court a status report when the youngest child reached the age of 18; the order established permanent awards, and nothing in the language of the status report provision provided that the trial court could issue a modification of custody, visitation, or child support without a petition being properly filed by one of the parties under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-19 and 19-9-23. Facey v. Facey, 281 Ga. 367, 638 S.E.2d 273 (2006).

19-6-24. Applicability of Code Section 19-6-18 or Code Sections 19-6-19 through 19-6-22 to judgments prior to March 9, 1955.

Code Section 19-6-18 or Code Sections 19-6-19 through 19-6-22, as applicable, shall apply to all judgments for permanent alimony for the support of a wife rendered prior to March 9, 1955, where all the following conditions are met:

(1) Both parties to the case in which the judgment for permanent alimony was rendered consent in writing to the revision, amendment, alteration, settlement, satisfaction, or release thereof;

(2) There are no minor children involved or, if there were minor children at the time the original judgment was rendered, the children are all of age at the time the application is filed;

(3) The judge of the court wherein the original judgment for permanent alimony was rendered approves the revision, amendment, alteration, settlement, satisfaction, or release; and

(4) The consent of the parties, together with the court's approval, is filed with the clerk of the court wherein the original judgment for permanent alimony was rendered. (Ga. L. 1957, p. 94, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 10/HB 221; Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 8/SB 382.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

General rule applicable prior to 1955 enactment. — General rule applicable to decrees entered prior to enactment of Ga. L. 1955, p. 630, and Ga. L. 1957, p. 94, is that permanent alimony cannot be modified or revised by the trial judge after the final decree has been rendered. Fricks v. Fricks, 215 Ga. 137, 109 S.E.2d 596 (1959).

Exception to general rule is allowed, provided: (1) there was no jury trial as to permanent alimony, and the question of permanent alimony was disposed of by agreement of the parties incorporated in the decree and made the judgment of the court; and (2) the power to change or modify the decree was reserved to the court by consent of the parties. Fricks v. Fricks, 215 Ga. 137, 109 S.E.2d 596 (1959).

19-6-25. Revision of permanent alimony for judgments entered prior to March 9, 1955.

When any judgment for permanent alimony rendered prior to March 9, 1955, is revised, amended, altered, settled, satisfied, or released, the same shall not thereafter be subject to revision, except upon the conditions specified in Code Section 19-6-24. (Ga. L. 1957, p. 94, § 2.)

19-6-26. Definitions; jurisdiction.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) “Child support order” means a judgment, decree, or order of a court or authorized administrative agency requiring the payment of child support in periodic amounts or in a lump sum and includes (A) a permanent or temporary order and (B) an initial order or a modification of an order.

(2) “Continuing, exclusive jurisdiction” means the authority and jurisdiction of a court to enter or modify a judgment, decree, or order for the payment of child support, as defined in the Full Faith and Credit for Child Support Orders Act, 28 U.S.C. Section 1738B, as amended.

(3) “Foreign child support order” means a judgment, decree, or order of a court or authorized administrative agency of another state requiring the payment of child support in periodic amounts or in a lump sum and includes (A) a permanent or temporary order and (B) an initial order or a modification of an order.

(4) “Modification” means a change in a child support order that affects the amount, scope, or duration of the order and modifies, replaces, supersedes, or otherwise is made subsequent to a child support order or foreign child support order.

(5) “Moving party” means the party initiating an action for the modification of a child support order or foreign child support order.

(6) “Nonmoving party” means the party not initiating an action for the modification of a child support order or foreign child support order.

(7) “State” means a state of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the territories and possessions of the United States, and Indian Country as defined in 18 U.S.C. Section 1151.

(b) A court of this state may exercise continuing, exclusive jurisdiction for purposes of entering a child support order if the court has subject matter and personal jurisdiction to make such a child support order, and no previous support order has been entered by a court of competent jurisdiction with respect to the child or children named in the support order.

(c) A court of this state may exercise continuing, exclusive jurisdiction for purposes of entering a modification of a child support order issued by a court of this state if the child or children named in the child support order or any party to the action resides in this state.

(d) A court of this state may exercise continuing, exclusive jurisdiction for purposes of entering a modification of a foreign child support order if:

(1) The court has subject matter and personal jurisdiction over the nonmoving party; and

(2) The court of the state issuing the order sought to be modified no longer has continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify said order as defined in the Full Faith and Credit for Child Support Orders Act, 28 U.S.C. Section 1738B, as amended.

(3) The parties file a written consent allowing the court to assume continuing, exclusive jurisdiction. This Code section shall be interpreted to effectuate the provisions of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of this title.

(e) Jurisdiction within this state to enforce, by a contempt proceeding or otherwise, a child support order entered by or registered with a court of this state shall be vested concurrently in the court issuing such order, in the court in the county where the person owing the duty of support may be found or is employed, and for in rem proceedings only, in the court in the county where property may be found which is subject to seizure, sale, foreclosure, or other process for application toward the support obligation. (Ga. L. 1969, p. 98, § 1; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 27; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1613, § 7; Ga. L. 2015, p. 617, § 1/HB 567.)

The 2015 amendment, effective July 1, 2015, in subsection (e), inserted “, by a contempt proceeding or otherwise,” near the beginning, and, in the middle, substituted “order, in” for “order,” and inserted “for in rem proceedings only, in”.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Proper venue for former husband’s proceeding to modify alimony provisions is former wife’s county of residence, rather than where the original alimony judgment had been entered. Tiller v. Tiller, 245 Ga. 27, 262 S.E.2d 819 (1980).

Reason underlying enactment of former subsection (b). — Former subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1969, p. 98, § 1 was passed to overrule the decision in Connell

v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969) which honored a modification of a Georgia decree for child support by a Florida court under the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution. McGuire v. McGuire, 228 Ga. 782, 187 S.E.2d 859 (1972).

Limitation upon prohibition against enforcement of foreign modification. — Seemingly absolute prohibition against enforcement by Georgia courts of foreign judgments modifying Georgia permanent alimony judgments must be construed as being limited to those situations in which the party against whom the permanent alimony judgment was rendered remains domiciled in this state. Gilbert v. Gilbert, 245 Ga. 674, 266 S.E.2d 490 (1980).

Jurisdiction over contempt motion. — Trial court erred by dismissing an ex-spouse's motion for contempt for failure to pay child support, which was filed along with her motion to modify the parties' divorce decree because when one court has rendered a divorce decree and a second court later acquires jurisdiction to modify the decree, the second court also has jurisdiction to entertain a motion for contempt of the original decree as a counterclaim to the petition to modify. Ford v. Hanna, 292 Ga. 500, 739 S.E.2d 309 (2013).

URESA action not barred by prior decree. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-26 does not require a trial court to dismiss proceedings under the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-11-40 et seq., when a prior support decree is in effect. State ex rel. McKenna v. McKenna, 253 Ga. 6, 315 S.E.2d 885 (1984).

Agreement between the parents. — Father could not voluntarily abandon his parental responsibility by contract. Diegel v. Diegel, 261 Ga. App. 660, 583 S.E.2d 520 (2003).

Counterclaim for revision of child support in change of custody proceeding. — When plaintiff brings suit for change in custody in county other than county of plaintiff's residence, plaintiff submits to jurisdiction of court in which suit is filed for the purpose of allowing the defendant to file a counterclaim for revision of child support.

Ledford v. Bowers, 248 Ga. 804, 286 S.E.2d 293 (1982).

"Continuing, exclusive jurisdiction" of foreign court. — After a Florida court issued an original custody decree, subsequently issuing a modification, and after one of the "individual contestants" continued to live in Florida and did not consent to the Georgia court's jurisdiction, Florida exercised "continuing, exclusive" jurisdiction, a Georgia county court erred in entering an order domesticating the final divorce decree and increasing the amount of child support, and the superior court should have granted the plaintiff's motion to set aside the order. Connell v. Woodward, 235 Ga. App. 751, 509 S.E.2d 647 (1998).

Declaratory judgment appropriate method to determine support obligations. — As a former spouse planned to continue denying the second former spouse's claim of back child support based on the first spouse's understanding of an unclear divorce decree's formula for calculating biennial increases in the first spouse's support obligation, but doing so subjected the first spouse to contempt charges, the first spouse properly filed a declaratory judgment action. Acevedo v. Kim, 284 Ga. 629, 669 S.E.2d 127 (2008).

19-6-27. Application for permanent alimony or child support after grant of foreign divorce decree; venue; hearing; review; modification.

(a) Whenever, in any foreign country or any other state of the United States, any person obtains a divorce from such person's spouse, which spouse at the time of the filing of the divorce action was a resident of this state, and in the divorce action the spouse was not personally served with petition and process but was served constructively and did not appear, plead, or otherwise waive jurisdiction of the foreign court, the spouse, at any time subsequent to the granting of the foreign divorce decree, may apply to the superior court for an order and judgment for permanent alimony for the support of such spouse and the child or children of the parties, if any. The permanent alimony action shall be filed, pleaded, and tried as if no divorce decree had been entered, even though the foreign decree may be entitled to full faith and credit in dissolving the marriage. If the person who obtained the divorce has become a resident of this state, the action for alimony shall be brought in the county of the person's residence; otherwise, the action shall be brought in the county in which the spouse applying for alimony resides.

(b) The procedure provided for in subsection (a) of this Code section shall not be available for the support of any child or children whose custody and support was legally adjudicated in the foreign court unless custody of the child or children is subsequently changed by a court having jurisdiction of the parties.

(c) A petition brought under this Code section shall be served upon the person who obtained the divorce, as in actions for permanent alimony, and shall be heard by the judge unless a jury trial is demanded by either party to the case. The judgment shall be reviewable as in other cases. The order or judgment shall be subject to modification upon a change of condition, in the same manner that other orders or judgments for permanent alimony are subject to modification. (Ga. L. 1965, p. 263, §§ 1-3; Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, §§ 29-31.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Statute is clearly remedial in the statute's purpose and is designed to remedy situations where a husband and father has obtained a divorce in another state, thus severing the marital relationship, which, under the former law, resulted in cutting off the right of the wife to apply for and have granted an enforceable judgment for alimony. Such a statute should be given an equitable and liberal construction to accomplish the statute's beneficent purposes. Spadea v. Spadea, 225 Ga. 80, 165 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

Section's intent is to indefeasibly vest right to claim alimony. — It is definitely intent of statute to indefeasibly vest in wives (now either spouse) right to claim alimony and to cause this right to survive any scheme or trick of the husband in obtaining a divorce in another state to defeat her right to assert such claim against him in this state's courts, unhampered by any foreign divorce decree severing the relationship of wife and husband. Daniel v. Daniel, 222 Ga. 861, 152 S.E.2d 873 (1967).

Provision not applicable to division of marital assets. — Trial court erred in finding that O.C.G.A. § 19-6-27 applied to a case where plaintiff former husband filed an action in Georgia seeking to domesticate a Texas divorce decree and to adjudicate the parties' property distribution and defendant wife counterclaimed for breach of contract and for an equitable division of property as the action before the court did not involve alimony or child support, but the equitable division of marital assets, which was not addressed by O.C.G.A. § 19-6-27. Barolia v. Pirani, 260 Ga. App. 513, 580 S.E.2d 297 (2003).

Applicability to resident spouse served with out-of-state petition. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-27 is of no avail to a Georgia resident spouse who is personally served with an out-of-state divorce petition. Hildebrant v. Hildebrant, 261 Ga. 603, 409 S.E.2d 206 (1991).

Statutory residency requirement of six months for divorce proceedings has not been extended to alimony proceedings. Chalfant v. Rains, 244 Ga. 747, 262 S.E.2d 63 (1979).

Alimony proceeding need not be ancillary to divorce to be valid. Chalfant v. Rains, 244 Ga. 747, 262 S.E.2d 63 (1979).

(a) In addition to other powers specified in this chapter, the court shall have the power to subject the respondent to such terms and conditions as the court may deem proper to assure compliance with its orders and, in particular, shall have the power to punish the respondent who violates any order of the court to the same extent as is provided by law for contempt of the court in any other action or proceeding cognizable by the court. Any proceeding for compliance pursuant to this authority shall be a part of the underlying action, and a motion for such enforcement shall not constitute the filing of a new action or require the payment of a new filing fee.

(b) In any proceeding to enforce a temporary or permanent grant of alimony or child support by attachment for contempt, the petitioner may serve the motion and rule nisi by mailing a copy of the motion and rule nisi by first-class mail, postage prepaid, to the respondent at the respondent’s last known address together with two copies of a notice and acknowledgment conforming substantially to the form specified in subsection (c) of this Code section and a return envelope, postage prepaid, addressed to the sender. If service is perfected by acknowledgment of service in this manner, the petitioner shall file with the court the acknowledgment of the respondent; and such filing shall constitute a return of service. If no acknowledgment of service under this subsection is received by the petitioner within ten days after the date of such mailing, the petitioner shall notify the clerk of court and deposit the costs of service and service of such summons shall be made as provided in Code Section 9-11-4. The costs of such service shall be charged by the clerk of court to the respondent unless the respondent after motion and hearing establishes to the court that there is good reason why such person should not be so charged. A child support contempt motion shall be served upon a respondent with a notice that contains a date certain for hearing which shall be no later than 30 days from the date of service of the motion, unless good cause for a later date is found by the court, in which event the time for a hearing may be extended for up to 30 days.

(d) Service in accordance with subsections (b) and (c) of this Code section is in addition to any other method of service provided by law. (Code 1981, § 19-6-28, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 785, § 3; Ga. L. 1987, p. 186, § 1; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1613, § 8; Ga. L. 1999, p. 633, § 1.)

Editor’s notes. — As enacted, Ga. L. 1987, p. 186, § 5, not codified by the General Assembly, provided that the amendment of this Code section by that Act would apply to process served on or after July 1, 1987, in both pending and new proceedings. However, Ga. L. 1987, p. 1114, § 2, not codified by the General Assembly, rewrote Ga. L. 1987, p. 186, § 5, to delete the reference to the applicability of the amendment to this Code section by the latter Act.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Contempt finding supported by evidence, but attorney fee reversed. — Trial court properly found a father in willful contempt of court for failure to make child support payments pursuant to the court’s order legitimating the child, upon a mother’s application, as the father’s failure to make those payments was undisputed in the record, the father owned significant assets, and in contemplation of the contempt hearing, the father transferred some of those assets; however, an unsupported attorney-fee award to the mother was reversed, and an evidentiary hearing was ordered on remand. Webb v. Watkins, 283 Ga. App. 385, 641 S.E.2d 611 (2007).

Support accrued before agreement incorporated into judgment. — Parent could not be held in contempt for child support that had accrued under a settlement agreement prior to the agreement’s incorporation into a final judgment; based on the final judgment as well as the obligations set forth in the subsequent clarification order stating that the parent was not responsible for back child support, no clear directive was made as to the parent’s obligation for child support prior to the final judgment. Gary v. Gowins, 283 Ga. 433, 658 S.E.2d 575 (2008).

Authority to enforce child support. — Given the court’s continuing, exclusive jurisdiction, a trial court possessed authority to enforce the child support provisions of a divorce decree prospectively and as to past violations. In exercising that authority, the trial court, as a matter of Georgia law, was able to impose contempt sanctions for willful violations of the court’s decree. Baars v. Freeman, 288 Ga. 835, 708 S.E.2d 273 (2011).

19-6-28.1. Suspension of, or denial of application or renewal of, license for noncompliance with child support order.

- (a) As used in this Code section, the term:
 - (1) “License” means a certificate, permit, registration, or any other authorization issued by the Department of Public Safety or any other licensing entity that allows a person to operate a motor vehicle, to engage in a profession, business, or occupation, or to hunt or fish.

(2) “Licensing entity” means any state agency, department, or board of this state which issues or renews any license, certificate, permit, or registration to authorize a person to drive a motor vehicle, to hunt or fish, or to engage in a profession, business, or occupation including those under Article 3 of Chapter 7 of Title 2, the “Georgia Pesticide Use and Application Act of 1976”; Article 13 of Chapter 1 of Title 7, relating to mortgage lenders and mortgage brokers; Chapter 5 of Title 10, the “Georgia Uniform Securities Act of 2008,” relating to securities salespersons and investment adviser representatives; Part 2 of Article 1 of Chapter 6 of Title 12, relating to foresters; Chapter 4 of Title 26, relating to pharmacists; Chapter 23 of Title 33, relating to insurance agents, counselors, and other personnel; Chapter 1 of Title 43, relating to professions and businesses; Chapter 39A of Title 43, relating to real estate appraisers; or Chapter 40 of Title 43, relating to real estate brokers and salespersons.

(b) In any proceeding for enforcement of a judgment or order to pay child support, if the court is satisfied by competent proof that the respondent has accumulated support arrears equivalent to or greater than the current support due for 60 days and that the respondent is licensed to conduct a trade, business, profession, or occupation, licensed to hunt or fish, licensed to drive a motor vehicle, owns a motor vehicle which is registered in this state in his or her name, or is applying for the renewal or issuance of any such license or registration, the court may order the appropriate licensing or registering entity to suspend the license or registration or deny the application for such license and to inform the court of the actions it has taken pursuant to such proceedings. Evidence relating to the ability and willingness of the respondent to comply with an order of child support shall be considered by the court prior to the entry of any order under this Code section.

(c) The court shall inform the respondent that competent proof for purposes of proving to a licensing or registering entity that the respondent is in compliance with the order for child support shall be written proof of payment by cash or a certified check, notice issued by the court, or notice from a child support receiver, if such receiver has been appointed. 19-6-29. Inclusion of accident and sickness insurance coverage in order for child support; payroll deductions.

(a) In any case before the court involving child support, the court may inquire into the availability of accident and sickness insurance coverage to any person obligated to support and, if such coverage is reasonably available, may include in the order of support provision for such coverage.

(b) Any order of support of a child entered or modified on or after July 1, 1992, which includes provision for accident and sickness insurance may include a provision for payroll deduction of an amount which is sufficient to provide for the payment of premiums of such accident and sickness insurance.

(c) An order for payroll deduction entered pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section shall be consistent with the provisions of Code Sections 19-6-30 through 19-6-33. (Code 1981, § 19-6-29, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 785, § 3; Ga. L. 1992, p. 1264, § 1.)

19-6-30. Provision for collection by continuing garnishment for support; child support subject to income deduction.

(a) Any order of support of a child entered or modified on or after July 1, 1985, shall contain the following provision:

“Whenever, in violation of the terms of this order there shall have been a failure to make the support payments due hereunder so that the amount unpaid is equal to or greater than the amount payable for one month, the payments required to be made may be collected by the process of continuing garnishment for support.”

(b) Any order of support entered or modified prior to July 1, 1985, shall be construed as a matter of law to contain the provision set forth in subsection (a) of this Code section.

(c) All Title IV-D (child support recovery) cases involving orders of support of a child or spouse entered or modified prior to July 1, 1989, or thereafter shall be subject to income deduction as defined in Code Sections 19-6-31, 19-6-32, and 19-6-33. (Code 1981, § 19-6-30, enacted

Enforcement of arrearages. — A 15-month delay in the effective date of an upward modification of child support to allow arrearages to be paid first was improper because O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 does not authorize a complete delay of an upward modification; the upward modification had to be made under O.C.G.A.

19-6-32. Entering income deduction order or medical support notice for award of child support; when order or notice effective; hearing on order.

(a)(1) Except as provided for in paragraph (1) of subsection (a.1) of this Code section, upon the entry of a judgment or order establishing, enforcing, or modifying a child support obligation or spousal support obligation through a court or an administrative process, a separate order for income deduction, if one has not been previously entered, shall be entered. If the obligee is an applicant for child support services under Title IV-D of the federal Social Security Act, the court, referee, or administrative law judge shall furnish copies of the support order and the income deduction order to the IV-D agency.

(2) For all child support orders, and spousal support orders enforced pursuant to subsection (d) of Code Section 19-11-6, the IV-D agency shall be authorized to issue an order for income deduction without need for any amendment to the order involved or any further action by the court or entity that issued it, provided that an opportunity for a hearing before a court, a referee of the court, or an administrative law judge is afforded. The IV-D agency shall also be authorized to issue a National Medical Support Notice to enforce the medical support provisions of such orders, provided that an opportunity for a hearing pursuant to Code Section 19-11-27 is afforded. Such orders or notices may be issued electronically by the IV-D agency. The IV-D agency shall issue an order for income deduction or, when appropriate, a National Medical Support Notice within two business days after the information regarding a newly hired employee is entered into the centralized employee registry pursuant to Code Section 19-11-9.2 and matched with an obligor in a case being enforced by the IV-D agency.

(3) All child support orders issued or modified before July 1, 1997, which are not otherwise subject to income deduction shall become subject to income deduction upon the accrual of the equivalent of a 30 day arrearage, without the need for an administrative or judicial hearing or order.

(a.1)(1) All child support orders which are initially issued in this state on or after January 1, 1994, and are not at the time of issuance being enforced by the IV-D agency shall provide for the immediate withholding of such support from the income and earnings of the person required by that order to furnish support unless:

(A) The court issuing the order finds there is good cause not to require such immediate withholding; or

(B) A written agreement is reached between both parties which provides for an alternative arrangement.

For purposes of this paragraph, any finding that there is good cause not to require withholding must be based on at least a written determination that implementing wage withholding would not be in the best interest of the child and proof of timely payment of previously ordered support in cases involving modification of support orders.

(2) All child support orders which are not described in subsection (a) of this Code section or in paragraph (1) of this subsection shall, upon petition of either party to revise that order under Code Section 19-6-19 or to enforce that order under Code Section 19-6-28, be revised to include provisions for withholding of such support from the wages of the person required by the order to furnish that support if arrearages equal to one month's support accrue but without the necessity of filing application for services under Code Section 19-11-6.

(3) Copies of income deduction orders issued under this subsection shall be served on the obligee, obligor, and the child support IV-D agency.

(b) The income deduction order shall:

(1) Direct a payor to deduct from all income due and payable to an obligor the amount required by the support order to meet the obligor's support obligation;

(2) State the amount of arrearage accrued, if any, under the support order and direct a payor to withhold an additional amount until the arrearage is paid in full;

(3) Direct a payor not to deduct in excess of the amounts allowed under Section 303(b) of the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act, 15 U.S.C. Section 1673(b), as amended; and

(4) Direct the payor to send income deduction payment including administrative fees authorized by law to the family support registry as provided for in Code Section 19-6-33.1.

(c) Income deduction orders shall be effective immediately unless the court upon good cause shown finds that the income deduction shall be effective upon a delinquency in an amount equal to one month's support or a written agreement is reached between both parties which provides for an alternative arrangement.

(d) The income deduction order shall be effective so long as the order of support upon which it is based is effective or until further order of the court.

(e) When the court orders the income deduction to be effective immediately, the court shall furnish to the obligor a statement of his or her rights, remedies, and duties in regard to the income deduction order. The statement shall state:

(1) All fees or interest which shall be imposed;

(2) The total amount of income to be deducted for each pay period until the arrearage, if any, is paid in full and state the total amount of income to be deducted for each pay period thereafter. The amounts deducted may not be in excess of that allowed under Section 303(b) of the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act, 15 U.S.C. Section 1673(b), as amended;

(3) That the income deduction applies to current and subsequent payors and periods of employment;

(4) That a copy of the income deduction order will be served on the obligor's payor or payors;

(5) That the enforcement of the income deduction order may only be contested on the ground of mistake of fact regarding the amount of support owed pursuant to a support order, the arrearages, or the identity of the obligor; and

(6) That the obligor is required to notify the obligee and, when the obligee is receiving Title IV-D services, the IV-D agency within seven days of changes in the obligor's address and payors and the addresses of his or her payors.

(f) When the income deduction is effective upon a delinquency in an amount equal to one month's support, or when an order for spousal or child support was in effect prior to July 1, 1989, the obligee may enforce the income deduction by serving notice of delinquency on the obligor. The notice of delinquency shall state:

(1) The terms of the support order;

(2) The period of delinquency and the total amount of the delinquency as of the date the notice is mailed;

(3) All fees or interest which may be imposed;

(4) The total amount of income to be deducted for each pay period until the arrearage and all applicable fees and interest are paid in full and the total amount of income to be deducted for each pay period thereafter. The amounts deducted may not be in excess of that allowed under Section 303(b) of the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act, 15 U.S.C. Section 1673(b), as amended;

(5) That a copy of the notice of delinquency will be served on the obligor's payor or payors, together with a copy of the income deduction order. The obligor may apply to the court to contest enforcement of the order once the notice of delinquency has been served. The application shall not affect the enforcement of the income deduction order until the court enters an order granting relief to the obligor;

(6) That the enforcement of the income deduction order may only be contested on the ground of mistake of fact regarding the amount of support owed pursuant to a support order, the arrearages, or the identity of the obligor; and

(7) That the obligor is required to notify the obligee of the obligor's current address and current payors and the address of current payors. All changes shall be reported by the obligor within seven days. If the IV-D agency is enforcing the order, the obligor shall make these notifications to the agency instead of to the obligee.

The failure of the obligor to receive the notice of delinquency does not preclude subsequent service of the income deduction order on the obligor's payor. A notice of delinquency which fails to state an arrearage does not mean that an arrearage is not owed.

(g) At any time, any party, including the IV-D agency, may apply to the court, referee of the court, or administrative law judge to:

(1) Modify, suspend, or terminate the order for income deduction because of a modification, suspension, or termination of the underlying order for support; or

(2) Modify the amount of income deducted when the arrearage has been paid. (Code 1981, § 19-6-32, enacted by Ga. L. 1989, p. 861, § 3; Ga. L. 1991, p. 94, § 19; Ga. L. 1991, p. 950, § 1; Ga. L. 1993, p. 585, § 1; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1613, § 11; Ga. L. 1999, p. 1237, § 1; Ga. L. 2002, p. 1247, § 2.)

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2002, "National Medical Support Notice" was substituted for "National Support Medical Notice" in the last sentence of paragraph (a)(2).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-32 does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Word, 265 Ga. 461, 458 S.E.2d 110 (1995).

Construction. — Language of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-32 plainly mandates income-deduction orders. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Pernice, 260 Ga. 732, 399 S.E.2d 65 (1991).

When the Department of Human Resources obtained a judgment after July 1, 1989, enforcing appellee's obligation to pay child support, the trial court should have entered a separate income deduction order pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-32(a)(1). Department of Human Resources v. Chappell, 211 Ga. App. 834, 440 S.E.2d 722 (1994).

Under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-32(a)(1), when any court order or judgment entered on or after July 1, 1989, establishes support obligations for the first time, or enforces existing obligations, or modifies such obligations, the court "shall" order income deduction pursuant to the procedure established in 1989 if the child support recovery agency seeks such. Department of Human Resources v. Offutt, 217 Ga. App. 823, 459 S.E.2d 597 (1995).

Since the original court order regarding support was entered prior to July 1, 1989, before the advent of statutorily mandated income deduction, under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-32(a)(2), the trial court was authorized to use the court's discretion in determining whether to order income deduction. Department of Human Resources v. Offutt, 217 Ga. App. 823, 459 S.E.2d 597 (1995).

When issuance of income deduction order required. — When the Department of Human Resources petitioned to modify a divorce decree so that the former husband's child support payments would be made directly to the child support receiver, the issuance of an income deduction order was required based on the former wife's receipt of public assistance. Department of Human Resources v. Brandenburg, 211 Ga. App. 715, 440 S.E.2d 498 (1994), overruled on other grounds, Department of Human Servs. v. Offutt, 217 Ga. App. 823, 459 S.E.2d 597 (1995).

“Good cause” for delaying the effective date of an income deduction order is the exception and should be found cautiously and only under narrow circumstances. In no case is the fact that the obligated parent is current in the parent’s support obligation, in itself, good cause. Georgia Dep’t of Human Resources v. Word, 265 Ga. 461, 458 S.E.2d 110 (1995).

19-6-33. Notice and service of income deduction order; hearing on enforcement of order; discharge of obligor; penalties.

(a) The obligee or his or her agent shall serve an income deduction order and the notice to the payor, and in the case of a delinquency a notice of delinquency, on the obligor’s payor. The obligor must be notified that withholding has commenced and how to contest the withholding.

(b) Service of the initial income deduction order by or upon any person who is a party to a proceeding under this Code section shall be by personal service, by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, or by regular mail. Service upon an obligor’s payor or successor payor under this Code section shall be by regular first-class mail.

(c)(1) When the income deduction is effective upon a delinquency in an amount equal to one month’s support, the obligor may apply to the court to contest the enforcement of the income deduction order on the ground of mistake of fact regarding the amount of support owed pursuant to a support order, the amount of arrearage of support, or the identity of the obligor. The obligor shall send a copy of the pleading to the obligee and, if the obligee is receiving IV-D services, to the IV-D agency. The filing of the pleading does not affect the enforcement of an income deduction order unless the court enters an order granting relief to the obligor. The payment of delinquent support by an obligor upon entry of an income deduction order shall not preclude service of the income deduction on the obligor’s payor.

(2) When an obligor requests a hearing to contest enforcement of an income deduction order, the court, referee, or administrative law judge after due notice to all parties and the IV-D agency, if the obligee is receiving IV-D services, shall hear the matter within 30 days after the application is filed and shall not extend the time for hearing unless good cause for a later date is found by the court, in which event the time for a hearing may be extended for up to 30 days. The court, referee, or administrative law judge shall enter an order resolving the matter within ten days after the hearing. A copy of this order shall be served on the parties and the IV-D agency if the obligee is receiving IV-D services.

(d) When a court, court referee, or administrative law judge determines that an income deduction order is proper pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section, the obligee or his or her agent shall cause a copy of the income deduction order and a notice to payor, and in the case of a delinquency a notice of delinquency, to be served on the obligee's payors. A copy of the notice to the payor, and in the case of a delinquency a notice of delinquency, shall also be furnished to the obligor.

(e) The notice to payor shall contain only information necessary for the payor to comply with the income deduction order. The payor shall have the duties, penalties, and rights specified in the notice. The notice shall:

(1) Require the payor to deduct from the obligor's income the amount specified in the income deduction order, and in the case of a delinquency the amount specified in the notice of delinquency, and to pay that amount to the obligee or to a child support receiver, the IV-D agency, or other designee, as appropriate. The amount actually deducted plus all administrative charges shall not be in excess of the amount allowed under Section 303(b) of the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act, 15 U.S.C. Section 1673(b);

(2) Instruct the payor to implement the income deduction order no later than the first pay period that occurs after 14 days following the date the notice was mailed;

(3) Instruct the payor to forward, within two business days after each payment date, to the family support registry the amount deducted from the obligor's income and a statement as to whether that amount totally or partially satisfies the periodic amount specified in the income deduction order;

(4) Specify that if a payor willfully fails to deduct the proper amount from the obligor's income, the payor is liable for the amount the payor should have deducted, plus costs, interest, and reasonable attorney's fees;

(5) Provide that the payor may collect up to $25.00 against the obligor's income to reimburse the payor for administrative costs for the first income deduction pursuant to an income deduction order and up to $3.00 for each deduction thereafter. The payor of income may not deduct a fee for complying with any order or notice for enrollment in a health benefit plan;

(6) State that the income deduction order and the notice to payor, and in the case of a delinquency the notice of delinquency, are binding on the payor until further notice by the obligee, IV-D agency, or the court or until the payor no longer provides income to the obligor;

(7) Instruct the payor that, when the payor no longer provides income to the obligor, the payor shall notify the obligee and shall also provide the obligor's last known address and the name and address of the obligor's new payor, if known, and that, if the payor willfully violates this provision, the payor is subject to a civil penalty not to exceed $250.00 for the first violation or $500.00 for any subsequent violation. If the IV-D agency is enforcing the order, the payor shall make these notifications to the agency instead of to the obligee. Penalties shall be paid to the obligee or the IV-D agency, whichever is enforcing the income deduction order;

(8) State that no payor may discharge an obligor by reason of the fact that income has been subjected to an income deduction order under Code Section 19-6-32 and that a violation of this provision subjects the payor to a civil penalty not to exceed $250.00 for the first violation or $500.00 for a subsequent violation. Penalties shall be paid to the obligee or the IV-D agency, whichever is enforcing the income deduction order, if any support is owing. If no support is owing, the penalty shall be paid to the obligor;

(9) Inform the payor that the income deduction order has priority over all other legal processes under state law pertaining to the same income and that payment, as required by the income deduction order, is a complete defense by the payor against any claims of the obligor or his creditors as to the sum paid;

(10) Inform the payor that if the payor receives income deduction orders requiring that the income of two or more obligors be deducted and sent to the same depository, he may combine the amounts paid to the depository in a single payment as long as he identifies that portion of the payment attributable to each obligor; and

(11) Inform the payor that if the payor receives more than one income deduction order against the same obligor, he shall contact the court for further instructions. Upon being so contacted, the court shall allocate amounts available for income deduction giving priority to current child support obligations up to the limits imposed under Section 303(b) of the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act, 15 U.S.C. Section 1673(b).

(f) At any time an income deduction order is being enforced, the obligor may apply to the court for a hearing to contest the continued enforcement of the income deduction order on the same grounds set out in subsection (c) of this Code section, with a copy to the obligee and, in IV-D cases, to the IV-D agency. The application does not affect the continued enforcement of the income deduction order until the court enters an order granting relief to the obligor. The obligee of the IV-D agency is released from liability for improper receipt of moneys pursuant to an income deduction order upon return to the appropriate party of any moneys received.

(g) An obligee, or his agent, shall enforce income deduction orders against an obligor's successor payor who is located in this state in the same manner prescribed in this Code section for the enforcement of an income deduction order against a payor.

(h) The provisions of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of this title, the "Uniform Interstate Family Support Act," apply to all income deduction orders originating in this state and directed to another state. In addition, the provisions of Article 3 of Chapter 11 of this title, the "Uniform Interstate Family Support Act," apply to all income withholding orders originating in another state and directed to this state.

(i) Certified copies of payment records maintained by a child support receiver or the IV-D agency shall, without further proof, be admitted into evidence in any legal proceeding in this state.

(j) No payor shall discharge an obligor by reason of the fact that income has been subjected to an income deduction order under Code Section 19-6-32. A payor who violates this paragraph is subject to a civil penalty not to exceed $250.00 for the first violation or $500.00 for any subsequent violation. Penalties shall be paid to the obligee or the IV-D agency, whichever is enforcing the income deduction order, if any support is owing. If no support is owing, the penalty shall be paid to the obligor.

(k) When a payor no longer provides income to an obligor, he shall notify the obligee and, if the obligee is an IV-D applicant, the IV-D agency and shall provide the obligor's last known address and the name and address of the obligor's new payor, if known. A payor who willfully violates this subsection is subject to a civil penalty not to exceed $250.00 for the first violation or $500.00 for a subsequent violation. Penalties shall be paid to the obligee or the IV-D agency, whichever is enforcing the income deduction order. (Code 1981, § 19-6-33, enacted by Ga. L. 1989, p. 861, § 3; Ga. L. 1990, p. 8, § 19; Ga. L. 1991, p. 950, § 2; Ga. L. 1993, p. 585, § 2; Ga. L. 1994, p. 1270, § 1; Ga. L. 1997, p. 1613, § 12; Ga. L. 1999, p. 1237, § 2; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1589, § 3; Ga. L. 2002, p. 1247, § 3.)

19-6-33.1. Family support registry.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Child support enforcement agency" means the Child Support Enforcement Agency of the Department of Human Services and its contractors.

(2) "Family support registry" means a central registry maintained and operated pursuant to subsection (c) of this Code section, which receives, processes, disburses, and maintains a record of the payment of child support, child support when combined with spousal support, child support arrears, or child support debt made pursuant to court or administrative order.

(3) "Income deduction order" means any income deduction order which is made pursuant to Code Section 19-6-32 and which becomes effective upon a delinquency which occurred on or after January 1, 1994, or which became effective immediately without a delinquency on or after January 1, 1994.

(b) Any term used in this Code section and defined in Code Section 19-6-31 shall have the meaning provided for such term in Code Section 19-6-31.

(c) As required by federal law, there shall be established and operated a family support registry pursuant to IV-D regulations and authority and funding provided to the child support enforcement agency. The child support enforcement agency is authorized to establish and maintain or contract for the establishment and maintenance of the family support registry. This registry shall be used for the collection and processing of payments for support orders in all cases which are enforced by the child support enforcement agency and for all other support orders not being enforced by the child support agency which are subject to income deduction order as defined by paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section.

(d) The child support agency shall as required by federal law redirect payments for support orders in all cases being enforced by the child support agency and for all other support orders not being enforced by the child support agency which are subject to an income deduction order as defined by paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section. These support payments to a court or receiver or private party by an employer shall be redirected to the family support registry.

(e) In implementing the family support registry, the child support enforcement agency is authorized to:

(1) Receive, process, and disburse payments for child support, child support when combined with spousal support, child support arrears, or child support debt for any order;

(2) Maintain records of any payments collected, processed, and disbursed through the family support registry;

(3) Establish and maintain a separate record for payments made through the registry as a result of a judgment remedy;

(4) Answer inquiries from any parent concerning payments processed through the family support registry; and

(5) Collect a fee for the processing of insufficient funds checks and issue a notice to the originator of any insufficient funds check that no further checks will be accepted from such person and that future payments shall be required to be paid by cash or certified funds.

(f) On or after April 1, 1999, the child support enforcement agency shall begin implementing the family support registry. The commissioner of the department or the commissioner's designee shall notify the court administrator and the chief judge of each judicial circuit when new income deduction orders are to be directed to the family support registry.

(g) Upon implementation of the family support registry in any county or judicial circuit, the following procedures shall be followed in such county or circuit:

(1) All administrative orders and all court orders entered or modified which provide for income deduction orders for support payments for child support, child support when combined with spousal support, child support arrears, or child support debt shall require that such payments be made through the family support registry; and

(2) The child support enforcement agency shall send or cause to be sent a notice by first-class mail directing that all income deduction order payments shall be made to the family support registry. Orders subject to this redirection include: all support orders being enforced by the child support agency and all other orders not being enforced by the child support agency which are subject to an income deduction order as defined in paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section. The notice shall be sent to the following persons:

(A) Any obligor who is obligated to make payments for support, child support when combined with spousal support, child support arrears, or child support debt under court order or administrative order in a IV-D case where the order does not already specify paying through the family support registry; and

(B) Any employer or other payor of funds who has been deducting income under Code Section 19-6-32.

(h) Any obligor or employer who receives a notice to redirect payments as specified in subsection (g) of this Code section who fails to make the payments to the family support registry and who continues to make payments to the court or to the IV-D agency shall be sent a second notice to redirect payments. The second notice shall be sent certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested. Such notice shall contain all the information required to be included in the first notice to redirect payments and shall further state that the obligor or employer has failed to make the payments to the correct agency and that the payor or obligor shall redirect the payments to the family support registry at the address indicated in the notice. Failure to make payments to the family support registry after a second notice shall be grounds for contempt.

(i)(1) Any payment required to be made to the family support registry which is received by the court, receiver, or child support enforcement agency shall be forwarded to the family support registry within two business days after receipt. All income deduction payments from employers or such payments forwarded by the court, receiver, or child support enforcement agency shall be identified with the information specified by the family support registry, including but not limited to the court case number, social security number, the county where the case originated, and the name of the obligor. A copy of the notice to redirect payments described in subsection (g) of this Code section shall be mailed to the obligee and the court.

(2) Except as provided by federal law, the family support registry shall distribute all support amounts payable within two business days after receipt from the employer or other payment source.

(j) The department shall coordinate the operation of the family support registry with the state case registry created under Code Section 19-11-39 so as to reduce if not eliminate the need for duplicate reporting and information recording. The department is authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with the courts of the judicial circuits in order to implement the family support registry. The department shall be authorized to establish and collect from the income deduction order obligor or other obligor paying support through the family support registry an administrative fee. The fee shall not exceed $2.00 per payment or 5 percent of the amount of each payment or the actual cost of processing and distributing the child support from the source to the obligee, whichever is the lesser.

(k) Nothing in this Code section shall allow or require any reduction of child support payments paid to any parent or guardian of a minor child. (Code 1981, § 19-6-33.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1999, p. 1237, § 3; Ga. L. 2000, p. 136, § 19; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1589, § 3; Ga. L. 2009, p. 453, § 2-2/HB 228.)

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant “first-class” was substituted for “first to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1999, class” in paragraph (g)(2) and “subsection (g)” was substituted for “paragraph (g)” in paragraph (i)(1).

19-6-34. Inclusion of life insurance in order of support.

(a) In any case before the court involving child support, the court may include in the order of support provision for life insurance on the life of either parent or the lives of both parents for the benefit of the minor children. The court may order either parent or both parents to obtain and maintain the life insurance.

(b) The amount of the premium for such life insurance may be considered as a deviation to the presumptive amount of child support pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 19-6-15, provided that the court shall review the amount of the premium for reasonableness under the circumstances of the case and the best interest of the child.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section, an order for child support shall not require maintenance of life insurance for a child’s benefit after the child reaches the age of majority and shall not require that the proceeds of life insurance be available for the benefit of a child after the child reaches the age of majority.

(d) The trier of fact, in the exercise of sound discretion, may direct either or both parents to maintain life insurance for the benefit of a child who has not previously married or become emancipated, who is enrolled in and attending a secondary school, and who has attained the age of majority before completing his or her secondary school education, provided that maintenance of such life insurance for the benefit of the child shall not be required after a child attains 20 years of age.

(e) Nothing in this Code section shall prevent parents from entering into an agreement for the provision of life insurance that differs from or exceeds the terms of this Code section. (Code 1981, § 19-6-34, enacted by Ga. L. 1995, p. 603, § 3; Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 5/SB 382.)

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10(b)/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007.”

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Premium properly included as part of support. — Mother’s premium for life insurance for her two minor children, custody of whom was awarded to the father, was counted as a part of the support ordered pursuant to the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 of the Georgia Child Support Guidelines. Moon v. Moon, 277 Ga. 375, 589 S.E.2d 76 (2003).

Premium excluded from guidelines. — Trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion by declining to consider the cost of the life insurance in calculating a parent’s child support obligation because the evidence indicated that a parent's company, rather than the parent, paid the premiums on the parent's life insurance policies. Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Order that child past age of majority be named beneficiary of life insurance policy improper. — Order requiring the husband to maintain a life insurance policy with the four children of the marriage named as equal beneficiaries was improper because the couple's eldest child had reached the age of majority when the judgment was entered, and there was no evidence of a voluntary obligation by the husband to assume a support obligation that exceeded the husband's legal duty. Mongerson v. Mongerson, 285 Ga. 554, 678 S.E.2d 891 (2009), overruled on other grounds, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Parent required to maintain life insurance benefiting child. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in requiring a parent to maintain life insurance for the benefit of the child and by ordering the creation of a trust for any life insurance proceeds; O.C.G.A. § 19-6-34(a) does not limit the value of any life insurance to the future child support obligation of the parent, and the amount is within the trial court's discretion. Simmons v. Simmons, 288 Ga. 670, 706 S.E.2d 456 (2011).

Trial court did not err by ordering a husband's child support obligation to be secured by a life insurance policy for the support of the minor children because the trial court had discretion to require a parent, without the parent's agreement, to provide life insurance for the support of minor children pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-34. Jarvis v. Jarvis, 291 Ga. 818, 733 S.E.2d 747 (2012).

19-6-35. Child support obligee and obligor defined.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Child support obligee" means an individual to whom the payment of a child support obligation is owed and includes a custodial parent or caretaker of a child to whom such support obligation is to be paid or a governmental agency entitled by law to enforce a child support obligation on behalf of such parent, caretaker, or child.

(2) "Child support obligor" means an individual owing a duty of support to a child or children, whether or not such duty is evinced by a judgment, order, or decree.

(b) A child support obligee shall be regarded as a creditor, and a child support obligor shall be regarded as a debtor, as defined in Code Section 18-2-1, for the purposes of attacking as fraudulent a judgment, conveyance, transaction, or other arrangement interfering with the creditor's rights, either at law or in equity. (Code 1981, § 19-6-35, enacted by Ga. L. 1997, p. 1613, § 13.)

ARTICLE 2

GEORGIA CHILD SUPPORT COMMISSION

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia's children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia's children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children's parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children."

19-6-50. Creation; responsibilities.

There is created the Georgia Child Support Commission for the purpose of studying and collecting information and data relating to awards of child support and to create and revise the child support obligation table. The commission shall be responsible for conducting a comprehensive review of the child support guidelines, economic conditions, and all matters relevant to maintaining effective and efficient child support guidelines and modifying child support orders that will serve the best interest of Georgia's children and take into account the changing dynamics of family life. Further, the commission shall determine whether adjustments are needed to the child support obligation table taking into consideration the guidelines set forth in Code Section 19-6-53. Nothing contained in the commission's report shall be considered to authorize or require a change in the child support obligation table without action by the General Assembly. (Code 1981, § 19-6-50, enacted by Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 11/HB 221.)

Citizen members shall receive a daily expense allowance in the amount specified in subsection (b) of Code Section 45-7-21 as well as the mileage or transportation allowance authorized for state employees. Members of the commission who are state officials, other than legislative members, or state employees shall receive no compensation for their services on the commission, but they shall be reimbursed for expenses incurred by them in the performance of their duties as members of the commission in the same manner as they are reimbursed for expenses in their capacities as state officials or state employees. The funds necessary for the reimbursement of the expenses of state officials, other than legislative members, and state employees shall come from funds appropriated to or otherwise available to their respective departments. All other funds necessary to carry out the provisions of this article shall come from funds appropriated to the House of Representatives and the Senate. (Code 1981, § 19-6-52, enacted by Ga. (8) To develop training manuals and information to educate judges, attorneys, and litigants on the use of the child support obligation table and child support guidelines;

(9) To collaborate with the Institute for Continuing Judicial Education, the Institute of Continuing Legal Education, and other agencies for the purpose of training persons who will be utilizing the child support obligation table and child support guidelines;

The 2014 amendment, effective July 1, 2014, in subsection (a), substituted the present provisions of paragraph (a)(3) for the former provisions, which read: “(A) To create and recommend to the General Assembly a child support obligation table consistent with Code Section 19-6-15. Prior to January 1, 2006, the commission shall produce the child support obligation table and provide an explanation of the underlying data and assumptions to the General Assembly by delivering copies to the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

“(B)(i) The child support obligation table shall include deductions from a parent’s gross income for the employee’s share of the contributions for the first 6.2 percent in Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) and 1.45 percent in medicare taxes.

“(ii) FICA tax withholding for high-income persons may vary during the year. Six and two-tenths percent is withheld on the first $90,000.00 of gross earnings. After the maximum $5,580.00 is withheld, no additional FICA taxes shall be withheld.

“(iii) Self-employed persons are required by law to pay the full FICA tax of 12.4 percent up to the $90,000.00 gross earnings limit and the full medicare tax rate of 2.9 percent on all earned income.

“(iv) The percentages and dollar amounts established or referenced in this subparagraph with respect to the payment of self-employment taxes shall be adjusted by the commission, as necessary, as relevant changes occur in the federal tax laws;”; substituted “four years” for “two years” in paragraph (a)(4); and added “and adjust the formula for the calculations of self-employed persons’ income pursuant to applicable federal law, if the commission determines that the calculation affects persons paying or receiving child support in this state” at the end of paragraph (a)(7).

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10(b)/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007.”

ARTICLE 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Cross references. — Inspection of students’ records by parents, § 20-2-720. Liability of parent for acts committed by minor child, §§ 51-2-2, 51-2-3.

19-7-1. In whom parental power lies; how such power lost; recovery for homicide of child.

- (a) Until a child reaches the age of 18 or becomes emancipated, the child shall remain under the control of his or her parents, who are entitled to the child’s services and the proceeds of the child’s labor. In the event that a court has awarded custody of the child to one parent, only the parent who has custody of the child is entitled to the child’s services and the proceeds of the child’s labor.
- (b) Parental power shall be lost by:
- (1) Voluntary contract releasing the right to a third person;
 - (2) Consent to the adoption of the child by a third person;

(3) Failure to provide necessities for the child or abandonment of the child;

(4) Consent to the child's receiving the proceeds of his own labor, which consent shall be revocable at any time;

(5) Consent to the marriage of the child, who thus assumes inconsistent responsibilities;

(6) Cruel treatment of the child;

(7) A superior court order terminating parental rights in an adoption proceeding in accordance with Chapter 8 of this title; or

(8) A superior court order terminating parental rights of the legal father or the biological father who is not the legal father of the child in a petition for legitimation, a petition to establish paternity, a divorce proceeding, or a custody proceeding pursuant to this chapter or Chapter 5, 8, or 9 of this title, provided that such termination is in the best interest of such child; and provided, further, that this paragraph shall not apply to such termination when a child has been adopted or is conceived by artificial insemination as set forth in Code Section 19-7-21 or when an embryo is adopted as set forth in Article 2 of Chapter 8 of this title.

(b.1) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section or any other law to the contrary, in any action involving the custody of a child between the parents or either parent and a third party limited to grandparent, great-grandparent, aunt, uncle, great aunt, great uncle, sibling, or adoptive parent, parental power may be lost by the parent, parents, or any other person if the court hearing the issue of custody, in the exercise of its sound discretion and taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, determines that an award of custody to such third party is for the best interest of the child or children and will best promote their welfare and happiness. There shall be a rebuttable presumption that it is in the best interest of the child or children for custody to be awarded to the parent or parents of such child or children, but this presumption may be overcome by a showing that an award of custody to such third party is in the best interest of the child or children. The sole issue for determination in any such case shall be what is in the best interest of the child or children.

(c)(1) In every case of the homicide of a child, minor or sui juris, there shall be some party entitled to recover the full value of the life of the child, either as provided in this Code section or as provided in Chapter 4 of Title 51.

(2) If the deceased child does not leave a spouse or child, the right of recovery shall be in the parent or parents, if any, given such a right by this paragraph as follows:

(A) If the parents are living together and not divorced, the right shall be in the parents jointly;

(B) If either parent is deceased, the right shall be in the surviving parent; or

(C) If both parents are living but are divorced, separated, or living apart, the right shall be in both parents. However, if the parents are divorced, separated, or living apart and one parent refuses to proceed or cannot be located to proceed to recover for the wrongful death of a child, the other parent shall have the right to contract for representation on behalf of both parents, thereby binding both parents, and the right to proceed on behalf of both parents to recover for the homicide of the child with any ultimate recovery to be shared by the parents as provided in this subsection. Unless a motion is filed as provided in paragraph (6) of this subsection, such a judgment shall be divided equally between the parents by the judgment; and the share of an absent parent shall be held for such time, on such terms, and with such direction for payment if the absent parent is not found as the judgment directs. Payment of a judgment awarded to the parent or parents having the cause of action under this subparagraph or the execution of a release by a parent or parents having a cause of action under this subparagraph shall constitute a full and complete discharge of the judgment debtor or releasee. If, after two years from the date of any recovery, the share of an absent parent has not been paid to the absent parent, the other parent can petition the court for the funds, and the recovery, under appropriate court order, shall be paid over to the parent who initiated the recovery.

(3) The intent of this subsection is to provide a right of recovery in every case of the homicide of a child who does not leave a spouse or child. If, in any case, there is no right of action in a parent or parents under the above rules, the right of recovery shall be determined by Code Section 51-4-5.

(4) In this subsection the terms "homicide" and "full value of the life" shall have the meaning given them in Chapter 4 of Title 51.

(5) In actions for recovery, the fact that the child was born out of wedlock shall be no bar to recovery.

(6) For cases in which the parents of a deceased child are divorced, separated, or living apart, a motion may be filed by either parent prior to trial requesting the judge to apportion fairly any judgment amounts awarded in the case. Where such a motion is filed, a judgment shall not be automatically divided. A postjudgment hearing shall be conducted by the judge at which each parent shall have the opportunity to be heard and to produce evidence regarding that parent's relationship with the deceased child. The judge shall fairly determine the percentage of the judgment to be awarded to each parent. In making such a determination, the judge shall consider each parent's relationship with the deceased child, including permanent custody, control, and support, as well as any other factors found to be pertinent. The judge's decision shall not be disturbed absent an abuse of discretion. (Orig. Any offense occurring before January 1, 2014, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense and shall be considered a prior adjudication for the purpose of imposing a disposition that provides for a different penalty for subsequent adjudications, of whatever class, pursuant to this Act. General Consideration

Statute did not purport to deal with subject of adoption. Glendinning v. McComas, 188 Ga. 345, 3 S.E.2d 562 (1939); Wheeler v. Little, 113 Ga. App. 106, 147 S.E.2d 352 (1966).

Statute inapplicable following death of parents. — Superior court erred in granting an aunt and uncle custody of minor children because the court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to consider the petition for custody since a probate court had exclusive jurisdiction to issue and revoke letters of testamentary guardianship, and O.C.G.A. § 29-2-4(b) mandated the issuance of letters of testamentary guardianship to the brother of the children's father without notice and a hearing and without consideration of the children's best interests; O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 was inapplicable because the statute was limited to a custody action between a parent and specified relatives, and the children's parents were deceased. Zinkhan v. Bruce, 305 Ga. App. 510, 699 S.E.2d 833 (2010).

Construction with Workers' Compensation Act. — Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq., does not unconstitutionally conflict with the statutory right of a non-dependent parent to recover for an adult's child death while on the job. Barzey v. City of Cuthbert, 295 Ga. 641, 763 S.E.2d 447 (2014).

Legislative intent. — It was certain that the legislature intended that there be a monetary recovery in all instances of the homicide of a child, whether the child was a minor or an adult. Carringer v. Rodgers, 276 Ga. 359, 578 S.E.2d 841 (2003).

Legislature intends that there always be a right of recovery in the case of the homicide of a child, and because the spouse-murderer is precluded from this right of recovery, the parent has standing to bring a cause of action for the wrongful death of a child in order to recover for the full value of the child's life. Carringer v. Rodgers, 331 F.3d 844 (11th Cir. 2003).

Former Code 1933, §§ 49-102 and 74-108 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 29-4-2 and 19-7-1, respectively) must be construed together. McCallum v. Bryant, 212 Ga. 348, 92 S.E.2d 531 (1956).

O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) did not give grandparents the right to intervene in adoption proceedings brought by third parties since the parents had voluntarily surrendered their parental rights and agreed to the adoption. Baum v. Moore, 230 Ga. App. 255, 496 S.E.2d 307 (1998).

Guardian appointment under § 29-4-4. — No guardian can be appointed under former Civil Code 1910, § 3035 (see now O.C.G.A. § 29-4-4) unless the parents' rights were voluntarily relinquished or forfeited in accordance with the provisions of former Code 1933, § 74-108 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1). Robison v. Robison, 29 Ga. App. 521, 116 S.E. 19 (1923).

Forfeiture of parents' rights must be declared in regular proceedings, authorized by law, with notice to parent. Robison v. Robison, 29 Ga. App. 521, 116 S.E. 19 (1923).

For discussion of ways in which parental control may be alienated. — See Morris v. Grant, 196 Ga. 692, 27 S.E.2d 295 (1943).

Termination of parental authority. — Parent's authority over child is terminated at parent's death. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

Cruel treatment of child by parent. — Parent may lose right to control and custody by cruel treatment of child. Mills v. Mills, 218 Ga. 686, 130 S.E.2d 221 (1963).

Evidence as to cruel treatment. — Evidence is insufficient to justify termination of parental rights under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b)(6) when evidence of cruel treatment consists of one unverified episode in the past. Hays v. Jeng, 184 Ga. App. 157, 360 S.E.2d 913 (1987).

When parent kills mother and maternal grandmother, the parent loses all parental rights and has no parental rights to award custody to the parent's sister, and such a contract is therefore invalid. George v. Anderson, 135 Ga. App. 273, 217 S.E.2d 609 (1975).

Child's better financial, educational, or moral advantages elsewhere. — Court cannot terminate parental rights because child might have better financial, educational, or moral advantages elsewhere. Carvalho v. Lewis, 247

Ga. 94, 274 S.E.2d 471 (1981).

Grandparents' rights. — Since the intervention of grandparents into a custody proceeding and an order granting them temporary custody had already occurred, the later adult adoption of the child's father did not extinguish the legal status that the grandparents held; the trial court's subsequent order dismissing the intervention of the grandparents, and setting aside the award of temporary custody to them was reversed. Walls v. Walls, 278 Ga. 206, 599 S.E.2d 173 (2004).

Under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1), grandparents were entitled to custody of their two grandchildren given the children's special needs due to autism and developmental delays and the parents' denial of the children's problems and inability to care for the children. Whitehead v. Myers (In the Interest of D. W.), 311 Ga. App. 680, 716 S.E.2d 785 (2011).

Error in procedures involving bifurcation. — In a suit brought by a biological father to recover one-half of the proceeds of a settlement of a wrongful death action arising out of the death of a son, which the father brought against that child's mother and others, the trial court abused the court's discretion in bifurcating the trial in the manner chosen since the trial court did not follow any of the procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1 regarding punitive damages; secondly, the manner of bifurcation unfairly limited the father's right of cross-examination regarding post-death facts involving allegations by the father that the child's mother and the others took steps to conceal the recovery and to otherwise defraud the father. Bolden v. Ruppenthal, 286 Ga. App. 800, 650 S.E.2d 331 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 756 (Ga. 2007).

Third party acquiring parental powers upon forfeiture by parent retains such power until child's majority, although conditions might arise which would authorize annulment of the contract. Carswell, Moxley & Son v. Harrison, 33 Ga. App. 140, 126 S.E. 293 (1924).

Effect of relinquishment of parental rights upon minor's right to contract. — Relinquishment of all parental rights and control does not give minor right to contract generally. Wickham v. Torley, 136 Ga. 594, 71 S.E. 881, 36 L.R.A. (n.s.) 57 (1911).

Effect of marriage upon child's emancipation. — Marriage just as effectively emancipates a child as arrival at majority does. Child is, after such time, to be considered as an adult. Irby v. State, 57 Ga. App. 717, 196 S.E. 101 (1938).

Contractual Relinquishment of Parental Rights

Parental consent required for contractual relinquishment of parental rights. — One parent cannot contract away custody of child to third party without other parent's consent. Foltz v. Foltz, 238 Ga. 193, 232 S.E.2d 66 (1977).

Since legal right to minor child was in mother, the court erred in granting custody to third parties on the ground that the father, who was first awarded custody but was deceased at the time of the mother's action for custody of the child, had given the child to third parties, that they had the child since, and were fit and proper parties to have custody, as custody could only be taken from the parent having the legal right thereto by showing that she had lost her parental rights under the statute, or by clear and satisfactory proof, that she was an unfit person to have custody. Peck v. Shierling, 222 Ga. 60, 148 S.E.2d 491 (1966), later appeal, 223 Ga. 1, 152 S.E.2d 868 (1967).

When mother gives away child and father acquiesces. — If mother gives her infant child to another, who takes and cares for the infant, and the father acquiesces in this disposition of the child, he is bound by the disposition. Eaves v. Fears, 131 Ga. 820, 64 S.E. 269 (1909); Manning v. Crawford, 8 Ga. App. 835, 70 S.E. 959 (1911).

Father's transfer of parental authority if wife is dead. — Ordinarily, a father may transfer and assign his parental authority if wife is dead. Lucas v. Smith, 201 Ga. 834, 41 S.E.2d 527 (1947).

Voluntary contract releasing parental rights must be clear, definite, and unambiguous. — When it is insisted that a parent has relinquished right to custody and control of minor child to third person by voluntary contract, a clear and strong case must be made, and terms of contract, to have effect of depriving parent of control, should be clear, definite, and unambiguous. Waldrup v. Crane, 203 Ga. 388, 46 S.E.2d 919 (1948); Rawdin v. Conner, 210 Ga. 508, 81 S.E.2d 461 (1954); Southern Ry. v. Neeley, 101 Ga. App. 488, 114 S.E.2d 283 (1960).

While it is true that parental control may be lost by voluntary contract, terms of such contract must be clear, definite, and unambiguous. Sailors v. Spainhour, 98 Ga. App. 475, 106 S.E.2d 82 (1958).

Terms of contract must be definite and unambiguous and established by clear and satisfactory proof. Shaddrix v. Womack, 231 Ga. 628, 203 S.E.2d 225 (1974).

O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 provides that parental power may be lost by voluntary contract, but the evidence must establish the clear, definite, and unambiguous terms of such a contract before a relinquishment of parental rights will be found. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 168 Ga. App. 66, 308 S.E.2d 193 (1983).

Contract by which parents lose control of minor child must be clear, definite, and certain. Miller v. Wallace, 76 Ga. 479, 2 Am. St. R. 48 (1886); Looney v. Martin, 123 Ga. 209, 51 S.E. 304 (1905); Richards v. McHan, 129 Ga. 275, 58 S.E. 839 (1907); Manning v. Crawford, 8 Ga. App. 835, 70 S.E. 959 (1911); Broxton v. Fairfax, 149 Ga. 122, 99 S.E. 292 (1919); Saxon v. Brantley, 174 Ga. 641, 163 S.E. 504 (1932).

It is not essential that evidence as to contract shall be undisputed. Miller v. Wallace, 76 Ga. 479, 2 Am. St. R. 48 (1886); Looney v. Martin, 123 Ga. 209, 51 S.E. 304 (1905); Richards v. McHan, 129 Ga. 275, 58 S.E. 839 (1907); Manning v. Crawford, 8 Ga. App. 835, 70 S.E. 959 (1911); Broxton v. Fairfax, 149 Ga. 122, 99 S.E. 292 (1919).

Parents' consent to adoption of child by sister has effect of transferring parental rights. Jordan v. Smith, 5 Ga. App. 559, 63 S.E. 595 (1909).

Consent to adoption cannot be revoked as a matter of right. — Parental power shall be lost by consenting to adoption of child by third person and such consent may not be revoked as a matter of right. Smith v. Munday, 228 Ga. 411, 185 S.E.2d 905 (1971).

Release of parental authority to another is not revocable absent some sufficient legal reason; a mere change in mind on the part of the parent consenting is not such legal cause as will revoke consent. Sessions v. Oliver, 204 Ga. 425, 50 S.E.2d 54 (1948).

Custodial parents do not have to prove mother unfit. — In an action by mother to set aside and/or vacate an order granting permanent custody of her minor child to her aunt and uncle, since the mother had surrendered parental rights by voluntary contract, the aunt and uncle were not required to plead and prove that she was an unfit parent. Faulkenberry v. Elkins, 213 Ga. App. 472, 445 S.E.2d 283 (1994).

Giving child to another who thereafter provides support and maintenance. — Gift of child by plaintiff mother to defendants and their acceptance, followed by their personal care of child and their expenditures for the child's support and maintenance, may constitute a relinquishment contract binding on the plaintiff. Bogus v. Smith, 219 Ga. 493, 133 S.E.2d 13 (1963).

Evidence sufficient to establish binding contract. — Documents executed by the biological mother granting "custody" of her child to the petitioner and allowing the petitioner to take her child for medical treatment were, alone, insufficient to establish a contract for the relinquishment of parental rights; however, this evidence, along with other evidence showing the biological mother's desire to sever the parental relation and throw off all obligations growing out of that relation, was more than sufficient to establish a binding relinquishment contract. In re A.M.Y., 189 Ga. App. 847, 377 S.E.2d 893 (1989).

Agreement giving father custody is not relinquishment of mother's rights. — Custody agreement under which father is to have custody of child with right of mother to visit child at any time she desires and to have child visit her at any time and to have child in her home for visits does not amount to a relinquishment of the mother's rights to a third person within the meaning of the statute. Land v. Wrobel, 220 Ga. 260, 138 S.E.2d 315 (1964).

Contractual Relinquishment of Parental Rights (Cont'd)

Father's acquiescence in divorce decree awarding mother custody. — Acquiescence of father in divorce decree placing custody of child in mother would not serve as contract releasing right of parental power to third persons, nor could such evidence be used to show abandonment. Howell v. Gossett, 234 Ga. 145, 214 S.E.2d 882 (1975).

Contract of separation does not release parental rights. McCarter v. McCarter, 10 Ga. App. 754, 74 S.E. 308 (1912).

Relinquishment of rights acquired by grandparents. — Just as contract by which parent relinquishes rights to custody of child to grandparents must be clearly and unmistakably shown, so with equal clearness and certainty it must be made to appear that grandparents surrendered rights thus acquired. Cannady v. Yawn, 193 Ga. 270, 18 S.E.2d 461 (1942).

Contract relinquishing parental rights entered into after abandonment. — Mother who left newborn child covered with dirt and straw in woods had abandoned child prior to making of contract relied upon by plaintiff grandmother in seeking custody of the child, and the trial court did not err in awarding custody of the child to the defendants. Benjamin v. Bush, 208 Ga. 453, 67 S.E.2d 476 (1951).

Surrender of parental rights invalidated by failure of intended adoption. — When an intended adoption fails due to a lack of compliance with the adoption statutes, an alleged surrender of parental rights will not then be upheld under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b)(1) as such a procedure would tend to vitiate the policies underlying the adoption statutes. Johnson v. Smith, 251 Ga. 1, 302 S.E.2d 542 (1983).

Guardianship represented to be temporary. — Parental rights are not voluntarily relinquished when guardianship at the time of the guardianship's creation was intended to be, or was represented to be, temporary in nature. Hays v. Jeng, 184 Ga. App. 157, 360 S.E.2d 913 (1987).

Best interests analysis required. — Trial court erroneously found that the court had no discretion to consider whether the parties' agreement, voluntarily terminating the father's parental rights under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 as part of the divorce settlement, was in the best interests of the child; the trial court, which had authority under O.C.G.A. § 19-9-5(b) to reject a custody agreement as being against the child's best interests and which had authority under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) to ascertain whether a voluntary termination was in the child's best interests, was to reject the agreement if it was not in the child's best interests. Taylor v. Taylor, 280 Ga. 88, 623 S.E.2d 477 (2005).

Failure to Provide Necessaries or Abandonment

Parental power is lost by failure to provide necessaries for child. Wigley v. Mobley, 101 Ga. 124, 28 S.E. 640 (1897).

Restoration of lost parental power. — Parental power lost by failure to provide necessaries for child is restored by reconciliation and resumption of parental control. Wigley v. Mobley, 101 Ga. 124, 28 S.E. 640 (1897).

"Necessities of life" defined. — Phrase "the necessities of life" includes something more than mere food, clothing, and shelter. It includes, in addition to those elements, at least, provision for adequate medical attention reasonably necessary to restore a broken and diseased body to wholeness and to health. Failure to procure such medical attention when needed by a child, and when such failure is caused, not by ignorance, but by indifference, neglect, or negligence of the parent having custody, may amount to failure to provide necessities of life such as would authorize a finding that the parent has lost parental control as provided in statute. West v. West, 228 Ga. 397, 185 S.E.2d 763 (1971).

Forfeiture of parental rights for failure to support minor child. — Parent who willfully fails to support minor child forfeits parental rights, an incident of which is authority to object to adoption of child by another. Sale v. Leachman, 218 Ga. 834, 131 S.E.2d 185 (1963).

"Paltry" contribution not considered abandonment. — Mother who saw her daughter four times over a four-year period, telephoned her mother-in-law's residence where her daughter often lived a total of 60 times, and telephoned her daughter's father's residence five times, although her contribution to her daughter may have been "paltry," did not abandon her daughter prior to her death; thus, the mother had not forfeited her parental rights and was the proper party to bring an action for her daughter's death when the daughter's father had also died in the same car accident which killed the daughter. Jahn v. Wilson Freight Lines, 793 F. Supp. 1083 (M.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 12 F.3d 219 (11th Cir. 1993).

Abandonment. — Parental right of custody and control may be lost by abandonment. Benjamin v. Bush, 208 Ga. 453, 67 S.E.2d 476 (1951).

Father lacked standing to recover for the child's wrongful death pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1(c) and 51-4-4 as the father abandoned the child pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b)(3); the father never supported the child, nor did the father ever visit the child in the many years after the child's hospitalization in infancy, there was no evidence that the father attempted to learn where the child resided in order to initiate visitation or support, and the father was obligated under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2 to support the child, even though the divorce decree did not require it. Baker v. Sweat, 281 Ga. App. 863, 637 S.E.2d 474 (2006).

Proof required to show failure to provide necessities or abandonment.

— Loss of custody for failure to provide necessities requires clear and strong case. Brown v. Newsome, 192 Ga. 43, 14 S.E.2d 470 (1941); Hill v. Rivers, 200 Ga. 354, 37 S.E.2d 386 (1946); Roebuck v. Calhoun, 201 Ga. 496, 40 S.E.2d 142 (1946); McClain v. Smith, 207 Ga. 641, 63 S.E.2d 663 (1951); Hale v. Henderson, 210 Ga. 273, 79 S.E.2d 804 (1954); Locke v. Grimes, 211 Ga. 447, 86 S.E.2d 303 (1955).

When mother of child is dead, father has prima facie right of custody, and in order to sustain contention that he has lost his parental power by reason of failure to provide necessities for his child or by abandonment of his family, a clear and strong case must be made. Chambers v. Lee, 215 Ga. 629, 112 S.E.2d 614 (1960).

Various expressions used to describe standard for finding abandonment or unfitness, "clear and strong," "clear and satisfactory," "substantial and convincing," and "clear and convincing" mean the same thing. Miele v. Gregory, 248 Ga. 93, 281 S.E.2d 565 (1981).

In order to find an abandonment, there must be sufficient evidence of an actual desertion, accompanied by the intention to sever entirely, as far as possible to do so, the parental relation, throw off all obligations growing out of the relationship, and forego all parental duties and claims. In re S.H., 181 Ga. App. 438, 352 S.E.2d 621 (1987); Hays v. Jeng, 184 Ga. App. 157, 360 S.E.2d 913 (1987).

Mere delivery of custody of child to another is not sufficient to constitute abandonment. Shaddrix v. Womack, 231 Ga. 628, 203 S.E.2d 225 (1974).

Mother's surrender of physical custody of children to father. — Contention of father in suit by divorced wife for failure to pay alimony that she had abandoned the children by surrendering physical custody of children to him cannot be sustained, for reason that mother did not have custodial possession of children by reason of parental relation, but by reason of court decree. Swain v. Wells, 210 Ga. 394, 80 S.E.2d 321 (1954).

Mother relinquished her right to custody of her children by allowing paternal grandparents to have physical custody of the children over a period of several years and by failing during that period of time to provide necessary support for the children. Tyner v. Tyner, 170 Ga. App. 877, 318 S.E.2d 675 (1984).

When consent to adoption does not constitute abandonment. — Parents' consent to adoption of their child by third parties and delivery of child to the parties who keep, maintain, and support child without aid or assistance from natural parents, did not constitute abandonment of child within meaning of paragraph (b)(3) when, prior to final order of adoption, parents withdrew consent to adoption and reasserted rights to custody as natural parents. Wheeler v. Howard, 212 Ga. 553, 93 S.E.2d 723 (1956).

Failure to Provide Necessaries or Abandonment (Cont'd)

Long separation from child and remarriage constituted abandonment.

— When record shows separation of mother from father and child for a long period of years, and a divorce proceeding in which custody of child was given to father by voluntary action of mother, she stating that she could not control him, and her subsequent remarriage, this amounted to a forfeiture or abandonment of the child, and the father had right to give custody of child to third party. Raily v. Smith, 202 Ga. 185, 42 S.E.2d 491 (1947).

Failure to provide support for minor in another's custody. — Mere failure of parent to provide support for minor child when in possession or custody of other parent, a grandparent, or other person, when no support is requested or needed, is not such failure to provide necessities or such abandonment as will amount to relinquishment of the right to parental custody and control. Rawdin v. Conner, 210 Ga. 508, 81 S.E.2d 461 (1954); McMillan v. McMillan, 224 Ga. 790, 164 S.E.2d 839 (1968); Shaddrix v. Womack, 231 Ga. 628, 203 S.E.2d 225 (1974); Howell v. Gossett, 234 Ga. 145, 214 S.E.2d 882 (1975).

Right to recover for death of child by non-involved parent. — When a father and daughter died in the same car accident and the father had sole custody of the daughter at the time of her death, and no court ever required the mother to pay child support, even if the mother did not provide support for her daughter, her failure did not result in the loss of her parental rights and the mother had the right to recover for the wrongful death of her daughter. Jahn v. Wilson Freight Lines, 793 F. Supp. 1083 (M.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 12 F.3d 219 (11th Cir. 1993).

Proceeds of Child's Labor

Case law establishing action for loss of minor's services. — While case law in Georgia allows a cause of action for the parent's recovery for the loss of services of a minor child when such loss is caused by a negligent act, this is also reinforced by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(a), which provides that, until the age of majority, the child shall be under the control of the parents, "who are entitled to his services and the proceeds of his labor." Ireland Elec. Corp. v. Georgia Hwy. Express, Inc., 166 Ga. App. 150, 303 S.E.2d 497 (1983).

Presumption that parent is entitled to child's earnings must be overcome by proof of manumission. Evans v. Caldwell, 52 Ga. App. 475, 184 S.E. 440 (1936), aff'd, 184 Ga. 203, 190 S.E. 582 (1937).

Allowing child to receive proceeds of own labor amounts to emancipation. Coleman v. Dublin Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 47 Ga. App. 369, 170 S.E. 549 (1933); Evans v. Caldwell, 52 Ga. App. 475, 184 S.E. 440 (1936), aff'd, 184 Ga. 203, 190 S.E. 582 (1937).

Working minor not necessarily manumitted. — Even when a parent should allow a child to engage in a particular employment and retain for the child the wages for the child's services rendered while so engaged, it by no means follows that the minor has been manumitted for the whole period of the minor's minority. Hunt v. State, 8 Ga. App. 374, 69 S.E. 42 (1910).

When emancipation may be only temporary and subject to revocation. — Emancipation may be only temporary by parent's express or implied consent, which consent may be revoked at any time for a particular employment, in which event it does not follow that the minor has been manumitted by the parent for the whole period of the minor's minority. Evans v. Caldwell, 52 Ga. App. 475, 184 S.E. 440 (1936), aff'd, 184 Ga. 203, 190 S.E. 582 (1937).

Parental consent may be express or implied. — Parent's consent to child's receipt of proceeds of own labor may be express or implied. Baldwin v. Davis, 188 Ga. 587, 4 S.E.2d 458 (1939).

Proof of parental consent. — Minor may prove conversations with mother relative to minor's receiving proceeds of own labor. Coleman v. Dublin Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 47 Ga. App. 369, 170 S.E. 549 (1933).

Minor's assignment of wages to third person. — Minor cannot defeat parent's right to minor's wages by assigning those wages to a third person. Southern Ry. v. King Bros. & Co., 136 Ga. 173, 70 S.E. 1109 (1911).

Employer's burden of showing advances to minor were for necessities.

— Unless parental power has been lost or relinquished, a parent is entitled to value of services of the minor child, whether the contract for services is made by a parent or by the minor; and even as to advances or payments made by an employer to a minor for necessities, the burden is upon the employer to show that such were really necessary. Royal v. Grant, 5 Ga. App. 643, 63 S.E. 708 (1909).

Levy upon child's earnings. — Earnings which child is allowed to retain cannot be levied on as property of parent. Ehrlich & Co. v. King, 34 Ga. App. 787, 131 S.E. 524 (1926).

Parent loses right to proceeds of child's labor by abandonment. Southern Ry. v. Flemister, 120 Ga. 524, 48 S.E. 160 (1904); Newton v. Cooper, 13 Ga. App. 458, 79 S.E. 356 (1913).

Child who marries assumes inconsistent responsibilities which entitle the child to proceeds of own labor, and the child's parent is under no legal obligation to support the child. Thompson v. Georgia Ry. & Power Co., 163 Ga. 598, 136 S.E. 895 (1927).

Unfitness of Parent

Determination of unfitness must be based on parent's present condition. Bozeman v. Williams, 248 Ga. 606, 285 S.E.2d 9 (1981).

Evidence adduced to prove parental unfitness must pertain to present rather than past misconduct. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

Method of depriving natural parent of child custody other than those enumerated in this statute was upon clear and satisfactory showing that parent was an unfit person to have such custody. Patman v. Patman, 231 Ga. 657, 203 S.E.2d 486 (1974).

Legal and parental right to custody is subject to challenge on ground of unfitness for trust. Peck v. Shierling, 222 Ga. 60, 148 S.E.2d 491 (1966), later appeal, 223 Ga. 1, 152 S.E.2d 868 (1967).

Finding of unfitness must be supported by clear and convincing evidence.

Mathis v. Nicholson, 244 Ga. 106, 259 S.E.2d 55 (1979); Bozeman v. Williams, 248 Ga. 606, 285 S.E.2d 9 (1981); In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

Challenge to fitness must be by clear and satisfactory proofs, and for grave and substantial cause. Perkins v. Courson, 219 Ga. 611, 135 S.E.2d 388 (1964); Peck v. Shierling, 222 Ga. 60, 148 S.E.2d 491 (1966), later appeal, 223 Ga. 1, 152 S.E.2d 868 (1967).

Proof required to sustain challenge to parent's fitness. — Parent's prima facie right of custody of infant, when resisted upon ground of unfitness or other cause, must be established by clear and satisfactory proof. Hill v. Rivers, 200 Ga. 354, 37 S.E.2d 386 (1946).

Right to custody may be lost on ground of unfitness only if it is shown by clear and satisfactory proof that circumstances of case justify court in acting for best interest and welfare of child. Bowman v. Bowman, 234 Ga. 348, 216 S.E.2d 103 (1975).

Unfitness justifies court in acting for child's best interest. — Parent may lose right to custody if found to be unfit. Unfitness of parent should be shown by clear and convincing evidence that circumstances of case justify court in acting for best interest and welfare of child. White v. Bryan, 236 Ga. 349, 223 S.E.2d 710 (1976); Childs v. Childs, 237 Ga. 177, 227 S.E.2d 49 (1976), later appeal, 239 Ga. 304, 236 S.E.2d 646 (1977).

That child might have better financial, educational, or moral advantages elsewhere is insufficient. Peck v. Shierling, 222 Ga. 60, 148 S.E.2d 491 (1966), later appeal, 223 Ga. 1, 152 S.E.2d 868 (1967).

Parental fitness. — Fitness was not necessarily synonymous with absence of conduct penalized by former Code 1933, §§ 74-108-74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4). Fact that parent had not forfeited or relinquished parental right by any of the modes of these sections did not establish parent as fit. Perkins v. Courson, 219 Ga. 611, 135 S.E.2d 388 (1964).

When appellate court will not upset finding that parent is unfit. — When controlling issue was whether or not the petitioners lost the right of parental power and control, evidence was in sharp conflict, and the trial judge resolved that conflict against the parent petitioners and awarded custody of the child to the respondent, the appellate court would not say that judge of the court below abused the judge's discretion. Byers v. Loftis, 208 Ga. 398, 67 S.E.2d 118 (1951).

When evidence amply authorizes, although it does not demand, finding that parent is not a fit and proper person to have custody of children and that it is in best interests and welfare of children that they be awarded to other person, appellate court will not substitute the court's judgment for that of trial judge, absent abuse of legal discretion. Adams v. Kirkland, 218 Ga. 512, 128 S.E.2d 730 (1962).

When the trial court makes a finding of parental unfitness, the appellate courts will ordinarily not interfere with that finding, absent an abuse of discretion. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

Emancipation of Minor

There are several ways for a minor to become emancipated. First, marriage emancipates. Additionally, emancipation may be shown by one of the grounds set out in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1. Street v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 520 F. Supp. 1170 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Unemancipated minors are subject to power of parent or guardian, but emancipated minors are not. Street v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 520 F. Supp. 1170 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Custody1. In General

Clear and strong case must exist to justify disturbing natural ties between parent and child. Woods v. Martin, 212 Ga. 405, 93 S.E.2d 339 (1956).

Probate letters of guardianship did not impact jurisdiction. — Paternal grandmother's letters of temporary guardianship that were issued by a probate court did not foreclose a maternal grandmother's filing of a petition for permanent custody, and did not serve as a tool to dismiss the ongoing custody proceeding; the letters had no impact on the trial court's jurisdiction to entertain the custody petition. Barfield v. Butterworth, 323 Ga. App. 156, 746 S.E.2d 819 (2013).

Circumstances under which court may sever parent-child custodial relationship. — Only under compelling circumstances, established by clear and convincing proof, may court sever parent-child custodial relationship. Carvalho v. Lewis, 247 Ga. 94, 274 S.E.2d 471 (1981); Blackburn v. Blackburn, 249 Ga. 689, 292 S.E.2d 821 (1982).

Parent was entitled to custody and control of children until majority unless such power was forfeited as prescribed by statute. Gaskins v. Beasley, 216 Ga. 19, 114 S.E.2d 373 (1960).

Abandonment is a statutory ground for forfeiture of parental right to custody and control of minor child. Miele v. Gregory, 248 Ga. 93, 281 S.E.2d 565 (1981).

Parental right to custody subservient to child's safety. — Legal right of parent to custody of child is subservient to child's interest or safety, and to duty of state to protect the state's citizens of whatever age. Hill v. Rivers, 200 Ga. 354, 37 S.E.2d 386 (1946).

Forfeiture of parental rights not prerequisite to change of custody award. — In order to change award of custody, trial court does not necessarily have to find that legal custodian has forfeited parental rights under former Code 1933, §§ 74-108 - 74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4), but must find either that the original custodian was no longer able or suited to retain custody, or that the conditions and the circumstances surrounding the child have so changed that the child's welfare would be enhanced by modifying the original judgment. Bell v. Bell, 154 Ga. App. 290, 267 S.E.2d 894 (1980).

To change award of custody does not require finding that legal custodian has forfeited parental rights under former Code 1933, §§ 74-108 - 74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4).

Dearman v. Rhoden, 235 Ga. 457, 219 S.E.2d 704 (1975).

When parent may lose right to custody. — Parent may lose right to custody only if one of the conditions specified in former Code 1933, §§ 74-108-74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4) was found to exist, or, in exceptional cases, if the parent was found to be unfit. Byers v. Loftis, 208 Ga. 398, 67 S.E.2d 118 (1951); Bowman v. Bowman, 234 Ga. 348, 216 S.E.2d 103 (1975); Childs v. Childs, 237 Ga. 177, 227 S.E.2d 49 (1976), later appeal, 239 Ga. 304, 236 S.E.2d 646 (1977); Mathis v. Nicholson, 244 Ga. 106, 259 S.E.2d 55 (1979); Larson v. Gambrell, 157 Ga. App. 193, 276 S.E.2d 686 (1981).

Parental right to custody may be lost in habeas proceeding if one of conditions specified in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4 is found to exist, or if parent is found to be unfit. Miele v. Gregory, 248 Ga. 93, 281 S.E.2d 565 (1981).

Right to custody may be lost by voluntary contract. — Right to custody may be lost under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 if the parent has forfeited his or her right to parental powers by releasing this right to a third person by voluntary contract. This voluntary contractual release of custody must be clear, definite, and unambiguous. Bozeman v. Williams, 248 Ga. 606, 285 S.E.2d 9 (1981).

Voluntary consent to adoption and subsequent failure to provide necessities forfeits right of custody. Sessions v. Oliver, 204 Ga. 425, 50 S.E.2d 54 (1948).

When parent must be made party to proceeding. — Parent must be made party to proceeding to remove parent as natural guardian of child, and parent must be served with notice, otherwise the proceeding is void as depriving the parent of parental control without due process of law, and after the parent has been removed and there is no longer a natural guardian, the judge of probate court's jurisdiction to appoint arises. Whitlock v. Barrett, 158 Ga. App. 100, 279 S.E.2d 244 (1981).

Effect of legitimation upon parent's standing as to custody. — Upon legitimation, father stands in same position as any other parent as to custody being subject to challenge for good and legal cause. Sims v. Pope, 228 Ga. 289, 185 S.E.2d 80 (1971).

Child's legitimization does not immunize father from challenges to custody. — Legitimization of child does not ipso facto immunize father from challenges to custody upon proper showing that children should be removed from his custody. Sims v. Pope, 228 Ga. 289, 185 S.E.2d 80 (1971).

Person to whom parent relinquishes child, if suitable to have custody, is entitled thereto. Saxon v. Brantley, 174 Ga. 641, 163 S.E. 504 (1932).

Evidence of past unfitness, standing alone, is insufficient to terminate the rights of a parent in his natural child; clear and convincing evidence of present unfitness is required. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 249 Ga. 689, 292 S.E.2d 821 (1982).

Review of custody award in divorce action. — On appeal in an action for divorce, the court will affirm the award of custody if there exists "any evidence" in the record to support the trial court's decision. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 249 Ga. 689, 292 S.E.2d 821 (1982).

On review of an award of custody to a third party, the reviewing court is to defer to the lower court in the area of factfinding and should affirm unless the "rational factfinder" test of Blackburn v. Blackburn, 249 Ga. 689, 292 S.E.2d 821 (1982) is not met. In re B.D.C., 256 Ga. 511, 350 S.E.2d 444 (1986); In re S.H., 181 Ga. App. 438, 352 S.E.2d 621 (1987).

Review of award to third party. — On review, the award of custody to a third party will be affirmed only if there is "reasonable evidence" to support the award. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 249 Ga. 689, 292 S.E.2d 821 (1982).

Custody dispute if neither relative is a parent. — O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) did not apply in a custody dispute between a grandmother and an uncle of the child. Stills v. Johnson, 272 Ga. 645, 533 S.E.2d 695 (2000).

Voluntary release of parental power. — In a custody dispute between the paternal grandmother and the maternal uncle of a child, where neither relative is a parent as defined by Georgia law, and the child's parent has transferred "parental power" to the grandmother pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b)(1), custody is to be governed by the standard of best interest of the child. Stills v. Johnson, 272 Ga. 645, 533 S.E.2d 695 (2000).

2. Custody Rights as Between Parents

When court may determine which parent is more suitable. — Only in custody disputes between parents may court determine which party is more suitable to be awarded custody, this being the so-called "best interest of child" test. Carvalho v. Lewis, 247 Ga. 94, 274 S.E.2d 471 (1981).

In dispute between two "fit" parents, child's best interests control. — When case involves two "fit" parents, the law contemplates that child be awarded to parent in whose custody the child's best interests will be served. Larson v. Gambrell, 157 Ga. App. 193, 276 S.E.2d 686 (1981).

Upon forfeiture by mother of prima facie right of custody, such right inures to father. Hill v. Rivers, 200 Ga. 354, 37 S.E.2d 386 (1946).

Father's forfeiture of custody vests custody in mother. — Upon forfeiture of custody by father, who had been awarded custody by divorce decree, prima facie right of custody automatically and immediately vests in mother. Sessions v. Oliver, 204 Ga. 425, 50 S.E.2d 54 (1948).

Forfeiture of custody by parent's actions. — Right of custody pursuant to divorce decree may be forfeited by parent's actions subsequent to rendition of decree. Sessions v. Oliver, 204 Ga. 425, 50 S.E.2d 54 (1948).

When parent having custody dies. — When parent having custody dies, legal custody reverts to other parent unless the other parent had lost parental rights as provided under former Code 1933, § 74-108, or was shown to be presently unfit. Porter v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 188, 249 S.E.2d 608 (1978).

On death of parent having custody of child under divorce decree, right to custody automatically inures to surviving parent. Raily v. Smith, 202 Ga. 185, 42 S.E.2d 491 (1947).

In suit by father for custody of child against child's stepfather, the mother having died, prima facie right to custody is in father, and should not be overturned absent strong case as to welfare of child so as to authorize award of child to stepfather. Chapin v. Cummings, 191 Ga. 408, 12 S.E.2d 312 (1940).

On death of parent having custody of child under divorce decree, right to custody automatically inures to surviving parent. Raily v. Smith, 202 Ga. 185, 42 S.E.2d 491 (1947).

When parent having custody dies, legal custody reverts to other parent unless the other parent had lost parental rights as provided under former Code 1933, § 74-108, or was shown to be presently unfit. Porter v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 188, 249 S.E.2d 608 (1978).

Upon death of mother having lawful custody, prima facie right of custody inures to father. In such circumstances, the father's right to custody could only be lost upon one of the grounds enumerated in former Code 1933, §§ 74-108 - 74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4). Hill v. Rivers, 200 Ga. 354, 37 S.E.2d 386 (1946); Baynes v. Cowart, 209 Ga. 376, 72 S.E.2d 716 (1952); Hale v. Henderson, 210 Ga. 273, 79 S.E.2d 804 (1954); Jackson v. Dunn, 158 Ga. App. 194, 279 S.E.2d 514 (1981).

Surviving parent is prima facie entitled to custody of his or her child. Miele v. Gregory, 248 Ga. 93, 281 S.E.2d 565 (1981).

Abandonment must be shown by more than a preponderance of the evidence. When mother of child is dead, father has prima facie right of custody, and in order to sustain contention that he has lost parental power by reason of failure to provide necessities for his child or by abandonment of his family, a clear and strong case must be made. Miele v. Gregory, 248 Ga. 93, 281 S.E.2d 565 (1981).

Adopting parent on equal footing as biological. — Reading O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) in pari materia with the Georgia statutes granting adoptive parents rights and obligations equal to those of a biological parent, the Supreme Court of Georgia concludes that for a court to award custody to an adoptive parent over a biological parent, only the statutory showing is required. Hastings v. Hastings, 291 Ga. 782, 732 S.E.2d 272 (2012).

3. Custody Rights as Between Parents and Third Parties

Findings required. — Trial court's order awarding custody of a child to the maternal grandmother apparently based on the best interests of the child and unfitness of the mother was remanded because the order did not contain findings to substantiate these potentially conflicting conclusions of law. Grantham v. Grantham, 269 Ga. 413, 499 S.E.2d 67 (1998).

Appellate court reversed the trial court's judgment awarding custody of a father's daughters to the daughters' grandmother because the trial court did not find that awarding custody to the father, who legitimized his daughters after he learned that their mother had died, would harm the children physically or emotionally. Jones v. Burks, 267 Ga. App. 390, 599 S.E.2d 322 (2004).

When right to custody cannot be legally challenged by third persons. — Unless parental control has been lost by one or more of the ways prescribed by statute, parent's prima facie right to custody and control of minor child as against claims of third persons was not subject to legal challenge. Waldrup v. Crane, 203 Ga. 388, 46 S.E.2d 919 (1948); Woods v. Martin, 212 Ga. 405, 93 S.E.2d 339 (1956); Mills v. Mills, 218 Ga. 686, 130 S.E.2d 221 (1963).

O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) is constitutional as applied to custody disputes between a noncustodial parent and a third party, and the best interest standard means that the third party has to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the child would suffer physical or emotional harm if custody were awarded to the biological parent, and once the showing is made, the third party has to show that a custody award to the third party would promote the child's welfare and happiness. Clark v. Wade, 273 Ga. 587, 544 S.E.2d 99 (2001).

As between natural parents and strangers, prima facie right to custody is in parents. Rodale v. Grimes, 211 Ga. 674, 87 S.E.2d 857 (1955).

Parent should not be deprived of custody absent strong evidence indicating child's welfare demands it; but on the other hand, child should not be arbitrarily required to remain under intolerable custody and control of unfit person, even the father. Harper v. Ballensinger, 121 Ga. App. 390, 174 S.E.2d 182, rev'd in part on other grounds, 226 Ga. 828, 177 S.E.2d 693 (1970).

Natural parent prevails over third party unless parent has lost parental rights or is unfit. — In contest between parent and third party over custody of child, unless parental control has been lost, parent has prima facie right of custody. Dornburg v. McKellar, 204 Ga. 189, 48 S.E.2d 820 (1948); West v. West, 228 Ga. 397, 185 S.E.2d 763 (1971).

Mother within definition of former Code 1933, § 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-25) cannot be denied custody of child at habeas corpus proceeding against third parties unless it was shown that parental power was lost under provisions of former Code 1933, §§ 74-108 - 74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4), or that the parent was shown to be unfit. Pettiford v. Mott, 230 Ga. 692, 198 S.E.2d 662 (1973).

In dispute between natural parent and third party, court must award custody of child to parent unless parent has lost parental prerogatives or was unfit. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835 (5th Cir. 1977), rev'd on other grounds en banc, 563 F.2d 1200 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1978).

In contest between parent and third party over custody of child, parent may lose the right to custody only if one of the conditions specified in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4 is found to exist, or, in exceptional cases, if parent is found to be unfit. Bozeman v. Williams, 248 Ga. 606, 285 S.E.2d 9 (1981).

As between natural parent and third party (grandparent), parent can be deprived of custody only if one of the conditions specified in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4 or one of the other legal grounds (O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2(8) and 15-11-81) is found to exist by clear and convincing evidence. Brant v. Bazemore, 159 Ga. App. 659, 284 S.E.2d 674 (1981).

For a third party to prevail in obtaining custody in a contest with the surviving parent, clear and convincing evidence that the parent has lost the right to parental custody and control by abandonment or some other legal ground must be presented. In re S.H., 181 Ga. App. 438, 352 S.E.2d 621 (1987).

When a third party sues the custodial parent to obtain custody of a child and to terminate the parent's custodial rights to the child, the parent is entitled to custody of the child unless the third party shows by "clear and convincing evidence" that the parent is unfit or otherwise not entitled to custody under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4. Heath v. McGuire, 167 Ga. App. 489, 306 S.E.2d 741 (1983); In re C.T.L., 182 Ga. App. 845, 357 S.E.2d 298 (1987); Larson v. Larson, 192 Ga. App. 163, 384 S.E.2d 193 (1989).

Presumption of parental custody does not apply when parent is found unfit. — Although O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) establishes a rebuttable presumption that parental custody is always in the child's best interest, thus favoring the biological parent over a third party, the presumption does not apply in favor of a parent who has already been found to be unfit by the juvenile court. In re J. N., 302 Ga. App. 631, 691 S.E.2d 396 (2010).

Dispute between parent and third party. — In custody dispute between parent and third party, trial court must first make determination as to whether parent has lost his or her rights under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or that parent is unfit pursuant to case law. Carvalho v. Lewis, 247 Ga. 94, 274 S.E.2d 471 (1981).

Since a previous visitation order related to the grandparent's right to visitation, not custody, and the legal issues to be decided varied, the trial court properly determined that res judicata did not bar the grandparents' petition for custody under the Uniform Child Jurisdiction and Custody Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-9-40 et seq.; the Act does not provide that the judgment is conclusive as to all issues which could have been put in issue. Scott v. Scott, 311 Ga. App. 726, 716 S.E.2d 809 (2011).

Custody dispute following murder of one parent by other parent. — Trial court erroneously concluded that grandparents' petition seeking custody of a mother's children failed to state a claim because the custody petition gave fair notice that the grandparents sought custody of the child under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1(b.1) and 19-9-2 based upon the mother's alleged murder of the father; those allegations were sufficient to survive a motion to dismiss. Scott v. Scott, 311 Ga. App. 726, 716 S.E.2d 809 (2011).

In a Georgia action to modify an Alaska child custody determination, which was entered pursuant to an agreement of the parties, the Georgia trial court did not apply the correct best interest of the child standard of proof under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1), and instead erroneously placed the Durden standard of proof on the mother. The Durden standard did not apply because there had not been a permanent award of custody to a third party made pursuant to an evidentiary hearing with specific findings by clear and convincing evidence of present parental unfitness. Lopez v. Olson, 314 Ga. App. 533, 724 S.E.2d 837 (2012).

Although implicit in the trial court's order is a finding that the children would suffer harm in the custody of the father, it was not apparent whether the trial court made the requisite determination that the children would suffer either physical harm or significant, long-term emotional harm as required and it was also unclear whether the trial court considered the four factors set forth in Clark v. Wade, 273 Ga. 587 (2001) with regard to custody determinations in cases in which certain third-party relatives seek custody from parents. Floyd v. Gibson, 331 Ga. App. 301, 771 S.E.2d 12 (2015).

Award of joint custody to third party. — Georgia law does not preclude an award of joint custody to a third party by the trial court upon the consent of the parent to such an arrangement or upon a waiver by such parent of constitutionally protected parental rights, provided that the trial court determines that the award is in the best interest of the child. Weiss v. Varnadore, 246 Ga. App. 654, 541 S.E.2d 448 (2000).

Because the trial court applied the correct legal standard in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) in finding that the natural parent presumption was rebutted and that awarding custody to the grandparents was in the child's best interests, and because the grandparents were properly permitted to intervene under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(a)(2), the mother was not entitled to appellate relief. Trotter v. Ayres, 315 Ga. App. 7, 726 S.E.2d 424 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C1206, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 666 (Ga. 2012).

First question is whether parental control lost. — In contest between parent and third party over custody of minor child, first question to be determined is whether or not parental control has been lost. Morris v. Grant, 196 Ga. 692, 27 S.E.2d 295 (1943); Dornberg v. McKellar, 204 Ga. 289, 48 S.E.2d 820 (1948); Byers v. Loftis, 208 Ga. 398, 67 S.E.2d 118 (1951); Morrison v. Morrison, 212 Ga. 48, 90 S.E.2d 402 (1955); West v. West, 228 Ga. 397, 185 S.E.2d 763 (1971).

Differing standards in visitation and custody issues. — Trial court properly determined that collateral estoppel did not bar the grandparents' petition for custody of a mother's children because different issues were actually and necessarily decided in the grandparents' visitation action; in the visitation action, the issues were harm to the child if visitation was not granted and whether visitation would be in the best interest of the children, and in the custody action, the issues were whether the children would suffer physical or emotional harm if custody remained with the mother. Scott v. Scott, 311 Ga. App. 726, 716 S.E.2d 809 (2011).

Standard is child's best interest when deciding between grandparents. — Maternal grandmother's petition for custody over a child, which also involved the paternal grandmother due to her intervention in the matter after securing letters of temporary guardianship, involved a determination as to what was in the child's best interest. Barfield v. Butterworth, 323 Ga. App. 156, 746 S.E.2d 819 (2013).

Placement with grandparents inappropriate. — Superior court erred in granting permanent custody of the mother's three minor children to their maternal grandparents because the children would not suffer physical or significant, long-term emotional harm if custody was awarded to the mother, and the grandparents failed to present sufficient evidence to overcome the mother's presumptive right to custody of the children as the mother had a job and was entitled to a share of the monthly income earned by the family partnership; the mother received treatment for a bipolar disorder; the mother had maintained a strong bond with the children; and there was no evidence that the mother would fail to address the children's psychological issues or fail to provide the type of environment the children needed. Strickland v. Strickland, 330 Ga. App. 879, 769 S.E.2d 607 (2015).

Legal father without custody rights. — Because the juvenile court erred in the court's application of O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1), as a child's legal father was not one of the limited number of related third parties who could seek custody from a legal parent, and in light of the superior court's grant of a legitimation petition to the child's biological father, which the legal father did not challenge by way of an appeal, the legal father lacked standing to challenge the biological father's custody under present Georgia law, and therefore no longer had rights to the custody of the child. In the Interest of C.L., 284 Ga. App. 674, 644 S.E.2d 530 (2007).

Natural parents will be awarded custody unless present unfitness is established by clear and convincing evidence at hearing on permanent custody. Only then is trial court authorized to consider award of custody to third parties. Childs v. Childs, 237 Ga. 177, 227 S.E.2d 49 (1976), later appeal, 239 Ga. 304, 236 S.E.2d 646 (1977).

When surviving parent sues to obtain custody of his or her minor child from third party who has physical, but not legal, custody of child, parent is entitled to custody unless it is shown by clear and convincing evidence that parent has lost parent's right to parental custody and control by abandonment of child or other legal ground. Miele v. Gregory, 248 Ga. 93, 281 S.E.2d 565 (1981).

When duty and control is lost or alienated to a third person by any of the means recognized by law, then such third person stands in loco parentis to the child, and parental power remains in the third party until the child reaches majority, unless the third party loses or forfeits the right to custody or becomes unfit for retaining custody. In re M.A.F., 254 Ga. 748, 334 S.E.2d 668 (1985).

Presumption that it is in child's best interest to be with parent. — While in child custody case welfare of child is always the law's paramount concern, the law presumes that it is in child's best interest to be with his parent if parent is not unfit to be child's custodian. Larson v. Gambrell, 157 Ga. App. 193, 276 S.E.2d 686 (1981).

When presumption must be rebutted. — Before custody of child may be awarded to third party, presumption that it will be in child's best interest to be with parent must be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence showing that parent is unfit to be awarded custody. Larson v. Gambrell, 157 Ga. App. 193, 276 S.E.2d 686 (1981).

When contemplating taking custody of a minor child from the child's parent or parents and awarding custody to a third party, the court must initially face the presumption, firmly embedded in the law, that it is in the child's best interest to be with the child's natural parent or parents. In order for this presumption to be overcome, there must be a clear and convincing showing that the child is abandoned, deprived, or abused, or that the parent is unfit to receive or retain custody. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

Discretion exercised in favor of party having legal right. — Discretion vested in trial judge with respect to award of custody of minor children ought to be exercised in favor of party having legal right, unless circumstances of case and precedents established would justify court, acting for welfare of child, in refusing it. Lucas v. Smith, 201 Ga. 834, 41 S.E.2d 527 (1947).

Trial court was vested with discretion in determining to whom custody shall be given. Such discretion should be governed by rules of law, and be exercised in favor of party having prima facie legal right to custody of child unless evidence showed that such person had lost right to custody through one of the ways recognized in former Code 1933, §§ 74-108-74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4), or through unfitness. Triplett v. Elder, 234 Ga. 243, 215 S.E.2d 247 (1975).

One with legal right prevails if other factors equal. — In contest between two parties, both of whom are fit and proper persons, the one having the legal right should prevail. Saxon v. Brantley, 174 Ga. 641, 163 S.E. 504 (1932); Camp v. Bookman, 204 Ga. 670, 51 S.E.2d 391 (1949).

When neither party has legal right, one having strongest moral claims should prevail. Camp v. Bookman, 204 Ga. 670, 51 S.E.2d 391 (1949).

Regardless of parties, welfare of child is controlling factor. Camp v. Bookman, 204 Ga. 670, 51 S.E.2d 391 (1949).

Expert opinion of psychologist weighed in considerations. — There was a real threat of emotional harm to a child if the child were returned to the mother based on testimony of the guardian ad litem, who conferred with a psychologist; the child would suffer emotional harm if returned to the mother and the child would continue to need psychological treatment until adulthood; the latter prognosis applied even if the child remained with the grandmother, but it was a reasonable inference that the child's need for long term psychological therapy would be even greater if custody were transferred to the mother. Lively v. Bowen, 272 Ga. App. 479, 612 S.E.2d 625 (2005).

Court's discretion when parental rights have been lost. — While former Code 1933, § 50-121 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-14-2) stated that court may exercise discretion as to whom custody shall be given, that section can apply only when the parent had lost the right of control and custody. Morris v. Grant, 196 Ga. 692, 27 S.E.2d 295 (1943); Baynes v. Cowart, 209 Ga. 376, 72 S.E.2d 716 (1952); Woods v. Martin, 212 Ga. 405, 93 S.E.2d 339 (1956).

If either parent is a proper and suitable person and has not surrendered his or her parental right of custody, it is an abuse of discretion to award minor child to third parties over claim of such parent. Camp v. Bookman, 204 Ga. 670, 51 S.E.2d 391 (1949).

Trial court is vested with discretion in determining to whom child's custody shall be given. Such discretion should be governed by rules of law, and be exercised in favor of party having prima facie legal right to custody of child unless evidence showed that such person had lost right to custody through one of the ways recognized in former Code 1933, §§ 74-108 - 74-110 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 or O.C.G.A. § 19-7-4), or through unfitness. Williams v. Ferrell, 231 Ga. 470, 202 S.E.2d 427 (1973).

No discretion to award custody to stepfather. — It was error for a trial court to award a child's legal and physical custody to the child's stepfather because: (1) the child's mother was permitted to exercise all parental power over the child since the child's father had not legitimated the child under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22; (2) the stepfather had not adopted the child; and (3) as a result, the stepfather did not have the same status as any of the nonparents specified in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1), leaving the trial court with no discretion to award the child's custody to the stepfather. Phillips v. Phillips, 316 Ga. App. 829, 730 S.E.2d 548 (2012).

Contest between father of illegitimate child and third persons to whom mother relinquished control. See Day v. Hatton, 210 Ga. 749, 83 S.E.2d 6 (1954).

Parent's ability to raise child may not be compared to superior fitness of third person; that ability must be examined in a scrutinous, abstract light. Carvalho v. Lewis, 247 Ga. 94, 274 S.E.2d 471 (1981).

Father's youth and poor work habits. — Court's finding that the father is too young to care for the children and that he is "somewhat delinquent in his work habits" cannot be said to constitute "grave and substantial cause" for awarding custody to the third party on the ground of unfitness. Bowman v. Bowman, 234 Ga. 348, 216 S.E.2d 103 (1975).

Award of custody to person who had cared for child. — In habeas corpus proceedings brought by parents, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in awarding custody of ten-year-old child to party who had cared for her since age of 11 months without remuneration. Byers v. Loftis, 208 Ga. 398, 67 S.E.2d 118 (1951).

Effect of changed circumstances on award of child custody to third person in habeas proceeding. See Moody v. Pike, 200 Ga. 243, 36 S.E.2d 752 (1946).

Application of best interests standard error in third party suit. — When a third party sues the natural custodial parent for custody of the child, the trial court errs in applying the "best interests of the child" standard. In such a case, the parent is entitled to custody of the child unless the third party shows by "clear and convincing evidence" that the parent is unfit or otherwise not entitled to custody under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4. In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983). But see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999).

Possibility that a child may receive superior influences or amenities in third-party custody is insufficient to justify taking the child from the child's natural parents. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983).

Effect of awarding permanent custody to third party. — When a parent was a party to a proceeding in which his or her right to custody was lost and custody was permanently awarded to a third party, the third party, and not the parent, has a prima facie right to custody. Durden v. Barron, 249 Ga. 686, 290 S.E.2d 923 (1982).

When a third party has been awarded permanent custody of a child in a court proceeding to which the parent was a party, the parent may not obtain custody by showing a change of conditions affecting the welfare of the child. Durden v. Barron, 249 Ga. 686, 290 S.E.2d 923 (1982).

Surviving parent who had failed to provide necessities. — When the father had both negligently and willfully failed to fulfill his statutory duty to provide “the necessities” for his minor children but no proceeding to establish abandonment, unfitness, or forfeiture of rights was instituted prior to the mother’s death, the statutory provision of O.C.G.A. § 19-9-2, which gives custody to the surviving parent absent a contrary judicial holding based on strong, clear, and convincing evidence, was probably operative at the time of the mother’s death, and the father at that time became, and continued to be, the children’s legal custodian. Harper v. Landers, 180 Ga. App. 154, 348 S.E.2d 698 (1986).

Opportunity to question guardian ad litem during custody proceeding. — Trial court erred in depriving one parent and grandparent of the opportunity to question the guardian ad litem regarding the results of an investigation as the burden was theirs to establish that the child would be harmed if returned to the other parent and that it was in the best interest of the child to remain with the grandparent. Thus, the trial court’s order deprived them of the opportunity to establish facts in support of their position that the child should remain in the grandparent’s custody. Simmons v. Williams, 290 Ga. App. 644, 660 S.E.2d 435 (2008).

Failure to make finding of harm in custody dispute between father and grandparent. — In a custody dispute between a child’s father and grandmother, it was error under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) to award custody to the grandmother without finding that custody in the father would cause physical or long-term emotional harm to the child. The trial court’s conclusory statement that in the court’s experience, a move from Georgia would be detrimental to the child was insufficient to justify the denial of parental custody. Galtieri v. O’Dell, 295 Ga. App. 797, 673 S.E.2d 300 (2009).

Placement with grandparents appropriate. — There was clear and convincing evidence that a child would suffer physical and emotional harm if placed with either biological parent, as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1), based on the presence of drugs, alcohol, violence, arrests in the home, and the mother’s failure to send the child to kindergarten, allowing placement of the child with the child’s grandparents. Harris v. Snelgrove, 290 Ga. 181, 718 S.E.2d 300 (2011).

Joint placement with grandparents and father appropriate. — Award of custody to the father and the paternal grandparents was supported by evidence that the child had significant mental health issues, many of which were the result of the high conflict between the mother and the father, and that the mother promoted the conflict by the mother’s efforts to alienate the child from the father and the father’s family, the mother failed to set limits or discipline the child, and the mother failed to recognize or deal with the child’s disruptive behavior. Mauldin v. Mauldin, 322 Ga. App. 507, 745 S.E.2d 754 (2013).

Tort Recovery1. Intrafamily Immunity

Immunity from tort liability was personal to parent and may not be relied on by another as shield to avoid liability. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

Policies underlying parental tort immunity. — Unemancipated minor cannot maintain action against parent for personal injuries caused by latter’s negligence on principal ground that maintenance of such action would be unduly detrimental to authority and obligations of parent with respect to parent’s children as expressly provided for in positive statutory law of Georgia, but also on grounds of preventing fraud, harassment, and preserving financial integrity of the family. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

Parent’s tort immunity was not absolute, but was limited by public policy regarding parental authority. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

Statute contained dividing line between liability and no liability in tort cases; if parent should so violate parent's obligations as to work a forfeiture of parent's right of control, as by cruelty or otherwise, and child sustained injury thereby, child may maintain action against parent for legal wrong thus committed. Bulloch v. Bulloch, 45 Ga. App. 1, 163 S.E. 708 (1932).

When child may sue parent for injury. — While unemancipated minor child has no cause of action against parent for simple negligence, such child may maintain action for personal injury against parent for willful or malicious act, provided it is such an act of cruelty as to authorize forfeiture of parental authority. Wright v. Wright, 85 Ga. App. 721, 70 S.E.2d 152 (1952).

Unemancipated minor may recover from father for personal injuries sustained in automobile accident caused by father's drunkenness. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

No tort immunity runs to parent of adult child who lives in home of parents because there is no legal obligation resting upon parents to support a child after the child reaches majority, nor is there any legal obligation resting upon a child, after reaching majority, to remain in parents' home and perform, in return for care and attention given by them, the duties usually performed by a child who is unemancipated. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

Parent's immunity from tort liability to children does not survive parent's death, because parental immunity in Georgia is firmly bottomed on authority of parent over child, and whenever parental authority is terminated, whether as a result of malicious and willful conduct by parent amounting to a forfeiture of that authority, or by natural and orderly loss of authority that takes place when child reaches adulthood, even when child continues to live in parents' household, parental immunity ends with it. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

Parent driving under the influence. — While a mother was driving under the influence of alcohol at the time of the automobile accident in which her son was injured, she did not commit a malicious or willful act of such cruelty so as to authorize forfeiture of parental authority; accordingly, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1, neither the son nor the father were entitled to relief. Donegan v. Davis, 310 Ga. App. 446, 714 S.E.2d 49 (2011).

No tort immunity for personal representative of deceased parent or child. — Tort immunity between parent and child does not extend to personal representative of deceased parent or child. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

Reason for termination of intrafamily tort immunity upon death of protected person is that death terminates family relationship and there is no longer a relationship in which state or public policy has an interest. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

2. Recovery Against Third Persons

Right of action for negligent homicide, or wrongful death, of child is vested in parents. Harden v. United States, 485 F. Supp. 380 (S.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd in part on other grounds, 688 F.2d 1025 (5th Cir. 1982).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a decedent's father in a legal malpractice claim against the estate attorneys and attorneys who prosecuted a wrongful death action on behalf of the decedent's estate as the attorneys owed no duty to the father, there was no attorney-client relationship between the father and the attorneys because the estate administrator had hired the attorneys, and the father was not an intended third-party beneficiary that could sue, but rather was possibly just an incidental third-party beneficiary; the wrongful death statute, O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(c)(2), put the duty on the father to apportion the wrongful death award, as the attorney would have committed malpractice by acting in the father's interests since the client was the mother and the decedent's half-brother, who was the estate administrator. Rhone v. Bolden, 270 Ga. App. 712, 608 S.E.2d 22 (2004).

Parents' wrongful death claim failed. — Parents' wrongful death claim under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 pertaining to an unclipped rear seat failed on summary judgment because the unclipped seat did not contribute to their child's fatal skull fracture, and there was thus no evidence showing proximate causation under O.C.G.A. § 51-1-11(b)(1) between the unclipped seat and the child's death; the parents also did not assert a survival action in order to permit recovery for pain and suffering in that such damages were not permitted under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 51-4-1. Davenport v. Ford Motor Co., No. 1:05-cv-3047-WSD, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91245 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 11, 2007).

Legislative intent. — Legislature intended to protect the right of both parents, regardless of their marital status, to a cause of action for the wrongful death of their child. Belco Elec., Inc. v. Bush, 204 Ga. App. 811, 420 S.E.2d 602 (1992).

Regardless of a mother and son's relative financial situations and any question of dependency at the time of the son's death or in the future, it could not be credibly argued that an aging parent losing an adult child was not damaging to the social and economic order, a primary concern of the wrongful death laws, nor was such an argument in concert with the express legislative directive of a recovery in all instances of the homicide of a child under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(c). Carringer v. Rodgers, 276 Ga. 359, 578 S.E.2d 841 (2003).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 51-1-18(a). — Trial court erroneously denied a motion to dismiss a personal injury action filed by two parents against two social hosts, arising out of the death of the parents' 20-year-old daughter, which alleged that the social hosts served the daughter alcohol, and the daughter died when the daughter drunkenly drove into a tree after leaving the social hosts' home, as the action was barred due to the fact that the daughter had already reached the age of majority at the time of the accident. Penny v. McBride, 282 Ga. App. 590, 639 S.E.2d 561 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 223 (Ga. 2007).

Intent was not to have wrongdoer spouse profit from wrongs. — In enacting the Wrongful Death Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-4-1 et seq., the legislature authorized recovery for the homicide of a child and unquestionably did not intend that a wrongdoer should be able to profit from wrongdoing. Since the surviving spouse would have to sue themselves to recover for their own negligence, a legal impossibility, and a result in plain contravention of the legislative purpose of the wrongful death statute, it was proper to allow the decedent's parent to proceed on behalf of the decedent against the spouse. Belluso v. Tant, 258 Ga. App. 453, 574 S.E.2d 595 (2002).

Right to recover for the wrongful death of a child, who dies without leaving a spouse or child, is a single cause of action vested jointly in the parents of the deceased if they are married and living together, and if both parents are living but are divorced, separated, or living apart, the right shall be in both parents. Belco Elec., Inc. v. Bush, 204 Ga. App. 811, 420 S.E.2d 602 (1992).

Trial court properly ordered a new trial limited to the issue of a father's damages in a medical malpractice action for the wrongful death of a child as the parents were living together and were not divorced; the father could sue the doctor for one-half of the full value of the deceased child's life and regardless of the doctor's degree of negligence in relation to the mother's, the father could recover the father's entire loss from the doctor, and whether to allow the doctor to enforce a right of contribution from the mother was a matter addressing itself to the discretion of the trial court. Roberts v. Aderhold, 273 Ga. App. 642, 615 S.E.2d 761 (2005).

Rights of divorced parent in wrongful death. — Because divorced mother did not bring the action on behalf of both parents, divorced father had the right to intervene pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(c)(2)(C) and protect whatever interest he had in the recovery. Hulsey v. Hulsey, 212 Ga. App. 269, 441 S.E.2d 477 (1994).

Only instances in which the statute specifically authorizes a divorced parent to proceed without the other is when the other parent cannot be located or if that parent refuses to proceed. Hulsey v.

Hulsey, 212 Ga. App. 269, 441 S.E.2d 477 (1994).

Trial court did not err in awarding 95 percent of the settlement proceeds for a son's wrongful death to his surviving mother and 5 percent to his surviving father when the evidence showed that the father failed to maintain any significant contact with the son in the 17 years that elapsed between the parents' divorce and when the son was killed in an automobile accident at age 20. Hall v. Bailey, 253 Ga. App. 595, 560 S.E.2d 76 (2002).

Temporary guardianship did not result in forfeiture or right to wrongful death action. — Mother did not forfeit her right to maintain a wrongful death action by executing a temporary guardianship. Uniroyal Goodrich Tire Co. v. Adams, 221 Ga. App. 705, 472 S.E.2d 518 (1996).

Recovery for wrongful death in Georgia is limited to the full value of the life without deduction for necessary or personal expenses of the decedent and does not include recovery for mental anguish or emotional distress. Ob-Gyn Assocs. v. Littleton, 259 Ga. 663, 386 S.E.2d 146 (1989), overruled on other grounds, Lee v. State Farm Mut. Ins. Co., 272 Ga. 583, 533 S.E.2d 82 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Shores v. Modern Transp. Servs., 262 Ga. App. 293, 585 S.E.2d 664 (2003).

O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 provides that parents of a deceased child shall be entitled to recover the full value of the life of the child; parents do not have an independent right of action to recover for their own emotional distress and mental suffering. Crockett v. Norfolk S. Ry., 95 F. Supp. 2d 1353 (N.D. Ga. 2000), aff'd, 239 F.3d 370, (11th Cir. 2000).

Impact of parent's contributory negligence. — Trial court properly ordered a new trial limited to the issue of a father's damages in a medical malpractice action for the wrongful death of a child because the jury verdict "in favor of the plaintiffs," necessarily reflected either a jury finding that the mother's contributory negligence barred a recovery by the father, which was contrary to the law, or that the father was not injured by the child's death, which was contrary to the evidence. Roberts v. Aderhold, 273 Ga. App. 642, 615 S.E.2d 761 (2005).

Trial court properly denied a mother's motion for a new trial after a verdict in favor of the parents in a medical malpractice action for the wrongful death of a child as the jury was authorized to find that even though a doctor was negligent, the mother's contributory negligence was equal to or greater than that of the doctor and thus defeated the mother's right of recovery; the parents claimed that the child was stillborn due to the mother's gestational diabetes and the doctor claimed that the mother was negligent in failing to advise the doctor of the mother's family history of diabetes and in failing to follow the doctor's medical instructions. Roberts v. Aderhold, 273 Ga. App. 642, 615 S.E.2d 761 (2005).

No forfeiture of parental rights thus recovery allowed. — Despite evidence of a parent's cruel treatment of the parent's decedent son, the trial court erred in finding that the parent forfeited parental rights, and thus lost the status as a parent and, in so doing, lost the right to recover as an heir of the decedent's estate as the loss of parental power did not necessarily result in a parent's loss of a right to inherit as an heir from the estate of that parent's child, short of having the parent's rights terminated prior to the child's death; hence, summary judgment against the parent on the issue was reversed. Blackstone v. Blackstone, 282 Ga. App. 515, 639 S.E.2d 369 (2006).

Parent cannot sue for tort to child absent direct pecuniary injury. — Parent cannot maintain action for wrong done to minor child unless parent has incurred some direct pecuniary injury therefrom, in consequence of loss of service, or necessary expenses incurred thereby. Southern Ry. v. Neeley, 101 Ga. App. 488, 114 S.E.2d 283 (1960).

Action for loss of child's services. — To recover for loss of services of minor child, it is not essential that the child should be actually rendering services to parent at time of injury; the parent's right to services which child is capable of rendering is sufficient to support action. Evans v. Caldwell, 52 Ga. App. 475, 184 S.E. 440 (1936), aff'd, 184 Ga. 203, 190 S.E. 582 (1937).

Tort Recovery (Cont'd)2. Recovery Against Third*Persons (Cont'd)

Loss of services may be awarded as part of the full value of a deceased child's life. South Fulton Medical Ctr. Inc. v. Poe, 224 Ga. App. 107, 480 S.E.2d 40 (1996).

Parent may recover medical, funeral, and burial expenses. — In tort action for loss of services, when mother has lawful custody of minor child, trial judge erred in striking portions of complaint seeking recovery for loss of services and for medical, funeral, and burial expenses. Peppers v. Smith, 151 Ga. App. 680, 261 S.E.2d 427 (1979).

Action for medical and funeral expenses of a child may be brought by either parent, and it is a question of fact as to which parent has actually incurred such expenses. Atkinson v. Atkinson, 249 Ga. 247, 290 S.E.2d 423 (1982).

In a wrongful death action brought by the father of the decedent, who died leaving no surviving wife or children, the interests of the plaintiff's ex-wife, the decedent's mother, who was initially unwilling to participate in the case, were already represented by the father. The fact that she was not a named party neither impaired her ability to protect her interests nor subjected either party to inconsistent or multiple obligations. Therefore, the father failed to establish that joinder was compulsory under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Barron v. Spectrum Emergency Care, Inc., 619 F. Supp. 1011 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Parent forfeits wrongful death settlement right through failure to pay support. — Parent of a child who is the victim of homicide may forfeit his or her right to participate in the proceeds of a wrongful death settlement through failure to pay support during the child's life. A prior adjudication of abandonment or termination of parental rights is not a prerequisite to a finding that a parent has forfeited his or her right to participate in the proceeds of a settlement for wrongful death of the parent's child. Ramos v. Ramos, 173 Ga. App. 30, 325 S.E.2d 415 (1984).

Parent's wrongful death settlement right not forfeited by minimal support. — Divorced father did not forfeit his right to share with his former wife in the proceeds of a settlement in an action for the wrongful death of his child, when, although his contribution of support to the child may have been paltry, his parental rights had not been terminated. Dove v. Carver, 197 Ga. App. 733, 399 S.E.2d 216 (1990).

Father must have provided support to recover for child's death. — For a biological father to participate in a recovery based upon the wrongful death of his child born out of wedlock, he must have provided reasonable financial support during the lifetime of the child. Sapp v. Solomon, 252 Ga. 532, 314 S.E.2d 878 (1984).

Father was not entitled to proceeds from settlement of wrongful death suit by the child's mother since, under the standards of O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(c)(6), the trial court determined that he lacked any meaningful relationship with the child as shown by evidence concerning custody, control, and lack of support, and the poor example he set. Richardson v. Barber, 241 Ga. App. 254, 527 S.E.2d 8 (1999).

Wrongful death action not barred by prior personal injury recovery. — Fact that there had been a prior recovery for a child's personal injury claim and the father's claim for medical and rehabilitation expenses did not extinguish the right of the father to pursue a wrongful death action arising from the subsequent death of the child allegedly due to the original injuries. Winding River Village Condominium Ass'n v. Barnett, 218 Ga. App. 35, 459 S.E.2d 569 (1995).

Parent's right survives to representative of parent's estate. — An existing right of action by a parent to recover for the homicide of a child will survive to the representative of the parent's estate regardless of whether the action was filed during the parent's lifetime. Caylor v. Potts, 183 Ga. App. 133, 358 S.E.2d 291 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Hosley v. Davidson, 211 Ga. App. 529, 439 S.E.2d 742 (1993).

Representative of a parent's estate is not authorized to bring an action for wrongful death of the parent's minor child if there is a surviving parent or other person entitled to bring the action. Hosley v. Davidson, 211 Ga. App. 529, 439 S.E.2d 742 (1993).

Right of administrator of unborn child's estate. — Administrator of the estate of an unborn child had standing to bring a wrongful death action on behalf of the child since it was shown that the mother of the child died in the accident and the identity of the father was unknown. Reese v. United States, 930 F. Supp. 1537 (S.D. Ga. 1995).

Posthumous child in wrongful death action. — Decedent's posthumous, out-of-wedlock child was entitled to pursue a wrongful death claim under O.C.G.A. § 51-4-2 to the exclusion of the decedent's parents. Under the statute pertaining to descent and distribution, O.C.G.A. § 53-2-1(a)(1), the posthumous child qualified as the decedent's child and to ignore the laws of descent and distribution would run counter to the essence of a wrongful death claim; simply because the decedent's parents wished to share in any award did not render an inequitable result in light of the priority ordinarily given to children by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(c)(2). deVente v. Flora, 300 Ga. App. 10, 684 S.E.2d 91 (2009).

Punitive damages are not available in a wrongful death claim since O.C.G.A. § 51-4-1(1), to the extent the statute permits recovery of more than the actual loss to the survivor, is itself punitive. Ford Motor Co. v. Stubblefield, 171 Ga. App. 331, 319 S.E.2d 470 (1984).

When parent cannot recover for value of minor's services. — Parent loses right to sue for and recover for value of minor child's services by voluntarily releasing parental control to third person, or by failing to provide for his or her maintenance. Southern Ry. v. Flemister, 120 Ga. 524, 48 S.E. 160 (1904).

When evidence shows emancipation by both parents, child possesses sole right of recovery for personal damages. Coleman v. Dublin Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 47 Ga. App. 369, 170 S.E. 549 (1933).

Child may recover against parent's employer under respondeat superior doctrine. — Unemancipated child may recover against parent's employer for injuries sustained by child due to negligence of parent while acting within service of employer, although the child could not recover from the parent. Barnwell v. Cordle, 438 F.2d 236 (5th Cir. 1971).

In a suit brought by parents against the mother's employer for the wrongful death of twin infant girls, allegations of contributory negligence or assumption of the risk by the mother would not defeat recovery for the father. Fulford v. ITT Rayonier, Inc., 676 F. Supp. 252 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

Suit against husband's estate by wife's parents. — Interspousal immunity doctrine was not a bar to a wrongful death action brought against the estate of a deceased husband by the parents of the wife who died with her husband in the crash of a plane piloted by the husband. Trust Co. Bank v. Thornton, 186 Ga. App. 706, 368 S.E.2d 158 (1988), cert. vacated, 258 Ga. 543, 373 S.E.2d 512 (1988).

Under the Wrongful Death Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-4-1 et seq., and O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(c), the parent of a decedent child who was murdered by his surviving spouse had standing to bring a cause of action for the wrongful death of the child against the murdering spouse and/or another individual or entity proximately causing the child's death; the parent could recover for the full value of the life of the child. Carringer v. Rodgers, 276 Ga. 359, 578 S.E.2d 841 (2003).

Relationship with grandparents considered in apportioning settlement. — In an action arising from the death of a child of divorced parents, it was not error for the court to consider the relationship of the child with his maternal grandmother in apportioning the settlement. Wymbs v. Stokes, 236 Ga. App. 742, 512 S.E.2d 669 (1999).

Attorney's fees when divorced parents represented separately. — Since each parent was represented by independent counsel, and the mother's attorney was only entitled to recover fees based on the overall settlement proceeds that were procured for that attorney's client, the attorney fees award for the mother's counsel should have only been $ 65,000 (i.e., 40% of $ 162,500). Weathers v. City of

Hinesville, 260 Ga. App. 6, 578 S.E.2d 477 (2003).

Recoupment of attorney's fees. — Trial court committed plain error in denying a client's motion for recoupment of attorney fees from a former attorney, as such was solely based on a contingent fee agreement, the client's maintained an interest in any recovery in the pending wrongful death suit under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(c)(2)(C) despite the client's withdrawal from the suit, and the attorney was entitled to a reasonable fee in quantum meruit. Amstead v. McFarland, 279 Ga. App. 765, 632 S.E.2d 707 (2006).

3. Amounts Recoverable

Uneven apportionment between parents upheld. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in apportioning wrongful death settlement proceeds concerning a father and mother's deceased child, granting the father only 20 percent of the proceeds, as the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that, during a significant portion of the child's life, the father was incarcerated, used methamphetamine, and the mother had primary custody and control of the child; moreover, although the trial court did not specifically enumerate every factor upon which the court based the court's decision, there was no requirement that the court do so. Brewer v. Harvey, 278 Ga. App. 503, 629 S.E.2d 497 (2006).

Decisions Under Former Code 1933, § 105-13071. In General

Basis for right of recovery granted. — This right of action is founded on premise that deceased would have been entitled to action against wrongdoer if death had not ensued, based on breach of duty owed to deceased at time of injury. Caskey v. Underwood, 89 Ga. App. 418, 79 S.E.2d 558 (1953).

Right of action for negligent homicide or wrongful death of child is vested in parents. Harden v. United States, 485 F. Supp. 380 (S.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd in part on other grounds, 688 F.2d 1025 (5th Cir. 1982).

Section confers property right upon parents. — Right of action which vests under former Code 1933, § 105-1307 in parents for recovery of monetary compensation for homicide of minor child was a property right. Blue Ridge Park Nurseries v. Owen, 41 Ga. App. 98, 152 S.E. 485 (1930).

Former Code 1933, § 105-1307 did not authorize action by wife against husband for wrongful death of child. Harrell v. Gardner, 115 Ga. App. 171, 154 S.E.2d 265 (1967); Walker v. Walker, 122 Ga. App. 545, 178 S.E.2d 46 (1970).

When child had married but was not survived by spouse or children, parent may recover. — When parental bond has previously been severed by marriage of deceased but she was not survived by husband or children, her mother is entitled to sue for full value of her life. Royal Crown Bottling Co. v. Bell, 100 Ga. App. 438, 111 S.E.2d 734 (1959).

Foster mother cannot, in individual capacity, maintain suit for damages for death of foster son. Smith v. Jones, 72 Ga. App. 638, 34 S.E.2d 623 (1945).

Father who has not legitimated a child cannot maintain wrongful death action. Parham v. Hughes, 441 U.S. 347, 99 S. Ct. 1742, 60 L. Ed. 2d 269 (1979).

Georgia wrongful death statute does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 14 (equal protection clause) as to fathers of illegitimate children. Hughes v. Parham, 241 Ga. 198, 243 S.E.2d 867 (1978), aff'd, 441 U.S. 347, 99 S. Ct. 1742, 60 L. Ed. 2d 269 (1979).

Fetus becomes a child when it is "quick" or capable of moving in mother's womb. Porter v. Lassiter, 91 Ga. App. 712, 87 S.E.2d 100 (1955).

Suit may be maintained by mother for loss of child that was "quick" in her womb at time of homicide. Porter v. Lassiter, 91 Ga. App. 712, 87 S.E.2d 100 (1955).

Whether unborn child was "quick" not "viable" is test. — Cause of action will not arise if child was not "quick" at the time of the child's death. It is not necessary for child to be "viable" provided the child was "quick", that is, able to move in the mother's womb. Porter v. Lassiter, 91 Ga. App. 712, 87 S.E.2d 100 (1955).

Upon death of parent suing, temporary administrator may become party plaintiff. — Upon death of mother suing for negligent homicide of her child, temporary administrator of her estate may be made party plaintiff to action. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Jackson, 77 Ga. App. 341, 48 S.E.2d 691 (1948).

2. Pleadings

Parent must affirmatively plead facts bringing case within section. — At common law, action for damages on account of death of human being would not lie; therefore, former Code 1933, § 105-1307 was in derogation of common law, and unless mother, suing for death of her son sui juris, affirmatively pleads facts essential to bring herself within provisions of act, she is not entitled to maintain suit. Clements v. Pollard, 53 Ga. App. 544, 186 S.E. 587 (1936).

Former Code 1933, § 105-1307 was in derogation of common law, and plaintiff suing thereunder must affirmatively plead facts essential to bring herself within the law's provisions. Garden City Cab Co. v. Ransom, 86 Ga. App. 247, 71 S.E.2d 443 (1952).

Petition omitting such allegations may be amended. — When petition failed to set out cause of action only in omitting allegation that plaintiff's son, who was unmarried and for whose homicide plaintiff was suing to recover, left no children, judgment sustaining demurrer (now motion to dismiss) to petition would be affirmed, but with direction that plaintiff be allowed to amend petition by supplying such necessary omitted allegation. Helton v. Western & A.R.R., 67 Ga. App. 23, 19 S.E.2d 312 (1942).

It must appear from petition that child left no wife or children of his own. — Mother has no right to sue for death of her son when he leaves a wife or child, and, when she does so sue, it must affirmatively appear from petition that he left no wife or child, or the suit is subject to dismissal. Clements v. Pollard, 53 Ga.

App. 544, 186 S.E. 587 (1936).

Parent may recover hospital, medical, and funeral expenses. — Mother who is sole surviving parent of minor child whose death is caused by negligence of mother may recover for hospital, medical, and funeral expenses resulting therefrom. Saunds v. Forsythe, 112 Ga. App. 269, 144 S.E.2d 926 (1965).

Measure of damages is not dependent upon expectancy of parent. — Right of action accrues to mother who was in life when child died, and measure of damages is full value of life of such child. The measure of damages, therefore, is not dependent upon expectancy of mother. The amount that may be recovered in action of this kind, as well as the person who may sue, is determined by statute as of date of death of child, and if action survives to administrator it would seem to do so for all purposes. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Jackson, 77 Ga. App. 341, 48 S.E.2d 691 (1948).

Parent cannot recover for own mental or physical suffering. — Georgia law does not make basis of recovery for wrongful death mental or physical suffering of person bringing action. The action to recover damages on account of negligent homicide is not an action seeking to recover for mental pain and suffering. Hudson v. Cole, 102 Ga. App. 300, 115 S.E.2d 825 (1960).

Emotional upset of person bringing action was no part of measure of damages under former Code 1933, § 105-1307, which clearly stated that mother or father shall be entitled to recover full value of life of child, which full value was defined in former Code, §§ 105-1301 and 105-1308 (see now O.C.G.A. § 51-4-1) in economic terms, but not in terms of emotion. Hudson v. Cole, 102 Ga. App. 300, 115 S.E.2d 825 (1960).

Considerations in ascertaining full value of child's life. — When there is no evidence whatever on earnings or earning capacity, and when such evidence is not necessary to recovery, and when jury has not been instructed by trial court to determine full value of life of deceased child based on what she would have earned during her life expectancy, it is not error for trial court to charge only former Code

Decisions Under Former Code 1933,

1933, §§ 105-1307, 105-1309, and 105-1310 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 51-4-4 and 51-4-5), and thus leave full value of life of child to enlightened conscience of an impartial jury, based on evidence of child's age, precocity, services rendered up to time of death, circumstances of family, and from experience and knowledge of human affairs on part of jury. Collins v. McPherson, 91 Ga. App. 347, 85 S.E.2d 552 (1954).

Evidence of future earnings unnecessary if there is no selection of vocation. — In case of parent suing for death of minor child, it is not necessary for evidence to show what future earnings might be in cases when there is no selection of vocation or other facts from which future earnings can be determined. Collins v. McPherson, 91 Ga. App. 347, 85 S.E.2d 552 (1954).

When question of damages left to judgment, experience, and conscience of jury. — In cases of infants of tender years, it is impossible to give exact evidence of pecuniary value of probable loss, and question of damages or loss is left to sound judgment, experience, and conscience of jury without any exact proof thereof. The enlightened conscience of a jury means also the jury's informed conscience. Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Duncan, 123 Ga. App. 479, 181 S.E.2d 535 (1971).

Awards under section need not be reduced to present value. — In both compensatory and penal elements of verdict in wrongful death of minor child case, jury is guided by the jury's discretion in assessing amount and not by pecuniary loss to plaintiff. This being so, Court of Appeals will not hold that such amount, when assessed, will be such a future benefit as must be reduced to present cash value before the amount can legally be awarded. Collins v. McPherson, 91 Ga. App. 347, 85 S.E.2d 552 (1954).

3. Application

Contributory negligence of parent as bar to recovery for wrongful death of child. — Failure of mother, at time and place which she knew were dangerous, to have three year old child where she could control and direct child's movements was, as a matter of law, such lack of ordinary care as would prevent recovery for her own benefit for death of child, even conceding that defendant company was negligent. Woodham v. Powell, 61 Ga. App. 760, 7 S.E.2d 573 (1940).

Negligence of person having custody with parent's consent is attributed to parent. — When parent who brings suit gave consent to another to exercise custody over child, then negligence of custodian is attributed to parent so as to bar recovery. Herring v. R.L. Mathis Certified Dairy Co., 118 Ga. App. 132, 162 S.E.2d 863 (1968), rev'd in part on other grounds, 225 Ga. 67, 166 S.E.2d 89 (1969), appeal dismissed, 400 U.S. 922, 91 S. Ct. 192, 27 L. Ed. 2d 183 (1970).

Availability of workers' compensation precludes recovery under section. — Action by parent for homicide of minor child is statutory in origin, and may be maintained only within purview of legislative grant, and if the plaintiff's decedent is an employee of the defendant within the purview of the Workers' Compensation Act, all other rights and remedies of the plaintiff are excluded. AMOCO v. McCluskey, 116 Ga. App. 706, 158 S.E.2d 431 (1967), rev'd on other grounds, 224 Ga. 253, 161 S.E.2d 271 (1968).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

When parent surrenders control to third party, minor remains unemancipated. — Emancipation occurs when parent surrenders parental control of minor child; however, when parent voluntarily surrenders control to third party, there is a substitution of parental control, and minor continues unemancipated as to one to whom minor's custody and control is transferred. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-152.

Domicile of minor is that of minor's parents, but this can be altered when usual parental authority and control over minor is ended by voluntary or involuntary relinquishment. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-5.

Change of child's domicile for school purposes. — Domicile of child for school purposes can be altered by voluntary relinquishment of parental authority if proper legal action has been taken or circumstances are present which secure to person with whom child is residing some legal obligation as to the child's welfare and education. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-8.

19-7-2. Parents' obligations to child.

It is the joint and several duty of each parent to provide for the maintenance, protection, and education of his or her child until the child reaches the age of majority, dies, marries, or becomes emancipated, whichever first occurs, except as otherwise authorized and ordered pursuant to subsection (e) of Code Section 19-6-15 and except to the extent that the duty of the parents is otherwise or further defined by court order. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 224, § 1/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds and declares that it is important to assess periodically child support guidelines and determine whether existing guidelines continue to be viable and effective or whether they have failed or ceased to accomplish their original policy objectives. The General Assembly further finds that supporting Georgia's children is vitally important to the citizens of Georgia. Therefore, the General Assembly has determined that it is in the best interests of the state and its citizenry to undertake an evaluation of the child support guidelines on a continuing basis. The General Assembly declares that it is important that all of Georgia's children are provided with adequate financial support whether the children's parents are living together or not living together. The General Assembly finds that both parents have a continuing obligation with respect to providing financial and emotional stability for their child or children. It is the hope of the members of the General Assembly that all parents work together to advance the best interest of their children."

Ga. L. 2006, p. 583, § 10/SB 382, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "Sections 1 through 7 of this Act shall become effective on January 1, 2007, and shall apply to all pending civil actions on or after January 1, 2007."

General Consideration

Parental duty of support and maintenance. — There is imposed upon parents the natural duty to support and maintain their children. Pettigrew v. Williams, 65 Ga. App. 576, 16 S.E.2d 120 (1941).

Trial court's determination to terminate a father's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C)(ii)-(iii) since he had a history of alcohol and drug abuse, admitted that he needed financial help to support his children, had not offered any support during the period that they were in temporary custody as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2, and failed to achieve any of the goals of the agency's case plan for him. In the Interest of D.L., 268 Ga. App. 360, 601 S.E.2d 714 (2004).

Parent had a statutory duty to support the parent's children, with or without a court order, and an order terminating a father's parental rights was supported by, among other things, a lack of evidence that the father had provided any support for the child. In the Interest of M.L.S., 273 Ga. App. 554, 615 S.E.2d 615 (2005).

Parental duty exists, even though children have property of their own. — It is the duty of a parent, having ability to do so, to support, educate, and maintain the parent's minor children, although children may have property of their own. Nunn v. Burger, 76 Ga. 705 (1886); Pettigrew v. Williams, 65 Ga. App. 576, 16 S.E.2d 120 (1941).

In case of inability of parent to provide for children from the parent's own means, the ordinary (now judge of probate court) may grant an order allowing use of estate in the parent's hands as guardian of the parent's child. Prime v. Mapp, 80 Ga. 137, 5 S.E. 66 (1888); Crawford v. Broomhead, 97 Ga. 614, 25 S.E. 487 (1895).

When situation and circumstances of parent are such that parent is not financially able to properly support and educate children, allowance for that purpose may be made from children's estate, but regard should be had to circumstances of particular case, and such allowance to parent may, in a proper case, be made either as provision for future or as reimbursement for past expenditures. Pettigrew v. Williams, 65 Ga. App. 576, 16 S.E.2d 120 (1941).

Duration of parental duty to support. — Parent is obligated to support child until the child reaches majority or becomes emancipated. Walsh v. Walsh, 240 Ga. 154, 240 S.E.2d 702 (1977).

When a West German judgment imposed child support until the children completed college, and there was no evidence concerning a statutory termination date under West German law, the issue of when the child support payments will be terminated remained for determination, and was not ripe for review. Knothe v. Rose, 195 Ga. App. 7, 392 S.E.2d 570 (1990).

Parent is not required to support child after the child reaches majority. Tilly v. Canedy, 217 Ga. 63, 121 S.E.2d 144 (1961); Newton v. Newton, 222 Ga. 175, 149 S.E.2d 128 (1966); Crane v. Crane, 225 Ga. 605, 170 S.E.2d 392 (1969) (But see O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(e), added in 1992).

Loss of custody does not relieve parent of legal obligation. — Award of custody of child to some other person, by reason of misconduct on part of parent, of itself does not relieve parent of legal obligation to support the child. Brown v. Brown, 132 Ga. 712, 64 S.E. 1092, 131 Am. St. R. 229 (1909).

Father's surrender of parental rights and consent to adoption did not release him from his support obligation under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2. Department of Human Resources v. Cowan, 220 Ga. App. 230, 469 S.E.2d 384 (1996).

Support award not precluded by custody award. — Judgment awarding joint legal custody of a child does not preclude a monetary award of child support. Hunt v. Carter, 261 Ga. 259, 404 S.E.2d 121 (1991).

Inalienability of child's right to parental support. — Neither wife nor civil courts can take away child's rights to be provided for by both parents and, specifically, a wife cannot contract away right of child to be supported by the child's father. Crumb v. Gordon, 157 Ga. App. 839, 278 S.E.2d 725 (1981).

Surrender of parental rights does not alter support obligation. — Father's execution of a surrender of parental rights and final release for adoption did not terminate his obligation to support his children; he was obligated to support the children until and unless a court order altered that obligation, his belief regarding their adoption notwithstanding. Department of Human Resources v. Baker, 222 Ga. App. 664, 476 S.E.2d 41 (1996).

Attaining majority or marriage of child terminates parents' support obligation. — When child reaches majority, statutory and common-law duty of parents to support child ceases and should a minor marry, the duty of the parent to support the child ceases because such child is no longer a member of the parents' household. Golden v. Golden, 230 Ga. 867, 199 S.E.2d 796 (1973).

Requirement to provide child support beyond age of majority may not be imposed. Clavin v. Clavin, 238 Ga. 421, 233 S.E.2d 151 (1977); Coleman v. Coleman, 240 Ga. 417, 240 S.E.2d 870 (1977);

Barnes v. Justis, 219 Ga. App. 815, 467 S.E.2d 3 (1996) (But see O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(e), added in 1992).

Courts cannot require a parent to support a child beyond the age of majority. Crawford v. Kalman, 166 Ga. App. 712, 305 S.E.2d 442 (1983) (But see O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(e), added in 1992).

Legislative exception for mentally ill children. — General Assembly might conceivably make exception regarding children born mentally ill and remaining so beyond majority or who become ill later on in life and remain so after reaching majority. Crane v. Crane, 225 Ga. 605, 170 S.E.2d 392 (1969).

Duty of parent to support children ceases generally upon parent's death. Clavin v. Clavin, 238 Ga. 421, 233 S.E.2d 151 (1977).

No application to alimony. — Statute had no application to proceedings for alimony. Barlow v. Barlow, 161 Ga. 202, 129 S.E. 860 (1925), criticized, Mell v. Mell, 190 Ga. 511, 9 S.E.2d 756 (1940); Eskew v. Eskew, 199 Ga. 513, 34 S.E.2d 697 (1945).

Relation to § 19-6-15. — Former Code 1933, § 74-105 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2) was foundation upon which remedy provided in former Code 1933, § 30-207 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15) rests. Mell v. Mell, 190 Ga. 508, 9 S.E.2d 756 (1940).

Death of a child resulting from a negligent omission to comply with the parental duty stated in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2 would amount to involuntary manslaughter by the commission of an unlawful act. Lewis v. State, 180 Ga. App. 369, 349 S.E.2d 257 (1986).

When O.C.G.A. § 19-8-6 not necessarily violated. — While divorce decree wherein mother waived child support was ineffective to modify statutory duty imposed upon father, his good faith reliance upon the decree constitutes a reasonable excuse for failing to provide for care and support of child; if an excuse is reasonable, although not legal, absence of legal excuse does not demand finding that O.C.G.A. § 19-8-6 has been violated. Crumb v. Gordon, 157 Ga. App. 839, 278 S.E.2d 725 (1981).

In contempt proceedings to enforce a support order, the trial court does not have authority to modify the order, and this includes modification of support obligations covered by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2. Department of Human Resources v. Tabb, 221 Ga. App. 766, 472 S.E.2d 540 (1996).

Support may not be modified in contempt proceedings. — In a contempt proceeding brought by the Georgia Department of Human Resources, the trial court erred in modifying a parent's child support obligation and in forgiving a portion of the arrearage because the court lacked authority to modify support orders in contempt proceedings and O.C.G.A. § 19-6-17(e)(1)-(3) precluded retroactive modification of child support. Ga. Dep't of Human Res. v. Gamble, 297 Ga. App. 509, 677 S.E.2d 713 (2009).

Effect of third parties on obligation. — Parent's legal obligation to support is not governed by whether some third party asks the parent to support the child; and the parent's legal obligation to support the child cannot be diminished, waived, or mitigated by any third persons except as this may affect the question of willful and wanton failure to support. Westberg v. Stamm, 162 Ga. App. 369, 291 S.E.2d 439 (1982).

Joint rights in action for expenses. — Since the language of O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2 has been amended to reflect that it is the joint and several duty of each parent to support his or her minor children, it follows that an action to recover medical expenses of a minor is now vested exclusively in both parents. Rose v. Hamilton Medical Ctr., Inc., 184 Ga. App. 182, 361 S.E.2d 1 (1987), cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 182, 361 S.E.2d 1 (1987).

"Medical bills," in the allocation of statutory duties to a child in a divorce decree, are construed to include those reasonable charges of professionals in generally recognized fields of health care that are required to maintain a child in good health, and to correct or alleviate any physical or mental dysfunction, including the reasonable cost of services required for the child's dental health and the reasonable costs of providing corrective devices, such as eyeglasses, required by the child's optical needs. Stone v. Tillis, 258 Ga. 17,

365 S.E.2d 110 (1988).

Adult child not resident of parent's home. — Adult child's intent to live in the parent's home does not make the adult child a resident of the household for insurance purposes. As an adult, the child may only reside at the parents' home with their permission and consent. Tuttle v. America First Ins. Co., 187 Ga. App. 68, 369 S.E.2d 342 (1988).
